COLLEGIAN
STUDENT UNION
100th Anniversary
(1890-1990)
BACK TO SCHOOL

The Bus Stops Here!

Putting you right in the middle of over 150 fine stores and places to eat.
Featuring G. Fox, Steiger's,
JC Penney, Sears and Filene's Basement.
The bus to Holyoke Mall...it's the smart way to go!

Call 781-PVTA

for your free bus schedule.

AAA AUTO RENTAL

Fine Reconditioned Cars & Vans

Low Low Rates • Free Mileage
Free Local Delivery & Pick-up

We honor major credit cards.
Must be at least 18 years of age.

50 Market St. Northampton • 584-8509

LSAT GMAT MCAT GRE

KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.

WHAT IF YOU DON'T GET INTO THE GRAD SCHOOL OF YOUR CHOICE?

Sure, there are other schools. But why settle? Kaplan prep courses help students raise their scores and their chances of being admitted into their first-choice schools. Fact is, no one has helped students score higher!

358 No. Pleasant Street
549-5780

BUFFALO BILLS

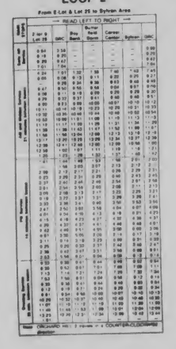
FREE

Junior Roast Beef when you Buy a Super Roast Beef!

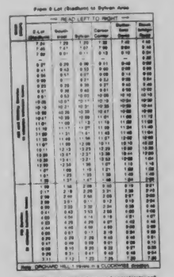
Expires 9-30-90

50 Main St.
253-9223

Orchard Hill
LOOP 2

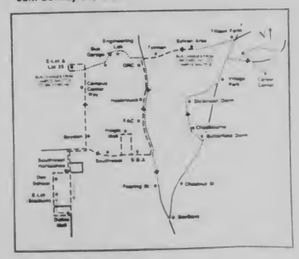


Orchard Hill
LOOP 1



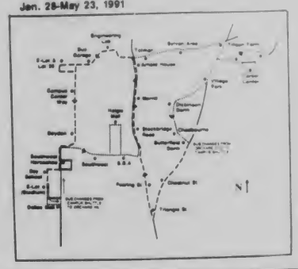
UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE
ORCHARD HILL CAMPUS SHUTTLE 2
WEEKDAY SCHEDULE
effective
Sept. 4-Dec. 21, 1990
and
Jan. 28-May 23, 1991

CAMPUS SHUTTLE 2 (CLOCKWISE)
ORCHARD HILL 2 (COUNTERCLOCKWISE)



UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE
ORCHARD HILL CAMPUS SHUTTLE 1
WEEKDAY SCHEDULE
effective
Sept. 4-Dec. 21, 1990
and
Jan. 28-May 23, 1991

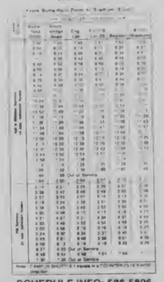
CAMPUS SHUTTLE 1



Campus Shuttle
LOOP 2

INFO FOR THE DEAF 545-2086

Campus Shuttle
LOOP 1



SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

Pets (except seeing eye dogs), food, drinks, alcohol, skis, bicycles, and smoking are not permitted on the buses.

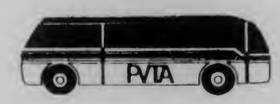
Schedules available at the Campus Center Information Desk and on all UMTS buses.

Sponsored by:
PVTA/UMTA
UMass Administration
UMass Undergraduate Senate
UMass Graduate Senate

For schedule changes during inclement weather, please tune to WMUA 91.1 FM or WTTT 14.30 AM or call the UMTS Business Office at 545-0056.

Lost and found, suggestions, and complaints: call the UMTS Business Office at 545-0056.

SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF
545-2086



Especially for You
Haircare & Beauty Boutique

specializing in Afro-American Hair Care and Beauty Products

206 Russell St., Rt. 9
Hadley: 586-6622

Free Delivery within 5 College Area

DANCER COMPUTERS
Performance + Quality + Service = Value

Do not be misled by price alone. Compare features, performance, and support before you make a purchase. Dancer Computers specializes in MS DOS and Mac computers and peripherals including system integration, sales, service and support. Visit Amherst's only independent computer dealer for all your computer needs.

WEIGHTLIFTING

FREE WEIGHTS•NAUTILUS•EXERCISE BIKES•CLIMBERS

AEROBICS

NEO SHOCK FLOOR • SIX CLASSES DAILY

ALSO FEATURING BELTS, GLOVES, TWINLAB PRODUCTS, MULTIPOWER ULTIMATE NUTRITION AND OTHER SUPPLEMENTS.
TANNING IS ALSO AVAILABLE.

The GYM at mountain farms mall

Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

IS YOUR CAR SICK??

KEVIN'S AUTO REPAIR

The Alternative in Pioneer Valley

All Repair Welcome • Foreign & Domestic
Free Towing on Major Repairs • Parts
Pre-Purchase Evaluation
Checks Accepted • 3 percent off for cash
Open M-F 9A-5:30P, Sat. 9:30A-5:30P

• ASK ABOUT STUDENT DISCOUNTS •

One Block off Rte 9
Take 47N to Railroad St
HADLEY

FREE ESTIMATES
586-9336

PIZZA SUBS

Bruno's

SALADS LASAGNA

OPEN DAILY 11am to 2am
Call Us at 256-0222

Free delivery
and we'll bring lunch to your dorm or office

$1.50 OFF Any Large Pizza

May not be combined w/ other coupons-one coupon per pizza
expires 12-31-90

256-0222
363 Main St.

We Accept Pizza Hut®
Bruno's & Avanti's
Coupons!

FREE DELIVERY in 30 min.

FREE DELIVERY in 30 min.

AMHERST/HADLEY

256-8911

Hours:
Mon.-Thurs. 11am-2am
Fri. 11am-3am
Sat. 11am-3am
Sun. 11am-2am

FREE DELIVERY

Large Cheese Pizza $6.50 Only

Extra toppings ONLY $1.50 each

One coupon per order. Expires 9-28-90

Small Cheese Pizza $4.50 Only

Extra toppings ONLY $1.00 each

One coupon per order. Expires9-28-90

CARRY OUT ONLY PIZZA

12inch cheese Pan Pizza Only $5.50

Extra toppings ONLY $1.00 each

One coupon per order. Expires 9-28-90

FREE Pizza
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA or 12'' PAN STYLE PIZZA GET ONE of equal or lesser toppings

FREE Not good with any other order. Good thru 9-28-90

CARRY OUT ONLY

LOCAL NEWS THIRD WORLD

Administrators surprised by declining freshmen enrollment. Page 3.

LBGA history recounted as it celebrates its twentieth anniversary. Pages 22-23.

Third World students strongly against U.S. presence in Saudi Arabia. Page 15.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 1

Cuts force UMass to layoff 55 faculty

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

In an effort to deal with an unexpected across-the-boards four percent budget cut, resulting in a loss of $5.9 million, the University of Massachusetts has decided to layoff 55 faculty members for the 1991 fall semester.

According to John Cole, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors which represents more than 1,300 faculty members, administrators and faculty this fall will begin looking for places to cut faculty members.

"There is really no where else to cut at this point, the Chancellor [Duffey] has already indicated one or more colleges may also be cut," Cole said.

The layoffs come in the wake of the loss of more than 285 staff members and about 65 faculty members that resulted from a hiring freeze and non-renewal of contracts over the past two years. Over the summer, a hiring freeze was also implemented for teaching assistants.

Cole said the loss of faculty and further funds will have a "very detrimental" effect on the quality of an education at UMass. "It hurts when you can't replace professors that teach essential courses in their specialty, the quality decreases," he said.

Professors at the University have also been working under expired contracts for the past year, he said. According to Cole, negotiators have been waiting for the University budget results before negotiating new contracts.

Although it is illegal for the MSP to call for a strike, Cole said there has been discussion of a strike as a "last resort" if contract negotiations fail.

In negotiations over the summer, Cole said an early retirement inducement was agreed upon by faculty members in which faculty members willing to retire "on the spot" will be given a one-time bonus of 50 percent of their annual salary plus regular benefits.

He said most of the negotiations have been "take-aways," such as paying more for health insurance, resulting in lower salaries. He added that no new benefits have been agreed on.

Cole was unsure of the union's salary demands because of the threat of layoffs.

"We need to map out a strategy and take the layoffs into account," he said. "We're also worried the state will be taking more money out of our budget again."

According to John Bracey Jr., a professor of Afro-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Photo by John Woo

TUPPENCE A BAG – The Roldan family of Amherst enjoys a summer day feeding the birds at the Campus Pond.

Rep: Unite to combat cuts and CLT

Rosenberg urges fight against higher ed cuts, tax roll-backs

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

A strong student turnout in the upcoming November 6 election, is essential to help prevent further funding cuts to public higher education, according to state representatives and student government leaders from state public colleges and universities.

Student Government Association leaders from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and Boston, Fitchburg and Framingham State Colleges, North Shore and Greenfield Community Colleges, and the Massachusetts College of Art met in August for the second annual Public Higher Education Summit to discuss plans of action to deter damaging cuts.

At the summit, sponsored by the Student Alliance For Education, Rep. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst), stressed to student leaders they need to immediately organize a game plan for their campuses to combat impending state education cuts.

"Student leaders should have these objectives on their campuses," Rosenberg said. "The first is student voter registration, then educating students so they know what's going on, and defeating Citizens for Limited Taxation and finally electing a governor and legislators that support higher education."

Rosenberg said the CLT petition, which will be ballot question number three of the referendum questions, proposes to roll back state taxes to 1988 levels.

If the petition passes, Rosenberg said Wall Street experts estimate the state will lose a total of $1.4 billion in revenue from bond documents in the middle of the fiscal year.

The roll-back would not apply to tuition hikes and fee increases for public higher education made in the last

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

High-tech phone, cable systems installed on campus

- Cable activation delayed until spring
- $22M high-speed phones to 'modernize' UMass

BY SARAH DEMASTER
Collegian Staff

Dormitory residents at the University of Massachusetts will now have to wait until spring for the unveiling of the new cable system, originally scheduled to begin operating this fall.

Unforeseen delays in purchasing equipment and finalizing the system's design have caused the postponement, according to Joseph Zannini, director of Housing Services, which is overseeing the project.

The University will pay $500,000 over the next 10 years to operate cable in all residence halls. However, because UMass owns the cable, the system will be implemented at no cost to the student, Zannini said.

The University's decision to purchase equipment from several different vendors, and to fill approximately six new equipment monitoring and maintenance positions with students, has also helped keep the University's costs to a minimum, he said.

"We're hoping it's more than just television, so [students] can get a lot more out of their college experience," he said.

Ericsson Business Communications, the company which installed the new telephone system, during the summer installed the new cable lines at the same time they installed the new telephone wires.

"When UMass put in new phones, it meant we had to put in new wires, and trenches had to be dug up," Zannini said. "UMass took advantage of it, because if someone is pulling one wire, they can pull a second wire relatively easily."

While all of the cable lines have been installed, the University is in the process of installing antennae on Washington

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

BY MEREDITH O'BRIEN
Collegian Staff

The first lesson dormitory residents will have to learn this fall as they arrive on campus will not be in the traditional subjects of math, history, science or English. Rather, they will have to master a new course – Phones 101.

During the summer, the University of Massachusetts installed a $22 million high-speed telecommunications system with 12,000 new phones for the dormitories and campus buildings.

The new phone system will offer students and University staff a multitude of new features, including conference calling, access to campus computer systems, a voice mail system, automatic callback and call-forwarding.

The project, partially funded by a $15.4 million state grant with $6.6 million being financed, was initiated in September 1988 with the signing of the contract with the Ericsson Business Communications Company.

As a result of the new system, mandatory dormitory telephone fees increased by $52, from last semester's $35 to this semester's $87.

Due to the complexity of the new system, the Telecommunications Department, in conjunction with the Housing Services Department, will distribute nearly 6,700 12-page instruction booklets to dormitory residents and resident assistants explaining the system's functions.

Housing Services has also produced an instructional video tape demonstrating the system's capabilities. The tape will be made available to resident assistants to teach their floors about the phones.

During the summer, over 4,000 Univer-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

News Briefs

ACLU: 'No' to speech law

AMHERST (AP) — The executive director of the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union, John Roberts, says the union is concerned about an attempt by an Amherst citizens group to get the liberal college town to pass a law against what it calls "fighting words."

"We would say abandon the project," Roberts said, contending the move would likely run afoul of Constitutional protections of freedom of speech.

Paul Rogers, co-chairman of the town's Citizen Review Commission maintained the proposed law, which the group wants to present to the fall Town meeting is aimed at promoting racial and ethnic harmony.

"Our purpose is trying to safeguard and enhance civil liberties, not reduce them," he said.

The proposed law calls for a $300 fine for using words "which by their very utterance inflect injury on the person or group of persons to whom they are directed or which tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace."

But Rogers said the committee is still working on the draft to attempt to ensure that it does not violate Constitutional protections.

Governor appoints Regents

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael Dukakis announced the appointment of four new members to the state's Board of Regents of Higher Education and the reappointment of former Sen. Paul Tsongas as chairman.

The new members are: Arnold Hiatt of Cambridge, chairman of the Board of Stride Rite; Augustus White III, and orthopedic surgeon and chief of Beth Israel Hospital; Daniel Taylor of Boston, a partner in the Hill and Barlow law firm; and Hortensia DeLos Angeles Amaro of Dorchester, an associate professor of public health at Boston University.

The 16-member board of regents oversees the state's colleges and universities. Members are currently appointed to five-year terms.

Governor's pick protested

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP)- Berkshire Community College Trustees and College President Cathryn L. Addy have protested the appointment of a Northampton woman, who works at a private college, to fill an unexpired term on the board.

Addy, maintaining the appointment should have gone to a Berkshire County resident told trustees at their meeting Tuesday that she has written a letter of protest to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis over his choice of Eleanor Rothman.

"This seems to me unbelievable." said BCC trustee George Wislocki, calling the appointment "silly, and at the bottom line, political."

Rothman could not be immediately reached for comment.

Trustees, who said they had submitted the names of several county residents to a nominating committee, voted to send their own letter of protest to the naming to the governor.

Bush 'homework' okayed

BOSTON (AP) — A slight majority of registered voters around the country said it was appropriate for President Bush to work at his summer home in Maine after ordering U.S. troops to the Middle East, a poll found.

In a telephone poll of 1,004 registered voters, 51 percent said it was appropriate; 43 percent said it was inappropriate, and six percent said they did not know or refused to comment.

The poll was conducted Sunday through Tuesday for The Boston Globe and WBZ-TV of Boston by KRC Communications Research and had a three percent margin of error.

The poll found that 81 percent had a generally favorable opinion of Bush, and 11 percent rated him negatively.

Newspapers exempt from tax

BOSTON (AP) — Newsprint and ink used in publishing newspapers will not be taxed under sections of a new law to become effective Sept. 1, according to Revenue Commissioner Stephen W. Kidder.

Kidder detailed the machinery and equipment used by all media, broadcasting and newspaper publishing which will be taxed in a release mailed over the weekend.

Included is pre-press equipment formerly tax exempted for newspapers. Also included, however, is a tax on pressroom equipment and materials used directly in manufacturing, which newspaper publishers are challenging in court because all other manufacturers do not face similar taxes.

For Your Information

For Your Information is a calender listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5

Blood drive — The University of Massachusetts is sponsoring a series of three blood drives from September 5 to September 7 in the Student Union Ballroom from 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

Juggling/comic magician performance — Juggler/Comedian/Magician Bill Ross is scheduled to perform in the CC/SUB complex from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Martial Arts Demonstration — A Tae Kwon Do Martial Arts Demonstration is scheduled for noon on the Student Union Steps.

Film — The movie House Party will be shown at the Campus pond at dusk. In the event of rain it will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 7 and 9 p.m.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6

Dance — A dance will be held at the Student Union Ballroom, featuring the reggae band "New Horizons," from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Admission will be $1.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 7

Coffee Social — The Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance will be sponsoring a coffee social in Campus Center room 806 from 3-6 p.m. All are welcome.

Film — The movie Teenage Mutant Ninga Turtles will be shown in the Campus Center Auditorium at 5 p.m., 7 p.m., 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. at a cost of $1.

Band — The two bands "We saw the Wolf" and "Cordelia's Dad" will play at the Bluewall Cafe from 9 p.m.-midnight. Admission is $1.

Magic show — A magic show starring "Mr. Fingers" is scheduled in the Student Union Ballroom from 9-11 p.m. Admission is $1.

WELCOME BACK! STUDENTS

Photographs & Memories last a lifetime

clip & save

Welcome Back Special $2.00 OFF OUR PROCESSING SERVICES

NOT VALID WITH RUSH OR REG. SPECIAL EXPIRES OCT. 15TH '90

Same Day & 1 Hour Service Available

Passport Photos Available

The Foto Factory

257 Triangle Street in Amherst 549-6490

62 King Street in Northampton 584-2274

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003

Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor ..... Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editor ..... Gayle Long, A Regina Santiago
News Editor ..... Chris Muther
Sports Editor ..... Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editor ..... Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor ..... Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor ..... Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor ..... Amy Henry, Minu Sebastian
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Ali Woolwich
Business Manager ..... Susan George
Advertising Manager ..... David Melnick
Finance Manager ..... Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager ..... Susan Kent
Promotions Manager ..... Donna Cusson
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager ..... Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Lori Black, Brian Harrington, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

NIGHT GRAPHICS

Old staff only please!

If you are interested in working this semester come down to the basement today at 3:30 for a quick information and scheduling session. If you do not attend you are pond scum and will lose your job. If you have a time conflict and still want your job please contact Terry at 545-3500 before 9 p.m.

If you have never worked night graphics before and would like to, come down to 113 Campus Center at 3:30 Thursday to apply.

animal city

Campus Plaza (next to Stop & Shop) Route 9 Hadley 256-0960

KMart Plaza Holyoke 532-2327

Depot Square Westfield 562-7428

Buy One Fish And Get One For 1¢ (Excludes Feeder Fish And Scavengers) Higher Price Pre-Jets With This Coupon Only — NO LIMIT — Offer expires 9-30-90

25% OFF ANY 5 PC. AQUARIUM SET UP TANK, STAND, FULL HOOD With This Coupon Only Offer expires 9-30-90

AQUARIUM PLASTIC PLANTS BUY ONE AT REG. PRICE GET ONE FREE! Higher Price Prevails — NO LIMIT — With This Coupon Only Offer expires 9-30-90

Jurassic Fish Food Introductory Offer! FISH FOOD BUY ONE GET ONE FREE! (Of Equal Size) — NO LIMIT — With This Coupon Only Offer expires 9-30-90

Hours:
Mon-Sun - 7am-3pm
Late Nite
Fri & Sat 10pm-3am
Special Daily
Breakfast served all day

MYERS EATERY NORTHAMPTON

88 Pleasant St.
584-4145

LOCAL

Lines to be shorter

Add/drop lines predicted to be smaller

BY CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts administrators and professors are anticipating shorter lines on registration day because of better planning and harder work in meeting students' needs as well as the decline in enrollment.

Students received more classes this year than one year ago, according to Associate Registrar Janet Bell. In 1989 the total number of involuntary drops was 17,923, while this year was down to 14,697, she said. Bell added the number of students with an underload, or less than 12 credits, also decreased — from 3,746 to 3,420.

"It will still be a little tough, but things look better in terms of students getting classes this semester," Bell said.

She said the improved numbers are a result of a decline in admissions, as well as the Registrar's office work with various departments on campus to create more sections, hire more teaching assistants, and increase capacity in popular classes.

"We worked harder this summer than I can remember. It was more difficult, but things are roughly in line," she said.

Although she is optimistic about this semester, Bell said everyone has "hit the bottom" in terms future resources.

"There is a great deal of concern as to what will happen after this semester," she said. "Right now the budget information is just hitting. We don't know what to expect."

At the moment, Bell said there are still plenty of courses and warned students not to panic about getting into classes.

"The picture isn't totally gloomy. There are still spaces in many of the [general education] classes — just get up early," she said.

Melinda Novak, acting chair of the Psychology department, said she is still anticipating long lines on registration day.

According to Novak, the Psychology department has lost faculty members and some classes have had sections cut or have been cancelled completely.

"Students will have a more difficult time getting into classes. We've had to turn

CONTINUED ON PAGE 24

Enrollment declining

BY CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff
and PATTI PUCKETT
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts administrators cite the reason for the five percent decline in enrollment for this year's freshman class of 1994 on the dramatic 17 percent decrease in applicants.

Timm Rinehart, director of Undergraduate Admissions, said his department has entered the "war for students," which includes extensive recruiting this semester to make up for the decreasing number of available applicants.

"The administration realizes the importance of the crisis," he said. 'This is a crucial time for admissions."

Although both the average class rank and the average Scholastic Achievement Test score for the class of 1994 were 36 points below last year's average, Rinehart said the University did not accept any students who were not "academically ready."

"SAT scores don't predict success — motivation and will are more important," he said.

He added he does not expect average SAT scores to continue to drop year after year.

In an effort to fill student quotas, Rinehart said UMass will be recruiting more at high schools in the coming year. Plans include direct mail to students' houses, more visits to high schools and a more extensive student visit program.

On Tuesday, September 8, UMass faculty, staff, and administrators are scheduled to meet with high school guidance counselors from across the state for an "honest, up-to-date look at what is going on at UMass," he said.

Because of the decrease in the number of applicants, the University this year accepted a higher percentage of students who applied. Rinehart said 77 percent of the applicants were accepted this year while only 59 percent were accepted last year.

Although the academic profile for incoming students is lower, Rinehart does

CONTINUED ON PAGE 24

Phi Mu Delta penalized for class disruption

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

Phi Mu Delta house

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts' chapter of the Phi Mu Delta fraternity has been sanctioned two years' non-recognition and will not be able to participate in this year's rush season, as a result of a disciplinary hearing which determined Phi Mu Delta pledges were involved in the disruption of an Anthology class last April.

The sanction follows an incident last semester during which a group of White males clad in white interrupted Professor Robert Keene's class "Culture Through Film," during the showing The Life and Times of Harvey Milk, a documentary about the assassination of Milk — the first openly gay elected politician.

The Dean of Student's office, in conjunction with the Greek Affairs Office levied the sanction after a hearing in the Dean of Student's office last semester disclosed that one of two drivers involved in the incident, as well as several of the other men involved, were from Phi Mu.

"The University had sufficient information at this point to review the status of the fraternity," Joanne Vanin, Dean of Students said. "After doing so, along with the fraternity's officers and regional advisor from New Hampshire it was determined that the fraternity needed time for a careful review of their goals and appropriate pledging activities."

According to Vanin, the fraternity is now unable to participate in rush — or the process of inviting new members into their house; the house at 389 North Pleasant Street has been stripped of the fraternity's letters; and the house is no longer recognized as off-campus housing for freshmen of second semester standing or sophomores.

Ed Korza, acting director of Greek Affairs said the incident was "apparently one in a number of pledge activities" slated for the men.

He said there is a contract signed by both students and professors when they agree to attend/teach at UMass and that is the free exchange of intellectual inquiry.

"That line was crossed by their actions," Korza said.

"We want to let students know that this type of action is not accepted and there must be respect for the University's academic community," Vanin said.

The pledges allegedly ascended the stage single-file and interrupted the class in the Thompson lecture Hall, when someone reportedly yelled, "Run boys! Run!"

Most students fled the auditorium, some hid in seats among the 250-plus lecture hall, while Keene tussled with one individual and followed him out of the hall.

A student security officer saw the pledges entering the room and notified the UMass Public Safety Department. The only men identified were the two drivers of the automobiles.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Voters demand end to fiscal crisis

BY MEREDITH O'BRIEN
Collegian Staff

With spiteful and bitter gubernatorial, state representative and Congressional races heating up as the September 18 primary nears, the state's financial situation lies quietly in shambles.

Angry voters, looking to oust the legislators that got them so deeply into debt and have raised their taxes into the clouds, have resoundingly defeated almost every Proposition 2½ override attempt to raise local funding for decimated city and town departments.

NEWS ANALYSIS

With the exception of Springfield, which passed five of its seven override questions, voters in Western Massachusetts have come out in droves to say they are sick of taxes, higher gasoline prices and lying legislators.

On top of that, the crisis in the Persian Gulf has sent gas and oil prices skyrocketing. The Congress is talking about raising federal taxes to cope with the federal deficit. And even with new state taxes, local aid has come up short of many city and town expectations, forcing millions of dollars in additional cuts.

This type of atmosphere plays well for supporters of the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition which seeks to roll back the recent tax hikes passed by the Legislature and Governor Dukakis in an attempt to balance the state's budget. The CLT petition, scorned by most city and town administrators, educators and public employees, would cut the tax rate and raid the state's coffers of $1.4 billion, forcing another round of cuts.

With the layoffs resulting from the recent budget cuts, the unemployment rate has begun to rise and the taxpayers, who have less money to spend, are hurting sales and damaging the private business sector. The newly imposed five percent tax on 597 services, which will go into effect in December, stands to further add to business losses, resulting in higher prices for buyers with less money.

The hardest hit by this mess, aside from the middle-class taxpayers who will shoulder most of the cost for the fiscal crisis, are the city and town-wide departments and especially public schooling.

With the war on drugs heating up, the national educational system flailing in comparison to other nations and impending federal taxes, city and state departments are in desperate need of additional funding, but have been forced to cope with more and more cuts.

Police departments across the state have been put under pressure to not only curb and control the escalating drug problem, put an end to street violence, but to put more officers on the streets with less funding, while trying to conserve gas because the budget did not account for the enormous increase in gas prices. Likewise with other local departments such as fire, library and human services.

The elderly population is increasing, yet the public funding for senior centers is decreasing, while private nursing home costs are skyrocketing to absorb the loss of less business.

And the most widely criticized service, public education, is being cut to the bone. Many high schools have been forced to eliminate entire athletic programs, school revenue generators, to prevent further cuts to educational classes. Scores of teachers, administrators and staff have been laid off while reports of a failing educational system continue to surface.

With these problems lurking in the backs of every candidate's mind, lawmakers cannot lose sight of the problems facing the state's economy right now.

The voters, who will have the final say in the booths in November, will not let them forget.

Legal Center expands services

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The Legal Services Center at the University of Massachusetts has expanded its services this semester to program-fee/part-time graduate students and continuing education students for a $15 fee per advisory case.

Legal Services decided to expand their services because of the increasing numbers of both program-fee graduate students and continuing education students at UMass, said Alan Willcox, legal secretary.

Since full-time undergraduates and graduates pay their fees through the Students Activities Office and additional graduate taxes, the $15 fee is necessary for others who do not pay these mandatory fees and wish to seek legal counsel, Willcox said.

Willcox said the fee is payable at the first appointment concerning a certain legal problem or question and would cover the expense of all further appointments concerning the particular problem.

The Center is a campus agency for student rights that provides legal counsel to UMass students, as well as provides students with advice, internships, and referrals. It also distributes legal information throughout the campus community by distributing brochures, a quarterly newsletter and holding information forums.

"Legal Services is actively involved in preventative law, helping students represent themselves," said Charles DiMare, Directing Attorney.

"What students (full-time undergraduates and graduates) are getting is basically comprehensive legal services for about $10," DiMare said.

■ students fight cuts

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

year.

Rosenberg said a tax roll-back would be "extremely dramatic" if enacted in the middle of the school semester, forcing many university and college programs and departments to close.

"This $1.4 billion cut would come out of $4.4 billion allocated for legislator discretionary spending which would be a 20 to 30 percent cut," Rosenberg said.

"I figure a $120 to $130 million dollar cut for higher education in the middle of the academic year, a $25 to $35 million loss for UMass-Amherst," he said. "Reason has to prevail in this election."

He charged that CLT is headed by the Libertarian Party in close connection with members of the Republican Party and is funded by corporate executives.

Since the beginning of the fiscal crisis, Rosenberg assailed the group for having "taken advantage of the anger and insanity which made Massachusetts the laughing stock of the country."

"If CLT loses this time we can start to undo their power," Rosenberg said. "If they win, their power will continue into the next decade leading into massive escapism and denial in this society which has to start changing at the college level."

Although Rosenberg concedes the working class has a legitimate complaint for carrying a most of the tax burden on their shoulders, he said "people don't understand that every state service has a price and someone has to pay for it."

He said students and staff on state campuses, a potential 2.2 to 2.5 million votes, could vote down the CLT petition which according to a Board of Regent survey has a 50 percent chance of passing.

"The prospects for the future of public education are bleak because of a lack of [student] participation in the electoral process," said Rep. David P. Magnani (D-Framingham).

Magnani said the lowest percentage of registered voters are between the ages of 18 and 22. Since most people vote by party, Magnani said the voting power of "swing voters," who compose 20 to 30 percent of the voting population, is increased five times what it would be normally.

Magnani said college students are usually swing voters who tend to decide more by issue than party. Student Alliance For Education was founded by former Framingham State SGA President Dave Varela, who also organized the student rallies against the budget cuts last fall.

The purpose of SAFE, according to Framingham student Jeff Rich, is to establish an effective network against cuts to higher education which will survive changes in student leadership membership.

■ 55 faculty cut

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

American Studies and former vice president of the MSP, the layoffs will give faculty and students a negative image of the University.

"The minute [the layoffs] occur, there will be a complete demoralization in school," Bracey said. "It will be a horrible atmosphere to work in. Once you break tenure at a place it throws a cloud over the University."

Bracey said no member of the faculty, except for administration and a few faculty members, have received a raise since 1988.

"It's one thing to work hard and not get a raise, but when people don't think what you're doing is important, it starts to effect your work," he said.

Administrators are "giving up" the fight for higher education by considering the layoffs, Bracey said. He added that there have already been reductions in the quality of education at UMass because of the hiring freeze.

"The policy the administration has taken is much too defensive, the students at this University deserve a stronger fight for their education," he said.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM
Tel: 549-2692

Welcome Back! Look at the $AVINGS Scott's has for you!

Bud Light Suitcase cans 24 - 12 oz.
$11.99 plus dep

Miller Genuine Draft 12 - 12 oz. bottles
$5.99 plus dep.

Heineken 12 - 12oz cans
$8.39 plus dep.

Miller Lite 12 - 12oz. cans
$6.99 plus dep.

Half Kegs Starting at $27.

Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 1.75 L (with free sunglasses)
$13.99

Sauza Gold Tequila 750 ml
$7.99
-3.00 mail-in rebate
$4.99 final cost

Peachtree Schnapps 750ml
$6.49

Glen Ellen Sauvignon Blanc 750ml
$3.49

Smirnoff Vodka 80 proof 1.0L
$8.49

ENTER AND WIN ONE OF MASSACHUSETTS' 9 MILLER LITE JEEP® WRANGLERS!

AT SCOTT'S ENTER TO WIN A JEEP® WRANGLER
SEE STORE FOR DETAILS

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE
6 University Drive, Newmarket Center, Amherst
Diagonally Across from UMass Stadium
Plenty of FREE Parking
Telecheck for Your Personal Check
MEGABUCKS We Have It
We now have all Mass Lottery games!

Engineering building to be completed by December

BY KATHY LEWIECKI
Collegian Correspondent

This semester students will see the results of the $6 million renovation to the engineering quad as construction on the Knowles Engineering Building nears completion.

Named after Andrew C. Knowles•III, former chairman of the Board of Trustees and a 1957 graduate of UMass, the building will be used for electrical and computer engineering research, according to Duane Cromack, dean of the College of Engineering. He said the building is expected to be completed by the end of December.

"The building is not intended to be used for classes," Cromack said. "The space has been designed to house [research labs] for faculty and graduate students."

The $5 million allotted to the project is being financed partially from return overhead funds on research within the Engineering department. The remaining $1 million will be used to construct an Engineering Student Center, to be built on top of Marcus Hall.

Construction will begin next spring on the student center, and will be available for students by fall 1991. The student center will serve as a general meeting and activities area for Engineering students, who have most of their classes in the northern part of campus.

"These students need a place for social gathering that is of easy access," said Cromack. "The Student Union just does not meet the needs of all engineering students because of its proximity."

A $250,000 donation for the center was contributed by the Amoco Foundation, in honor of alumnus Robert C. Gunness, to match his earlier pledge of $250,000 on the behalf of himself and his wife.

Gunness was president for 10 years and was director for 22 years of Standard Oil Company of Indiana, now called Amoco Corporation. Christian Gunness, Robert's father, was an engineering professor at UMass for 32 years and was the first head of the Engineering department.

Donations were given by engineering alumni and the Marcus Building Fund, of $350,000 and $50,000 respectively. An additional $100,000 is needed to make the project complete.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

The new Knowles Engineering Building undergoes construction. The building, scheduled to open in December, will house research laboratories for faculty and graduate students.

No new leads in the December Galligan slaying

Composite of assailant

BY SARAH DEMASTER
Collegian Staff

HADLEY — Eight months after University of Massachusetts junior Sharon Galligan was found stabbed to death in her car at the Hampshire Mall, police are still searching for a suspect.

"We have no substantial subjects, and no substantial leads," said State Police Lt. Edward Harrington recently in a telephone interview. Harrington is one of three people investigating the slaying under Northwestern District Attorney Judd Carhart.

State police investigators Kevin Murphy and Leonard Von Flatern also continue to work on the case.

Police have identified several people who were in the McDonald's on Route 9, across from the mall, at the time of the stabbing, but none of these people are eyewitnesses, Harrington said.

Investigators during the summer have also contacted several UMass students who knew Galligan, but they have not obtained information that has led to a possible suspect, he said.

Galligan was killed on the night of Dec. 18, 1989 in her car, which was parked a few spaces away from the main mall entrance.

The closest investigators have come to a possible suspect is information elicited from a woman who several weeks after the slaying underwent hypnosis.

The woman, who was parked at the automatic teller machine in the mall parking lot at the time of the murder, gave a description of the assailant which led to a composite sketch.

Police are still posting the composite, which in January was displayed throughout the five-college area.

Harrington emphasized that police are not sticking solely to the composite, because one person's perception of the assailant could differ from another person's perception.

"We are still actively pursuing [the case], and are looking for any new leads," he said. "We are still looking for anybody who might know about the incident, or who lives in the area."

2 Eggs Pancakes Bacon or Sausage $2
Dove's Nest
Rt.116 Sunderland
Open:
Mon.-Sat. 6am-3pm
Sunday 7am-3pm
phone: 665-7969
TAKE OUT AVAILABLE

MUNCHY SALE
SALE
Ben and Jerry's or Haagen Dazs ICE CREAM $1.89
1 Pint Reg.2.19-2.35
Sweet Life WATER 59c
1 Gallon Reg.69c
COKE 16 oz. Bottles 2/99c
plus dep. Reg. 70c each
Kellogg POPTARTS $1.49
All varieties Reg.$1.89
Milky Way Dark Peanut Butter Snickers and try new PB MAX 3/99c
Reg 40c each
GATORADE 16 oz. Bottle 59c
Reg. 75c
Sweet Life FACIAL TISSUE 59c
Reg. 73c
coupon
20 percent OFF any MICROWAVE ENTREE
May not be combined with other offers. Coupon good on one item only. Valid through 9-15-90. Discount $
Hours:
M-F 8am-9pm
Sat.-Sun. 12-8pm
Franklin Munchy
M-F 7:30am-9pm
MINI STORE
M-F 7:30am-10:00pm
Sat.-Sun. 8:30am-10:00pm
Prices Valid through Saturday 9-15-90

■ new phones installed

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

sity staff, resident directors and administrators participated in a three-week training program to learn how to use the phone's many built-in features.

Randy Sailer, director of the University's Telecommunications Network Services, said while he expects some initial confusion and frustration among students and staff, most will get used to the system very quickly, without training.

"The logistics of training 11,000 students are somewhat daunting," he said. "Most of the stuff you can still do regularly by just picking up the phone. It's just a difference in procedure."

With the new system, students will not be able to use conventional answering machines or modems with their computers.

In lieu of answering machines, students will be offered a $30 per semester or $50 per year voice mail system option that will record up to 20 phone messages, leaving the time and date of each phone call.

For students who wish to access campus computers by phone, 2,500 high-speed Terminal Adaptor Units and software communication packages will made available at Housing Services for $4.

A controversial feature available to campus offices is a crystal display screen, "Calling Party Identification," which displays the caller's phone number.

Recently, companies producing this identification system have come under fire from the American Civil Liberties Union for possibly violating the privacy of the callers who do not want their phone numbers made public.

Sailer said he has received no complaints about what he called a "standard system feature," and added he sees nothing wrong with the display screen.

"The telephone numbers are public information," he said, adding that anyone could obtain a campus phone number by calling Campus Information.

Off-campus phone numbers are not displayed. The word "public" appears on the screen.

"This system is finally providing the University with modern telephones," Sailer said. "The old system was intolerable for a modern university."

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

The new Ericsson telephones offer a number of features including call-forwarding, conference calls, and speed dialing.

■ cable system delayed

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Residence Hall in Southwest Residential Area, as well as installing amplifying equipment. The equipment will allow the University to pick up and amplify signals free of charge from 12 Boston, Springfield, and Waterbury, Conn. television stations.

While the cable lines can accommodate 60 channels, the University will only utilize 36, and reserve four channels for academic use. Plans for these academic channels include:

- The Bulletin Board Channel, which will post a variety of administrative and academic information, including dining common menus, intramural and athletic scores, Fine Arts Center schedules, and area government news;
- The Student Access Channel, on which University Video Center students could broadcast programs they have produced;
- The Administration Channel, which would broadcast informational programs on such topics as developmental skills, job preparation, and information about UMass student services.

Housing Services is also trying to finalize contracts with Chicago, Ill.-based Films Inc. for a movie channel and with Satellite Communications for Learning Worldwide, an international news channel. These additional channels would also operate at no cost to the student, Zannini said. The University would also be able to rebroadcast movies if the contract with Films Inc. is approved. Housing Services, along with the Five College Inc., has purchased the rights to SCOLA, but Zannini said plans to add the channel to the cable system have not yet been finalized.

SCOLA takes newscasts from around the world, and transmits them in their native language. Housing Services would post a programming schedule, Zannini said. He said the channel will be valuable both to students taking classes in a foreign language, and to international students attending the University.

"I feel it will be something that will be greatly appreciated," Zannini said. "There are a significant number of international students here, and broadcasts will be in the native language versus 'textbook' language." SCOLA is already being used by the Foreign Language Resource Center in Herter Hall. Five College Inc. bought a subscription two years ago, and now pays $5,000 per year for the station, which the foreign language center receives through a satellite dish on top of Herter.

"We tape programs [on cassette] and distribute them mainly to Five-College foreign language professors to teach culture and foreign language skills," said Edward Phinney, faculty director of the center.

The center also broadcasts the programs in a viewing lounge in Herter room 19.

Phinney said the programs are beneficial to international students and students of foreign languages. He said the strictly news programming would be of "limited interest" to those who do not speak a foreign language, because there are no cultural programs or films.

He added, however, that SCOLA is considering adding this type of programming next year.

"[SCOLA] is used by foreign students eager to get news from home. The viewing lounge in Herter 19 is always filled with international students," he said. "Also, students can see events of world interest, such as earthquakes and current events in Iraq."

Scholar urges unions

AMHERST (AP) — Labor scholar Harvey Friedman says he sees hard times ahead for the nation's economy and the labor movement.

But Friedman, who retires this week as director of the Labor Relations and Research Center at the University of Massachusetts, said recently he expects the difficulties will eventually bring a resurgence of unionism.

"I believe we're not just riding for a recession, but a depression," he said. "In the short term, I'm pessimistic. There will be a lot of poverty and sadness.

"But when people are desperate enough, they will go back to collective bargaining," he said. "It may bring people back to their senses."

Since the late 1800s, unions have waxed during hard economic times and waned during good in a 50-to-60-year cycle, he said. And the boom and bust cycles have been especially sharp in the mill towns of New England.

"In Massachusetts the swings have been greater than in the rest of the country," he said. "When the Massachusetts economy is high it is very high and when it is low, it is very low."

Before coming to the University 25 years ago, Friedman, a lawyer, spent 15 years as assistant director for the Northeast for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. He has been director for the past 20 years of the Labor Relations and Research Center.

The center, which issues a masters degree in labor studies in addition to doing more traditional research on labor issues, is one of the few in the U.S. that is aimed primarily at training people working for the union side in collective bargaining, he said.

"It's almost unique in its emphasis," he said. About 40 percent of its graduates work for labor unions with another 30 percent employed by government.

The future of the union movement may lie in developing a broad multi-country base as the economy itself becomes more international, Friedman said, "but that's not going to happen for the next 20 to 50 years."

LOTS for LITTLES
TOYS • RECORDS • BOOKS
Plus New and Recycled CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
20% OFF ANY ONE ITEM with this coupon except sale items
201 No. Pleasant St. Amherst• 256-6823
Mon-Sat 9:30-5:30 Sun 12-5

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

Throughout your college years, make A.J. Hastings your headquarters for School Supplies!
Count on us for everything from your first freshman notebook to your final thesis paper...plus all those years of pens, pencils, paper clips, typewriter ribbons, etc., in-between!
A.J. Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Chopped beef with bacon, sauteed onions, mushrooms, cheese, lettuce and served with steak fries.
Loaded Burger $5.35
late night $6.25
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
with coupon, offer expires 9-21-90
Also, try our New! Spicy French Fries
"lightly coated in crispy seasonings" 50¢ extra
OPEN Sun.-Thurs. 6am-3am Fri.& Sat. 24 hours
James H. McManus
Senior Citizen Discount 10% anytime (not with coupons)
NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP RTE. 9 HADLEY/AMHERST 256-6889

FOOD SERVICES
Welcomes new + returning students to your dining commons

worcester + hampshire

Mon.-Fri.: Breakfast... 7:00 am - 10:30 am
Lunch.....11:15 am - 2:00 pm
Dinner..... 4:00 pm - 6:30 pm

Sat.-Sun.: Brunch.....10:30 am - 2:00 pm
Dinner..... 4:00 pm - 6:30 pm

franklin + berkshire

Mon.-Fri.: Lunch.....10:30 am - 2:00 pm
Dinner..... 4:00 pm - 7:00 pm

Sat.-Sun.: Brunch.....10:30 am - 2:00 pm
Dinner..... 4:00 pm - 7:00 pm

kosher
Dinners at Hampden (Mon.-Fri.) 5:00 pm - 6:30 pm basics

. . . delicious vegetarian entrees, fish and non-red meat entrees, vegetables, fresh fruit, fruit juices, honey, yogurt, wheat germ, grains, nuts, and cheeses . . .
Basics Foods Lunch and Dinner available in Worcester and Hampshire Commons cash prices

If you are not on the meal plan, you can purchase meals separately:
Cash: Breakfast..... $2.75
Lunch..... $4.75
Dinner..... $6.10
Kosher Dinner..... $7.70
Or save $$$ and buy 5-Meal Strip Tickets:
5-Day Breakfast Strip..... $12.00
5-Day Lunch Strip..... $23.20
5-Day Dinner Strip..... $27.00
5-Day Kosher Dinner Strip.... $34.40
Meal Ticket Office in Franklin Commons in West Lobby - (Mon.-Fri.) 9:00 am - 5:00 pm

special events
The tradition continues in the Fall of 1990.

What's on the menu? Dial 5-2626 for daily menu recording.

top of the campus (t.o.c.) exchange program
On Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday evenings you may want to dine at the Top of the Campus Restaurant for a little extra cost plus your Meal Plan I.D.

catering
Food Service Catering located in the Campus Center Hotel provides complete catering services for any function . . . whether your plans call for a reception, buffet, or intimate wine and cheese party, or a seated formal banquet, our trained staff is prepared to handle a group of any size. Call Catering Office at 545-0418 between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. Monday through Friday.

Railroad Stores SALVAGE
SALE ENDS SEPT. 13
Rt.9 Hadley, MA 586-7248 Rt. 5 E. Windsor 623-3358 1131 Campbell Ave West Haven, CT (203)933-5468 739 Meadow Chicopee 594-2925 207 Webster Sq. Berlin, CT 828-9889 1 Canal St. Turner Falls 863-4343
Rt. 184 Groton CT
RUBIE BOUGHT OVER 84,000 YARDS TO SELL AT 40% TO 70% OFF AND MORE
ANSO X Wear-Dated Stainfree FROM ALLIED FIBERS
LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR
DUPONT CERTIFIED STAINMASTER CARPET
RUBIE BOUGHT OVER 35,000 ROLLS INCLUDING ALL THE MOST WANTED COLORS AND FABRICS. SHAW SELLS THE DEALER WHAT HE NEEDS AND WE GET THE REST!
RUGS RUGS RUGS! ALL FIRST QUALITY
9'x12' NOW $69.99 COMPARE AT $180
10'x12' NOW $79.99 COMPARE AT $199
11'x12' NOW $89.99 COMPARE AT $220
12'x12' NOW $99.99 COMPARE AT $240
12'x13' NOW $104.99 COMPARE AT $259
12'x14' NOW $109.99 COMPARE AT $280
12'x15' NOW $119.99 COMPARE AT $300
12'x16' NOW $129.99 COMPARE AT $319
12'x17' NOW $139.99 COMPARE AT $340
12'x18' NOW $144.99 COMPARE AT $360
12'x19' NOW $149.99 COMPARE AT $379
12'x20' NOW $159.99 COMPARE AT $400
PATIO UMBRELLAS
FIRST QUALITY • AMERICAN MADE
CRANK HANDLE • MANY COLORS
Finkel California
7½' 8 RIB NOW $39.99 VALUE $190.00
8½' 12 RIB NOW $59.99 VALUE $260.00
STANLEY REMOTE CONTROL GARAGE DOOR OPENERS
THE STANLEY COMPANY SAID THESE ARE REPACKED — BUT THEY LOOK LIKE NEW TO US!
STANLEY U-INSTALL® PREMIER MODEL 3200
• ½ HP — EXTRA POWER TO OPEN HEAVY DOORS UP TO 18' x 7½' • PROVEN STEEL CHAIN AND CABLE DRIVE • 150 WATTS OF LIGHT WITH 4½ MINUTE LIGHT TIME DELAY • 1,024 EASY-TO-CHANGE DIGITAL CODES • TRANSMITTER INDICATOR LIGHT LETS YOU KNOW WHEN BATTERY NEEDS REPLACING • INSTANT DOOR REVERSE WITH BACK-UP TIMED REVERSING SYSTEM
VALUE $169.00 NOW $118.88 YOU SAVE 30% ½HP
OTHER MODELS IN STOCK STARTING AT $88
BRAND NAME LUGGAGE BUY-OUT
AMERICAN TOURISTER GARMENT BAGS ORIGINALLY $79.00 NOW $33
PERSONAL PORTER SUITCASE ON WHEELS ORIGINALLY $149.00 NOW $68
OLEG CASSINI 24" PULLMAN VALUE $79.95 NOW $19.88
VERDI • 26 INCH SUITCASE ON WHEELS GRAND HOTEL PULLMAN NORMALLY $79.95 NOW $24.88
5 PC JUTE & VINYL LUGGAGE SET • DELUXE 26" PULLMAN WITH WHEELS • 24" • 22" • 20" SUITCASES • MATCHING TOTE VALUE $150 SET NOW $77
INNERSPRING MATTRESS SETS SMOOTH TOP
TWIN SIZE SET $98.88 SET
FULL SIZE SET $118.88 SET
QUEEN SIZE SET $158.88 SET

Students press for Legal Services litigation rights

BY KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Supporters of the limited litigation rights proposal for the Legal Services Center, a proposal that would allow Legal Services staff to represent students directly in some legal cases, are gathering campus support for its restoration before the proposal comes before the Board of Trustees in December.

"We're hoping that [the limited litigation proposal] will become the big student issue this year," said Angus McQuilken, Student Trustee.

The Legal Services Center is a campus agency that provides free legal counsel for University of Massachusetts students. Litigation rights were fully rescinded in August 1986 by the Board of Trustees.

Limited litigation rights would restrict Legal Services from taking legal action against the University, the town of Amherst, and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts on behalf of UMass students. However, attorneys would be able to represent students against non-students and outside parties.

Last November, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson requested a proposal from the Legal Services staff to restore limited litigation rights to Legal Services be submitted to him, so the administration could begin litigation negotiations with Legal Services.

In a response letter to Legal Services last year, Madson stated that any litigation or representation of UMass

CONTINUED ON PAGE 19

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

Legal Services staff at work. Left, Secretary and Outreach Coordinator Alan Willcox. Right, Staff Attorney Thomas Coish, Esq.

Students pursue suit

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

An out-of-state class action lawsuit filed against the Massachusetts Board of Regents of Higher Education after a mid-semester tuition increase last January is pending in the U.S. District Court in Boston, according to the representing attorneys.

A rescindment of the $485 fee, approved by the Legislature in the 1991 fiscal budget, was vetoed in August by Governor Dukakis.

State legislators did not attempt to override Dukakis' veto of Section 120 of the state budget which authorized the Board of Regents to "rescind the tuition increase for out-of-state students effective for the period from Jan. 1, 1990 to July 1, 1990."

The amendment maintained all tuition increases for out-of-state students approved by the Board of Regents for 1991 and stated "out-of-state students shall pay an amount equal to 100 percent of costs of enrollment."

In his veto, Dukakis said he objected to Section 120 because it "would require the Commonwealth to refund $1.7 million in tuition charges which were credited to the general fund in FY90 [fiscal budget]." The result of this refund would have been a $1.7 million increase to the fiscal year 1990 deficit, Dukakis stated.

The class action suit against the state, called Arriaga vs. the Board of Regents, was filed on April 17 by Carl Valvo, a Boston attorney from the firm Cosgrove, Eisenburg, and Kiley. He is representing out-of-state students from all 29 Massachusetts state colleges and universities.

Assistant Attorney General Peter Sacks is representing the defendants, the Board of Regents of Higher Education and the presidents and trustees of all Massachusetts state colleges and universities.

The Board of Regents and school administrators agreed on June 28 with Carl Valvo, on the behalf of the plaintiffs, against enacting a federal injunction against the fee. The injunction would have stopped collection of the fee until the case was settled or dismissed and would have protected students from punishment by their school if they did not pay by the August deadline.

Valvo said returning students that had contacted him received a payment extension until May 1991. Also, students who could face extreme hardship by their inability to pay the increase, such as foreign students subject to deportation, can apply for individual extentions, he said.

The first hearing of the case should be scheduled in October unless there is a motion to dismiss the case by the District Court, according to Valvo. The representing attorneys will argue whether the increase violated the Privileges and Immunity Clause of the Constitution. The Privileges and Immunity Clause protects out-of-state students from being denied opportunities and fundamental rights a state provides in-state residents.

Sack said although the Supreme Court has never decided an out-of-state tuition increase case based on this clause, lower courts have held that tuition differences between in-state and out-of-state do not violate the clause.

"States want to subsidize their own students because instate students and parents have been paying taxes unlike students from other states who haven't been paying taxes and are likely to not remain living in-state after graduation," Sacks said.

The timing of the increase also creates an argument over whether the increase was a "breech of contract" or an "impairment of contract" by the state. A breech of contract is a violation of an agreement by one party and would be decided in a state court. An impairment of contract can only involve impairing legal acts passed by a state legislature.

Valvo said the state is trying to argue that the Board of Regents acted on their own to raise tuition. Since the mid-semester increase was Section 176 of the state 1990 budget, Valvo said the increase was an impairment of contract.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 20

Deerfield Data Systems
New England's HP Specialists Since 1981
HEWLETT PACKARD 665-3742
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA
1/2 mile past Cliffside Apts.
Hewlett-Packard Overstock Sale!!!
Classic Printers at Outrageous Prices!
All prices for cash or COD; 3% charge for VISA, MC, AMEX.
Hewlett-Packard LaserJet Series II Printer $1199
• NEW, with 1 year warranty
• 8 pages/minute, 640K memory
• Includes HP toner cartridge
Quantities limited; pricing good only while supplies last!
HP DeskJet Clearance—WHILE SUPPLIES LAST!
$299
• New, with 3 year warranty
• Laser-quality printing
• Silent, 2 page/minute, 300 dpi
HP Business & Scientific Calculators—25% OFF!
Including the HP 48SX, 28S, 12C and other models

YOUR ONE-STOP AUTO SHOP
For complete auto body and repair services on foreign and domestic vehicles...stop into
ACME AUTOMOTIVE CENTER
Family owned and operated
220 King St., Northampton
584-3710

TACO VILLA
WELCOME BACK!
Food still good.
We're still here.
Downtown Northampton • Downtown Amherst
Sumner Ave., Springfield

Sale 30% on all eyeglass frames WITH THIS AD
Ray-Ban
Amherst Optical Shoppe
■Contact Lenses■
■Fashionable Eyewear■
Eye exams available by appointment
Independent Dr. of Optometry on premises
195 No. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-6405

Emergency phones added

BY JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Faded yellow emergency phone boxes providing a direct line to the University Public Safety Department that once stood at 10 locations on campus have been up-scaled to 61, with "vandal restrictive, heavy-gauge stainless-steel exterior metal.

Yellow with a maroon-colored "HELP" and UMass ensignia on the front, the new phone boxes will also have a blue light will be located above the phone box for easier spotting, said Lawrence Holmes, associate director of Public Safety.

Campus Emergency 911

The phones can be found on all residence halls, as well as on five of six roadside call boxes, four bus shelters, parking lots 21 and 44, adjacent to Memorial Hall and the Worcester dining commons, in Boyden athletic fields and outside of the Campus Center parking garage.

"There is a red emergency button located in the bottom right-hand corner that immediately registers with the UMass police," Holmes said. The phones are equipped with a speaker instead of a handset, allowing the individual to place a call without interference and a touch-tone pad that enables a caller to place a three minute on- or off-campus phone call.

Holmes said with the call-boxes outside of buildings provides easier access, making emergency help more readily available. "Getting to phones indoors can be very difficult, especially at night and there are sometimes calls of a critical nature but not necessarily an emergency nature that must be made.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

A look at the outside of the new emergency call box.

"We've had very little trouble in the past [with crank phone calls]. We don't discourage anyone to use these phones. In fact, we expect people to respond. We've provided them with a communication link in emergency situations," Holmes said.

He said the positioning of the new telephones was based on where the most "activity" occured on campus. When asked if he thought these would merely deter that activity, Holmes said he thought not.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

The number of campus emergency phones has increased.

"Our staff at Public Safety has been affected by the budget cuts, however [response to calls] has never been a problem before. And there will be no poblem responding to emergency calls either," Holmes said.

According to John Miller, director of the Telecommunications Project, each phone cost approximately $725 plus installation fees. Money for the installation was derived from Public Safety and Housing Services. Miller said both paid a sum up front and will continue to pay in monthly installments.

Housing is responsible for those phones on residences. Lawrence Moneta, associate director of Housing Services said exact figures allocated toward the residence hall installation were unobtainable. However, he said the money was mainly from the Housing portion of students' bills.

Miller said the phones outside of the residence buildings will simplify the duty of security personnel.

"Now a visitor is able to call up to a room before they enter the building and have that person let them in," Miller said.

Miller said all residence phones are functional and other phones, if not ready by August 31 will be ready by the end of this week.

Holmes also stated there will now be 911 emergency access on all room phones and an 82-911 emergency access for the Campus Center and University Health Services. These are effective immediately.

Horse farm not yet completed

BY MEREDITH O'BRIEN
Collegian Staff

With only a few bureaucratic setbacks, completion for the construction and renovations of the University of Massachusetts Foundation's 131-acre Hadley horse farm is slated for December.

The farm, located on the western side of campus on North Maple Street, was purchased by the Foundation earlier this year for $1.5 million. But with the construction of an indoor riding arena, repair of deteriorating fences and roofs, as well as a new sewer line hook-up with the town of Amherst, the total cost of the project will run close to $3 million.

Obtaining permits and garnering approval from various state and local departments initially stalled the project's progress, but Foundation Executive Director Thomas Trotman said most of the glitches are gone now.

"I don't think there will be any more red tape," Trotman said. "We're pretty much on target."

"The necessary permits and permissions took longer than anticipated," said Roger Hewett, director of Planned Giving and a member of the Foundation's real estate committee.

Officials now have to wait until the end of the bidding process to obtain services from a construction company before beginning work on the new sewage line.

"Having the sewer system installed will require the approval of the Department of Environmental Protection in Boston," Hewett said. "And that process could take months."

The former owner of the farm, William Young, sold the former Young Meadows farm to the Foundation when problems with the farm's sewage system prompted its shutdown and pushed Young into debt.

Young's apartment, located in the farm's main building called the Manor House, was seized by the state Department of Revenue as a loan on owed back taxes.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 20

Marcie's Place
Date to be Different
Lunch & Dinner
Downtown Amherst
(413) 256-0036

WEIGHTLIFTING
FREE WEIGHTS•NAUTILUS•EXERCISE BIKES•CLIMBERS
The GYM at mountain farms mall
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

CAFE DICARLO
The Best In Casual Italian Dining
Relax In Our Outdoor Cafe
Open daily at 11:30a.m.
71 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst MA.
253-9300

"Hey Bud, Welcome Back!"
-Your favorite music (DJ)
-Sports
-Pool
-Munchies
-Giveaways
-much, much MORE!
Proper ID Required
Alley Oops
50¢ Bud Drafts
Thru Sept. 10th
NO COVER CHARGE!

ABSOLUTE AUCTION
8 GOLF COURSE CONDOS AT FAIRWAY VILLAGE, NORTHAMPTON, MA
REF# 90-489
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1990 AT 10:00 A.M.
UNITS Bx-1, B-2, Bx-3, Bx-4, B-5, B-6, B-7 and Bx-8
FAIRWAY VILLAGE,SPRING ST, NORTHAMPTON, MA
OPEN HOUSES: Friday, Saturday & Sunday, Sept 7th, 8th & 9th -11 AM to 4 PM each day
Viewing only: Mon-Fri, September 10-14, 11 AM to 4 PM
Offering 8 luxury Residential Condo Units situated on 80 acres of land bordering the Mill River. Property is located along the fairways of the Northampton Country Club, a nine-hole private golf course. All units have Southern exposure to allow for the greatest view and privacy.
TERMS: THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($3,000.00) deposit per unit in cash, certified or bank cashier's check at the sale. Balance due within forty-five (45) days at closing. (14 UNITS TO BE SOLD ABSOLUTE - BUYER'S CHOICE) 5% BUYER'S PREMIUM WILL BE ADDED TO THE FINAL HIGH BID
UP TO 95% FINANCING AVAILABLE TO QUALIFIED BUYERS & RATES AS LOW AS 6.65%.
CALL TODAY FOR BROCHURE AND INFO
AMERICA' REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS
JEROME J. MANNING & CO., INC.
AUCTIONEERS
TOLL FREE - 1-800-821-0111

■ frat reprimanded

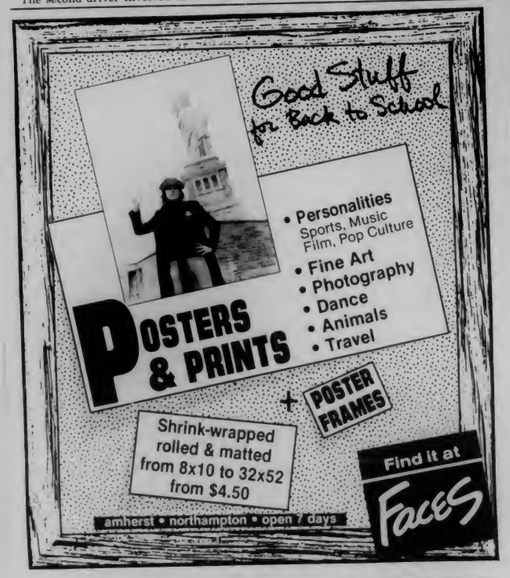
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Vanin and Korza said contrary to community feelings labelling the incident as "homophobic," the incident was not homophobic.

"They knew a film was being shown, however they had no idea that that specific film was being shown," Vanin said.

The second driver involved in the incident was thought to be a non-UMass student, however, recent information has confirmed his UMass status. "[Professor] Keene has been on a dig throughout this summer and our office will proceed [with a hearing] as soon as he returns," Vanin said.

Both the President and Vice-president of Phi Mu were unobtainable for comment at press-time.



Good Stuff for Back to School
• Personalities Sports, Music Film, Pop Culture
• Fine Art
• Photography
• Dance
• Animals
• Travel
POSTERS & PRINTS
+ POSTER FRAMES
Shrink-wrapped rolled & matted from 8x10 to 32x52 from $4.50
amherst • northampton • open 7 days
Find it at FACES

Read The Right Newspaper This Semester and You Could

WIN A $200 GIFT CERTIFICATE

TO YOUR CAMPUS BOOKSTORE
PLUS Gift Certificates for Pizzas & Dinners

From Minuteman stadium to Orchard Hill, from the Southwest towers to the Grad Research building, students all over the UMass campus are ordering delivery of the Union-News and Sunday Republican to their residence halls, sororities, fraternities and off-campus addresses.

Student subscriptions are half price for 16 weeks. And if you order before September 30, we'll enter your name in a random drawing to win a $200 gift certificate to the campus bookstore, or gift certificates for pizza and dinner.

Order now. Get news, sports, business, commentary, entertainment, money-saving coupons and more delivered to your door for half price!

☐ - Union-News AM ($12.00/16 weeks)
☐ - Sunday Republican ($10.08/16 weeks)
☐ - I do not want the newspaper but, please enter my name in the drawing.

Student Name _____
Local Address _____
_____
Phone _____
Permanent Address _____
_____
Phone _____

Send check or money order to Student Subscriptions, Union-News Circulation Department, 1860 Main St., Springfield MA 01101. Delivery begins when payment is received. Winners will be notified by phone.

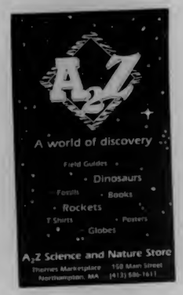
Union-News
Sunday Republican

THORNES MARKETPLACE
INVITED PARKING IN ATTACHED GARAGE!
150 MAIN STREET NORTHAMPTON
Five floors of wonderfully festive shops, restaurants, galleries and a gym.
HOURS
M,T,W,SAT 9:30-5:30
TH&F TIL 9:00
SUN 12-5:00

TAYLOR MEN

2nd Floor, Thornes Market, 150 Main St., Northampton, MA 585-0130

Thornes • 150 Main St., Northampton • 586-1508



Group pushes for tuition legislation

BY KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

A student advocacy group recently petitioned the State Legislature for five new laws to protect college students in public institutions from tuition and fee hikes, provide more financial aid for state schools, and to prevent school administrators from abusing trust funds.

The State Student Association of Massachusetts is a non-profit student-run organization which presents student views and concerns to the Legislature, the Board of Regents of Higher Education and to the various college and university administrators. SSAM also functions as a resource and informational network for student government associations statewide.

Photo by Geoff Richelew

Joseph Langis

SSAM petitioned the State House to institute an act which would not allow "tuition increases at Massachusetts public institutions of higher learning to exceed the rate of inflation in any given year."

According to Joe Langis, executive director of SSAM, petition No. 711 follows a trend in the Legislature "where people are saying it makes sense to go with the rate of inflation" for tax increases and other increases necessary for state funding.

"There is no tuition policy in place as to how high tuition can be raised," Langis said. "Students recognize that the cost of everything goes up so much as the rate of inflation."

Since the Board of Regents has only recommended a voluntary restriction on administrative fees, not to exceed 30 percent of tuition costs, SSAM petitioned the House to turn the recommendation into law.

"There is no cap on fees right now so we want to eliminate the possibility of fees going up at outrageous rates," Langis said. "Fees are also not covered under scholarships and financial aid."

Another SSAM petition would allow the Student Advisory Committee, a group of SGA presidents and student trustees created by the Board of Regents to advise both the Board and the Chancellor, voting rights on each Regent's standing committee. The Student Advisory Committee was implemented at the same time as the student regent in 1988. The student regent and student trustee on each campus have voting power.

Langis said students in each standing committee of the Board of Regents — Academic Affairs and Long Range Planning, Fiscal Affairs and Management, Educational Research and Services, and Affirmative Action, Personnel, and Labor Relations — can take part in debate but have no voting power.

"The power of the vote is more important than the power of debate," Langis said.

As an example of what a difference voting power for these students would make, Langis said if the vote by the committee arranged by Fiscal Affairs and Management for tuition increases was three to two in favor, the student vote would be crucial.

SSAM also petitioned the legislature to divide financial aid evenly between students attending private and public schools.

"Currently, scholarships and aid are broken up so that not more than 75 percent can go to students in private institutions, and no less than 10 percent and no more than 25 percent can go to students in public institutions,' Langis said.

He said the Board of Regents has been flexible in raising the portion of student funds allocated for public financial aid to no less than 30-33 percent. "SSAM is saying make it a 50-50 split to make [aid allocation] fair and equitable in this time of substantial financial crisis," he said.

The last petition SSAM has submitted to the Legislature would, if enacted, make the reporting and auditing of trust funds mandatory every year, he said.

According to Langis, the Board of Regents set up voluntary guidelines regarding trust fund use which SSAM considers to be insufficient because of trust fund scandals two years ago, he said.

"Two years ago, there were scandals concerning administrative use of trust funds for unauthorized purposes," he said. "As a result of the public outcry, legislation was filed that would bring reporting and auditing of trust fund use by each campus provost or bursars office at their discretion."

SSAM re-filed this legislation to make auditing mandatory and anticipates action in both the House and Senate, he said.

"The only way to really address [misuse of trust funds] is through legislation," Langis said. "Unfortunately, this was the beginning of the end of higher education."

Cuts force postponement of recycling program

BY CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts was forced to postpone a proposed recycling program that would have sent tons of materials to the Materials Recycling Facility in Springfield due to further cuts in the budget.

With an unexpected cut of $5.9 million to the budget by the Legislature, UMass was unable to pay the $391,000 it would cost to implement the plan by January 1, 1991, according to UMass officials.

Amherst Board of Health regulations required businesses, apartment owners and institutions to develop a recycling plan by September 1, 1990. The regulations require implementation by January 1, 1991. The University has requested the regulation be waived for 18 months.

The Amherst Board of Health will consider the waiver at a public hearing on September 12.

Betty Anderson Frederic, town health director, said she is very concerned about getting the program started.

"I know this program will relieve the town landfill of a lot of waste and will be able to prolong the life of the landfill," she said.

Frederic said she does not know what the penalty will be if the school fails to meet the deadline.

According to Herbert Bryan, vice chairman of the town's Solid Waste Committee, UMass alone produces 25 to 30 percent of the town's trash. Bryan said the University is currently only recycling on "a very small scale."

"Considering the size of the University and the amount of waste it's producing, a recycling program is very important," Bryan said.

According to Peter Wozniak, director of the Physical Plant, the MRF plant in Springfield would have waived tipping fees, for which the University currently pays $65 a ton at the Amherst landfill. The MFR, which opened in January, is a repository for recyclables from 90 communities in Western Massachusetts.

Wozniak said UMass has conducted a recycling program for high-quality paper for years and the housing department also began a paper collection program in the dormitories last year. However, he added this only amounts to about 1.5 percent of the total waste on campus.

Before the money was cut from the budget, Wozniak said he planned to spend $281,000 a year on recycling with another one-time cost of $110,000 for a trash bin with wheels and other operating expenses.

If the Board of Health denies the waiver, he said UMass will be forced to fund the recycling program, "one way or another."

The small amount of recycling the University currently does may be cut even more, according to Albert Potter of the Physical Plant.

The high-grade paper recycling program, which is currently maintained by one person, is in danger of ending if no replacement is found for that person, Potter said.

"There just isn't a budget for the full program, we need to combine all the small programs," he said. "Obviously it's a concern, everyone is trying to recycle — other colleges are having the same problem."

Mademoiselle Magazine
WANTS TO KNOW WHAT YOU BUY AND WHY

If you're a college student, you can tell us what's on your mind by joining Mademoiselle's College Marketing Board. All Board members become vital links in a network of young women on college campuses nationwide.

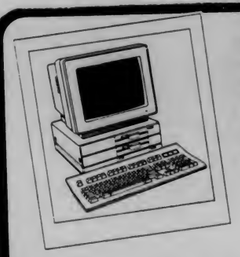
As an active participant, you'll receive questionnaires covering a variety of subjects — from your personal and career aspirations to how you spend your money on clothes, cosmetics, food, entertainment and more.

Mademoiselle will also send you product samples and coupons from our advertisers. You may even get the chance to test new products and help Mademoiselle coordinate an exciting on-campus event at your school.

Get involved — through Mademoiselle's College Marketing Board!

If you would like to be considered for membership in Mademoiselle's College Marketing Board, please fill out the information below and return to: Annalisa Damley, College Marketing Board, Mademoiselle Magazine, 350 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10017.

Name _____
Name of college _____
School address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Date of birth _____ Sex _____ Major _____
Class _____ Graduation date _____



Computer Rentals Starting at $46 Per Month

IDEAL RELATIONSHIP:
Compatible PCs seek temporary relationship with demanding, economy-minded user. Into heavy work-outs, late nights—your software or mine. 586-7405

VALIDATA: SALES/RENTALS
Mountain Farms Mall
Hadley, MA 01035

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Rape information vital

According to the U.S. Bureau of Justice statistics:

- A rape occurs every six minutes in this country;
- Three out of four women will be victims of a violent crime in their lifetime;
- Thirty-six percent of rapes occur in the victim's home/place of residence;
- In 20 percent of single-offender rapes, the rapist is under 21, while 62 percent of multiple-offender rapists are under the age of 21.

These statistics, released this summer, paint an ominous portrait of rape in the United States. The number of rape incidents continues to escalate every year, and nowhere else is it more of paramount concern than on college campuses.

And yet, information — hard, statistical information — about rape and sexual assaults on this campus has been kept secret.

Reporters from the Collegian have been trying fruitlessly for semesters to obtain information from the University regarding campus rape. Our requests for information about the place and time of rapes and assaults have been brushed aside, with the University of Massachusetts community remaining ill-informed.

What kind of a difference would it make to the women on this campus if rapes and sexual assaults were reported on a regular basis? If they were aware of when and where attacks occur, and how often? If they were given the type of factual information that could help them face the reality that rape actually happens on this campus?

Whatever the type of rape, whether the perpetrator is an acquaintance, date or stranger, it occurs, and more often than people would like to think.

By simply printing when and in what area an alleged attack occurred, the terrifying fact of rape can be brought closer to home to many students. With a vague, "An attack occurred on campus last Saturday night," in police reports, students will not realize that rapes and assaults do and can occur in their own dormitory, on their own floor. The gravity of the problem is not sufficiently addressed when, in fact, part of the answer is staring us right in the face.

If students are shielded from this information, for whatever reason, they will go on blissfully unaware of the problem, shrugging off the statistics and harsh realities. "That could never happen here."

Armed with accurate information about day-to-day crime that goes on within their own campus, students will be more aware, act with more caution and be safer.

Information is power.

Unsigned editorials reflect the majority opinion of the Collegian Board of Editors.

"THE SPACIOUS SKIES HAVE A HOLE IN THE OZONE! ACID RAIN WIPED OUT THE AMBER WAVES OF GRAIN!... THE PURPLE MOUNTAINS ARE NONRECYCLABLE GARBAGE!... THE GREEN HOUSE EFFECT DESTROYED THE FRUITED PLAIN!... AND, OF COURSE, EXXON TOOK CARE OF THE SHINING SEAS!"

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed, double-spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editors' discretion.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 30 typed lines and columns must not exceed 65 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Reggie Santiago/Gayle Long, Collegian Offices, Campus Center 113, UMass Amherst 01003.

Students interested in becoming columnists or cartoonists should come down to the Collegian newsroom and ask to talk to Reggie, Gayle or Jeremy.

We look forward to receiving your submissions and comments throughout the semester.

Welcome back! The summer has surely provided some unique perspectives. Why not share them with us? We can not print opinions we do not receive! This is your paper — this page should reflect our readers' thoughts. Be daring. Write to us!

American oil addiction adds to intervention in Third World

America has fallen prey to an addiction.

No, wait. Let me change that: The whole planet is a giant junkie, and now we are heading for what could be a bout of withdrawal pains.

We have all of the symptoms of a junkie. We don't blame ourselves for our problem (read: addiction). We blame everyone else.

When we first started, we didn't think it would matter that we would need our fix so much. We thought we could deal with it. We thought we'd never run out of our precious substance.

We figured that our suppliers would be stupid enough to do our bidding, even though we were the ones who needed the substance and they needed the money it would bring them.

Guess what. We were wrong.

Oil. Oil makes the motors of the world run. It makes our homes warm in winter. It is useful if you have a car. We have idiotically taken oil for granted, and now we are paying the price.

One thing about this addiction to this sticky brown liquid is that we have to worry about what goes on in the Middle East. Granted, it's not the only reason we have to worry about what happens over there.

Our relationship with Israel (no matter what you think of it), coupled with our bad habit of interfering in every Third World country's affairs, also deserve a large share of the blame. However, this new crisis involving Iraq has to do with oil, the fact that this whole flying mudball is addicted to it and that the United States is just a little too eager to fight a war for the rest of the world.

I suppose I must be some kind of a neuro-case to think we are a bunch of paranoid, trigger-happy, macho oil junkies to want to risk the lives of 18-year-olds over something that happened on the other side of the planet, and which affects other countries more than us. (We do have our own oil reserves.) Strangely enough, we are the only country jumping the gun to go in to the Middle East and play John Wayne.

Pamela McCarthy

Why are we so ready to fight?

Why don't we just stick to the economic embargo — what Iraq did was wrong, so we boycott them until they make things right. It makes sense to me.

Yet we have to go roaring in a giant desert, claiming to protect the ideals of democracy and sovereignty.

Excuse me, what did we say we were protecting? Sovereignty. Oh, right.

I'm sure that every Native American is going to buy that claim. As will every Central American country.

And hey, folks, let's not forget South Africa. I'm sure the people of that country don't feel their sovereignty was exactly protected when White people conquered and plundered their land. We didn't even have the decency to divest to show our disapproval.

Yet now we are on the brink of war because one totalitarian ruler conquered another one.

Let's not fool ourselves, people. We are sacrificing our lives, security and economy for our addiction, not for any noble causes.

We are addicted to oil, and we are too lazy and short-sighted to research and develop other forms of energy. Maybe if we tried, we wouldn't be in this mess.

Of course, that's another thing. We'd have to exert some energy ourselves, and that's a real pain.

We'd rather stay with our addiction and pollute the air with our exhaust fumes, pollute the sea with our oil spills and plunder the earth for oil instead of developing cleaner forms of energy.

We'd rather blame those Arabs for our economic problems instead of realizing that it's our own fault.

If we are going to fight the Iraqis, let's at least be honest about it.

But quite frankly, we could save ourselves a giant headache by becoming a bit more self-sufficient.

Then we could leave the Middle East alone, which is what we should have been doing all along.

Pamela McCarthy is a Collegian columnist

THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

The Gulf Crisis: The right to oil, monarchy, and the pursuit of Saddam

Is Kuwait the 52nd state of the United States?
— Saddam Hussein Al-Takriti, in an interview with Dan Rather of CBS.

Our planet has a fundamental contradiction. The North consumes most of the raw materials, the South (so-called Third World) supplies most of them. The North buys these materials cheap, transforms them into expensive products, and pockets the profits. The South starves, despite its vastly superior raw material and manpower base.

Periodically, nationalist forces emerge in the South and challenge the status-quo. They demand that the North pay a fair price for vital resources. Sometimes, they can even threaten the supply lines.

So what has this to do with Kuwait? With Iraq?

Everything. Oil is the resource in question. Saddam Hussein's Iraq is the latest nationalist force. The actors and props may change, but the grim play carries on.

For years, the vast majority of Arab people have lived in dire poverty, despite the abundant petroleum reserves which were regarded as the shared wealth of the entire Arab nation.

Anglo-American and French oil interests ensured that the dream of a dynamic, united Arab nation was not to be. They covertly signed profitable oil contracts with amoral princely rulers that had no popular mandate. These oil monarchies include the corrupt House of Saud, and the sheikhs and emirs in places like Bahrain, Abu Dhabi, Sharjah, and Kuwait.

The neo-colonial sheikhs suppressed all human rights, and preferred to invest their petro-dollars in the industrial North rather than their own Arab brethren. They created virtual slave societies, importing millions of menial workers, maids, cooks and cleaners from South Asia, Egypt, Palestine and the Philippines. Citizenship and rights are denied to these downtrodden people, ensuring that a few thousand Gulf citizens lord over millions of oppressed workers and their families.

The party ended for the Sabah family of Kuwait when Saddam Hussein's elite Presidential Guard Force thundered into Kuwait City. The Emir caught the first chopper out of town. There were few Arabs on the street that mourned his highness' abrupt departure.

"Naked aggression!" shrieked the leaders of the North. Media gurus (none of whom can even pronounce Saddam's name correctly) drew dire comparisons with the Nazi onslaughts of 1939. The average U.S. citizen became a self-styled Middle East expert.

Pratip Dastidar

The games people play.

In a supreme demonstration of hypocrisy, the U.S. public conveniently overlooked their incredible apathy when the Israeli juggernaut stormed into Lebanon in 1981, blasting Beirut into rubble and killing hundreds of thousands of civilians. Or during the bizarre rampage in Panama, where a gigantic invasion force killed thousands in order to punish one man that would not toe the party line. Need we mention the amazing volte-face over Tiananmen Square? No, that tends to spoil the fun and strip all moralistic facades away, exposing the true reasons for the war hysteria.

Power. Pushing Big Brother around? Go ahead, Saddam, make my day.

Cheap oil. Gas is three times as expensive in my hometown of Calcutta, as it is here in Amherst. Yet we do not deploy invasion forces to control the oilfields. We prospect for oil, negotiate.

It would be so much more logical if the true reasons for the Operation Desert Shield (anyone remember that other Freudian slip — Operation Just Cause?) were bluntly articulated.

Firstly, the American way of life must be protected. This includes the right to cruise the highways at will, spewing greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. The right to party hard.

Secondly, the United States is well aware that it is in a state of relative economic decline vis-a-vis the Euro-Japanese production system. But the United States would rather maintain hegemony by policing the raw material sources and trade routes, than by raising productivity and educational standards. Brawn over brain.

Thirdly, Saddam Hussein's humiliation of Emir Sabah has exposed the vulnerability of the monarchies, and other minority-based regimes such as Assad's Syria. The Egyptian ruling class must also be wondering how long its embrace with Israel will be tolerated. The United States can not abandon the coterie of kings and crooks that it courted over the years. The White House has nightmares over the prospect of living with a secular, progressive Palestinian state, let alone accepting an upsurge of Pan-Arab nationalism.

There are several other complex factors at play, but these require a perfunctory understanding of Middle-Eastern history, a commodity in rare display.

It is not our duty to determine whether the preservation of American extravagance, protection of corrupt monarchies, and display of military muscle justify Operation Desert Shield. That is the duty of U.S. citizens. Opinion polls indicate an overwhelming support for the White House's militarism.

It is perhaps more relevant to point out certain stark realities. An agreement acceptable to Iraq and its neighboring states could perhaps be devised by Arab leaders, especially with some adroit manoeuvering by the Jordanian monarch. Such an agreement, even if it involved concessions in Kuwait, would leave Saddam Hussein in power with unparalleled popularity among the average Arab as the leader who humiliated the Emirs and faced down imperialist powers. This is unacceptable to Bush, Powell, Scowcroft, Thatcher, and the rest.

The United States did not deploy a quarter of a million inexperienced troops in order to bring them home leaving the Baathist regime in Iraq intact. Indeed, the ostensible reason for the deployment was absurd — the Saudis were well aware that Saddam's troops had no order to attack their oilfields. Bush has decided to destroy Baathist Iraq. U.S. troops are in for the long haul.

Indeed as time passes, the chances for an intra-Arab settlement grow stronger. This is unacceptable to the Northern leaders who are well aware that the withdrawal of their forces will be followed by the overthrow of those Arab leaders that invited them. Unrest is simmering even in Assad's Syria. The Iraqi army, technological base, and political influence will remain long after the last G.I. departs with his mineral water and suntan lotion.

So war seems inevitable, the only question being when. The U.S. ground forces eagerly await the massive tank forces that will be needed. Meanwhile, the Iraqis are creating defensive fortification in Kuwait. Few Americans followed the Iran-Iraq war, or they would be well aware that Iraq has the most creative combat engineering corps in the world. They excel at creating minefields, tank traps and barbed wire meshes.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 15

Always in Bloom
ROSES
BOUQUETS
BALLOONS
FULL SERVICE FLOWER SHOP
DAILY DELIVERIES ON CAMPUS AND ACROSS THE COUNTRY
253-5545
253-7228
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

STUDENT EMPLOYEES
W·A·N·T·E·D
WORK-STUDY & NON WORK STUDY
WAITRESSES/WAITERS - DISHWASHERS
JANITORS - CHAMBERMAIDS - CAFETERIA WORKERS
STOCK CLERKS - SALES CLERKS - CASHIERS - COOKS
GRAPHICS ARTISTS - XEROX OPERATORS JOBS
HOTEL - FOOD SERVICES
UNIVERSITY STORE - BUILDING SERVICES
RETAIL SERVICES - PRINT SHOP
ALL SHIFTS AVAILABLE
Apply on the 8th floor - Room 818
Campus Center Personnel Office

HELP WANTED at the COLLEGIAN
Do you have excellent typing skills and mornings hours open Monday through Friday? If yes, please come down to apply for
CLASSIFIEDS TYPIST
Work Study only
Please come down, we're flexible

Many Third World students angered by U.S. actions

Outrage at American intervention and perceived hypocrisy in Gulf policy

BY PRATIP DASTIDAR
Collegian Staff

Third World nationals studying at the University of Massachusetts exhibited considerable skepticism about the consequences of massive deployment of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf. Many condemned what they saw as U.S. efforts to suppress a regional power that was not prepared to accept the status-quo. Their sense of anger and disillusionment reflected a strong feeling that the United States was resorting to force for its own narrow interests and using hypocritical moral justifications.

Hussein Ibish from Lebanon stressed the fact that Iraq was an unusual nation in that it was a military power but not an industrial power. He also said that Iraq had not accepted the prevailing status-quo, and has no powerful external patron.

"The emergence of an independent regional power in the Gulf is something that the United States is working to avoid. The traditional U.S. policy in the region is to divide and rule, as can be seen by the shifting alliances that it constructs to promote its interests."

Ibish felt that war was probably imminent. "When economic strangulation fails, it is likely that the United States will attempt to neutralize Iraq through military force," he said.

Idris Rageh from Somalia, in East Africa, felt that the United States had overreacted to an invasion that was minor in comparison with the type of invasions that the superpowers had engaged in over the past 50 years.

"The problem was an Arab one, but the United States didn't give the Arabs the slightest chance to internally settle the issue. They manipulated the United Nations and the international community as though U.S. territory had been seized."

"No Arab force is truly united with America," he said. "Egypt never sincerely tried to find an Arab solution. Even as Mubarak attended an emergency Arab summit in Cairo, he was dispatching troops to Saudi Arabia. This is a betrayal. The Egyptian government has behaved as a middleman."

Asked about the Syrian support of the United States, Rageh said, "Syria has no respect for the United States, Egypt, Israel or Iraq. They operate on the belief that their enemies' enemy is their friend. But once shots are fired, it is doubtful whether any Arab army will be willing to help the West in killing Arabs."

He felt that it was much easier for the United States to deploy troops than it will be to withdraw them. "The Arab sheikhs will lose more to the United States than Iraq will, because only God knows when the troops that they invited will leave."

Hassan Kavir, a student from Iran, who is also a combat veteran of the Iran-Iraq war denounced the U.S. actions and predicted that the United States would suffer massive casualties in event of war.

Quoting Ho-Chi-Minh of Vietnam, he said, "Imperialism will be defeated in Vietnam, destroyed in the Middle East and will die in South America."

Mehrdad Sarangi, a Kurd from Iran condemned the U.S. policy against Iraq. He discounted the attempts by the media to show U.S. sympathy for the Kurds by dwelling on the Iraqi use of chemical weapons against them. "I have no confidence in U.S. foreign policy," he said. "It is very contradictory. The United States and the Western colonial powers divided the Kurdish nation into pieces after promising the Kurds nationhood under the auspices of the League of Nations. They created much of the problem."

Joss Dore, a student from the Republic of Guinea in West Africa felt that no one would emerge as a winner in a Gulf war. "The United States will find its internal social problems deepening. There may be a short-term victory, but in the end everyone will lose," he said.

"Western countries have shown a similar obsession with their self-interests in Africa. This is what makes them support unpopular leaders, giving them money and guns to kill."

Mukund Mavlankar, from India, was blunt in his disapproval of the U.S. military posturing. "I strongly disapprove," he said. "There is no moral ground for the U.S. force deployment."

Lester Henry, from Trinidad in the Caribbean, was angered by the U.S. behavior. "It's ridiculous. That's my view."

"The 'Rambo' mentality is on the move again. It was Panama last year, Iraq this year. Anytime anyone sneezes anywhere in the globe, the United States sends in its fleets."

"It is obvious that they want a war," he said. "It will justify their huge military budget and allow them to try out new weapons on people of color with the rest of the white world and a few Uncle Toms cheering loudly."

Sumita Dutt, a student from India felt that the crisis was taking on frightening proportions. She said that the United States was flexing its muscles for two reasons — to control its oil interests and to protect puppet governments in the Middle East that are easy to manipulate.

"What is scary is that it [the United States] is trying, successfully, to get the United Nations behind it. This can have serious repercussions on the balance of power in the world. It could be a precedent for the rest of the world," she said.

Anil Kanjee, from South Africa, said it was strange to see the United States lobbying for sanctions in the Gulf crisis, in light of its history of declaring that sanctions are an ineffective device whenever the issue of South Africa comes up. "I can't help wondering if there is an ulterior motive," he added.

Madanmohan Rao, from India, also felt that the United States military buildup was hypocritical. He was sharply critical of the U.S. media's coverage of the crisis.

"It is blatantly hypocritical for the United States, itself a promoter of terrorism and strong-arm tactics to loudly uphold national sovereignty. The media is playing a critical role in this propaganda mission."

Hassan Abd-al Karim, from Eritrea in East Africa, said that the oil in the Middle East did not belong to the United States, but to the Arabs. "It is extremely hypocritical for the United States to carry out these policies after attacking Grenada and Panama, and supporting both the South African invasion of Angola and the Israeli invasion of Lebanon," he said.

One of the students interviewed, Shyam Shanmugasundaram from India, supported the U.S. actions. "I approve of the United Nations resolution to enforce a trade embargo with or without the use of force. Iraq should not have marched into Kuwait when they could have negotiated the oil prices through OPEC."

"I approve of the use of force by the multi-national militaries against Iraq with some reservations. Diplomatic channels should be first tried, and they should not jeopardize the Western civilians in key Iraqi installations. If war is necessary then they should just go ahead and blast Saddam."

BUSH ON FIRE — Bangladeshis burn an effigy of President Bush to protest U.S. presence in Saudi Arabia.

■ Gulf crisis

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14

The United States cannot drive Iraq out of Kuwait with air power alone.

The battle for Kuwait will demand massive ground forces. It will make Beirut look like a minor skirmish, and could involve as many as 50-60,000 U.S. casualties.

Only then will the citizens of the United States wake up. The Vietnam protests grew loud only when body bags came home. Rarely were the mass protests motivated by concern for the millions of Vietnamese bombed into the ground. The draft was the driving force.

Kuwait. It could well be engraved in stone above a window in Memorial Hall. Maybe next to Vietnam.

This is the price of power. You cannot live the good life without a down payment. Morality never mattered.

Pratip Dastidar is a Collegian staff member

Aerobics Asylum
Join Now And Get the Whole Semester for $99!
when you join with a friend
CALL NOW 586-7503 HAMP PLAZA NORTHAMPTON

Kennedy
screen graphics
QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR AT REASONABLE PRICES
T-SHIRTS SWEATSHIRTS CAPS JACKETS
APRONS GOLF SHIRTS TEAM SHIRTS
COMPUTER GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413) 584-2124 1-800-287-2124

EXOTIC FISH & PET WORLD
49 Russell St., Rt. 9
Hadley - At the Village Barn Shops
586-3362
FRESH WATER FISH
Hundreds of Types In Stock
MARINE FISH
The Areas Largest Selection
A FULL SELECTION OF QUALITY DRY GOODS & SUPPLIES FOR YOUR PET ... AT EXCELLENT PRICES!
REPTILES
A Separate Room Full - Don't Miss Seeing Our Own 14' Python!
SMALL ANIMALS & BIRDS
From Parakeets to The Unusual - Some Already Tame!
OPEN SAT, SUN, MON: 10-6
TUES-FRI: 10-9

There's only one problem with religions that have all the answers. They don't allow questions.

If you sometimes have questions about God and the meaning of life, come and join the search for answers at the fellowship of the Episcopal Church. The Episcopal Church

What do John Irving, Horace Boyer, and the Paul Winter Consort have in common?
The Ark!
Join us this and every Sunday Night for Dinner and Fellowship, 6:00pm

THE ARK
758 NORTH PLEASANT STREET
549-5929

TOWN OF AMHERST
LSSE Leisure Services and Supplemental Education

RECREATIONAL JOB OPENINGS FALL '90
WORK STUDY—NON-WORK STUDY

Part-time, temporary positions
- Raquetball instructor
- Basketball timekeeper/scorekeeper
- Swimming instructors and lifeguards
- Volleyball League supervisors
- Volleyball officials
- Drop-In Volleyball supervisor
- After-School Children's Recreational Program supervisor and assistant
- Weekend facilities supervisor
- Saturday morning Building Supervisor

Applications are available in the Town Manager's Office, Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Avenue, Amherst.

For information, come see us on the Campus Center Concourse, Thursday, September 6, 9a.m.-4p.m.

APPLY NOW

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

SUMMER SAVING SPECIALS ANDY'S PIZZA FROM & RESTAURANT

Andy's Pizza Fall Specials

Small 2-way pizza-$4.50 plus tax
Large 2-way pizza-$8.00 plus tax
2 Large Cheese Pizzas-$12.00 plus tax
With any Large Pizza-1 liter of soda free
2 dinners for $9.50 plus tax

Only 1 Special per order
Specials good through the semester
Ask for Specials over the phone

Full Liquor License, Beer and Wine

175 University Drive (by Price Chopper)
256-8147, 256-8148

OPEN EVERY DAY WITH FREE DELIVERY
11am-2am; Fri. and Sat. until 3am

'Guinea pig' in presidential experiment

Collegian file photo

President-Chancellor Joseph Duffey

BY PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

The first of a two-part series

Even Michael Dukakis had to serve jury duty a few years back, so if the Governor had to go, there was little hope of President-Chancellor Joseph Duffey getting out of it.

Not that he wanted to. "I wanted to do it. Jury duty is one of the few responsibilities we have left as citizens, so I took it very seriously."

And so this West Virginia native trudged down to the Northampton District Court to serve his one day to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"They hold you in this tiny room and they won't let you make phone calls which is a real hardship for me," said Duffey, who has a car phone, of course. "So I made a little small talk — I knew quite a few people there — and waited to be seated. They did send me to one jury but I wasn't needed."

But then his lucky break came. "We were taken to the lower court and I look around and see a lot of familiar faces including quite [a few from the University] like Dr. Bob Ackerman [of the Philosophy department] and I start to wonder what is going on."

"I begin to banter with Bob and then I realize that I'm about to sit on the trial of the towns people [who occupied my office in the spring of 1989 over Department of Defense funding at UMass]," he said. "In the meanwhile, the court officers are going out of their minds because jurors aren't supposed to be talking with witnesses — jurors aren't supposed to know what's going on."

Duffey was unceremoniously sent back to the juror room. "I get there and the officer says to me, 'You are dismissed, thank you very much.' That's my experience with jury duty."

The University's fourth chancellor, Duffey, 58, is the top of the bureaucratic ladder on the campus, and as president, he is the head of all of Amherst's siblings, the University of Massachusetts at Boston and the medical school in Worcester.

When he was appointed to the president's post last spring — with many misgivings on his part but with adamant support — he called the combined position "an experiment." Six months later, Duffey is still investigating.

"I said when I took this position that it was an experiment and it still is ... but I feel like I'm the guinea pig. I obviously can't do both jobs so I have to be selective in what I do. I'm tired at the end of the day," he said with a laugh.

Since his installation, Duffey has aggressively slashed the budget and personnel of the President's office in Boston in an effort to decentralize and make the campuses more responsible for coordination and planning.

"We have very sharply reduced the activities of the President's office and we have reduced the reduced the paperwork required on the campuses," he said. "What we have done is made determinations of what is important for the office."

Duffey said he suspects the President's budget to be cut in half to less than $1 million, chiefly by reducing the staff of the office. He said the savings will go directly back to the campuses.

A target of critics for years, the calls for the president's office to be abolished have grown louder since the state budget took ill. Duffey said the he feels the office might still have a role to play in the higher education system but because of the paralysis in state government it remains on the cutting block.

"We are not functioning under normal times and we have not for several years. It's hard to make any judgements about what the office might do because it is under such an extraordinary circumstances."

In tomorrow's Collegian, Duffey will discuss the Graduate Employer Organization, the stress placed on the faculty by declining revenues and the "isms" that plague campuses here and nationwide.

He will also outline the Service Corp, his proposal for a state-side version of the Peace Corps.

Duffey supports Silber tuition hike proposal

BY PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Although President-Chancellor Duffey declined to speculate on the gubernatorial race, he said he believes all the candidates, regardless of political affiliation, are friends of public higher education — even John Silber.

In an early July interview with the Collegian, Duffey discounted fears that Silber, on leave as president of Boston University, would be harsh to state universities. "Like all the candidates, I think John Silber would be an excellent supporter of public higher education in Massachusetts."

Silber, in a late July campaign stop proposed tripling tuition to $5000 at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Southeastern Massachusetts University in Dartmouth and the University of Lowell. He said this — and a host of other improvements at the secondary school levels — would raise the quality of education in the state.

Silber has been an outspoken advocate of innovative education proposals. For slightly over a year, Boston University has operated the Chelsea public schools, the only private takeover of a school system in the country. Silber had previously sought to run the Boston school systen and now wants to put the system into receivership.

Duffey, in an interview with the Boston Globe, embraced the essence of Silber's proposal but said the increase was too high.

Silber estimated that half the students attending the three schools could afford the increase. He said scholarships would be made available for the other half.

Duffey said he liked Silber's proposal but only if poorer students were not forgotten in the increase — more financial aid — and if the universities were given more autonomy to spend the money.

"John tends to overreact a little ... but I guess it's better than not having any ideas at all," Duffey told the Globe.

Silber suggested that the universities use the additional money for scholarships or educational improvements.

'Unfair' booze regs

ATHOL (AP) — Darrell Lewis, who manages a supermarket that straddles the border between Worcester and Franklin counties, is trying to get permission to sell liquor on Sunday.

But so far, all he can do is watch the traffic in and out of a competing liquor store just across the parking lot from the supermarket.

"He can sell on Sunday, he's in Athol," Lewis said.

At the Super Stop 'n Shop market Lewis manages, "the cash registers are on the Athol side and where we keep the liquor is on the Orange side," he said.

And that means he can't sell on Sunday.

Lewis has filed appeals with the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission as well as officials in both the Worcester County town of Athol and the Franklin County town of Orange.

But the hitch is that regulations adopted by the state Legislature last month allows cities and towns in Worcester, Middlesex and Essex counties withing 10 miles of the New Hampshire border to permit liquor sales on Sunday. Franklin County towns are not included.

Although liquor stores in border towns have long chafed at Massachusetts restrictions on Sunday sales, state ABCC Chairman George McCarthy is no fan of the new regulations. McCarthy has called the move "ridiculous" and maintained it will benefit big chains at the expense of small stores.

City wrestles with bad publicity

NEW BEDFORD (AP) — The indictment of a local lawyer in the death of one of nine women believed to be victims of a serial killer has done little to undo this old whaling port's reputation for violent crime.

For two years, the city made famous by the "Big Dan's" gang rape case has labored under the glare of publicity focused on the slayings of nine women whose bodies were found along highways near here. All had histories of illegal drug use and some were involved in prostitution.

With local prosecutors focusing on attorney Kenneth Ponte, 40, as a suspect in one of the killings, residents of this city steeped in seafaring history show little sign that the ordeal is over.

From city hall to seedy Weld Square, an area frequented by several of the victims, emotions range from a sense that New Bedford's reputation has been badly damaged to a fear that violent crime is ever present.

"If it isn't someone who's out there killing prostitutes, it's somebody killing people over bad drug deals and turf wars," said Brian Foss, a drug abuse specialist at the Center for Human Services, a New Bedford health and drug rehabilitation agency.

"I don't sense any feelings of relief," said New Bedford's three-term Mayor John Bullard. "The indictment is only for one of the murders, and it's only an indictment, not a conviction."

Even if the slayings are solved a prospect prosecutors call unlikely, the climate of violence, drugs and crime from which they sprang persists.

In spring 1988, when the first of the slaying victims began to disappear, the center's methadone program served about 180 clients a day. Today, the center accommodates 500 a day.

New Bedford's rate of violent crime is also above average for Massachusetts cities its size. The number of rapes more than doubled from 1988 to 1989, jumping from 27 to 69, State police figures show.

Drug arrests are skyrocketing. Police expect to make 1,500 drug arrests this year. So abundant is the supply of cocaine that it sells on the street for less than half the price found elsewhere in the state., New Bedford Police Lt. David Provencher said in a recent interview.

New Bedford does have a positive side, however, even if it gets obscured by an unlucky pair of sensational crimes combined with the problems plaguing so many American cities.

Residents take pride in their cobblestone streets and sea captain's houses that bespeak the city's role as the capital of whaling before the Civil War.

Today New Bedford remains one of the nation's richest fishing ports with some 350 commercial fishing boats calling this port home. A year ago, there was a brief swell of pride when the National League of Cities ranked New Bedford in its top 10 for programs to help drop-outs and the disabled find jobs.

The mayor recalled a question by a member of the league's jury before the city won its award. It was indicative of how a highly publicized crime can become the sole association outsiders make with a community.

CAN YOU TYPE?

If so, then the Collegian wants you. All you need to earn money and join the fun are afternoons free from 3-6, or evenings from 6-9.

Two positions are open. Applications are available at the Collegian, Campus Center 113.

Ask to speak to Sarah Demaster

Applications due Wednesday, September 12

SUPREME CHEESE™ & ME

FREE!

WITH YOUR COLLEGE ID

This Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 10 & 11, when you present your 1990 College I.D. card with this coupon at the Bruegger's Bagel Bakery on N. Pleasant St. in Amherst, you'll receive a bagel of your choice with Supreme Cheese™ for FREE! It's our way of introducing you to the deliciousness of Bruegger's Bagel Bakery.

Offer valiid 7:30-11:00am Sept. 10 & 11 only

One coupon per customer Not valid in combination with other offers.

BRUEGGER'S BAGEL BAKERY

POSTER SALE

Sponsored by WMUA 91.1 FM

Student Union Ballroom

Wednesday Sept. 5 through Friday Sept. 7

9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day

Over 1000 Different Selections

Most Images Only $5 and $6

BIGGEST & BEST SELECTION

AEROBICS

AND FITNESS CLASSES

- STATE OF THE ART NEO SHOCK FLOOR
- SIX CLASSES DAILY
- ONLY $4.25 PER CLASS
- SAVE BY BUYING PACKAGES OF 10, 20, Or 30 classes.

The GYM at mountain farms mall

Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS

THE SUB

COME CHECK OUT THE BEST SUBS IN TOWN!

33 E. Pleasant St. Amherst 549-5160

■ proposal for litigation rights

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

not in the best interest of this campus" and the 1987 Trustees decision to rescind litigation rights would be upheld.

Both Legal Services Staff and student leaders said they were frustrated with Madson for not being as open to negotiating the proposal as he had initially implied.

"He asked us to write a proposal and then he sat on it until the end of the semester, and then rejected it," said Richard Urena, chair of the Legal Services Governing Board.

"Denny [Madson] told the Legal Services staff and student leaders to write a proposal for discussion and then rejected the proposal without any negotiation," McQuilken said.

Madson denied the proposal had been purposely delayed. He said the proposal took longer than he had wished because it had to be fully evaluated and examined by University attorneys.

"I believe in my heart that a strong legal service is necessary on a campus this complex," Madson said. "My commitment is to give students a fair shake, which doesn't rest on litigation rights."

The Legal Services Center is funded solely by student trust fund monies collected through mandatory fees. The Legal Services Office, now called the Legal Services Center, was founded in 1973 by both the Student Government Association and Graduate Student Senate.

Since Legal Services is supported solely by student funds, the dispute, according to Urena, surrounding limited litigation rights is really part of a bigger dispute — what degree of control students have of their own trust funds.

Urena said the administration's initial refusal to recognize the Legal Services Governing Board, a governing board created by students to set the case policy for Legal Services, exemplified this larger struggle.

"There is a need to reconcile what the roles of the students and the administration in control of our office are," Urena said. "If the SGA decides to set up a governing board for LSC, this should not be a problem."

He said the SGA has gotten involved with the proposal because Legal Services is funded by student monies. The establishment of office power has been a "on-going conflict" with the administration. Madson said since the fee for Legal Services is a mandatory fee like the health fee and housing fee, the trustees have authority over these monies. When the students unsuccessfully attempted to overturn the trustees rescindment decision, the District Court of Boston upheld in 1988 that the trustees had the authority over the use of this fee, he said.

"There is no question that the power and responsibility on how those fees are used rests with the trustees," Madson said.

During this summer, the Committee for Student Rights, a confidential group of student leaders and Legal Services staff have been meeting with Madson and the trustees in preparation for the Academic Student Subcommittee meeting scheduled for next October. The limited litigation proposal will be on the agenda for this meeting, but the meeting in December will be more decisive.

"Student leaders have been contacting University trustees one-on-one over the summer trying to convince them that limited legislation wouldn't harm the administration but it is a vital student need," McQuilken said.

A petition drive for the restoration of limited litigation rights started on September 3. The Commission for Student Rights' set goal is 20,000 signatures.

"When we go into the trustees in December we want to show that every student on campus thinks it is important [litigation rights]" McQuilken said. "Since the trustees really have no vested interest in limited litigation, it's not worth it to them to fight it."

CALLING ALL PHOTOGRAPHERS

Are you interested in shooting for the Collegian.?

Stop by 113 Campus Center for more information.

Are you an Undergraduate Parent who needs money for child care?

Up to $950 available for child care assistance through the Undergraduate Child Care Tuition Assistance Program per semester. Applications available in the Off Campus Housing Office, 428 Student Union. 545-0865.

WoNDeriNg AbOUt All tHE NoIse at tHe tOp of CLaRk HiLl RoAd?

OPEN FORUM Sept. 17 Campus Center Rm. 903 7-8 pm

The noise atop the hill is the

WILLIAM SMITH CLARK MEMORIAL

a new public space, with sculpture, that resulted from a design competition and project conducted in cooperation with our sister university in JAPAN! Hokkaido University

Clark was the first sitting president of UMass in the 1800s, then Ma. Agricultural College, and a leader in launching Hokkaido University, then Sapporo Agricultural College, in Japan.

The Memorial was designed by a recent UMass alumnus (while a student) Todd Richardson (MLA '87) in consultation with UMass Professor Emeritus of Landscape Architecture Barrie Greenbie and two landscape architects from Japan

It is slated to be completed in the late fall - join us at the dedication and reception in the spring.

• This is a sign for BOYS BE, a cafe in Japan named in honor of William Smith Clark. Now UMass will pay tribute to this outstanding leader.

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!

THE STYLING SALON AT JCPenney

THURSDAYS MEN'S NIGHT 3-8:30 P.M. 18 yrs. and older haircuts $8

FRIDAYS LADIES NIGHT 3-8:30 P.M. 18 yrs. and older haircuts $8

Hampshire Mall The Styling Salon at

CHARGE IT!! JCPenney

© 1989, JCPenney Company, Inc

OPEN Mon.—Fri. 9am-8:30pm Sat. 8:30's

Salon Phone: 584-7416

■ out-of-state students' suit

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

"When a student registers for a semester, a student agrees to pay a certain amount of tuition for a certain amount of classes and credits," Valvo said. "When the state later passes a statute [Sec.176] which changes the contract, they break the constitution contracts clause."

Sacks said the Board of Regents believed the timing of the increase is not relative to the plaintiffs' claim because each college and university catalog states in some way that tuitions are subject to change at any time. He said the court will have to review the language of each particular school to determine if this statement fully upholds the Regents' stand.

Valvo said the language in the catalogs really tells prospective students the full amount of tuition they can expect to pay for the upcoming semester and the time to increase tuition is before registration only.

"Otherwise if you read the language as Peter [Sacks] does, does 'anytime' mean up to the time of graduation, after graduation, or at your 25 year reunion?" Valvo said.

Valvo said he is in the process of obtaining one student plaintiff from each college and university, a requirement of the defense.

■ farm not ready

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9

When the Foundation bought the farm, it absorbed the debts left by Young, Hewett said.

Hewett said Young still owes the Foundation over $146,000 for housing some of his horses. "Young still owes lots of bucks," he said.

While officials had originally anticipated the entire farm would be ready when classes began this fall, they seem hopeful that the facilities will be ready by December. But portions of the facility are already being utilized, Trotman said.

About half of the University's 50 horses have been moved from the present site of the Equine program at Tilson farms, behind Sylvan dormitories, while the Manor house, which has a large function room, is currently being used by various groups for meetings and dinners.

Sheep, goats, swine and cattle will also be moved to the farm when its renovations are complete in December.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

The University of Massachusetts Foundation's latest acquistion — the Hadley farm, slated to open in December.

Collegian photo by Jason Danziger

THIS ONE'S FOR GEORGE — U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service fish biologist Richard Cronin displays his catch of the day at the National Fishery in Sunderland.

Still the best: lowest prices, biggest selection ... that's Liquors 44!

BEER WINE LIQUORS

Prices do not include deposit

LITE BEER $10.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans

IMPORTED Heineken HOLLAND BEER $15.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. bottles

MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT case of 24 12 oz. cans $11.79 + DEP

Labatt's BEER & ALE $11.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans

BUSCH $8.89 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans

FALSTAFF & FALSTAFF LIGHT $7.29 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans

COKE CLASSIC & DIET COKE $5.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans

Almaden $5.69 4.0 L BAG-IN-A-BOX GOLDEN CHABLIS, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC, RIESLING, BURGUNDY, BLUSH CHABLIS, VIN ROSE, RHINE, CHABLIS

NAPA RIDGE $3.29 750 ml WHITE ZINFANDEL

GLEN-ELLEN $3.49 750 ml CHARDONNAY

PAUL MASSON $5.49 3.0 L BURGUNDY, BLUSH, CHABLIS, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE, VIN ROSE

August Sebastiani WHITE ZINFANDEL $5.69 1.5L

Asti Spumante MARTINI & ROSSI $8.49 750 ml

BACARDI BREEZERS $3.79 RUM COOLERS TROPICAL, LIME, PEACH, BERRY 4 pkg.-12 oz. bottles

STOLICHNAYA VODKA SALE $18.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $5.00 $13.49 AFTER REBATE 1.75 L

BLACK VELVET $11.99 1.75 L

BACARDI SILVER RUM $13.99 1.75 L

CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH $13.69 1.75 L

SEAGRAM'S GIN $10.99 1.75 L

Cossack VODKA $8.99 1.75 L

KAHLÚA $10.99 750 ml

LIQUORS 44

not responsible for typographical errors

SALE PRICES THURS 9/6/90 THRU WED 9/12/90

9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday

HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344

◄ TWO ► LOCATIONS

HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St 534-4555

TeleCheck

WORLD

AP Photo

SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Members of the Royal Saudi Arabian National Guard crawl under barbed recently as part of training exercises in response to Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Companies profit by supplying troops

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — You knew beverage companies would rally around the flag after President Bush sent American troops to the parched Saudi desert.

G.I.'s have to eat, too, so it was no surprise when an Arkansas chicken processor said it was helping feed the troops.

But the mission has also meant an unexpected public relations windfall for companies that might not normally be associated with a military maneuver.

How about the casinos that came up with 10,000 decks of cards, the games maker who is sending 2,500 jigsaw puzzles or the workout magazine that offered to send reservists an exercise brochure?

None of these companies has been brash enough to take out advertising that touts what it has been doing to help America's efforts to keep the oil flowing from the Persian Gulf.

In fact, the only companies buying ad space that alluded to the Middle East crisis have been the oil giants, which are scrambling to deflect criticism they had unfairly profited from the turmoil by raising gasoline prices.

But the other companies have, to varying degrees, gotten the word out about what they have been doing. It's called public relations.

Quaker Oats Co. of Chicago put out a news release announcing it had orders for 100,000 cases of its Gatorade drink and had already shipped 20,000 for use by troops in Saudi Arabia.

Spokesman Ronald Bottrell said there are no plans to tout the connection in advertising.

"Frankly, we don't think the military would want to be in a position of making an implied endorsement," he said.

Tyson Foods, Inc., a longtime government supplier, received special orders for 240,000 pounds of frozen chicken for troops in Saudi Arabia.

Five Nevada casinos owned by Circus Circus Enterprises Inc. plan to donate 10,000 decks of cards to the Air Force for use in Saudi Arabia, said casino promotions director Joe Mattes.

Mattes, who works for the Colorado Belle casino in Laughlin, Nev., said, "With our location in the Southwest, we deal a lot with the military."

Western Publishing Co., a puzzle manufacturer in Racine, Wis., said in a news release it was donating about 2,500 American landscape puzzles to the Army.

"We are not doing this from a business standpoint, it's from a patriotic standpoint. We are going to sell a lot of puzzles no matter what we do," said spokesperson Kim McLynn.

Fitness Plus magazine in New York has just launched its premiere issue but said in a news release last week it was ready to help reservists get in shape for active duty with a free brochure of exercises.

Guide details desert

FORT LEAVENWORTH (AP) — An Army Unit on the Kansas plain has produced a booklet to help U.S. soldiers in Saudi Arabia learn the life-or-death lessons of the desert.

"The desert can easily kill an unprepared soldier," warns the new manual prepared for Operation Desert Shield. Filled with common-sense, plain-spoken language, the 25-page booklet is packed with a few basic rules of survival for those unprepared for desert climates.

"It's a basic training document if you've not had any experience in the desert," said Brig. Gen. James Lyle, the commander of the unit that put the publication together.

The Army has printed 250,000 copies of the little manual, and 5,000 were flown to Saudi Arabia this week, Lyle said. Lyle is in charge of the Center for Lessons Learned, the Army unit that gleans studies and reports from many Army exercises or activities and then compiles a huge data base to help commanders teach their soldiers the best way to plan, organize and carry out their missions.

The booklet, "Winning in the Desert," uses information gathered from the Army's desert training center at Fort Irwin, Calif., from joint U.S.-Saudi exercises held during the past 10 years and exercises conducted by the Saudi Arabian National Guard, Lyle said.

The publication is brief and blunt about the dangers the desert can hold. But it also points out that men have waged war in those harsh environs for centuries, some more successfully than others. Knowledge of the desert is key.

"Priorities may alter, techniques will vary, but soldiers, leaders and units who are fit and well-trained to fight will have little difficulty adjusting to desert war," Lyle said.

Small maps of Saudi Arabia and Iraq are accompanied by brief discussions of each country's geography and climate. A section on the desert clearly points out the dangers of too much sun and too little water, but it also tells soldiers not to lie or sit on the ground, since those surfaces can be 30 degrees hotter than the air.

The environment plays havoc with the military's equipment, the booklet warns. On rocky deserts, "the M54 five-ton truck is prone to air hydraulic cylinder failure and power-steering leaks." Dust, sand, rough terrain and temperature extremes cause a 50 percent increase in the repair parts needed to support a combat unit, it says.

U.S. to sell F-15s

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The United States plans to sell Saudi Arabia nearly $3 billion in new weapons to bolster its defenses against Iraq and will pay at least $2.5 billion to sustain Operation Desert Shield through the end of next month.

The proposed sale includes 24 F-15 fighter planes and 150 M-60 tanks, according to congressional sources who asked not to be identified by name.

Intended to help the oil-rich Arab kingdom withstand the military threat imposed by Iraq, the sale also would include 15,000 rounds of depleted uranium armor-piercing, anti-tank ammunition and 200 Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

Those sources did not detail what the future possibilities are. The Washington Post said today a second sale of 24 F-15s was planned for 1991. The 48 additional F-15s would bring the total weapons sold to Saudi Arabia to 110 compared with the current congressionally imposed limit of 62.

AP Photo

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Kuwait City's skyline is distinguished by the modern desalinization towers that rise above the water-short Persian Gulf capital. The top platform of the tower at right holds a revolving coffee shop.

Your Invitation

Missing Home?
Need a Break?

CORNERSTONE CHAPEL
580 Bridge Road
Northampton, MA 01060

Sunday
9:45 a.m. Bible Study Classes
11:00 a.m. Praise and Worship
6:30 p.m. Evening Assembly
Wednesday
6:30 p.m. Bible Study
call for a ride: 584-5168

20% off College Supplies
(except sale items — with this ad)
WHALEN STATIONERS
Main Street — Amherst
(next to Buffalo Bill's)
Main Street — Northampton
(next to Cathy Cross)
"Serving Students Since 1958"
coupon expires 9-15-90

FREE BOXER SHORTS
WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY FUTON & FRAME
GOOD NIGHT BEDDING OUTLET STORES
320 RIVERSIDE DRIVE NORTHAMPTON 585-0660
9 E. PLEASANT STREET AMHERST (next to the Mercantile) 549-3507

UMass Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay, Alliance celebrates its 20th year as Registered Student Organization

Photo courtesy of the LBGA

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

Withstanding the test of time, the Lesbian, Bisexual Gay Alliance is celebrating its twentieth anniversary at the University of Massachusetts this Fall.

Twenty years ago, in the fall of 1970, a group of students began holding meetings at the Amherst Episcopalean Church. Students would gather in numbers to talk and give support. After a few meetings, they decided to move on campus; turnout was never less than 75 people for the rest of that semester.

During 1971, the formally named Student Homophile League, had obtained office space (413B) and a phone number (545-0154) in the Student Union, both of which are still the same today. The SHL had also started the Speakers' Bureau – a group of students who would go to classes on request to talk and answer questions about gay life.

In 1974, the number for the SHL office was established as the Amherst Gay Hotline, for counseling and referral. Also, the Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Men's Counseling Collective, consisting of students trained as peer counselors, was formed as a separate Registered Student Organization. A highlight of that year was having ex-United States Air Force Seargent Leonard Matlovich, an openly gay man, speak at UMass. Matlovich was at the time suing the Air Force for discharging him for being gay; he won that suit in 1981.

By 1976 the word "gay" was commonly used to refer to anyone who was not heterosexual, including gay men, lesbians, and bisexual men and women. The SHL changed its name to the People's Gay Alliance, in order to have a name more inclusive of all sexual orientations, including heterosexual allies, and to make the group's purpose more clear. Also, the Lesbian Union, which later became a separate RSO, formed as part of the PGA.

The First Annual Northampton Gay Pride March was held in 1981, and PGA members were among the local groups that helped organize the event, which every year now draws groups from as far away as Boston, New York City, NY, and San Francisco, Calif.

On December 7, 1984 the PGA sponsored its first "Gay Blue Jeans Day" – gay students and heterosexual allies wore jeans to show their support of gay liberation. The group also had its first Coffee Social – casual get-togethers that are now held every Friday throughout each semester. Also in 1984, the PGA held a rally and challanged the administration to institute an office for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, a Heterosexism Awareness Week, and a GLB Awareness Educator in the now defunct Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy.

In 1985 the LU and the PGA came together to form what is presently known as the LBGA, and the Program for GLB Concerns was formed, with an office located in John Adams.

Reflecting the quickened pace of political activism in the national Gay Liberation Movement, the LBGA has stepped up its activity in recent years. In the fall of 1986 the LBGA gained two permanent seats on the Student Union Board of Governors. In April 1987, the first Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Awareness Week, a week of films, lectures, workshops, and social events was held.

On October 11, 1987, the LBGA marched as a contingent in the march on Washington for Lesbian and Gay Rights. On October 11, 1988, the LBGA celebrated its first National Coming Out Day with the traditional "Jeans Day." Since then, National Coming Out Day has been dubbed "Pink and Black Day" in memory of the pink triangles worn by gay men and black triangles worn by lesbians who were exterminated during the Holocaust. On November 29, 1988 a vigil commemorating the assasination of Harvey Milk, one of the first openly gay politicians, was organized by the LBGA.

In 1989 the Program for GLB Concerns enjoyed its first full year as an institutionalized part of the Dean of Students office, and the Lesbian, Bisexual Womyn's Union was formed as a group within the LBGA.

During the spring 1990 semester, the LBGA sponsored an anti-homophobia rally that was attended by more than 250 people, and at which Vice Chancellor Dennis Madson spoke. On May 15, 1990, a task force consisting of members of the LBGA, the Faculty/Staff Support Group, the Program for GLB Concerns, representatives from Housing, the Dean of Students Office, the Vice Chancellor's Office, the Chancellor's Office, Academic Affairs, and other campus administrative bodies was formed to address the needs of the GLB community on campus.

Reflecting the quickened pace of political activism in the national Gay Liberation Movement, the LBGA has stepped up its activity in recent years.

The LBGA plans to continue its regularly scheduled events, which will include weekly coffee socials, film series, and monthly dances. In addition, members will continue to address issues of the GLB community through participation in the administrative task force, collaboration with the Program for GLB Concerns, and sponsoring various speakers and events.

After 20 years at UMass, the LBGA is still going strong, and looking forward to a productive future.

Photo courtesy of the LBGA

Who's been making Amherst's finest pizza since 1967?
BELL'S Pizza
Yes, it's our 23rd year!
549-1311 253-9051
65 University Drive, Amherst

Back to Cool
Make the creamy, delicious taste of Colombo frozen yogurt part of your curriculum.
Colombo FROZEN YOGURT
BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Amherst Boltwood Walk
Northampton Main Street

LBGA Photo History

Photo courtesy of the LBGA
Students acting as peacekeepers in 1986 Northampton Pride March.

Photo courtesy of the LBGA
Part of the LBGA contingent at the 1987 March on Washington.

Photo courtesy of the LBGA
Students gather around Student Union steps for the 1990 Anti-

$99 SPECIAL
3 Days only
Sept. 6th, 7th & 8th
10:00am-4:00pm
While they last
Rollokan Swedish Flatweave
WOOL RUGS
Additional sizes & styles available at up to 60% off
Amsal International Inc.
1120 Federal St.; Rt.9
Belchertown, MA
413-253-2644
Directly on Bus Route

UCF is... action for justice liberation openness
a place for growth celebration sharing hugs prayer diversity counseling community endless searching support
United Christian Foundation
An Ecumenical Ministry Serving the Entire UMass Community
423 Student Union 545-2661

COME CLEAN WITH US!
Open 7 days a week 7 a.m.-10 p.m.
Campus Coin Op 107 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst
Speedwash, 11 Pray St., Amherst
South Towne Commons Laundromat 479 West St., South Amherst

Welcome Back Students!
We're here for all your hair care needs.
Amherst
100 N. Pleasant
256-0438
Hours:
Monday-Friday 9-8:00 p.m.
Saturday 9-5:00 p.m.
HAIR EAST

enrollment declines

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

not think that the reputation of the University will suffer significantly.

"All universities in the Northeast, with the possible exception of the Ivy's, are seeing similar declines in applicants," he said.

One reason for the decrease in applicants is the significantly smaller number of high school graduates, according to Dennis Madson, vice chancellor of Student Affairs.

The number of high school graduates this year decreased from 72,000 in 1987 to 58,000. The number is expected to continue decreasing to 54,000 in 1994, then slowly rise to 64,000 in 2004.

Madson said the decrease in enrollment is parallel to the decrease in faculty at the University.

Other reasons for the decline in applicants are the budget cuts and the negative publicity they have brought, he said.

"We do not have the funds to offer scholarships that attract students," Madson said.

Last year, $38 million of financial aid was not met for students who requested it, and Madson said he expects the trend to only get worse.

Minority enrollment is up to 11 percent, but he said the number of Black and Hispanic students has decreased because of reductions in financial aid.

The number of Black and Hispanic students enrolled has also decreased because of increased competition among schools for minority students, according to Rinehart.

"The number of qualified students coming out of urban schools is less so the demand for them is great," he said.

According to Joseph Zannini, director of University Housing Services, the decrease in enrollment has left the dormitories emptier than usual.

"Spending has to meet revenue, so if we don't have full enrollment, we have to look at how to cut or increase revenues," Zannini said.

The cutbacks will come in the form of reduced services, he said. These include slower renovations in dormitories, and reductions in support staffs, educational programs, and supplies.

Zannini said other possible options include increasing the number of single rooms available, as well as the number of special interest housing options to increase occupancy.

The number of students currently registered to live in dormitories this fall is approximately 11,300, but Zannini said he expects this number to be lower.

lines shorter

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

away substantial numbers of students in the past from important classes, and this semester doesn't look much better," she said.

Arlene Norkin, a staff associate in the Math department, said her department planned around student requests as much as possible to cut down the number of overbooked classes. As a result, the department only had difficulties in pre-algebra level courses, she said.

English Department Head Robert Bagg said his department last year reduced lines that would last as long as four hours by using a "delicatessen system," in which students were handed a slip of paper that assigned a time at which they were to return.

Bagg said his department has been hard hit the past three years, but added most of the budget cuts have been for "nonessential" spending.

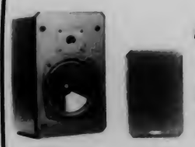
"We've had cuts in travel and spending, but we've also added three new faculty members this semester," he said.

Even though popular classes will be over-subscribed, Bagg said more spaces are available this semester in English classes because of careful planning by the department and a decrease in enrollment.

Story ideas??
Call the Collegian 545-3500

Good Advice — Honest Price.

NEW!



BostonAcoustics HD5 and HD7 Speakers
HD5 $143/pair
HD7 $189/pair

ONKYO TX-811 Receiver
$185

ONKYO DX-1400 18-bit CD Player
$187

ONKYO TA-W200 Dual Cassette Deck Fully Calibrated!
$235

Five College delivery available.

Sound & Music
Millbrook Place • 351 Pleasant • Northampton • 584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

Hiring Now For The School Year

Interesting, part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm, and Saturday, 11am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $5.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to maximum $6.00/hr.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, 586-8635.

Abt Associates Inc.

Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Friendly's

Great Food & Ice Cream

Stop in and sign up to win '55 Chevy Classic Auto Sweepstakes

Car on Display:

Sept. 10th & 11th
11am - 7pm
Russell St.

Sept. 12th - 14th
9:30am - 9:30pm
Hampshire Mall

Friendly's — coupon

Great Food & Ice Cream

55c single dip cone
Sept. 5th - 7th

Good at Hampshire Mall and Russell St. only

Pizza Hut® Delivers on Campus Fast, Hot and Free!

During Lab Day, Beaker Reveals his finding: Hunger = Mass Consumption!

318 College Street
253-3443

Pizza Hut® DELIVERY

One Medium $8.99 | Two Medium $12.99

Specialty Pizzas

Choose from Supreme, Meat Lover's®, Cheese Lover's Plus™ or Pepperoni Lover's® Pizzas.
Good on Delivery, Carryout or Dine-In.

Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per party per order at participating Pizza Hut® locations only. Not valid with any other offer. Limited Delivery Area. Our drivers carry no more than $20.00. © 1990 Pizza Hut, Inc. 1/20¢ cash redemption value. Offer expires December 31, 1990

One Large Cheese Pizza
$7.99

First Topping Free. Additional Toppings extra.
Good on Delivery, Carryout or Dine-In.

Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per party per order at participating Pizza Hut® locations only. Not valid with any other offer. Limited Delivery Area. Our drivers carry no more than $20.00. © 1990 Pizza Hut, Inc. 1/20¢ cash redemption value. Offer expires December 31, 1990

NATION

Killer loose

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Investigators say the serial killer stalking Gainesville college students is a shrewd, "methodical maniac" with a talent for slipping inside windows or doors and a sick grudge against slim brunettes.

An army of investigators, including an FBI expert who worked on the Ted Bundy, Charles Manson, and "Son of Sam" cases, had descended on this terrified college town in the hunt for the killer of four young women and a man.

Criminologist Alexander Bassin of Florida State University, where Bundy killed two women in a sorority house rampage, said there was "an absolutely chilling resemblance" between the Gainsville slayings and the Bundy murders of 1978.

The victims — students at either the University of Florida or Santa Fe Community College — were stabbed to death in off-campus apartments in three attacks discovered since Sunday. Police said three of the women were mutilated.

Three of the women had multiple stab wounds; the breasts of two of them had been cut with a surgically sharp instrument, said investigators speaking on condiion of anonymity. The third woman was decapitated.

Police refused to say whether any of the victims were sexually assaulted.

Police Chief Wayland Clifton said Wednesday the killer apparently tracked certain types of women and entered their apartments through unlocked doors or windows or by forcing sliding-glass doors.

"We do feel we have someone who is methodical about the way he handles things," Clifton said. "We believe the suspect had prior knowledge of the occupants of a dwelling."

"He can change his method of operations as he desires," Clifton warned. "we've gotten a rather shrewd individual on our hands."

AP Photo

GAINSVILLE, FLA. (AP) — University of Florida student buys two night sticks at a local shop in the wake of five slayings in the college community.

When the murders first occurred, police were flooded with calls from anxious and angry students who wanted to know how the killer gained entry. The police refused to give out any information until recently.

Slain were Tracy Inez Paules, 23, and a 23-year-old roommate, Manuel R. Taboada. Taboada had been a student at nearby Santa Fe Community College and was planning to study architecture at the University of Florida. Ms. Paules was a senior at the university.

Also slain were University of Florida freshmen Christina Powell, 17, of Jacksonville; Sonia Larson, 18, of Deerfield Beach; and 18-year-old Christa Hoyt, a Santa Fe Community College student and records clerk at the sheriff's office

Massachusetts education threatened by roll-back

BY JOHN DIAMOND
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Students attending public colleges, high schools, and elementary schools across the Bay State face the prospect of already lean budgets being slashed by the passage of a tax-cutting initiative petition on the November ballot.

"Students will see the weakest programs, the poorest academic offerings in general that Massachusetts has had in years," said state education Commissioner Harold Raynolds. "Art, music, and special education has been cut across the board."

Some 6,000 students will be denied access to public colleges — mostly the community colleges — because of the budget pinch.

And a lack of public support is having a similarly devastating effect on high schools, junior highs, and elementary schools, Raynolds said.

Efforts to improve classroom teaching and to streamline administration continue. But top education officials throw up their hands at the prospect of weathering further budget reductions that would be mandated by passage of the Citizens For Limited Taxation tax-cutting petition.

"I cannot rationally even begin to figure out what would happen," said Randolph Bromery, who, as chancellor of higher education, oversees the state's 29 public colleges and universities. "I know that many people are saying the sky is falling. Well, it will fall on that day."

The trend forced by the scarcity of money this fall will be toward fewer elective choices, more crowded classrooms, increasing numbers of students denied access to community colleges, higher public college tuitions and fewer school-funded activities.

Teachers, students, and administrators are involved in the fight to stop the CLT petition and to lobby on Beacon Hill for greater support for education. But the indicators to date bode ill for their cause.

Bids to override the state's property tax limitation law and increase funding for education have failed repeatedly across the state. With the notable exception of Springfield, whose voters approved an override, the trend has been to block property tax increases, Raynolds said. Efforts in Lawrence, Newton, Hull and the Whitman-Hanson school district were among the recent failures.

The state legislature sent the higher education bureaucracy reeling earlier this year when it refused to pass legislation allowing the public colleges and universities to keep the money raised by sharp increases in tuition.

Parents and students will be paying an average of 15 percent more in tuition this year, as high as 30 percent on some campuses. But, the higher price won't translate into improved quality, according to Bromery, because the money — $24 million — will go to help reduce the state deficit.

The Index Yearbook has openings for editor & staff positions in the following areas:

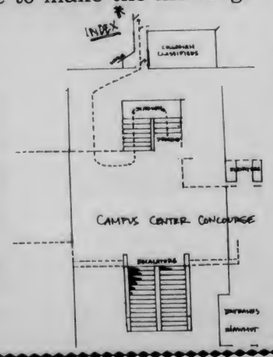
photography	Greeks
layout	seniors
copy writing	student life
sports	business
organizations	marketing

Come to our introductory meeting on Thursday, September 13 at 7pm in room 103 in the Campus Center Basement (near the Collegian).
Call 545-0848 if you are interested but unable to make the meeting.

Index Yearbook



BRITTANY MANOR
(413) 256-8534

Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE NOW!

STARTING $499 PER MONTH

Rent includes heat and hot water.

- Fully-Equipped Kitchen, Including Disposal
- Large Livingroom with Ceiling to Floor Windows
- On the UMass Bus Route
- Wall-to-Wall Carpeting
- Large Dining Area
- Oversized Bathrooms
- Wall-to-Wall Closets
- Storm Windows
- Dead-bolt Security Locks
- Cable T.V. Available
- Ample Parking
- Swimming Pool

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

When clowns go bad.

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

By JIM MEDDICK

WELL, YOU DON'T HAVE TO DECIDE RIGHT AWAY.
WHY DON'T I LEAVE YOU TWO ALONE TO SEE IF YOU GET ALONG?
GREAT THE NEIGHBOR'S SMELLY BIRD TO TAKE CARE OF ALL WEEKEND..
HOW DO I GET MYSELF INTO THESE THINGS?..
WELL?
I LOVE IT!
GREAT THE NEIGHBOR'S SMELLY BIRD TO TAKE CARE OF ALL WEEKEND..

ROBOTMAN

By JIM MEDDICK

POLLY WANT A CRACKER?
POLLY WANT A CRACKER?
"POLLY WANT A CRACKER!"
"POLLY WANT A CRACKER!"
NO! POLLY DOES NOT WANT A CRACKER! POLLY JUST WANTS A SHRED OF DIGNITY!
ARE THOSE SALTINES?

DOONESBURY

By GARRY TRUDEAU

DAY 25. TODAY THE WHITE HOUSE CONCLUDED STAGING THE GRIMMEST VACATION IN THE HISTORY OF RECREATION...
PLAYING A RECORD 108 HOLES OF GOLF BEFORE BREAKFAST TODAY, THE PRESIDENT ALSO SPENT TWO HOURS FRANTICALLY ROARING ABOUT IN "FIDELITY," HIS HIGH-PERFORMANCE CIGARETTE BOAT.
WHEN ASKED TO COMMENT ON THE ESTIMATED 12 BARRELS OF GAS HE'D BURNED DURING HIS VACATION, THE PRESIDENT SNAPPED: "HEY! AT LEAST I WASN'T TRAPPED IN THIS OVAL OFFICE! I WASN'T HELD HOSTAGE, LIKE SOMEBODY WE KNOW!!"
WITH PRESIDENT UN-CARTER IN MAINE, THIS IS ROLAND HEDLEY.
MROOM!

DOONESBURY

By GARRY TRUDEAU

FROM THE WHITE HOUSE ON DOWN, THE BUF-FOISE STARTS TO CHANGE LIVES.
HOT DAMN! WE'RE BEING SENT TO SAUDI ARABIA!
MIKE... I'D LIKE YOU TO WORK ON UNIVERSAL PETROLEUM'S PRICE-GOUGING IMAGE...
SADDLE UP, HONEY! I'VE BEEN ASKED TO RUN GUNS TO THE KUWAITI RESISTANCE!
CALLED UP?
I REPORT IN THE MORNING.
WHERE TO BEGIN...
CALLED UP?
I REPORT IN THE MORNING.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

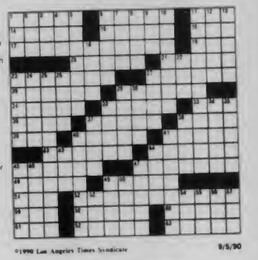
ACROSS
1 Pundits
6 Poplar
11 Interdict
14 Type type
15 Actress Erin
16 Historian's concern
17 Degenerate
19 Fleur-de-—
20 Airs
21 Estuary
23 Swords
27 Downy
28 Chemical vessel
29 "This is the — primeval": Longfellow
31 Headquarters
32 Bogs
33 Possesses
36 — boy!
37 Was under the weather
38 No more than
39 Tripoli ruler of old
40 City on the Rhone
41 Competed for the Little Brown Jug
42 Craved
44 Generate
45 Pedro's friends
47 Small appliance
48 Man's man
49 1938 Nobelist in physics
51 Before clear and out
52 Play pranks
58 "Water Mill" composer Teiji —
59 Webber-Rice musical
60 Sanctum or circle
61 Order's partner
62 Is important
63 Lamb product

DOWN
1 Droop
2 Pest
3 Channel
4 Ike's milieu
5 Sofas
6 Church words
7 Portend
8 God of love
9 Fall behind
10 Stores, on the farm
11 Attempts something dangerous
12 The Ram
13 Loathsome
18 Pitch
22 CPA's concern
23 Furious
24 Winged
25 Plant with silky catkins
26 Concept
27 Astaire
29 Submitted a tax return
30 Mesabi products
32 "A miss is as good as a —
34 Sharp ridge
35 Passover dinner
37 Part of BA
38 Murray and Wesl
40 The second
41 Dog or schooner
43 Mature as wine
44 Head of a comet
45 Help
46 Islands S of Sicily
47 Corp. officer
49 Glaze component
50 Punta del —
53 Eggs, to Cato
54 Switch positions
55 Us, in Augsburg
56 Teachers' org.
57 Volstead Act supporter

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	P	A	D		R	O	S	S		S	A	L	V	O
L	O	S	E		A	L	E	E		C	R	O	O	N
A	S	S	T		O	A	R	N		A	G	I	L	E
W	H	E	E	L	O	F	F	O	R	T	U	N	E
			R	I	A	N		R	A	T	E
R	O	A	M	S		A	B	A	T	E		S	A	W
A	N	T	I		A	I	R		T	R	I	P	L	E
B	E	A	N		I	D	E	A	L		N	I	L	E
B	A	L	E	R	S		A	L	E		S	T	O	P
I	T	E		E	L	E	M		S	T	E	W	S
			F	L	E	X			B	O	A
T	R	E	A	S	U	R	E	I	S	L	A	N	D
L	O	O	N	Y		D	O	I	L		L	I	E	U
E	D	U	C	E		S	T	A	L		E	D	I	T
T	O	T	E	D		O	E	N	S		D	E	N	Y

9/5/90



©1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

9/5/90

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Uncloses, poetically
5 Flonteyn and Markova
10 Cowpoke's pal
14 One more than penta
15 — Dream, Dear
16 Show biz award
17 City near Provo
18 Bedrock
19 Market turns into a vehicle?
20 Malarkey
22 Fresh —
24 Confusion
26 Gone
28 What to do with one's k's
29 U.S. defense group
30 Inter —
32 Laners at the helm
34 Iota follower
39 Throw into confusion
43 A votre —
44 Hat for Hassan
45 First word in Massachusetts's motto
46 Cinch player
49 —, o, u
51 French conjunctions
52 Confused problem
56 Getting better
58 Flier of myth
61 Playwright Bagnold
62 Fluff a coil
64 Pueblo dweller
65 Sicilian spa
66 Bay window
67 Ornamental case
68 Domino of jazz
69 Jaffe and Barrett
70 Do— (moolah)

DOWN
1 Ooze!
2 Liama land
3 Form 1040 entry
4 Brazilian export
5 Sound from a steeple
6 Finder's exclamation
7 — -, in Eden
I m Adam
8 Part of TAE
9 Thermoplastic resins
10 —-fau (stew)
11 Nearly overflowing
12 Creeks
13 Paper size
21 Sturm — Drang
23 Neckline fill-in 25 Lab burner
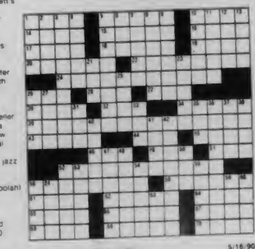
26 Yesterday's acorns
27 Ridibus neighbor
31 Play a part
33 Grimm character
35 Stun
36 Poke through
37 Attention-getter
38 Comic actor Roscoe
40 Irish county
41 Oscar-winning director David —
42 Namesakes of a biblical prophet
47 Horace Greeley was one
48 More 70 Across
50 Business abbr
52 Trace
53 — the hills
54 Once more
55 Hopalong Cassidy flick
56 Take in sail
57 Diva Moffo
59 "E pluribus —"
60 Silk, in Sorsons
63 Food or weed lead-in

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	R	O	W		S	A	F	E	R		P	U	M	P
P	A	P	A		W	R	O	T	E		I	T	O	R
O	V	E	N		A	A	R	D			N	I	L	E
S	I	N	G	S	O	N	G		A	N	G	L	E	S
			E	A	P			E	S	C	A	P	E
G	U	A	R	D	E	D		T	O		T	O
A	N	T		I	D	I	O	M	S		N	A	S	H
S	T	O	K	E		E	N	E		T	O	L	O
H	O	P	I		S	T	A	R	T	S		L	I	E
			N	O	M	E		S	A	I	N	T	E	D
O	E	G	R	A	D	E		U	N	O
S	I	N	K			E		O	I	N	G	O	D	N
T	O	T	O			A	I	N	T		D	R	A	W
A	D	E	N			E	N	T	R	E		E	L	S	E
B	E	R	G			R	A	S	E	D		O	T	A	N

5/15/90



©1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

5/15/90

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Sarah Demaster
Copy Editor.....Meredith O'Brien
Layout Technician.....Terry Starmer
Photo Technician.....K.A. Burke
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Typesetter.....Danielle Dowling
Production.....Rick Seto, Mark Sturm, Seth Kaye

ARTS SECTION
Editors.....Julie Livingstone and Jody Gabin

SPORTS SECTION
Editors.....Adrienne Matt and Sam Silverstein

We reserve the right to limit quantities.
Not responsible for typographical errors.

SUPER STOP & SHOP

Prices effective thru September 8, 1990.

WE'RE A LOT MORE THAN A GREAT SUPERMARKET!

And We Have All You Need To Go Back To College!

We're A FULL SERVICE FLORIST SHOP

Our Florist has a beautiful selection of plants and flowers to brighten your dorm room or apartment. Plus our Flowers By Wire Service lets you send flowers across town or across the country.

MAXI FOLIAGE PLANTS
Choose from Areca Palm, Peace Lily, Weeping Fig, Dracenas, Schefflieras, and others. 3 to 4 feet tall, in a 10 inch pot.
$9.99 ea

Hanging Foliage Plants 2 for $12
Choose from Spider, Swedish Ivy, Peperomia and more. In 8 inch pots.

FRESH ROSES
At Affordable Stop & Shop Prices

DOZEN LONG STEM ROSES $9.99
Quality flowers in a variety of colors.
Purchase of a dozen includes Baby's Breath and Greens in a decorative wrap.

Dozen Miniature Roses $4.99
Petite flowers on a 10-14 inch stem

We're Your
STORE FOR FURNISHINGS

Super Stop & Shop has a fine selection of furnishings that can help make your dorm room a little more homey. Choose from convertible chairs, sofas, and more! Our low prices will easily fit a student's budget.

CONVERTIBLE FLIP CHAIR/BED
Comfortable seating converts to a twin bed in seconds. Made of durable fabric. 27" wide x 76" long x 1" thick.
$34.99 ea
SPECIAL PURCHASE

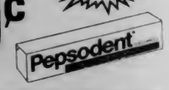
Convertible Flip Sofa/Sleeper $64.99
Sofa converts to a double bed. Measures 48" wide 78" long 7" thick.
SPECIAL PURCHASE

BEAN BAG CHAIR
Rugged vinyl covering filled with cushiony polystyrene beads. All seams double stitched. Hot pink.
$14.99
SPECIAL PURCHASE

We Have All Your
HEALTH AND BEAUTY NEEDS

Choose from over 6,000 items...everything from shampoo to over the counter medicines. Our low prices and weekly specials will fit right into your student's budget.

PEPSODENT TOOTHPASTE
8.2 Oz Pkg.
99¢
SAVE 1.80



We've Got
GREAT SAVINGS THROUGHOUT OUR STORE

VINTAGE SELTZER
3 for 89¢
Regular or Lemon/ Lime Water. 1 Liter Bottle. Plus Deposit Where Applicable.

LAY'S POTATO CHIPS
79¢
Assorted Varieties
6.5 Oz. Bag

PEPSI 12 PACK
$2.89
Caffeine Free Pepsi, Regular or Diet. Plus Deposit Where Applicable. 12 Oz. Cans

MARCAL BATH TISSUE
69¢
4 Pack. 300/2 Ply Roll

We're Your
SNACK HEADQUARTERS

At Super Stop & Shop you'll find a wonderful variety of your favorite snacks to choose from...choose from cookies, chips, crackers, tacos, granola bars, and so much more! Plus a fine assortment of soft drinks and fruit juices, too.

Coor's Natural Soda $1.99
Assorted Flavors. 6-10 Oz Cans. 6 Pack

Bearitos Tortilla Chips $1.99
All Natural Regular or No Salt. 16 Oz Pkg.

STOP & SHOP DELI COUPON
$1 OFF With This Coupon
THE PURCHASE OF $3 or more OF CUT CHEESE at our Deli Cheese Shop
Over 100 varieties available
483
With this coupon and a $7.50 purchase excluding cigarettes and alcoholic beverages. Limit 1 coupon per customer. Good thru September 8, 1990.

STOP & SHOP DELI COUPON
BUY 1, GET 1 FREE With This Coupon
RED OVAL FARMS STONED WHEAT THINS
10.6 Oz Pkg. 484
With this coupon and a $7.50 purchase excluding cigarettes and alcoholic beverages. Limit 1 coupon per customer. Good thru September 8, 1990.

Ford: No repeat season.

Experienced sophomores eager for season

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

Nothing is going to come easy for the University of Massachusetts volleyball team this season. Even the NCAA preseason polls were not nice to the team, according to head coach Carol Ford.

"In the preseason polls, we're tied for eigth with Duquesne. Our goal for the season is to qualify for the Atlantic 10," said Ford. "Against conference opponents, we have to do well, especially since we only meet up once a season."

Because UMass gets an automatic bid to the A-10 tournament, they can't compete against Division II and III teams. This hurts developing teams like UMass who use such experience to prepare for tougher opponents and the A-10 tourneys.

"As far as I'm concerned, we have to get into the top six this year," said Ford. "I don't want to repeat the rebuilding year." A season that ended with a 2-26 record, complete with a lot of freshman and a tough Atlantic 10 schedule is not something many coaches would want to repeat. Ford, however, remains optimistic.

"I've been gearing myself up for this all summer," she said. "This is a good group of athletes. They remain very positive."

Another factor in the minds of all university coaches remains, of course, budget cuts.

"It's difficult, at our level of competition, to recruit with little to no money," said Ford. "It was especially tough to lose money in the middle of the recruiting season. We thought we had 'X,' then the numbers were changed to 'Y.'"

Players recruited include Danielle Michael and Angela Paolucci, both hailing from Denver. According to Ford, Paolucci, a freshman, comes from a good program and will be a starting setter. Michael, a junior, has more experience and will be a starting outside hitter.

Michael competed in the Junior Olympics this summer, as she has in the past. This will be her first collegiate season.

"It's great experience," she said. "There were very aggressive people involved."

Competition in Colorado differs in its style of play, according to Michael. "It's a faster game," she said "The tempo changes as the game progresses."

Senior Nancy Sullivan has been a prominent member since her sophomore year. She's also team captain.

"She's always been a leader," said Ford. "This season she'll have the team to support her. Now the pressure is off her to perform under the group. She'll continue to perform well."

Both Sullivan and Michael spoke highly of Paolucci's athletic ability. She was unavailable at press time, due to illness. They said she was a brilliant and quick setter.

Rachel Bredemeier and Sharon Panoff have improved a great deal Ford said.

"Their height is a great asset to our team," said Ford. "The past season's experience really helped them."

This season's squad had also been blessed with walk-ons, including Patricia Diorio, a defensive specialist.

"We're very lucky to have them," Ford said of the walk-ons. "They have a lot of heart."

Sullivan is also very optimistic about this squad.

"We're still a relatively young team," she said. "This is still a learning year. We've done very well in the pre-season.

"We have a lot to show people this year. We're gonna put everything together this year."

Ford agreed, "It's gonna take every player to contribute, to play as a team."

Field hockey still eager

Experience remains the stronghold of team

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

How does this sound?

National Champions!

Kind of reminds you of UNLV, Michigan, Georgetown, Louisville, Indiana, etc. The University of Massachusetts could have a national champion of their own.

No, it's not the basketball team, (they too may win a national championship, but probably not this year). The next possible national champion is the field hockey team? Maybe.

Ever since Pam Hixon took the reigns at UMass some 12 years ago, the field hockey team has been just about the school's best bet to win a national championship, (the women's soccer team has been a pretty good bet, too). Hixon has guided the Minutewomen to 10 out of 11 NCAA tournament appearances, and with any luck, 1990 should be her team's 11th showcase in the big show.

The Kathy DeAngelis era is over. DeAngelis was the working horse for the Minutewomen last season, she led the team offensively with 16 goals. Also gone are Bernie Martel, Carol Smith and Kathe Derwin. Martel and Smith were steady four-year contributors, who will be missed. Derwin did not see a lot of action due to a severe knee injury, however, she was very much a team leader.

"Those kids will all be missed," Hixon said. "Huge holes — I feel to fill — both the leadership aspect as well as kids who are going to have to pick up the slack in terms of scoring and playing this year."

Let the record show that the 1989 graduating class left Hixon with eight spots to fill in 1989. However, the Minutewomen made it to the second round

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

Collegian file photo

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team, under the direction of coach Pam Hixon, will be looking toward a chance at the national championship.

Spirit Haus

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS

ROLLING ROCK
Latrobe Brewing Co. Latrobe, PA
Rolling Rock
12oz bar bottles
$10.49 case

Miller Genuine Draft
2/12 packs 12oz bottle
$10.79 case

Lite Suitcase
$11.79 case

Michelob
Michelob Light
Michelob Dry
2/12 pack 12oz. cans
$11.99

Carling Black Label
12oz bar bottles
$6.99 case

Beck's Beer
2/12 packs 12oz bottles
$15.99 case

1/2 Kegs starting at $27.00

Many more in-store specials on domestic and imported beer

Captain Morgan
Spiced Rum
750ml
$6.99

Jack Daniel's
Tennessee Whisky
750ml
$9.99

JOSE CUERVO
Tequila
Gold 750ml
$8.99

Gilbey's Gin
750ml with Schweppe's 1L
Tonic Water
$6.99

Popov Vodka
1.75L
$9.99

Bacardi Breezers
Spirit Coolers
All flavors
$3.99 4 pack

338 College St., Rt.9, Amherst MA 253-5384 MC/VISA
Hours: M-F:10:00am-11:00pm Sat.:9:00am-11:00pm

Tennis team battles cuts

Women's program optimistic about season

By P. TERRY BRENNAN
Collegian Correspondent

In short, University of Massachusetts women's tennis coach Edwin Gentzler feels strongly that his squad has a bright fall future. Faced with the ever-imposing budget cuts and the exodus of two strong singles starters, Gentzler is determined to better last season's 5-7 record.

The women's team lost critical spring training opportunities due to budget cuts. Therefore, Gentzler and his players devised a plan to recapture lost funds through fund-raising techniques. In doing so, the team has been able to maintain their skill, determination, competitiveness, as well as a sense of teamwork during the off-season.

Previous to last spring, the team began its fund-raising and, with the help from a local tennis club, was able to raise over $1,500. The club matched the fund-raising contribution dollar-for-dollar. Procured funding will translate into necessary indoor court-time.

"We all knew it was coming," Gentzler said of the budget cuts. "And even though some spring practice time has been lost, I'm hoping there is no fall-off with the players."

Gentzler is rather confident that will not be the case. He implemented a series of spring and summer conditioning programs and practical playing time. The women's team has been weight training, scrimmaging amongst each other, playing in regional tournaments, and, most importantly, holding team practices throughout the past six months. The most recent regional tournament being the New England Tournament at Vermont which will culminate during the end of August.

"We're a year older and in better shape than in years," Gentzler said. Three years ago, the coach began his union with the UMass women's tennis program. That first year he 'cleaned house' and installed an all-freshman lineup. Previous to that year, the team finished with only one win in twenty attempts. The team has climbed from that mark to end 5-7 last year.

With those same freshmen now matured to three-year starters, Gentzler said he is excited by the possibilities. Junior Gail Girasella has climbed consistently from a number six singles player to finish last year with experience at both numbers two and one singles. At the number two spot, Girasella accumulated a respectful five wins in nine matches. In the number one slot, she won one while dropping three in regular season matches.

Kerensa Eddy, whom Gentzler describes as a very strong player, played matches from number four through number two singles. A co-captain this year, Eddy won six in a row at number four singles as well as three in a row at number two. Eddy also captured the New England Tournament number three singles title.

Playing between number five and number three singles is Shizuko Yamasaki. Gentzler is relying on Yamasaki to help the team in the win column, as well as co-captain.

The coach is also excited by sophomore Amy Ryan. A 13-2 contributor in lower singles play, Ryan earned Most Valuable Player honors last season. Sophomores Kerri Kaminski and Kelly Griffin will also add strongly to the team, according to Gentzler.

Gentzler said the season looks 'bright as ever' with the acquisition of three number one high school singles players. Down the line they will add depth, he said, even though he will be quite surprised it they become starters.

Two players the squad has lost are Elysa Rosenberg to Delaware and Allison Agnew to Wellesley College. Agnew was a co-captain on last year's team.

Even with those losses in mind, Gentzler said he is confident his team will be solid contenders against such solid teams as Connecticut, New Hampshire, Providence College and Vermont. The fall season opens Sept. 13 against Connecticut at home.

Reds' veterans, freshmen look cohesive in preseason

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

An impressive and explosive season isn't a tough act to follow, at least for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, according to head coach Jim Rudy.

"The strength of our team is our depth. We know who's on the field and we know their capabilities," said Rudy. "We have so many people that are so good."

The reputation the Reds have built was an added bonus for the recruiting season, he said. The freshmen picks look healthy and eager.

"They're nice, mature players. They're legit," Rudy said. "I'm very pleased with the level of soccer intelligence and skill."

During recruiting season, the coaches saw Regional, State and Select teams compete, chose who they wanted and pursued those individuals. Some women were recommended to the university, sometimes it is vice versa.

"With so few spots open, we couldn't do heavy recruiting," he said. "We went out looking for the personalities to fit our program."

This season's freshmen include Paula Wilkins, who was on the Regional East Youth team; Amy Trunk, who played for the Regional North Youth team; and Colleen Milliken, who played for both the State Champion team as well as the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 15

Collegian file photo

With an experienced squad returning, including senior forward Sue Gaudette (above), the UMass Reds hope to build on last year's NCAA quarterfinal appearance.

START THE SEMESTER OFF RIGHT!
GET INTO SHAPE!!
AT
THE BODY SHOP

DIGITAL HYDRA-FITNESS MACHINES

- STAIR CLIMBERS
- AEROBICS
- TREADMILLS
- ROWING MACHINES
- SKI MACHINES
- STATIONARY BICYCLES

ALL FOR THE LOW MEMBERSHIP FEE OF $50!

PLUS!

FIRST 100 JOINING RECEIVE BODY SHOP DESIGNER TEE SHIRT

COMING SOON! NAUTILUS MACHINES!

SIGN UP AT ALL 3 LOCATIONS
SEPTEMBER 6: 3:00-7:00 SEPTEMBER 7: 1:00-4:00

John Adams 19th Floor—John Kennedy 12th Floor—Totman Gymnasium Basement

OPENING SEPTEMBER 17 7:30-9:00am, 11:30-1:30pm, 3:00-9:00pm, Sat 12:00-3:00pm
Info: 545-4665

UMass athletes recognized for skills

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

During the summer months, many of the University of Massachusetts' athletes received honors and awards, including team members of baseball, football, gymnastics, men's and women's lacrosse and softball.

BASEBALL

Senior Ian Torres, junior Derek Dana, junior Brian Bright and sophomore Scott Meaney played in the New England All-Star game at Fenway Park. For UMass last year, Torres batted .321; Dana hit .338; Bright hit .329 with 10 homeruns; and Meany had a 6-0 record with a 2.52 ERA.

Junior pitcher Rob Grazino received the Dennis Della-Piana Award for Courage, Determination and Sportsmanship as a member of the UMass baseball team.

Graduate firstbaseman Drew Comeau, from North Branford, Conn., was named the baseball team's Most Valuable Player. He led UMass in hitting at .389 and set a single season record with 19 doubles. Comeau owns UMass records or homeruns in a season (12) and a career (32). He also started as an outside linebacker and defensive tackle on the football team.

FOOTBALL

Graduate Joe Cullen, a captain of the football team, was chosen an All-American Athlete by the National Strength and Conditioning Coaches Association. A native of Hingham, Cullen was a three-year starter at noseguard and earned All-Yankee Conference recognition.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Graduate Kristin Turmail, from Framingham, and sophomore Tammy Marshall, from Hicksville, N.Y., were named All-NCAA Northeast Region by the Gymanstics Coaches Association. Turmail is the Atlantic-10 vaulting champion. Marshall was named the A-10 Freshman-of-the-Year.

MEN'S LACROSSE

Graduates Rob Codignatto and Tim Soudan were chosen to play in the North-South All-Star Lacrosse Game at Johns Hopkins. Codignatto led Garber's Gorillas in goals scored with 50 and was second in total points with 74. Codignatto made the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association's All-American Honorable Mention list. Soudan made the second All-American team, as a midfielder, totalling 32 goals and 18 assists for 50 points [third on the team] in his final UMass season.

Senior Jim McAleavey made the second team All-American, on attack, leading UMass in total points with 34 goals and 57 assists for 125 points. Graduate Scott Hiller and junior Rich Mullins made All-American Honorable Mention.

Hiller, from Garden City, N.J., was also chosen second team All-New England. Codignatto, from Wantagh, N.Y., Soudan, from Fairport, N.Y., McAleavey, from Stewart Manor, N.Y., and Mullins from Concord were selected first team All-New England.

WOMEN'S LACROSSE

Graduate Sue Murphy, senior Liz Hoye and senior Karen Pierce made the select All-Region All-Star team. Murphy, from Boyertown, Pa., had 31 goals for the season. Hoye, from W. Hartford, Conn., played as a defender and Pierce, from Lodi, N.J., played in the goal.

SOFTBALL

Junior Holly Aprile and senior Chris Collins were chosen to the A-10 All-Tournament Softball team. Aprile, from Afton, N.Y., made the team as a utility player and was also named the A-10 Player-of-the-Year. She led the conference in hitting at .406 and had a pitching record of 19-11 with a 1.89 ERA. Collins, from Springfield, was the team's firstbaseman, batting .283 during the UMass season.

[See also related story, for more athlete achievements.]

UMass Reds participate in Olympic fest

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

In the summer some scholar/athletes paint houses, some teach camps. Others are unaware of boundaries, and push their bodies and minds to the ultimate competition level — the Olympics.

This July three University of Massachusetts women's soccer players participated in the Olympic Festival, held in Minnesota. The United States Soccer Federation determines the selection process and develops the program.

The purpose of the festival is to prepare and acclimate the athletes to an olympic-style environment, to push them to matriculate into other areas. From these events, national teams are selected.

Skye Eddy and April Kater competed on the West team, and brought in the bronze, while Holly Helmuth, competing for the South, took the silver. The North, which is the National team, won the gold.

"We've seen and competed against most of the people that were there, so we knew the other players," said Kater.

Last year at the festival, all three women played on the team that took the bronze in Oklahoma. Being somewhat divided up this summer didn't seem to affect their mentality nor performance.

"Part of being a solid player is adjusting quickly to other players," said Helmuth. She competed on three other teams this summer.

The first week consisted of rigorous training, allowing the team to get to know each other's strengths and weaknesses. Double sessions and the free time spent together helped the women to develop as a team. The following week, there were games every other day, with round robin sets determining elimination.

These women said they play for the love of the game, the travel and the socialization the organization allows when participating in such a competitive event.

"It's competitive, but it's also fun," said Eddy. "I just love to play."

Sue Montagne (UMass '88), who is currently the assistant women's soccer coach at Maryland, competed for the East. Debby Belkin ('87) played for the North and Monica Seta ('87) played for the West.

Helmuth and Belkin made the National Senior team, and went on to tour Canada. The team swept the series by taking Canada once and Norway twice.

Helmuth and Montagne competed in the USA Cup in Minnesota on the National B team. The team lost to the National A team, West Germany and England, but tied Russia.

For the first time, beginning in 1994, there will be a women's World Cup team. By competing in Olympic Festivals, doors do open for athletes.

"There are women who have competed to keep their position on the National team for six to eight years," said Kater. "They've worked hard for it. Now they'll finally get to play.

"Maybe the exposure at the [World Cup] game could be a push for professional women's teams in the States."

Call 1 800 654-0471 and you won't have to wait till spring to get a break.

There's nothing like a call to keep in touch with people you really care about. But there's nothing like a lot of long distance calls to cut into a student's budget. Which is why AT&T has a whole program of products and services called AT&T Student Saver Plus.

It includes the AT&T Reach Out* America Plan, which gives you savings 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. For example, you'll get 25% off our already low evening prices.* You'll even save when you call during the daytime.

To enroll in AT&T Reach Out* America or to learn about the Student Saver Plus programs that are right for you, call us at 1 800 654-0471 Ext. 1232. And get a break any time of the year.

AT&T. Helping make college life a little easier.

AT&T The right choice.

*Discount applies to out of state calls direct dialed 5–10 pm, Sunday–Friday. This service may not be available in residence halls on your campus.

© 1990 AT&T

STEVIE RAY VAUGHAN
1954 - 1990

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB

The Area's Most Complete Fitness Facility!
18 Years of Fun and Fitness for all ages!

- Pool
- Racquetball
- Sauna
- Massage
- Computerized Bikes
- Stairmaster
- Aerobics & Aqua-Aerobics
- Nautilus
- Tennis
- Jacuzzi
- Free Weights
- Rowing Machines

At Echo Hill Gatehouse Rd., Amherst
256-6446

■ field hockey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

of the NCAA tournament last year, and came within one goal of taking top seed Old Dominion to overtime.

One thing that the Minutewomen do have is experience.

"The kids that are returning now have a substantial amount of experience," Hixon said. "I think that we are leaps and bounds ahead of last year's pre-season. Execution-wise their skills are better, and tactically we're far more sophisticated than we were starting out last year."

The Minutewomen are solid on defense. Phillipa Scott (0.75 goals against average) returns to the net for Hixon. Scott is like the immovable object. Nothing or almost nothing gets past her. During the season, she had a shutout string of five straight games.

Anyone who does not think that the goalie is the most important player on the field, think about this: if the Minutewomen score two goals per game, they stand a chance of going undefeated, (assuming Scott's GAA remains the same).

"I think our true star returners have to be Phillipa Scott in goal, and Kerri Fagan on defense," Hixon said. Fagan was a second team All-American last season.

"Fagan is an outstanding sweeper," she said. "So, we've got a good deep defense already in place with a sweeper and a goalkeeper."

Lisa Berardinelli and Kathy Phelan anchor an experienced backfield.

"Both are experienced and very strong backs," Hixon said.

Sherlan Cabralis and Beth Thornton (six goals) are two experienced mid-fielders. Cabralis is more of a setup man, while Thornton is the scorer. Together they mesh very well, and could be the players to pick up some of the scoring load.

"On the forward line, we have a pack of forwards who contributed last year," Hixon said.

Mara Frattasio (13 goals), and Dawn Traumbaur (seven goals, four assists) will be asked to shoulder a lot of the scoring this year. Elise McDevitt who missed all of last season with a knee injury is back. If McDevitt is healthy she should be a major asset on offense.

"She's really coming into her own," Hixon said. "She gets better every day."

The defense looks to be the strength of the Minutewomen but the offense is where there should be the most depth.

"I think we've got a lot of depth, last year we didn't, we had a lot of numbers, but we didn't have a lot of experienced depth," Hixon said. "I feel really confident that we are well on our way to having a strong team."

When the rankings come out, the Minutewomen will undoubtedly be among the top 20.

"We finished so strong last year, people might think that we're a contender in the top five or six," Hixon said. "I don't really care where we start the season, because it's really how you finish that makes a difference."

As schoolbook weather approaches, one can't help but look back to that cold November day on Nickerson Field where the Minutewomen had their season ended by eighth Old Dominion 2-1.

"I always think about it because I think it was a great game for us," Hixon said. "It was a great tournament because we really showed a lot of mental toughness.

"These kids, they have a real strong team mentality that I think will carry them very far," Hixon said.

■ YanCon

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

largely to blame. Richmond's line yielded 32 sacks and 40 tackles-for-losses in the backfield; nearly 20 percent of the Spider's 396 running plays lost yardage.

For salvation, junior Jeff Forbes (6-foot-2, 265) and senior Rod Chenault (6-foot-2, 250) have been moved to left and right guard, respectively. There are also several redshirt sophomores ready to try and stop the flood of defensive linemen and linebackers in the Richmond backfield.

And for kicks, Lowell's Scott Stapelton, a 6-foot-5 leaper who scored over 1,000 points during a four-year basketball career at Richmond, is going to give football a whack, at split end. Stapelton last played at prep school in New Hampshire, where he scored 17 touchdowns in one season.

Should Spider quarterback Mark Mascheck find him the football, coach Marshall might have something to talk about.

DO YOU WANT TO WORK FOR THE COLLEGIAN

COME TO CAMPUS CENTER 113

Student checking free for a year!

Open a BayBank checking account today, and you'll pay no normal monthly service charges for one full year. Plus, you'll enjoy the unmatched convenience of the BayBank Card—chosen by more Massachusetts students than any other. Only the BayBank Card lets you—

- Bank 24 hours a day at over 1,000 X-Press 24® banking machines on campus and around the state.
- Access up-to-the-minute account information with unique Card features like Account Update™ and Check Update.™
- Get cash where you shop, with over 200 BayBank X-Press 24 CASH® machines at convenience stores and supermarkets in Massachusetts.
- Get cash when you travel at over 30,000 NYCE® and CIRRUS® automated teller machines nationwide.

So look for us on campus—or stop by the nearest BayBank office today to open your free checking account. And get the Card that's number one in its class!

NOBODY DOES IT BETTER.™

24-HOUR CUSTOMER SERVICE CENTERS AND BAYBANK TELEPHONE BANKING: BayBank Boston (617) 348-8787; BayBank First (508) 999-6000; BayBank Harvard Trust Company (617) 648-8550; BayBank Middlesex (617) 938-1800; BayBank Norfolk (617) 461-1740; BayBank Southeast (508) 823-2212; BayBank Valley Trust Company (413) 732-5510.

Member BFG

SAT scores sidetrack three basketball recruits

Williams, Cottrel to attend prep school

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Coach John Calipari learned in August that three recruits to his University of Massachusetts men's basketball program failed to get the minimum SAT scores they needed to be eligible to play as freshmen, and will not attend the University this fall.

Mike Williams, Ted Cottrel and Jerome Johnson fell short of the 700 combined test score required by the NCAA.

Williams and Cottrel will attend Maine Central Institute, a prep school, while Johnson is undecided about his plans for this fall, said Calipari. All three have said they still want to attend UMass.

Calipari signed all three to letters of intent in November, with the understanding that they would be admitted to the University if they made their test scores and did well academically during their last year of high school, he said.

"They are good kids . . . they come from good homes, their parents have taught them well," said Calipari. "They're a little bit short in an area or so and it's going to keep them down for a little while."

Calipari said of Williams and Cottrel, "If they're willing to go to prep school, and their families are willing to take the financial hardship [of the cost of attending prep school] . . . then I think it says something about the families and about the kids."

Calipari knew he was, in his words, "taking a chance" recruiting Cottrel and Johnson, but was surprised to hear that Williams had come up short as well, he said.

"We felt good when we signed [Williams] because he did pretty good in high school, and he's a bright kid," said Calipari.

Williams also had the best chance of cracking the UMass lineup this winter, said Calipari. Williams, 6-foot-3, averaged 25 points, 3 steals, 7 rebounds and 8 assists per game as a senior point guard at Weaver H.S. in Hartford, Conn. He was voted first team All-State by the New Haven (Conn.) Register, and named high honorable mention All-American by Street and Smith's magazine.

"I think out of the five kids we signed, Mike is the guy who could have gotten some time," said Calipari. "I was disappointed, but I'm not devastated and neither is our program. We are in pretty good shape with everybody returning."

Cottrel, 6-foot-9, averaged 16 points, 13 rebounds and five blocks per game in his senior year at Annapolis Senior High School in Annapolis, Md.

Johnson, 6-foot-4, teamed with UMass sophomore Harper Williams at Bassick High School in Bridgeport, Conn., where they won the state title and shared Mr. Basketball honors in 1988-89.

Collegian Correspondent Greg Sukvenik contributed to this story.

Two hoop recruits arrive

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Chris Robinson, a three-year starter at LaSalle Academy in Manhattan, N.Y., signed in August to play with the University of Massachusetts mens basketball team, head coach John Calipari announced.

Robinson is expected to back up Jim McCoy, Anton Brown and Rafer Giles at guard for the Minutemen.

Robinson joins 6-foot-9 Kennard Robinson and 7-foot-2 Jeff Meyer as new additions to the UMass roster.

Kennard Robinson signed with UMass in the spring of 1989, but sat out his freshman year under NCAA Proposition 42 guidelines after failing to post-sufficient SAT scores.

Robinson was named first team All-New York State Division A and was an honorable mention All-American, according to Street and Smith magazine, while playing for Long Island Lutheran, Long Island N.Y.

"He'll be somebody that's going to get time," said Calipari. "But he's got some work to do. He's been out of basketball for a year, and that's tough."

Meyer is billed as the first legitimate seven-footer in UMass basketball history. Meyer averaged 20 points, nine rebounds and six blocks per game at Newman High School in Wasau, Wis., last season.

"He wants to be good, and in time I believe he is going to be a heck of a player for us," said Calipari.

Calipari said he is considering redshirting Meyer this season, but will wait to make his decision until later this fall.

"If I don't feel that he's going to get a whole lot of time this year, then we'll probably redshirt him, because I don't want to waste a year where he's playing seven minutes a game," said Calipari.

Need a bookcase or set of shelves?

COWLS

Build it yourself with cut-to-length pine shelving from Cowls

We have all you'll need — boards for shelving, shelf clips, plywood, nails, tools, metal table legs and more!

Benjamin Moore PAINTS

PAINTS & STAINS by Benjamin Moore
To finish your project

PAINT BRUSHES, ROLLERS

Plastic Tubular Hangers 10 for 1.00

BULLETIN BOARDS
Homosote Nova Cork Board
18" x 21" 9.99
24" x 36" 16.99
36" x 48" 29.49

KRAZY GLUE 79¢
Instant Krazy Glue
One drop holds a ton! Bonds many materials in just seconds.

HANTOP CORK CORPORATION
12" x 12" Dark Cork Panels 6.99
Box of four ¼" thick panels create a dramatic wall accent

9.97
CONAIR
1250 Watt Hair Dryer
2 heat settings, 2 speeds. Lightweight and powerful

Rubbermaid 9.77
Lunch Tote
Built-in refreeze bottle and 2 Servin Saver™ sandwich keepers. Locking handle.

4.47
8" Saute Pan
Polished aluminum with non-stick SilverStone® interior
10" Saute Pan 5.97
12" Saute Pan 7.47

P Strip No. 32326
SURGE SUPPRESSOR 9.97
Prices good through Sept. 22 or while supplies last

COWLS BUILDING SUPPLY INC.
125 Sunderland Road, North Amherst 549-0001
7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Weekdays • 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays
Free Delivery in Area

WELCOME BACK

MICHELOB BUSCH

Case Specials

Busch	$8.99
Rolling Rock	$10.99
Bud Dry	$11.99

12 Packs

Miller Genuine Draft
$5.99

Michelob, Michelob Light, and Dry
$6.99

Miscellaneous Specials

Sun Country Coolers 2Lt	$2.99
Bacardi Breezers 4pk	$4.49
Jack Daniels 750ml	$10.99
Absolut Citron 750ml	$10.99
Four Seasons Vodka 1.75L	$8.99

FOUR SEASONS
"NOT JUST ANOTHER LIQUOR STORE"
MC/VISA
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 584-8174
Just Beyond Burger King—Open 9 a.m.-11 p.m. Mon.-Sat.

Women's track coach: Harriers are dedicated

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

Bounding into her fourth year with the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team, head coach Julie LaFreniere said she is looking forward to another good season.

"These people have great attitudes," said LaFreniere. "The cross country team is very dedicated. I've been in contact with them over the summer and the reports are good."

Losing only two harriers to graduation and travel, LaFreniere said she eager for the season to begin. Graduate Shana Smith's contributions are 'really going to be missed.'

Smith took fourth at the New Englands in cross country and was the 800-meter New England champion. A Russian major, Laura LaVallee, will be travelling to Russia this season. LaFreniere said she believes LaVallee will still run but doubts she will be training or competing.

Last year the squad took second in the New England Championships and tenth in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference.

LaFreniere's recruiting season has not been as strong as in past years, but she is very excited about one particular freshman. Kelly Liljeblad [le-gi-blad], from W. Islip, N.Y., looks particularly strong, according to LaFreniere.

"She should step into [competition with] the top five [runners]," she said. "She competes on the same level as Maureen Meldrim and Becky Johnson."

Liljeblad has made the All-East list in indoor and outdoor track and field events for the past few years. She qualified for the nationals her senior year by running the two-mile in 11.07.

Senior captains Cathy Crocker and Kathy Holt are the only two runners on the team who have raced for the team for the past four years. LaFreniere refers to them as part of her 'senior' team.

"We'll be depending heavily on Meldrim and Johnson to pick up where they left off," LaFreniere said. "They're both hard workers and very talented. They really helped to carry us last year, as freshmen."

Michelle St. Laurent has also been deemed 'a big factor — as long as she stays healthy.' This junior placed fourth in the ECACs cross country event last year and is expected to continue to play a significant role.

A strong leader as well as a great person, precedes senior Dana Goldfarb, said LaFreniere. An exchange student from the University of California at Northridge, she didn't compete. Out and injured the year before, Goldfarb hasn't competed on a collegiate level for two years. She raced every Wednesday this summer and has gradually bettered her times.

"She's one of those great additions to come back to the program," said LaFreniere. "She sounds fresh and ready to go."

St. Laurent, Crocker and Goldfarb are 'on the delicate side,' according to LaFreniere. Thay have been supplementing hard distances with water workouts and are hoped to remain injury-free.

Another returning harrier is Lynn Kirchoff. She spent last year on exchange in Seville, Spain and hasn't competed in the collegiate ciruit in a year.

"We're glad to have her return," said LaFreniere. "We'll see how quickly she springs back."

Junior Tara Hughs competed for UMass for the first time last year. She handles varsity workouts and is expected to perform well.

Another promising freshman is Lori Romano, who was out during most of her senior year of high school with a groin injury. She, reportedly, is completely healed and has been training with former collegiate runners as well as maintaining physical therapy sessions.

"She has a lot of potential and sounds good," said LaFreniere.

A sophomore who never made it past the first day of practice last year is Amy Hennessey. She was out in August with streptococcus, then tonsilitis, then mononucleosis. Needless to say she wasn't able to get out of bed, nevermind perform.

"I'm hoping she'll stay together," said LaFreniere. "She was fairly talented in high school."

The competition seen from New England has been strong, nationally competitive. LaFreniere said she thinks this group is up for it.

Their first meet is against Boston College, who has traditionally had a very strong program. A home field advantage may be what these harriers need to start the season out on the right foot.

"They had an off year last year," said LaFreniere. "but they're a good rivalry to open the season with."

Other competitors include Springfield College, Connecticut, Providence College, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont.

"They're a very dedicated group," she said of this season's squad. "They're close and supportive of each other. In order to be successful they'll need to run a tight pack, like last year. I expect they'll continue to do so."

■ Wilkos

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9

Physically, Wilkos said he feels a bit quicker and more agile after a summer of running and lifting weights, though his sore wrist did alter the routine some. He has even bulked up, and appeared at the beginning of camp in August to weigh close to 180 pounds, as advertised."

"God knows how much equipment I'll be wearing," said Wilkos, in reference to everyone's hopes that he avoid the injuries that sidelined him last year. "I might weigh in at 205."

Reid said he is also pleased with Wilkos' continued development as a team leader.

"I think what we're seeing is the emergence of a leader on offense," said Reid.

"Last year we did have a lot of seniors in the huddle, a lot of older guys," said Wilkos. "Now, I think it's only right that I do go in the huddle and be more aggressive, now that I feel really comfortable with the other players."

AEROBICS
AND FITNESS CLASSES

- STATE OF THE ART NEO SHOCK FLOOR
- SIX CLASSES DAILY
- ONLY $4.25 PER CLASS
- SAVE BY BUYING PACKAGES OF 10, 20, Or 30 classes.

The LADY at mountain farms mall

Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

"it's finger lickin' good"

Kentucky Fried Chicken

Colonel's Dozen
$10.99

12 pieces of Mixed Chicken
Large Mashed Potatoes
Large Gravy
Large Cole Slaw

$1.99 Specials

6 Nuggets with French fries
or
Colonel's Chicken Sandwich w/ fries
2pc. Chicken with small mashed potatoes

Kentucky Fried Chicken at the Mountain Farms Mall
Route 9, Hadley
Open Sun.-Thurs. 10:30-11, Fri.& Sat. 10:30-midnight

WILDWATER OUTFITTERS
355 RUSSELL ST. (RTE 9)
HADLEY, MA 01035
586-2323

THE NORTH FACE

BACK TO SCHOOL SALE!!!
Over 300 daypacks and shoulder bags!
All at $5.00 off the regular low price!

Caribou

JANSPORT

Coupon
$5.00 off any daypack
offer good til 9/30/90

Yankee Conference preview: UConn picked

Preseason poll tabs UMass to finish third

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

To put this parity thing on the table right off: The Yankee Conference does not have one consensus, dominant, must-be-something-drastically-wrong-if-they-don't-win-it-all football team this season.

That is the party line proffered by the league's coaches, and backed up by the thirty-or-so writers who voted in a preseason media poll in mid-August.

Twenty-one Yankee Conference media regulars picked the University of Connecticut to finish first, with Delaware, Massachusetts, Maine, Villanova, New Hampshire, Boston University, Rhode Island and Richmond trailing, in that order.

The spread among the top five vote-winners, however — from UConn's 251 to Villanova's 158 — was slight enough to suggest that the press heard what the league's coaches have been screaming for years: There are no free W's to be had in the Yankee Conference.

UMass coach Jim Reid's theory is that the team with the least injuries and most "impact players" — i.e., Maine's Carl Smith, UConn's Matt DeGennaro, etc. — will win it.

"You need people to break you away from the pack," said Reid in August.

"This league has some great players . . . if [we] are not ready mentally, every week, any team will beat you."

Here then, in the order of finish predicted in the league media poll, is a look at each of the Yankee Conference teams, and their key people:

Connecticut: Matt DeGennaro and Kevin Wesley. Kevin Wesley and Matt DeGennaro. When people talk about impact players in the conference, these two names come up early and often.

DeGennaro is UConn's 6-foot-2, 210 pound quarterback; Wesley is a 5-foot-8, 200-pound tailback. Both are seniors, both rank among the top returning players in the league at their positions, and both are capable of single-handedly carrying the UConn offense through a Saturday afternoon in the Yankee Conference.

Together they helped earn UConn an 8-3 overall record last season and a share of the conference title at 6-2, and have landed the Huskies at the top of this year's preseason media poll.

DeGennaro was the Yankee Conference Offensive Player-of-the Year in 1988 and the Rookie-of-the-Year in 1987, and threw for 2,472 yards and 17 touchdowns last season on his way to being named second team All-Conference.

In his career, DeGennaro has tossed for 7,311 yards and 52 touchdowns. He is within striking distance of several all-time Yankee Conference records, including passing yards (needs 1,535), pass completions (needs 31), and total offense (needs 1,507).

Wesley transferred from Illinois Valley Community College to UConn last year, and battled through an early-season knee injury to earn first team All-Yankee Conference honors. In his eight games at full speed, Wesley averaged 145 yards each.

"I believe we have two of the best performers in the conference and in the country," said UConn coach Tom Jackson.

If you're looking for an achilles heel, All-American and Yankee Conference Defensive Player-of-the-Year Troy Ashley graduated, leaving a void at inside linebacker.

Delaware: Tubby Raymond enters his 25th season as head coach at Delaware just four wins shy of 200 career victories. A lock.

Whether or not the Blue Hens can bestow a celebratory conference title on Raymond this season is less clear. In front of ECAC and Yankee Conference Rookie-of-the-Year quarterback Bill Vergantino, and solid Daryl Brantley at fullback, the Blue Hens will field a weak offensive line.

Senior offensive tackle Tom Bockius, the sole starter returning from last year's line, will be joined by an inexperienced cast of underclassman and rusty returnees.

"Every time we talk about the 1990 team, the subject pops up about line play," said Raymond. "But I think we have the people who can jump in and play . . . . We are also looking for some freshman support with as many as five of them playing on the offensive line."

A bad sign.

Delaware's strong suit, as ever, will be its defense, with senior Marc Sydnor anchoring the secondary from the cornerback slot. The Blue Hens are also stacked at linebacker, with juniors Rob Wolford, Mark Hite and Tim Irvine joined by senior Todd Eller, who will move back to outside linebacker after playing defensive end last year.

Massachusetts: See accompanying season preview.

Maine: Gone from the highest scoring team in the Yankee Conference last season is quarterback Mike Buck — the Mike Buck, 1989 ECAC and Yankee Conference Player-of-the-Year Mike Buck, Maine's all-time leading passer Mike Buck, UMass killer Mike Buck — to the NFL's New Orleans Saints.

Gone too is last year's coach, Tom Lichtenberg, who stuck around Orono all of one season - in which his team won nine games and the Yankee Conference's automatic playoff bid - before taking the head coaching job at Ohio University.

Thirty four-year-old Kirk Ferentz, formerly an assistant coach at the University of Iowa, was named head coach of the Black Bears this winter.

Carl Smith, however, is back.

Never mind the Yankee Conference; as a sophomore, Smith led the nation in rushing last year with 1,680 regular-season yards. He also added a 205 yard, 2 touchdown performance in Maine's playoff loss to Southwest Missouri.

Kodak All-American, All-ECAC, All-Yankee Conference, former Sports Illustrated Player-of-the-Week (following a monsterous 245-yard, 26-carry afternoon vs. Rhode Island), and 1988 Yankee Conference Rookie-of-the-Year, Smith is the guy who, in the estimation of UMass's Reid, "can dominate a whole league."

Maine's defensive secondary, especially strong safety Claude Pettaway and free safety Jamal Williamson, is also solid, and on the receiving end, senior Mark Dupree returns at wide receiver having developed a taste for catching a lot of footballs.

Most everywhere else, however, are holes to fill, with the most glaring loss at the quarterback spot. Junior Jeff DelRosso has been Buck's understudy for the past two seasons, which meant for some very 'limited action,' tactfully put. DelRosso's stat line from last season: 11 for 15 for 95 yards and two touchdowns.

Villanova: Last year Villanova won eight games overall and six in the Yankee Conference, finishing the season as the 16th ranked team in the nation following a 52-36 playoff loss to Georgia Southern.

It is unlikely that the Wildcats will be able to repeat that performance, however, having lost quarterback Kirk Schulz, split end Bob Brady, a first team All-Yankee Conference pick, and several key members of their offensive line.

"We are a young football team and, while we are a talented group, our most critical position, quarterback, is still a mystery," said coach Andy Talley.

Brockton's Tom Columbo, who holds the Massachusetts state high school record for career touchdown tosses with 85, appears to have edged out senior Perry Hodge as starting quarterback. Columbo, a sophomore, is a 5-foot-7 scrambler with a shockingly strong arm.

On special teams, returning place kicker Tom Withka hit 35 of 36 PAT's last year for the Wildcats.

New Hampshire: New Hampshire came within one loss — a 34-28 blow delivered by UMass at McGuirk Alumni Stadium in the last game of the regular season — of making the playoffs last year.

UNH was riding a seven-game winning streak at the time, and had its eyes on an at-large bid to the playoffs, before the Minutemen saved the NCAA the trouble of having to make a decision.

It was a painful loss, in part because it marked the final game for eight UNH starters on offense, including quarterback Mark Carr, and first team All-Yankee Conference linebacker Will Tychsen on defense.

Veteran coach Bill Bowes is left to pick up the pieces with a young football team; as of late August, there's not a single senior projected to start on offense.

"I really have no idea how good a football team we are going to be," said Bowes. "There is no question we lost a lot of offensive firepower, but we feel we have some talented replacements."

In that, Bowes probably has freshman split end David Gamble and sophomore tailbacks Kyle Cripps and Barry Bourassa in mind.

Junior Matt Griffin, who started three games at quarterback for the Wildcats early last fall before yielding to Carr, will be given a second chance at running the offense.

Boston University: First-year head coach Dan Allen inherits some primo atheletes and a new-age, "Run-and-Shoot" offense from his predecessor, Chris Palmer.

Quarterback Stan Greene and Associated Press All-American wide receiver Daren Altieri, both seniors, thrived in the hyperactive offensive scheme introduced by Palmer in 1988, and Allen promises to "remain committed to the Run-and-Shoot," in 1990.

BU's raw firepower was able to cover for the team's defensive flaws only occasionally last fall, however, and this season should see more of the same.

BU ranked second-to-last in rushing defense last season, and with Robert Talley moving back to the secondary after a successful year at outside linebacker, that ranking may drop. The graduation of the team's leading tackler last season, Pat Faucette, is also a blow.

Linebacking was "an area of concern for us when we entered the spring, and it still remains a concern," said Allen. "We have just one player returning with any experience, and that's [John] Holland. And he missed eight games last season with an injury."

Rhode Island: Sophomore Chris Pierce is a dangerous kickoff return man, and will start at wide receiver for the Rams. Pickoff specialist Kevin Smith is back in his cornerback position. The offensive line from last year returns virtually intact.

These guys have all been around, which would be good news, except that the Rams have won just six games in the last two years with them.

Gone is first team All-Cool Name fixture Gus Duffy, too.

Richmond: Sportwriters packed around Reid, Tom Jackson of the University of Connecticut and Tubby Raymond of the University of Delaware at the Yankee Conference media day in August. Richmond's Jim Marshall spent a long afternoon looking down an empty press table.

Another bad sign.

The Spiders won one football game last season, and a pathetic offensive line was

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, THIS GUY IS IN CLASS.

Excitement and adventure is the course description, and Army ROTC is the name. It's the one college elective that builds your self-confidence, develops your leadership potential and helps you take on the challenges of command.

There's no obligation until your junior year, so there's no reason not to try it out right now.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.

Contact Cpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army ROTC
5-5366 or 5-5365

EL GRECO
Isle of Mykonos
Greek Restaurant
"PUT A LITTLE GREEK IN YOUR LIFE"
Authentic Greek Cuisine
Moussaka Spanakopita
Shish-kebab and much more...
Whole Wheat & White Pizza
So good that people from all over the valley travel 30 to 40 miles for it
Beer & Wine available
256-4196 Take Out
South Amherst, 116 S—2 miles from Amherst College
Mon.-Sat. 11am-10pm Sunday 4-10pm
Reservations 253-9239

UMass football ready to make a run at the top

Minutemen look to put injuries in the past

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Here's what senior tailback Jerome Bledsoe has learned from the last three seasons of University of Massachusetts football:

"We know nothing is going to be a cakewalk because we learned that in 1987 (3-8). In 1988 we learned that working hard will get us there (8-4, Division I-AA playoff appearance.)"

"Last year we learned that injuries and question marks can lead to a disappointing season (5-5-1)."

Now, in his senior year, Bledsoe plans to put his experience to work. "We have mainly a senior set team, and they know what it takes to win," he said. "I don't think any one of us will settle for any less."

'Injuries and question marks' are part of any football preseason, of course. But with the quarterback question relatively settled, and experienced people returning to many of the most important positions on the team, UMass is in good shape to make a strong run at the upper reaches of the Yankee Conference.

Coach Jim Reid isn't the type to make any bold predictions beyond "we have to take things one day at a time, one game at a time. . . ." But he does promise that this year's team, with mobile Gary Wilkos at quarterback and a backfield of Dave Mitchell and Jerome Bledsoe, will stick with the option on offense.

"We are a run blocking team," said Reid. "Last year we tried to be a passing team, and it just didn't work.

"We won the conference championship two of the three years that we were a run-oriented team (1986 and 1988), and that's what we are this year. Hopefully we can have some success."

Reid, who played defense back at Maine and was a longtime defensive coordinater at UMass before being named head coach in 1986, has had to adjust to the trend in college football toward run and gun offensive attacks.

"I like option football," said Reid, "we're going to stay explosive."

Center Jay Gabbe said the option attack is not only fun to watch, but to block for as well.

"You get to do different schemes, to keep the defensive line guessing a little bit," said Gabbe. "You make a block, cut somebody down in the backfield, and you see the quarterback running around, it just feels great. There's a lot of action out there."

The Minutemen averaged 28 points per game in the last seven contests of the year,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 13

Collegian file photo

Senior tailback Jerome Bledsoe will have his eye on leading the Minutemen offense, and staying injury-free, this season.

Wilkos, now top gun for UMass, keeps battling

Sophomore quarterback ready to lead offense

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

It sounds like Gary Wilkos has developed a taste for being the underdog. "I don't have the starting job right now. I have to go in determined and win my position back," said Wilkos at the beginning of fall practice in August.

This from a guy whose picture is on the cover of the media guide and above the words "All-American QB Candidate Gary Wilkos" on the University of Massachusetts football schedule.

As a redshirt freshman last season, Wilkos passed for 1,171 yards and scrambled out of the option for 522 more in seven games. He had his hand in 14 touchdowns, rushing for six and passing for eight.

Collegian file photo

Quarterback Gary Wilkos (18) looks for an open receiver downfield as he eludes a defender. The sophomore signalcaller hopes to improve on a fine first year at the Minutemen helm.

Wilkos was named Yankee Conference Rookie-of-the-Week five times and ECAC Rookie-of-the-Week three times.

Wilkos is the starting quarterback. He insists, however, that his attitude for this season is no different than last, when he came into fall practice listed fifth on the depth chart, and had to battle his way through the ranks into the starting lineup.

"You don't try and do everything different. I don't think anything has changed, you can't really think about it," said Wilkos. "I think I'll be hurting myself if I tried to put a lot of expectations on myself."

Coach Jim Reid said he is pleased — but not surprised — that Wilkos has continued to work hard this fall. There has indeed been some competition in camp, he said, with junior Paul Tornatore in strong shape, and sophomore Tom Fasano throwing well, too.

"[Wilkos] is working very, very hard, and he's not taking anything for granted so far," said Reid. "There's still competition going on, and he's being pushed."

Having the quarterback question settled early, however, makes coach Reid a happy man. Where the transition last season from Roger Baldacci to Wilkos was, in Reid's words, "painful," this fall's scenario is considerably more kind on the coach.

"It feels good. It lends some continuity and consistency to the program and to the offensive 'flow'," said Reid. "Now all I've got to do is keep him healthy."

Last season, Wilkos suffered shoulder, wrist, rib and groin injuries. When asked what his goals for this season are, Wilkos summoned "I want to last a whole game."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

Welcome Back Students!
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Busch Pitchers $3.50
Gin & Tonics $1.50
Woo Woos $2.00
Lunches now served

The Amherst Drop Zone
Army/NavyStore
Now 2 Locations
Downtown Amherst * 256-0039
(Behind Bart's, next to Panda East)
Route 9, Hadley * 585-5800
(Next to McDonald's)
WELCOME BACK AREA SCHOOLS!
For Unique & Unusual Items
The Only Army/Navy Store in the Valley—The Amherst Drop Zone
Open: Mon.-Sat. 10-6
Sundays 12-5
Open evenings 'til 9:30 in Hadley

Photo: Buck Stewart 549-5454
10% Off with this ad
Expires September 31, 1990
Open 7 days a week

Veteran returnees stack UMass water polo team

Freshman contributors look promising

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

When you talk sports at the University of Massachusetts, you talk about basketball, lacrosse, football — rarely do you hear someone speaking about the water polo team.

Yet the Polsters finished the 1989-90 campaign with an impressive 16-13 record, (12 of the losses were to teams ranked in the top 20), a fifth place finish at Easterns, and a national ranking of 20th by the Associated Press. This year, the Polemen look to improve on their finest season ever.

"I've got to be optimistic about this season because we've got everyone except our backup goaltender returning," said head coach Russ Yarworth. "We didn't graduate any starters, and we've also brought in what I think is a promising freshman class with some kids that I think will help us right away."

If the team hopes to go further in 1990, Jon Miller must raise his game to a level which he has not yet reached, said Yarworth. Miller has led the team in scoring in each of the last two seasons. The senior, who transfered from Navy after his freshman year, scored 63 goals and assisted on 27 others last season.

Miller's performance in the water has not gone unnoticed. He was named first team All-New England, and second team All-Eastern.

"He's been our leading defensive player, leading offensive player, team leader as far as being a get-out-and-go guy," Yarworth said. "He has the potential to be one of the toughest players in the East. There are not a lot of teams that can stop him."

If Miller is the Wayne Gretzky of the UMass water polo team, then Brian McIver (40 goals, six assists) is the Jari Kuri, and Alex Yelensky (38 goals and 17 assists) is the Mark Messier of the team.

"Brian [McIver] had a tremendous summer season," Yarworth said. "He came along a lot with his confidence and knowledge of the game."

"If [Yelensky] can make the commitment to physical conditioning, he should be just about the best hole man in the East," he said.

The sleeper on offense for the Polsters could be GT Ladd. Ladd netted 20 goals last season, however his emotions often got the better of him, and prevented him from playing his best, according to Yarworth.

"His commitment has to be to conditioning and becoming a little more emotionally controlled when he plays," Yarworth said. "He has the tools, he's probably the best athlete that we've got on the team, but he has to control the mental side of his game."

The water polo team is deep, rich with scorers. Craig Siegel and Matt Buckley have been role players for their last three years, said Yarworth.

"They are both very good offensive players, but both need to become a little more alert on defense," he said.

Sophomore Scott Reed led all UMass freshman in scoring, netting 21 goals. Reed, too, should provide the Polsters with scoring and sound defense.

Mike Melanson is one of the better defensive players on the team, said Yarworth. He has been a role player for the team, but this could be the year for Melanson to step forward and take on some new responsibilities.

"One guy I would really like to see step forward this year is Jay Peluso," Yarworth said. "He's got the offensive skills but he's a little lost out there defensively."

The hidden strength of the water polo team could be the fact that they have so many players who can play the game and play the game well.

"We'll be able to come at teams in waves, if one group isn't working, I'll be able to make some substitutions," Yarworth said. "I want [the opposition] to feel like there's just more of us coming down the Pike at them all the time."

When you talk about defense, you start with junior goalie Todd Larson. When you talk about stars on the water polo team, you talk about Todd Larson.

"I project him to be one of the top two or three goalies in the East," Yarworth said. "Every team's success relies on defense, and if you've got a guy there in the nets who can block the ball, that's really going to make a big difference." Larson is the anchor of the defense, his strength is the outlet pass, which should make the UMass attack that much stronger.

"I still think that a lot of the players I have respond to situations in the game rather than create the situations," said Yarworth. "There's a big difference there. I've got to get them to that next level of awareness mentally so that they can bring their game level up to that next level."

The water polo team has a world of potential, he said. It is possible that this team could go as far as the NCAA tournament.

"How far we can go is only limited by how far the team wants to go, as far as Eastern water polo goes," Yarworth said. "We'll only be restricted by what sort of mental and physical commitment they want to make and what sort of understanding they develop for the game."

If Yarworth is successful in the mind game, it is scary to think how far this year's team can go.

Collegian file photo

The UMass water polo team had their finest season last year, finishing in the Top 20, and return with all their regulars this fall.

WELCOME BACK!
FROM THE MATHER CAREER CENTER

We're out to meet you this year with two new programs

CAREER PLANNING AND PLACEMENT
FIELD EXPERIENCE PROGRAMS
(Co-op and Internships)

AND

a SATELLITE OFFICE
on the main campus in Curry Hicks

We're so excited, we're throwing a party!

Come visit us and meet employers like Digital, IBM, Clean Water Action Project, AEtna, Biogen and M&M Mars

Career Services Registration, Workshops, Information

September 12, 13 and 14
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Curry Hicks lawn (across from Herter Hall)
(Weather Permitting)

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!

DELANO'S
57 North Pleasant Street
253-5141
Proper Identification a Must

Welcome Back Students

Delano's will continue our policy of "Reverse Budget Cuts"—To help the students, we keep our fees down!

Beer of the Month
Rolling Rock ~~$1.75~~ $1.25

Drink of the Week
Absolut & soda or tonic
~~$3.00~~ $1.75

Check out Delano's Game Room with pool Table

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION
FEATURING
A Variety of Entertainment
10:30 AM-12:30 AM
MONDAY-FRIDAY
8:00 AM-12:30 AM
SATURDAY-SUNDAY
DELI SANDWICHES • PIZZA AND ITALIAN SPECIALTIES • LARGE SELECTION OF WINE AND BEER • SNACKS • QUICK LUNCHEON AND BREAKFAST ITEMS • SALAD BAR • LIVE ENTERTAINMENT • COLOR TELEVISION

TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE
Enjoy the spectacular view from the 11th floor
Free munchies: Monday-Friday 4:00-6:00 pm
Wide variety of alcoholic & non-alcoholic beverages
Mon-Fri: 11:30 am-12:30 am Sat & Sun: 5 pm-12:30 am

WELCOME BACK

Hampden Creamery
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
11:30 AM-11:30 PM
- Ice cream, sundaes, floats
- Candy by the pound
- Penny candy
- Birthday cakes to order
- Ice cream cakes
- Pastries and cookies

ENJOY THE SPECTACULAR VIEW ...
FINE DINING AND FRIENDLY SERVICE
OPEN DURING ACADEMIC YEAR
Lunch: Monday-Friday 11:30 am-2:00 pm
Dinner: Tuesday-Saturday 5:00 pm-8:30 pm
Call 549-6000 ext. 7639 for Reservations
Validated Parking
TOP of the CAMPUS Restaurant
11th FLO... UNIVERSITY C...

The Campus Center
Coffee Shop
On The Concourse
Serving Breakfast and Lunch:
7:00 AM-3:00 PM
Monday-Friday
Closed Weekends

BLUEWALL
Continental Breakfast
Featuring fresh breakfast items including gourmet coffee, fruit and fruit juices and an assortment of homebaked pastry
Monday-Friday: 8:00 am-10:30 am
Cafeteria & Deli
Luncheon choices include cafeteria style meals, deli or pocket sandwiches and the soup & salad bar
Monday-Friday: 11:30 am-1:30 pm
Coffee House
Offering a selection of gourmet coffee, pastry and ice cream
Monday-Thursday: 11:30 am-12:00 mid.
Friday: 11:30am- 6:00 pm
Saturday: Closed - but watch for special events
Sunday: 3:00 pm-12:00 mid.
All located in the Blue Wall on the Concourse Level of the Campus Center

Minutemen soccer boasts strength at midfield

Collegian file photo

Tri-captain Dan Lawrence will lead the charge as the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team jumps into a traditionally tough Atlantic 10 schedule.

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team lost seven seniors to graduation. That fact may scare Minutemen fans, but not head coach Jeff Gettler.

His squad (7-9-2, 1-4 in the Atlantic 10 last fall) is a mixture of talented returnees and promising newcomers.

"If the veterans and the new players can come together and work together as a team, we've got a great shot at making the Atlantic 10 tournament," he said.

UMass looks to be best-equipped at the midfield positions, where two of the Minutemen's strongest players will start while two other returnees compete for the remaining slot.

Junior tri-captain Dan Lawrence leads this talented pack of midfielders. An All-American candidate, Lawrence managed to lead the team in shots-on-goal, points, assists and goals — all in his sophomore year.

"He's a great leader and a really hard player," said Gettler. "We hope to build our midfield around him this year."

Joining him in the midfield will be sophomore Ken Smith, juniors Tom Novajasky and Brett Anthony, and promising freshman Aaron Zandy. Smith and Novajasky will compete for a starting slot.

"[Anthony] is a two-way player who can hold, create, and score, and will probably split between midfield and attack," said Gettler.

"Zandy plays hard, and definitely will see some time," he said of the Endwell, N.Y., player.

Starting midfielder and tri-captain Carl Hanks tore a medial ligament in his knee and won't return until October. Hanks, a senior, has 13 career goals, and is a good two-way player, according to Gettler.

The front line is anchored by junior Ray Cuhna at center. Cuhna scored three game-winning goals last year, and Gettler has big expectations for the junior from Marshfield, this year. "This year he will show he's a quality Division I player," said Gettler. "He's big, a strong player, and a real competitor."

In addition to Anthony (when he's not at midfield), sophomore Kire Trajkowski and freshman Randy Jacobs will step into the fray.

"Jacobs strikes the ball as well as any, and is making the adjustment to the higher level of competition," said Gettler.

The Minutemen lost nearly their entire starting defense from last year, prompting Gettler to move senior tri-captain Peter McEvoy from midfield to sweeper.

"We'll let him run the team from there. He's got all the tools to be a good sweeper," he said.

Other defenders include juniors Darren Stone, Kevin Perna, Matt Bearce and freshman Todd Kylish.

"Stone is one of the best marking backs in New England, one of our quickest and most competitive players," he said. He will probably be assigned the toughest opposing attackers.

Perna and Bearce will compete for a starting spot.

"[Kylish] is good in the air, agressive and good with the ball," said Gettler.

The Minutemen's deepest position may be that of goalkeeper, where sophomore Steve Armenti and junior Jon Gruber are competing for the starting nod. Both goalies posted excellent numbers last year.

Gruber let through a mere 1.52 goals per game in limited time (due to injury), while Armenti posted a school record seven shutouts and held the opposition to a miniscule .98 goals per game.

"This is easily the deepest we've ever been at goal, and these are the two best goalies I've seen since I've been here," said Gettler.

This mixture of raw and experienced talent won't have much time to work out the bugs, however, as four tough home games hover on the horizon to open the season. The Minutemen kick off against improving St. Bonaventure, then face three-time defending Atlantic 10 Champions Penn State, New Hampshire and NCAA Tournament qualifiers, Temple, follow.

"Those first four games could be the whole season," said Gettler. "If we can beat all three of our Atlantic 10 opponents in that stretch, it could be a great statement to the rest of the conference. And making the Atlantic 10 tournament is our main goal."

Also in this year's schedule are traditional foes Vermont and Connecticut, as well as Maine, Drexel and Rider who will be guests at the Massachusetts Challenge Cup on Sept. 29 and 30.

This year, the top four teams in the A-10 will make the tournament, held Nov. 2-4 at Rutgers. Tournament appearances are calculated by points acquired during the regular season. Wins count for three points and ties for one point each.

"We've been fifth twice and sixth once, so we're knocking on the door," said Gettler of his team's tournament chances. "But a lot will depend on how the team becomes a team."

Sports Notice

Teams are forming for the following fall intramural sports: flag football (men, women and co-ed.); soccer (men, women.); co-ed softball and men's lacrosse.

Flag football and soccer entries are due by Sept. 10. Softball and lacrosse entries are due by Sept. 11.

For more information, contact the Intramural Office, 215 Boyden, 545-2693 or 545-0022.

This semester, take some electives in communications.

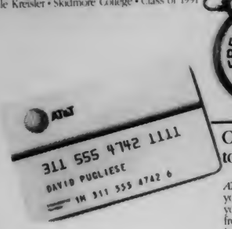
Gabrielle Kreisler • Skidmore College • Class of 1991

Introducing AT&T Student Saver Plus.

If you're an off-campus student, it'll be easier to get through college this year. Because AT&T has put together a program of products and services to save you money.

60 minutes of long distance. For free. Movies. Videos. And more. For less.

Just by choosing any Student Saver Plus program, you'll get up to 60 minutes of free long distance calls. You'll also get a free coupon booklet good for savings all around town.



Call from anywhere to anywhere.

We'll give you a free AT&T Calling Card, even if you don't have a phone. So you'll be able to make a call from almost any phone and have it billed to you, wherever you live.

You don't need to wait till spring to get a break.

With the AT&T Reach Out America Plan*, you'll get savings 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Including 25% off our already low evening prices.

To enroll in the AT&T Student Saver Plus programs that are right for you, or to get the best value in long distance service, call us. They just might be the most profitable electives you'll ever take.

1 800 654-0471 Ext. 1231

AT&T. Helping make college life a little easier.

AT&T The right choice.

*This service may not be available in residence halls on your campus.
Discount applies to out-of-state calls direct dialed 5–10 pm, Sunday–Friday.
© 1990 AT&T

安城中國飯店
Amherst Chinese Food
Homestyle Cooking
Fresh vegetables from our own farm
DO NOT USE MSG
Open 7 days a week
253-2813 253-7835
62 Main Street Amherst

HONDA
Come ride with us.

• Motorcycles • A.T.V.'s
• Scooters • Power Equipment
Sales & Service
584-7303
731-9965
Valley Motorsports
216 N. King St., Rte. 5 Northampton, MA
The 1991 Honda Motorcycles are ready for viewing
Always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing.

Men's harriers are strong and healthy

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

Last year, the University of Massachusetts men's cross country team had a banner year. They won the Eastern Conference meet, finished third in the Atlantic 10 meet, fourth in the New Englands, and 15th in the prestigious IC4A's.

What do you do for an encore? That's the question coach Ken O'Brien and his young charges face this fall.

O'Brien has high expectations for his young team this fall. "We have an outside chance of reaching the NCAA's, but that is an extremely difficult goal," noted O'Brien. "We'd have to hit on all eight cylinders.

"The kids that are coming back have that kind of ability. The kids that are younger have the ability to do that sort of thing in the future. So the time to shoot for it is now."

Of the returning veterans, three are recovering from significant injuries. Senior Tom Degnan had been injured all of last year, but rehabilitated well enough to win the 10,000 meters in the spring New Englands last season. Gerald Squires had suffered leg injuries, and Pat Reed had a sore achilles tendon that limited his season to two meets all of last year. However, O'Brien said that these harriers "... are all on the road back and running again. It's just a question of making up for lost time."

Senior Joe Millete returns from a spectacular junior season to lead UMass. Last fall he went to the NCAA Cross Country Championships.

Of the other returning veterans, seniors Jon Corso and Degnan lead the way. Corso placed fifth at the Eastern Conference meet, eigth in the A-10s, and 12th in the New Englands. He was voted Most Valuble Performer by his teammates for his efforts, and coach O'Brien calls him 'a high level performer...our number one guy." Degnan, in addition to his spring track victories, came in sixth in the A-10's.

Of the younger returning runners, Pat Reed, Pat Ryan, Mike Davis, and Matt Simon stand out as promising runners for this season, said O'Brien. Reed finished second at the Massachusetts state meet his senior year of high school, and had two top seven finishes when his injury struck.

Ryan, meanwhile, finished in the top five of every varsity meet, while Simon and Davis both finished in the top seven consistantly. Of his younger star runners, coach O'Brien said that they were a "very talented group of kids with great attitudes."

As for this year's corps of freshmen, Kevin Greenhalgh, Craig Cormier, and Matt Wilson all enter the fold with impressive accomplishments. Greenhalgh finished in the top ten of his state meet. Wilson finished second in his prep school league meet, and Cormier finished 4th in the Massachusetts state meet.

Summing up the outlook for this year, O'Brien noted that "I don't think we have to get off to a fast start - the young guys need to mature, the veterans need to come back. The last three weeks would be the ones that would loom big on our schedule."

He also added that should the Minutemen not reach thier goal of the NCAA's, "we'd be satisfied with a top 20 finish."

■ football preview

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9

as Wilkos brought the option with him into the starting lineup against Rhode Island, on the fourth week of the season.

When healthy, Wilkos is a sparkplug. In the seven games he started last season, however, Wilkos suffered injuries to his rib cage, wrist, groin, and the shoulder of his passing arm.

Like Wilkos, two other key people in the UMass offense return after having their season's derailed somewhat last fall by injuries.

Bledsoe made the transition from defensive back to tailback last September and led the team in rushing, gaining 594 yards, despite missing almost five games because of thigh and knee problems. Bledsoe is a competitor and a tremendous athelete - he is a standout track performer in the spring - tailor made for running the option.

"Jerome Bledsoe hopefully can gain 1000 yards or better, if he's healthy," said Reid. But while Bledsoe's aggresiveness is a football coach's dream, the injuries it can lead to are a nightmare. "Jerome picks an off-colored jersey and tries to knock it down," Reid said. "That doesn't lend itself to injury-free football."

Reid said he hopes the option will help Bledsoe stay healthy this year. Unlike a traditional running game in which the tailbacks are sent pounding into the line, with the option, "you can get away with some hits," said Reid.

Bledsoe will be joined in the backfield by senior fullback David Mitchell, who missed most of five games last season with ankle and thigh injuries. Mitchell rushed for 344 yards, third highest on the team, in six full games last year.

Injuries have already punched a couple of holes in the offensive line this fall. Guard Phil Hallard re-injured his knee during fall drills, and appears lost for the season. Senior guard Paul Mayberry will play on a chronically sore knees.

And center Al Pogarian's broken and dislocated ankle, suffered in the eighth game of the season last fall, still is not fully recovered. Reid said he hopes to have Pogarian back by the third game of this season.

Reid said Pogarian may struggle to regain a starting spot, however, as Gabbe and juniors Rich Cavanaugh and Paul Connor have done well filling in. Gabbe, a fifth-year senior, stepped into Pogarian's spot at the end of last year, and will snap the ball to start this season as well.

The graduation of UMass's all-time leading receiver, Chip Mitchell, leaves a void in the passing attack that Mike Tobin, Ron Blauvelt and Lamar Newsome will attempt to fill. Tobin caught 30 passes last season, and Blauvelt 26.

Injuries and question marks creep into the picture to a greater degree with the defense.

Linebacker Chris Tenkin is out for the year following shoulder surgery, and tackle Steve Brothers is a questionable commodity while on his way back from a similar problem, prompting Reid to shuffle some old faces and introduce some new ones.

Junior Matt Tulley, who rang up 80 tackles and 9 sacks from the outside linebacker spot last year and earned first team All-Yankee Conference honors, will be moved to inside linebacker.

That leaves sophomore Mario Perry to anchor the outside linebacker postition, a task he very capable of, said Reid. Perry may not sneak up on people now as he did last season, when, as an 18-year old freshman, he stepped into the starting lineup and delivered 50 tackles and six sacks, while leading the team in fumbles caused (4) and recovered (3).

But he will not wither under the spotlight, either, he said.

"My senior year in high school, I was exposed to a lot of publicity," said the Albany, N.Y. native. "The hype here won't touch me, performance-wise."

"He's a guy whom we're counting on to break us out of the pack," said Reid. Sophomore Allen Gibson may start in the other outside linebacker positon, while classmate Bobby Burke joins Tulley to give the Minutemen a standout inside linebacker tandem.

Pat Doran, Vaughn Williams and Don Caparotti return to their starting spots in the secondary, where they may be joined by converted tailback Allen Williams.

With Brothers, junior Rich Kane, and sophomore John Creamer, the defensive line has some people who have played, but not together. Junior Jim Mancaruso transferred to UMass from Georgia Tech and appears to have a lock on the starting job at nose tackle. Kane, who notched 59 tackles four sacks last year, will start on the line as well.

From there, Creamer, Mark Pompi, Cesar Tejeda and converted tight end Bill Durkin will vie for the final starting spot and playing time, depending on Brothers's health.

On special teams, Bledsoe and Lamar Newsome will handle punt and kickoff returns, while Marco Gabrielli returns as both punter and placekicker.

Reid has said often this fall that there is no letup in the UMass schedule. Following the season opener Saturday at Holy Cross, currently the second ranked team in Division 1-AA, the Minutemen host Maine and Boston University on consecutive weekends at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

UMass will face two teams that are on the ebb in the Yankee Conference, Richmond and Rhode Island, on the road. The traditional season-ending pyrotechnic display against New Hampshire is in Durham this fall, as well.

Connecticut, picked in the preseason to win the Yankee conference, will be UMass's homecoming opponent October 13th.

THE 1990 KAISER PERMANENTE COLLEGE TOWNE CLASSIC
8 KILOMETER ROAD RACE
SUNDAY, SEPT. 9, 1990
9:30 A.M.

- Registration starts 8 AM, 8k at 9:30 AM, multi-distance kids' fun run at 10:30 AM
- TAC Certified, NEAC Sanctioned, 8k (approx. 5 miles) course, fast and flat
- Registration at Borden Gym, University of Massachusetts, Amherst
- Follow UMass signs from Route 9, Amherst

- Merchandise prizes, gift certificates, trophies to overall 5 year age division winners
- $100 to winning team of 5 in Men's Open and Masters
- $100 to winning team of 3 in Women's Open and Masters, Men's Seniors (50 & over)
- Pub Seasons' Restaurant Corporate Bowl for 2 person mixed corporate team (Corporate team members can also be on club teams)
- Refreshments, showers and locker rooms
- T-shirts to the first 200 8k registrants
- Free fun run for children ages 1 to 12 with ribbons to all finishers

- Mail form to CTC, SMAC, Box 659, Amherst, MA 01004
- Entree fee $7 postmarked by Aug. 30, $9 afterwards
- Checks payable to Sugarloaf Mountain A.C.
- For information, call Race Director Margot Parrot 413-256-0356

CTC, SMAC, Box 659, Amherst, MA 01004 Please print Amount enclosed $_____

NAME _____ PHONE _____ AGE (as of 9/9/90) _____

ADDRESS _____ T-SHIRT SIZE (S, M, L, XL) _____ SEX _____

TOWN/ZIP _____ CLUB/TEAM _____

I realize that running is an activity and hazardous sport, in signing this entry, I, for myself, my heirs, executors, and administrators, waive any and all claims for personal damages, injuries or death resulting from this race I may have against anyone sponsoring, sanctioning or managing this race. Parent or guardian must sign if under 18.

Signed _____ Date _____

The TAC requires us to make this statement:
"Athletes who participate in this competition may be subject to formal drug testing in accordance with TAC rules and IAAF rule 144. Athletes found positive for banned substances, or who refuse to be tested, will be disqualified from this event and will lose eligibility for future competitions. Some prescription and over-the-counter medications contain banned substances. Information regarding drugs and drug testing may be obtained by calling the USOC Hot Line at 800-233-0393."

D.P. DOUGH DELIVERS CALZONES

Q. What are calzones? A. Pizza Turnovers!

1 CHEESE
(mozzarella and ricotta cheese)
2 VEGIE
(broccoli, mushrooms, mozzarella and ricotta)
3 SAUSAGE
(sausage and mozzarella)
4 RONI
(pepperoni, mozarella and ricotta)
5 "OH!" ZONE
(steak and cheese)
6 SPINNER
(spinach, mozzarella and ricotta)
7 SOUTHERN CAL. ZONE
(hamburg and cheese with mexican dressing)
8 HAMZONE (Pig Out)
(bacon, ham and mozzarella cheese)
9 "CHICKEN PARME ZONE
(breaded chicken w/ mozzarella and parmesan)
10 COMBO
(pepperoni, sausage, peppers, mushrooms&moz.)
11 EGGPLANT
(breaded eggplant, garlic and mozzarella)
12 MEATY
(meatballs, onions and mozzarella)

One Calzone delivered $3.81
Two Calzones delivered $7.20
Each additional Calzone $3.60
(.05 Mass. Sales Tax)

DOUGH HOTLINE 256-1616 DOUGH HOTLINE

Delivery Hours
Mon-Fri 4-2:00am
Saturday 11:30-2:00am
Sunday 11:30-1:00am

Track finishes:

Ambrose, Johnson race in Jr. Olympic events

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

Two runners from the University of Massachusetts women's track team were invited, along with their head coach Julie LaFreniere, to the US Olympic Junior Elite Camp in Colorado Springs, the official training center for Olympians.

The TAC, which is the governing body of track and field events, was chosen by the Olympic Development Committee to organize the women's sessions.

In July, Becky Johnson and LaFreniere went to Colorado to partake in clinics and field sessions for six days. Johnson was in the mid-distance to distance group and competed among other 'juniors' [14 to 19 year olds]. She trained in the 800-meter for which she had qualified for the nationals in the spring season.

The camps, divided by events, meant a return trip to Colorado Springs for LaFreniere as she escorted 400-meter qualifier LeeAnn Ambrose to the sprint camp. Ambrose competed in the 'intermediate' group, comprising of 20 and 21 year olds. It was determined she has olympic potential in the 800-meter also.

Organizing clinicians for the sprint camp included Bert Lyle and Tony Veneey, the women's coach for the University of California - Northridge. Lyle has coached olympians such as Florence Griffith Joyner, Evelyn Ashford and Louise Ritter.

Tom Henowin and Lance Harter, just recently moving from Cal Poly Tech, rounded up the distance camp. Henowin coaches the women's team at Oregon, while Harter is now at Arkansas. Another clinician-speaker was Terry Crawford, herself a cross country champion. This former Olympic coach ('88), now heads up the Lady Longhorns at Texas. Esorting an athlete from Seattle Pacific was Doris Brown Heritage who is a 800-meter World Class Champion five times over.

According to LaFreniere, the competition was intense and the schedule was rigorous. About seven hours were spent in the classroom, complete with films and analysis, in addition to five hours on the field, comprising of tests and evaluations. Although, for this particular camp, the athlete's coaches' presence was 'mandatory,' LaFreniere said she learned her athletes' strengths and weaknesses as well as enjoyed herself.

UMass hurler in pro ranks

Braves sign Creamer

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

When last we saw Jerry Creamer, he was throwing his 90 mph fastball by opposing Atlantic 10 hitters. In June, the former University of Massachusetts student was drafted by the Atlanta Braves.

Creamer finished the 1990 season at UMass with a 4-1 record and a 4.19 ERA. He was the closer out of the bullpen, saving four games, striking out 32 and walking 21 for UMass coach Mike Stone's Minutemen.

The South Paw from Worcester had been cruising along all season, with an ERA of just over 2.00, until he injured his elbow. When Creamer did return just in time for the Atlantic 10 playoffs, he was banged around by Rutgers.

After being drafted, Creamer signed a one-year contract. details of the contract were undisclosed, and Creamer was unavailable for comment.

He was assigned to Idaho where he played one game for Idaho Falls in the Pioneer League. He pitched one scoreless inning and was immediately transfered to Bradenton, Fla.

Today, Creamer is pitching for the Bradenton Braves in the Gulf Coast League. At press time, Bradenton was one half game out of first place. Unfortunately, Creamer has recently reinjured his elbow. After being examined, doctors determined that Creamer is suffering from a bone spur in his pitching elbow. His services have been lost for the remainder of the season. He will be re-examined at the end of the season and will most likely undergo elbow surgery.

"He's laid up with a bad arm," said Bradenton coach Jim Procopo. "When he was pitching, he didn't look too bad. It's too bad that he hasn't had much of an opportunity to pitch."

Creamer was 1-1, with a 3.86 ERA at Bradenton. In 14 innings of work, Creamer had allowed 14 hits, struckout 12 and walked six.

He appeared in six games, five as a reliever and one as a starter.

Creamer will most likely get a try out in Palm Beach next year during spring training. He stands a chance of moving up to Single-A ball next year, said Procopo.

Athletes get A-10 Academic honors, awards

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 Conference announced the University of Massachusetts placed two student-athletes on its Academic All-Conference teams at the end of the 1989-90 academic school calandar. Six UMass students made honorable mention. Two men's soccer players, two field hockey players and two baseball players made either honorable mention or the team.

Mike Tobin, a senior from Concord, maintained a 3.62 GPA as a history major during the baseball season. As a walk-on, Tobin played all 46 games, starting 44 as centerfielder. He batted .302 with a team-leading 52 hits, including five doubles, three triples and six homeruns. Tobin also collected 25 RBI, scored 37 runs and stole 17 bases in 19 attempts. He was also named to the GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-American third team.

Tobin has maintained a starting spot as a flanker for the football team as a walk-on. He is the leading returning receiver, last year catching 30 passes for 575 yards and six touchdowns. Tobin was named GTE Academic All-Region and was also selected to the Yankee Conference All-Academic football team.

Graduate Kathleen Derwin, from Johnstown, NY, was a three-year letterwinner of the field hockey team. She held a 3.82 GPA as a mechanical engineering major and starting sweeper. Derwin and the UMass team competed in the NCAA Field Hockey Tournament, rounding up a 15-6-2 season. She was voted the teaams Most Valuable Player, contributing one goal and one assist. Derwin was also nominated to the Field Hockey Coaches' Association Academic All-American team.

Honorable mentions include four UMass men and two UMass women:

Ray Cunha	Marketing	3.30	Soccer
Scott Meaney	Sports Mgt.	3.50	Baseball
Tommy Pace	Sports Mgt.	3.29	Basketball
Julieta Santiago	Exercise Sci.	3.22	Volleyball
Tom Skiba	Finance	3.49	Soccer
Liz Thornton	Finance	3.34	Field Hockey

Selected by the conference's Sports Information Directors, the teams were chosen from 146 student-athletes who received academic recognition by the A-10. Representative of the A-10's sponsored sports, all candidates were either a starter or important reserve, with a cumulative 3.2 grade point average (on a 4.0 scale) for the entire academic year.

FULL LINE OF BILLIARD & GAMEROOM SUPPLIES

BROWN'S BILLIARDS

Mt. Farms Mall, Route 9, Hadley MA 01035

Brown's Billiards is the largest pool room in Western Massachusetts with 21 tables and an antique Brunswick Billiard Table. A CD Juke Box will also be installed for this season.

Lessons will be given by Mr. Brown on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning October 1. Leagues will also be forming at that time. Brown's gives professional pool exhibitions throughout the year.

Brown's carries a full line of equipment and pool cues for sale by such names as McDermott, Viking and Willie Misconi as well as numerous others. We sell and service pool tables. Franchising opportunities are available.

Pool Hall Hours:
Sunday thru Thursday; 11 am to midnight
Friday & Saturday; 11am to 1am

Rates:
$3.00 per hour per person

STUDENTS: 10 percent discount with I.D.

WOMEN'S SPECIAL: Play for HALF PRICE on Wednesdays.

Brown's can be reserved for parties and large groups.

WEIGHTLIFTING

FREE WEIGHTS•NAUTILUS•EXERCISE BIKES•CLIMBERS

The GYM at mountain farms mall

Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS

Burger King Broiler—Medium French Fries
—Medium Soft Drink—

Please present this coupon before ordering. Limit one coupon per customer. Not to be used with other coupons or offers. Expires 9-16-90. Good only at Hadley and Northampton. Void where prohibited.

Only $4.69

BURGER KING

SOMETIMES YOU'VE GOTTA BREAK THE RULES.

Oarsmen row Nationals

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

During the spring and fall seasons of the University of Massachusetts crew team, individuals go through national team testing as regulated by the team's coach.

Currently at the National Team Selection camp in Lowell, is graduate Stu Stokes, who competed in the East heavyweight eight this summer, taking the silver. The West won the gold and the South took the bronze at the Olympic Festival in Minneapolis/St. Paul.

Another competing UMass grad was Matt Collins, who's lightweight four without grabbed the gold for the North. The silver went to the West and the bronze to the South.

Also rowing the lightweight four without at the Olympic Fest was Rich Scannell, who's boat came in fourth. His fellow boatmen included oarsmen from Rhode Island, Virginia and Columbia.

Both he and Chris Morino, UMass seniors, were chosen by the US Rowing Committee to participate in the National Development camp in New London, CT, at the Coast Guard Academy. Scannell made the first straight four boat, which went on to compete in Minnesota. Morino made the second cox four.

Coast Guard Coach Sean Sedak hosted and coached the all boats: first straight four, second cox four, first regular eight (consisting of the first straight and second cox fours), and second regular eight (consisting of the second cox four and four other regular eight rowers).

According to Scannell, the camp taught style of the national team level with national coaches.

"All participants were of such a high caliber," said Morino of the competition.

Competing and sharing a boat with strangers, however, was a little different than expected.

"It helped that everyone was on the same wavelength. The atmosphere was friendly," said Scannell. "It was a long, hard summer. I learned a lot, and it was definitely worth it."

"It was a great learning experience," said Morino. "You learned to develop confidence in the people in your boat."

The crew teams begin their season with the Textile River Regatta on Sept. 30 in which 20 to 25 boats will be racing.

UMass basketball stars spend summer overseas

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Jim McCoy and Tony Barbee played for coach John Calipari on the Atlantic 10 Conference All-Star team during a nine-day tournament in Taipei, Taiwan in June.

McCoy averaged 15.9 points in seven games played, and was named to the All-Tournament team at week's end. Barbee averaged 10 points and 4.5 rebounds in six games in which he appeared.

Calipari, with St. Joeseph's coach John Griffin, assembled some of the conference's top performers for the tournament, officially titled the William Jones Cup International Basketball Tournament. The A-10 All-Stars finished 5-2 against the national teams from Finland, China, Korea, Poland, Mexico and Japan, and an All-Star team from Greece.

Both McCoy and Barbee started for the A-10 All-Stars, and learned from facing international competition, said Calipari.

"I think [McCoy] learned some things about physical play.

They're men over there," said Calipari. "I think it was good for him to understand that if he wants to go to the next level, to go overseas or to the NBA, that's the way the game is played."

Of Barbee, Calipari said, "I want Tony to feel like he's one of the best players in the league, and he went over there and performed that way."

Duquesne's Clayton Adams, Rutgers' Keith Hughes and Penn State's Freddie Barnes, among others, also played for the A-10 All-Stars.

In other summer action, McCoy worked out for a week at the Boston Celtics rookie camp, and made a good impression, said Calipari.

"They were real happy with him and thought he did really well," he said.

Harper Williams played in Spain with a team of New England All-Stars, and Kennard Robinson also played on an All-Star team in Italy.

■ women's soccer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

State Select team for Massachusetts.

Both Diana Reilly and Bri Scurry were recognized through recommendations and outstanding individual performances, according to Rudy.

"Part of the biggest challenge as a freshman is to step up and face the collegiate challenge," he said. "Our returnees aren't outshining anyone, the freshmen look great."

According to Rudy, there doesn't seem to be a single weak link in the strong chain of women athletes.

"The whole team is looking really deep and really good potential-wise," he said. "There will be goals by [Sue] Gaudette, [April] Kater and [Kim] Eynard, but they're the supporting cast for those that do other things, and do them well."

The difference between a good team and a great team is injuries and team chemistry, Rudy said. Team chemistry includes variables -- how well does she sit on the bench? Can she still perform well if she sits?

This seems to be the least of Rudy's worries.

Injuries? Well, that's another story.

"I'm running scared right now," said Rudy. "However, our recovery time is very good. This team is strong and has very good health habits. If anyone has chances of bouncing back, it's our people."

Aside from broken ankles, bruised hips and lacerated livers, 15 players from last year's squad will be returning, having lost only four, three to graduation.

Among those returning are seniors Becky Bonzano, Kim Montgomery, Robin Runstein, Margie Jaede; juniors Michele Woodside and Tracy Arwood; sophomores Skye Eddy, Holly Hellmuth, Carrie Koeper, Jen Leahy, Alison Hardin, and Carrie Koeper.

The Reds' schedule reflects academic sensibility and a training rhythm. The majority of the games are on Saturdays and Sundays, with only four games during the week in the entire season.

Rudy said he tried to set up competitions with other teams that were working in a similar fashion so that Saturdays would be strength days of competition and Sundays would be endurance days. Training could then be thought of as peaks and valleys of performance: Monday, off; Tuesday/Thursday, hard practice; Wednesday/Friday, drills and techinque.

Road games are another worry-free zone for Rudy.

"We have one of the better road records in the country," said Rudy. "The only thing I'm worried about is the current shape of Upper Boyden field."

Ah yes, the mystique of Upper Boyden, the Hill, Garber Field, whichever the name, may be bogged down in the mud. Rudy said he hopes things dry up and heal before the first home game against Vermont. A weekend of soccer on the Hill follows with the UMass Classic in which Cal Berkley, William & Mary and Boston College compete.

The Reds open their season against Rutgers at 1 p.m. Sept. 8 in Piscattaway, NJ.

R+P PACKAGE STORE
"the friendly store..."
We Have Megabucks and Mass Millions
West St, Rte 116 South Amherst
253-9742

Full Service Package Store

Large selection of imported and domestic beers
Kegs Wine

Minutes from Amherst center
West St., Rt. 116 South Amherst

Near Brittany Manor
Mon.-Sat.
10am-11pm

While current stock lasts, Hurry, they'll go fast!

Tech 1260 12MHZ-286 IBM compatable includes

- Microprocessor—12 MHZ 286 Intell
- Coprocessor supported
- Clock Speed 12/8 MHZ ZERO wait state
- 1 Megabite of ram
- 101 keyboard
- Monochrome Monitor
- 2 Serial/ 1 Parallel ports
- MGA Graphics
- Slim Line Case
- FCC Class B certified

Student Booster Sale
$799.95
Complete

Word Perfect Version 5.1 $135.00
20 Meg Hard Drive System Only $999.95
40 Meg Hard Drive System Only $1149.95

DA. SOFTWARE INC.
SOFTWARE • COMPUTERS • ACCESSORIES
POTPOURRI SHOPPING MALL
241 KING STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
TEL. (413) 586-3210

Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
- 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
- 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts (2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
- 4 Racquetball Courts
- Nautilus & Cardiovascular Fitness Center
- Aerobics

CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte. 116, Sunderland
(Opposite Bub's BBQ. on Bus Route)
Open 7 Days•7:00am-11.00pm
Cut and present coupon before Sept. 30 and pay only $99 for a 3 month Nautilus membership

3 Months for $99

CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC

Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA 01059 (413) 549-4545 C

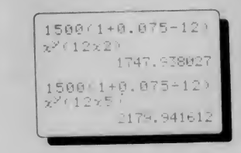
MORE POWER TO YOU!

Casio's fx-7000G Graphic Calculator gives math students a calculated advantage!

Casio's fx-7000G Graphic Calculator has the power to expand your mathematical capabilities. Its ability to solve problems numerically as well as graphically means you get the big picture fast. Packed with hundreds of features and functions, the fx-7000G is supported by college texts written especially for use with graphic calculators. And because the fx-7000G makes learning easier than ever before, many professors are now designing their courses around these powerful calculators.

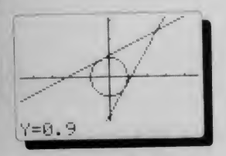
The power to perform advanced calculations.

Over 193 built-in functions are available with the fx-7000G—including trigonometric, hyperbolic, logarithmic and exponential to name a few. These capabilities allow you to tackle subjects like math, statistics, science and physics with speed and accuracy. And if there's any question about the results, there's an instant replay button that allows you to re-examine your problems immediately.



The power to plot your curves.

The fx-7000G's large, 16 character x 8 line, alphanumeric display means complex calculations and solutions can be viewed exactly as you would have written them on paper or read them from a text. Detailed graphs can be plotted out at the touch of a few buttons. And there's even an overwrite feature that allows multiple functions to be graphed together so graphic solutions can be analyzed for comparison.



To find out more about how Casio's powerful fx-7000G Graphic Calculator can make your life easier, visit a store near you and get the facts now!

CASIO®
Where Miracles Never Cease
Casio Inc. Calculator Products Division 570 Mt. Pleasant Avenue, Dover, NJ 07801

UPC entertains UMasses

By JODY GABIN
Collegian Staff

For those looking for an alternative way to fill you're free time, there are plenty of Resident Student Organizations (RSOs) to join. One such organization is the Union Program Council, or UPC.

Formed during the late 1970s, UPC's job is to bring concerts to campus. Funded by student fees (that's where a portion of that extra fee on your bill is going), UPC's goal is to provide a diverse selection of entertainment to the UMass community.

Providing entertainment at an affordable price to students is one of UPC's main priorities.

"We try to bring something for everyone, so that each person will want to see at least one show," said Jodi Avery, UPC talent coordinator. "We make every attempt to keep the shows as affordable as possible. We're not out to make a profit. Our goal is to provide on-campus entertainment to students."

UPC relies on the students involved to put each production together. There is a paid executive staff of 12 students, but those that make up the General Committee [approximately 100 students] are who keep the organization going.

"An important point to keep in mind about UPC," Avery explained, "is that the organization is entirely student-run and depends on the help and interest of the students to keep it going. The most important part of UPC is the General Committee — without them, we couldn't do anything."

Becoming a part of UPC is easy, and open to everyone. Meetings are held Tuesday evenings at 6:30 p.m.

"People are encouraged to join at any point," Avery said. "A lot of people have the misconception that if you miss the first meeting you won't be able to become involved until the following semester.

"We like members to come up to the office [located on the fourth floor of the Student Union] and hang out," she continued. "I want people to give me suggestions. Although we often book out-of-the-mainstream, up-and-coming performers, my personal tastes won't completely influence bookings."

After attending three consecutive meetings, you become a voting member. This entitles you to run for one of the staff positions at the end of the year, such as Security Coordinator, Production Manager or Talent Coordinator, or apply for one of the hired positions such as Promotions Director, Business Manager, or Hospitality Coordinator.

"I worked in every area before running for this job," Avery explained. "There are no limitations. You're welcome to do, say, security for one show and hospitality for the next."

For those interested in music and the music business, becoming involved with UPC is a good way to see just what goes on behind the scenes of a concert.

"When you're involved with UPC, you're on the front lines," Avery said. "You're the one who's doing it."

UMass theater, dance rev up for the autumn

The following is a partial list of events being sponsored by the UMass Department of Music and Dance this fall:

SEPTEMBER:

Tuesday, 18: Lecture/Demonstration: Dorothea Brinkmann, soprano with Dorothy Ornest, piano. "Ornamenting Schubert Songs?" Bezanson Recital Hall, 11:15 a.m. Free.

Tuesday, 18: Faculty Recital: Laura Klock, horn and Nadine Shank, piano; with Jon Humphrey, tenor and Sharon Hayes, soprano. "Songs and Dances" featuring works by Benjamin Britten, Frederick Tillis and Salvatore Macchia. Benzanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Free.

Tuesday, 25: New England Camerata: Veronica Kadlubkiewicz, Peggy James, violin; Barbara Wright, viola; Harry Clark, cello; with guest artists Michael Sussman, clarinet; Andrew Cordie, bassoon; Laura Klock, horn and Salvatore Macchia, doublebass. Octets by Schubert and Gunther Schuller. Benzanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Thursday, 27: Faculty Recital: David Sporny, trombone. Benzanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Free.

OCTOBER:

Tuesday, 2: Faculty Recital: Nigel Coxe, piano. "Basically Ballades" featuring works by Grieg, Chopin, Stern, Mozart and Gerswin. Benzanson Recital Hall. 8 p.m. Free.

Friday, 12: 16th Annual Multiband Pops: Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Thursday, 18: Jazz Ensemble I/Chapel Jazz Ensemble: Jeff Holmes and David Sporny, Directors. Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Saturday, 20: Male Honor Choir and Vocal Seminar: E. Wayne Abercrombie, Director. 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Workshop for students and teachers. Benzanson Recital Hall, $12 Tuesday, 23: Faculty Recital: Charles Treger, violin and Nadine Shank, piano. Benzanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Free.

Friday, 26: Five College Orchestra: Dennis Burkh, Director. Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College, 8 p.m. Free.

Sunday, 28: Massachusetts Chamber Players: Charles Treger, violin; Phillip Naegele, viola; Leopold Terapulsky, cello; Estela Olevsky, piano; wiht guest artist Laura Klock, horn. Program to include Brahms Horn Trio and Shostakovitch Piano Trio. Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Wednesday, 31: Master Class for Singers: Judith Kellock, Soprano. Benzanson Recital Hall, 2:30 p.m. Free.

The following is a schedule of times for Wind Auditions for the Five College Symphony Orchestra. Auditions take place Sept. 9 at Benzanson Recital Hall:

10 a.m.: Flutes
11:15 a.m.: Oboes
12 p.m.: Bassoons
1:30 p.m.: Clarinets
2:30 p.m.: French Horns
3:30 p.m.: Trumpets
4:15 p.m.: Trombones and Tubas
5 p.m.-5:30 p.m.: Any players not able to make the above times; by appointment only with Professor Burkh. 532-0908.

THE COLLEGIAN 545-3500

The UMass Arts Council

Founded in 1966, the Arts Council fosters excellence and scope in the arts on campus. The Arts Council's activities include:

FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR THE ARTS
Through two grant-giving categories, the Arts Council awards grants to RSOs and other UMass groups that present arts events and programs.

FIRST GRANT DEADLINE: Sept. 28. Application forms available at the Arts Council and Student Activities Office.

ARTS INFORMATION
The Arts Council publishes the bi-weekly Arts Calendar, a listing of arts activities on the Five College campuses. The calendar is available at galleries, box offices, and information centers at all five colleges.

ARTS MANAGEMENT TRAINING
The Arts Council supports arts management courses and internships for UMass students through a program offered by the Arts Extension Service, 545-2360. Grantwriting workshops, led by the Arts Council's Program Director, will be held on Sept. 26 and Oct. 9. Free; registration required. For further info contact the Arts Council.

PUBLIC ART
The Arts Council is actively involved in expanding the public art collection at UMass. The Sculpture Courtyard at the University Library is an exhibition space for Art Dept. faculty, staff and students. Most recently, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts, a design for an outdoor space was completed by internationally renowned artist Nancy Holt and the distinguished landscape architecture and design firm, Walker Kluesing Design Group. A memorial to UMass' first sitting president, William Smith Clark, was designed by UMass alumnus Todd Richardson (M.L.A. '87). It will be located at the top of Clark Hill Road and is under construction now. AN OPEN FORUM ABOUT THE PROJECT WILL BE HELD SEPT. 17 FROM 7-8 PM, CC 903. This past year students in the Art and Landscape Architecture departments participated in a competition to design a commemorative garden to Helen Curtis Cole, the University's first and only Dean of Women.

The Civility Mural, located outside the eastern entrance to the Campus Center, was designed and completed by graduate art student Jonathan Kohrman in the summer of 1989.

The Arts Council is funded primarily by a portion of the Arts Fee. The Council includes undergraduate and graduate students, alumni, faculty, and professional staff representatives who are appointed each April for the following academic year by representative senates.

For more information, contact the UMass Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, 545-0202.

Pinocchio's Ristorante Italiano
177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 549-3669
Free Delivery

Menu includes:
-Pizza
-Subs
-Dinners (lasagna,egg-veal-chicken parmigana, and manicotti)
-And new item - Calzoni!

Hours:
Monday-Thursday 4pm-2am
Friday-Saturday 4pm-3am
Sunday 4pm-1am

FREE
Liter of soda–your choice with order of any large pizza
One coupon per pizza–Expires Jan. 31, 1991

FREE TOPPING
on any medium pizza
One coupon per order–Expires Jan. 31,1991

$1.50 OFF
any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
One coupon per order–Expires Jan.31, 1991

'Bright Moments' shines despite lack of funding

By BILL ROSENBLATT
Collegian Staff

One of the very few worthwhile things about the Valley in the summer is the annual Bright Moments festival, held on Thursday evenings in July. Like just about everything else at UMass, Bright Moments has felt the effects of the current budget crisis: a fixed ticket price has replaced the voluntary donation, and there are three evenings of music instead of four. Although the programmatic aspects of the festival have settled down into a formulaic groove, the quality of the music has remained high.

The first Bright Moments concert was held in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall because of rain; as in previous years, it was a night of Latin music. The opening act was Orquesta Chevere, a salsa outfit from Springfield. They have improved considerably since I last saw them two years ago, and they delivered more than an hour of energetic danceable music.

The main attraction for the evening was Jerry Gonzalez' Fort Apache Band, an ostensible "Latin-jazz" sextet whose nickname derives not from Native Americans but from the New York City police's nickname for the South Bronx precinct. Their two-hour set was incredible — the artistic highlight of the entire festival.

Orquestra Chevere's pure salsa sounds did little to prepare the audience for the Fort Apache Band's stunning synergy of Afro-Western musical heritages. Theirs is not so much a "fusion" of Latin and African-American musics as it is a redefinition of the scope of the traditions they represent. The common roots of these musics were first explored by Dizzy Gillespie in the 1940s, along with Cubans Chano Pozo and Mario Bauza.

Gonzalez and the Fort Apache Band take the Afro-Latin connection to another level. Their rationale seems to be that Afro-Latin rhythms are inherent in the jazz tradition, so there is no need to "fuse" them. The rhythms, provided by leader Jerry Gonzalez' congas and Steve Berrios' assorted percussion, propelled the band through a number of thoroughly modern tunes, including several drastically rearranged Thelonious Monk compositions. Gonzalez' fluid, cracking lines and tender ballad work on harmon-muted trumpet highlighted the band's solo offerings, along with Larry Willis' confident piano playing and Joe Ford's Wayne Shorter-influenced soprano sax attack.

The second Bright Moments concert met with better weather, so it was held in the traditional Campus Pond Lawn location. It was the Jazz All-Stars concert, the event around which Bright Moments was originally built.

The "Jazz in July Express," a group of students from the Jazz in July workshop, began the evening. The highlight of their set was a spirited reading of Gillespie's "Night in Tunisia," featuring Mekea Keith's Ella Fitzgerald-influenced vocals on lyrics that amounted to an inspiring mini-sermon on jazz history. The lowlight was another vocal number, a self-consciously "arty" piece by vocalist Theo Blackman.

The rest of the evening was taken up by performances by the Jazz in July faculty — the Jazz All-Stars — in various combinations. They jammed on various standards, the Billy Taylor's fine compositions, and drummer Max Roach performed a solo set. In short, this was the same as in previous years. The fun, relaxed atmosphere of most of these performances reflected the overall character of the festival — it is always especially gratifying to see Dr. Fred Tillis get up there and blow on tenor sax — but to those who had seen this in previous years, it was repetitious.

Two things about this concert were particularly troublesome. First and foremost was Max Roach's solo drum performance. Yes, Max is a living legend, the man who practically invented modern drumming, and at age 65 his ability and stamina show no signs of flagging. However, many of us had seen him play exactly the same set half-a-dozen times already, and we could practically recite verbatim the story about Papa Jo Jones that he always tells when introducing his astounding hi-hat cymbal solo. Second was the faculty members' reading of "Night in Tunisia;" a couple of the musicians clearly hadn't learned drummer Bobby Thomas' stop-time arrangement well.

These two pieces of evidence lead one to the unfortunate conclusion that these seasoned professionals didn't give their Bright Moments performances as much consideration as they might have. It's not a question of "getting one's money's worth" — even at $5 the concert are still a great bargain — but merely a question of the artists' respect for the festival and its audience. Max Roach in particular should be called to task for repetition instead of the innovation for which he is justly known.

The final Bright Moments concert, also held outdoors, had a "blues women" theme. The concern for politically-motivated programming, also evident in the first week's concert, apparently was a primary reason for the selection of the evening's opening act: Saffire, the Uppity Blues Women. This acoustic guitar/piano/bass trio offered readings of classic blues tunes, some from such important women as Bessie Smith and Big Mama Thornton, as well as their own tunes which were wry lyrical observations on womanhood and middle age.

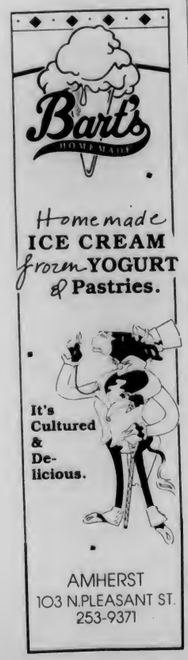
Unfortunately, Saffire's understated intimate approach and perfunctory instrumental talent did not translate well to the outdoor festival atmosphere. They would have been more effective at a smaller venue such as the Iron Horse (where, ironically, they had played three weeks before their Bright Moments appearance).

Koko Taylor, the preeminent female blues singer of the modern era, followed with the evening's headline performance. Her powerful, gritty voice and brassy, boisterous showpersonship got the crowd rocking immediately. Her band, the Blues Machine, powered by the twin-guitar attack of Eddie King and James Johnson, steamrolled her through a rousing set that included tunes from her latest album and such gender-changed classics as "I'm a Woman" (Muddy Waters' "I'm a Man") and "I'm a Queen Bee" (Slim Harpo's "I'm a King Bee").

Koko concluded the show with her signature tune, Willie Dixon's "Wang Dang Doodle." The show's party-all-night-long sentiment summed up her overall approach and typified the problems she faces as a woman confronting a repertoire that is rife with male sexual braggadocio.

THE COLLEGIAN ARTS DESK NEEDS WRITERS

Stop by and ask for Julie or Jody
OR
Call 545-3500



Move 10 years ahead of the class.

The new HP 48SX and a free 'library card' can get you there.

With over 2100 built-in functions, our new HP 48SX Scientific Expandable calculator takes a quantum leap into the 21st century. Buy an HP 48SX between August 15 and October 15, 1990, and HP will send you a free HP Solve Equation Library card (a $99.95 retail value).

The plug-in application card alone contains more than 300 science and engineering equations, as well as the periodic table, a constants' library, and a multi-equation solver. It's like having a stack of reference books right at your fingertips.

The HP 48SX calculator is so advanced, it will change the way you solve problems forever. It integrates graphics with calculus, lets you enter equations the way you write them, and does automatic unit management.

Check your campus bookstore or HP retailer for HP's range of calculators and special back-to-school offers. Then check out the calculators that are years ahead of their class.

There is a better way.

HEWLETT PACKARD

Underground profferings from columnist Sturm

By MARK STURM
Collegian Staff

Phil Straub isn't around right now. Normally the two of us will be collaborating on this column, so I feel obliged to begin on his behalf. Towards the end of the spring semester last year two albums were panned in a Collegian column that Phil believes deserved better press.

Public Enemy's, Fear of a Black Planet, was, and remains to be, a great record. It's got a few hit songs, guest raps by Ice Cube and Big Daddy Kane, eloquent articulations of powerful messages, and the superior Bomb Squad signature on the samples and sample overlays. The A Tribe Called Quest LP is also, despite whatever you may have read, well worth investigating. It's more sedate than P.E., and is a very well-crafted example of slower, more "psychedelic" rap. I'm sure you can still find both at your local record store.

At this point the novelty of both of those records has worn out and so writings about them are purely retrospective. An unheard of Canadian band called Simply Saucer, recorded an album side's worth of stuff in 1974, and another album side's worth of them was recorded live in 1975. It was released for the first time ever during the summer of 1990 by the Canadian label Mole. Both live and studio tracks feature precision bounces from straight forward pop-rock to moog flavored spacey jam things, to stoogesque grunging. If you have no clue what I just said I'll paraphrase: Buy it! Don't yak in my ear about classic rock and the Who and Pink Floyd until you've heard what truly creative musicians of those times had to offer.

In 1977, at Sorceror Sound in New York City, the trio Red Transistor recorded two songs. The first song, "Not Bite" was sometimes performed for 20 minutes. This stuff would be the best part of any album by Sonic Youth or any of their imitators, and it was recorded 13 years ago. It's sort of like a cross breed between the aggressive indie rock rhythms popular today, and unique organ and shortwave assisted cacophonous flailings and wailings. These songs were never released until the summer of 1990, when Forced Exposure manufactured and distributed it in the seven inch format for Thurston Moore's label Ecstatic Peace. No chance in hell you'll be seeing this in a local record store, so if you're smart you'll order it soon through the Forced Exposure catalog.

Public Bath records, non-existent prior to the summer of 1990, has now released three seven inches. The first was a collection of four domestically unavailable songs by the Japanese all-women quartet Sekiri (which is pronounced "Secky D" and means "dysentery"). The band was started in Kyoto in 1983 when the members 13-years-old. The seven inch is called Doro-Doro, which means "Scuzz," and that's kind of what it sounds like. It's power pop with an edge that might cause loss of blood to the squeemish. Four more Japanese bands can be heard on the second Public Bath release, a compilation seven inch entitled Japan Bashing Volume 1. For purposes of organization I'll run through this in reversed order.

Hanadensha, which means something vulgar in Japanese, features Hira of the Boredoms on vocals. They perform a song entitled "Future Deadlock." It's really hard, aggressive, psychotic rock with well executed changes and a sound that will leave you either in a fetal position or screaming for more.

Omoide Hatoba, which means "Harbor of Memories," features Chuji and Yamamoto of the Boredoms. The song is entitled "Linear Motor Jet Stop," and that is pretty much what it sounds like. Ufo or Die has Eye and Yoshimi of the Boredoms, and their track is called "Space Disco." Rhythmic vocal screaming augmenting a very tight sound of what must be either homemade or modified instruments. If you really want to get out of your lease early, play this for your landlord at a high volume. The Boredoms perform "Discow Moscow." This song is real hard to follow. It moves freely from almost hippy-like trance music to the human bones and a microphone in a blender set at "liquify" sound. It's amazing stuff but it makes you wonder if they could keep it up for a seven inch of their own.

The third seven inch from Public Bath is the Boredoms.

It's hard to imagine what these guys would do in concert, but I'd sure like to be there to see for myself. It makes you wonder if they could keep this up for a full-length album. You might be able to and should buy all three of these seven inches. Write to Public Bath Records, Box 2134, Madison, WI 53701.

In an unprecedented fever of brilliance, Shimmy Disc Records has just released a full-length album by the Boredoms. Now this record can definitely be purchased at your local store. If you didn't believe that these guys could keep up with their own crazy selves for an extended period of time, here's the proof that you were wrong. This jumps all over the place with an olympics-worthy vengeance, leaving you to guess how many millions of brain cells you must have just lost. Most of you will no doubt prefer the newest from Midnight Oil, but that's your problem. Buy the Boredoms instead, it's really a pleasant musical journey, trust me. Yeah, right.

MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS BLACK AFFAIRS THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS WOMEN'S ISSUES GLB

REQUIRED LISTENING

$8.99 Cassette
$13.99 Compact Disc

$6.99 Cassette
$10.99 Compact Disc

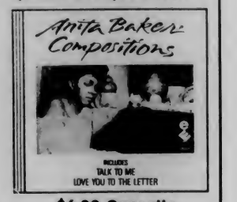
$6.99 Cassette
$10.99 Compact Disc

$6.99 Cassette
$10.99 Compact Disc

$6.99 Cassette
$11.99 Compact Disc

$6.99 Cassette
$11.99 Compact Disc

$6.99 Cassette
$11.99 Compact Disc



$6.99 Cassette
$11.99 Compact Disc

ON SALE AT AMHERST'S MOST COMPLETE MUSIC STORE

FOR THE RECORD

...A comprehensive selection of old and new in ROCK, CLASSICAL, JAZZ, SOUL, FOLK, REGGAE and lots more on Compact Disc, Cassette & LP.

LOCATED IN FACES, DOWNTOWN AMHERST

Ford's film entices: mystery pulls punches

By MEREDITH O'BRIEN
Collegian Staff

Presumed Innocent
Directed by Alan J. Pakula
Starring Harrison Ford

If you can get past Harrison Ford's ridiculous looking bowl cut which looks like an ill-fitting toupee, Presumed Innocent will keep you enthralled and guessing until the end.

Set in a big city district attorney's office, this snake-like "whodunnit" mystery does an exemplary job of providing a behind-the-scenes look at the corrupt political side of lawyers coming up for re-election during a sensationalized murder investigation.

Just before the DA's election, running in a dead heat, one of the DA's star lawyers is brutally murdered in her home, leaving the incumbent with a sticky mess that must be dealt with before the race's conclusion.

All eyes are on the DA to solve the murder, as are the watchful eyes of his opponent who is just waiting for a screw-up or empty-handed search for the killer.

So the DA assigns his right hand man, Ford, to the case, stressing an immediate and clean resolution.

The plot twists early on when it is revealed that Ford had previously had a love affair with the beautiful yet sexually indulgent murdered lawyer.

Caught between revealing his extramarital affair to the public (his wife was aware of the encounters) and solving the case to help bolster his boss's flailing campaign, Ford has no choice but to proceed immediately with the case while trying to unsuccessfully forget his feelings for his former lover.

The most surprising turn in the film occurs when major amounts of evidence uncovered by the police, and the district attorney's political foe, implicates Ford as the spurned lover driven to kill his lover.

Portrayed as an obsessive, love-sick soul, Ford does an excellent job, pulling out all the stops making the viewers feel not simply sorry for his mournful hurt, but weary of his actual guilt.

While not the type of murder mystery that ranks up with Fatal Vision – without sitting on the edge of your seat with intense fear – this film is filled with political intrigue, lust and corruption that will keep you puzzling 'til the last moments of the movie.

Presumed Innocent is a great flick, worth seeing if you are in the mood to think and try to second-guess the outcome.

YOUR PARTNERS IN TRAVEL

TWA Student Discount Cards 10 percent off any fare in the USA 365 days a year.

Also 10 percent off Europe—with a few summer exceptions.

Call or stop by for applications & reservations.
Cost $15/yr. or $25 for 2 yrs.

586-8953

Valleywood Shops-Old Smith St. Northampton, MA

Montgomery's Florist

Flowers For Every Event And Of Course...

Roses

Local Deliveries & Deliveries To U Mass Daily

WEDDINGS SYMPATHY

HOLIDAYS BIRTHDAYS & ANNIVERSARIES FORMALS

Teleflora

WELL-STOCKED TROPICAL HOUSE PLANTS IN OUR YEAR-ROUND GREENHOUSE

SAVE GAS SHOP BY PHONE USING YOUR MASTERCARD VISA OR PERSONAL ACCOUNT

584-3798

350 RUSSELL ST HADLEY
(RT. 9 ACROSS FROM BURGER KING)

Around the world in 80 ways at Hampshire Mall.

Hot and spicy. Rich and creamy. Fried and crunchy.
Experience the finest tastes from all worlds.

Visit our fine variety of restaurants, stores and shops featuring everything for you, your family and your lifestyle. And always be assured of the quality you expect and the customer service you deserve.

Stop in for a bite at Hampshire Mall.

Cafe Square
The place for family fun, entertainment and food!

Hampshire Mall

Route 9, Hadley
Monday–Saturday: 10:00am to 9:30pm · Sunday: No[illegible] 5:00pm
Information/Customer Service (413) 586-5700

Spotlight on museum in Old Deerfield

Historic Deerfield was founded in 1952 and now operates 12 historic houses with substantial collections of American decorative arts. The Deerfield museum village complex offers tours, public lectures and educational programs throughout the year. The Museum Store at the Sign of J.G. Pratt sells books, postcards, color slides, handicrafts, needlework kits, museum reproductions, lanterns and gift items. Museum store and houses are open year 'round from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Historic Deerfield has a research library, open Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Deerfield Inn, maintained by Historic Deerfield, offers full dining and lodging services in a handsomely restored and elegantly furnished building with two parlors, three dining rooms, a cocktail bar, a coffee shop and 23 guest rooms.

Historic Deerfield's 1990 fall Forums will offer registrants a day-long opportunity to see and hear about the museum's outstanding acquisitions of the 1980s as well as participate in a lively, three-day seminar.

"Historic Deerfield Collects: Acquisitions of the 1980s" will be held on Friday, Sept. 7 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The forum will feature the most exciting additions to the museums collections in the last decade. Curator Philip Zea will lecture about "Collecting the Connecticut Valley, 1675-1925," and Executive Director Donald Friary will lecture about "A New Direction: American Folk Art."

Zea, with assistant curator Janine Skerry, curatorial associate for textiles Iona Lincoln, the museum's architectural conservator, William Flynt, and librarian David Proper will host a "Curator's Choice" workshop to tell participants about their favorite acquisitions of the decade. "Entertainment in Early New England" will take place on November 11, 12, and 13. A lively evening of gambols and early American entertainment in the Hall Tavern will be a highlight of the program.

Specially researched for this forum by a group of Historic Deerfield cooks, musicians and singers and a brewmaster, the evening will feature games, dancing, and a variety of desserts prepared over the tavern fire.

For further information and to register for either of Historic Deerfields Fall Forums, call Nancy Bell at 413-774-5581.

Fall flicks almost here and ready for viewing

Here's a list of films to be released sometime this month:

Eve of Destruction: A deadly robot gets its modes mixed-up and destroys things. Directed by Duncan Gibbins. Starring Dutch actress Renee Soutendijk as the robot. Orion.

bMiller's Crossing: Set to open the New York Film Festival. Gangster movie, where actors Gabriel Byrne and Albert Finney fall in love with the same woman (Marcia Gay Harden). Directed and produced by the Joel and Ethan Coen. Fox.

Funny Thing About Love: This one's about a man who can't decide between three women. Gene Wilder stars; Farrah Fawcett, Mary Stuart Masterson and Christine Lahti are the women confusing him. Directed by Leonard Nimoy. Paramount Reversal of Fortune: Jeremy Irons stars as Claus von Bulow, the man from Newport, Rhode Island, that was accused of trying to kill his wife (played by Glenn Close) a few years back. Adapted for the screen from Alan Dershowitz' novel. Directed by Barbet Schroder (Barfly). Warner Brothers.

Henry and June: A love story, set in Paris in the 1930s. Based on the lives of writers Anais Nin and Henry Miller. Starring supermodel Uma Thurman and Fred Ward. Directed by Philip Kaufman (The Right Stuff). Universal.

White Hunter, Black Heart: A fictionalized account of the making of The African Queen. Clint Eastwood stars, produces and directs. Warner Brothers.

Memphis Belle: Story of WWII fighter pilots. The assembly cast includes, Matthew Modine, John Lithgow and David Strathairn. Directed by Michael Canton-Jones (Scandal). Warner Brothers.

Postcards From the Edge: Shirley MacLaine, Gene Hackman, Denis Quaid, Richard Dreyfuss and Meryl Streep star in this adaptation of Carrie Fisher's semi-autobiographical novel about life in the Hollywood fast lane. Columbia.

Jacob's Ladder: A psychological thriller about a man overcome by hallucinations. Starring Tim Robbins (Cadillac Man), Elizabeth Pena and Danny Aiello. Directed by Adrian Lyne. Tri-Star.

Narrow Margin: Anne Archer witnesses a mob murder and has to leave town. Gene Hackman tracks her down. Directed by Peter Hyams. Tri-Star.

Life and Nothing But: Tale of two women trying to get on with their lives following the devastation of WWI. Directed Bertrand Tavernier (Round Midnight). Orion Classics.

Run: Patrick Dempsey accidentally kills a gangster's son and gets in trouble. Tracy Pollan plays the witness. Directed by Geoff Burrowes. Touchstone.

Listen Up: Documentary about Quincy Jones, with Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, and rap artist Ice-T.

This information was compiled from the September 1990 edition of Premiere magazine

— JODY GABIN

Photo courtesy of AP

Singer Ella Fitzgerald appears in Listen Up this fall.

Call Opticians
Prescriptions Accurately Filled
STYLISH EYEWEAR
HEARING AIDS
30% OFF Vuarnet Bolle Ray Ban Serengeti
Parking Available • Handicap Accessible
253-7002 256-6375 178 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA Since 1960

REPAIRS & SERVICE
on all makes & models of televisions
ANTENNAS INSTALLED AND REPAIRED AUTHORIZED ZENITH DEALERS
Television Rentals
Television Center
55 North Pleasant St., Amherst
253-5100

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
India Print Bedspreads · Mugs · Earrings · Chinese Shoes · Rings · Bracelets · Chains · Socks · Leather Sole
Happy B'day Cards · Hawaii Posters · Indonesian Prints · Incense · Toys · Candles · Hats · Bags
Area Rugs · Skirts · Paper Lampshades · Baskets
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
Great Gifts & Cards
THE MERCANTILE
Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

湘園
PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
Open Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 11:30am-10:00pm
Fri. & Sat. 11:30am-11:00pm
Sunday 2:00pm-10:00pm
LUNCH HOURS: Mon.-Sat. 11:30am-3:00pm
103 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 (413)256-8924

Atlantic repressing 'Oppressing the Masses'

By DANIELLE DOWLING
Collegian Staff

Oppressing the Masses
Vio-lence
Megaforce

Over a decade ago, something wonderful happened. Groups like Motorhead, Venom and Metallica combined the power crunch of metal with the speed and energy of punk to forge a new kind of music, a sound which was soon to become known as thrash.

As the underground caught on to this burgeoning scene, more groups like Exodus, Anthrax, Megadeth, Slayer, Overkill, Nuclear Assault and Testament added their own styles to the growing mayhem. Rebellious youth had found new heroes in this scene and as they attended the shows and listened to the albums, they waited for the day when they could emulate their heroes.

Now it seems as if these kids are getting their chance. After sweating away in local venues, waiting for their big break, it comes in the form of a record contract. Finally, their dreams are fulfilled and they are given the chance to be the next Metallica or Slayer.

This is where a grave problem lies. When a band writes and composes music to be in a particular genre or to emulate the people who inspired them, the music doesn't hold the passion necessary to make it memorable or moving. Unfortunately, Vio-lence's latest album, Oppressing the Masses falls into this fatal trap.

The only saving grace is that drummer Perry Strickland, bassist Deen Dell and guitarists Phil Demmel and Rob Flynn are good musicians. It takes an acquired taste to enjoy the vocals of Sean Killian, whose voice could be compared to a cross between John Connelly of Nuclear Assault and Doug and Wendy Whiner of Saturday Night Live. However, his keen social awareness and quest to uncover the dark side of human nature add to the richness of the lyrical content. The only sour note in this is that there are a lot of bands out there with a social acuity and a desire to reveal the seedier side of the human animal.

"World in a World" is one of the few memorable tracks off this album. Their songwriting prowess shines through on this song with riffs that carry a relentless punch to them. As for the rest of the album, one is likely to experience a Vulcan mind-melt with one song sounding similar to another. Case in point, the chorus of "Oppressing the Masses" sounds like the chorus of "Officer Nice."

For those who are addicted to frenetic, mosh-inducing music this will serve as adequate satisfaction. Hopefully with maturation, Vio-lence can offer something more than just adequate.

On a final note, I have a bone to pick with Atlantic Records, the distribution company for Megaforce Records. It seems that before Oppressing the Masses was released, someone at Atlantic raised the red flag of concern about the lyrical content of "Torture Tactics." So as not to halt distribution and therefore slow the momentum of the group, Megaforce agreed to delete the song from the release. Instead, it will be sold as a separate single without Atlantic's distribution or support.

I was sent an advance copy of the album and was privy to listen to and decipher some lyrics of the song in question. This song is far less offensive than the sexist, talentless rantings of 2 Live Crew. However, the folks at Atlantic have no qualms with distributing 2 Live Crew's crap ... which, mind you even though it's drivel it still has the right to exist.

What it all boils down to is the almighty dollar. While 2 Live Crew promises to sell millions of albums at least for now, Vio-lence will be lucky if they sell 100,000. So before you go singing the praises of Atlantic records for coming to the aid of first amendment rights, remember where their real interests lie.

Photo courtesy of Megaforce Records

Vio-lence

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
ZANNA
ALL WOMAN.

The Creative Needle
Fine Yarns & Needlework Supplies
Advice Cheerfully Given
• New Fall yarns have arrived!
• Over 400 Knitting/Crochet Pattern Books
• Over 350 Needlework Pattern Books
Come In And Browse
The Carriage Shops, 233 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA 549-6106
Open Mon.-Sat. 9:30-5:30 Sun. 1-5

Amherst College Presents
MIKE CROSS
SINGER/FIDDLER/STORYTELLER
SUNDAY, SEPT. 9
8pm $7 Public
$1 Amherst College
SUNDAYS AT EIGHT
A Sunday Evening Coffeehouse Series
Amherst College Campus Center
Info: (413) 542-5773
Coming: Sept. 16 Anne Hills • Sept. 23 James Keelaghan opened by Cathy Winter • Sept. 30 Christine Lavin •

Fresh flowers and plants
Elegant silk arrangements
Daily delivery to UMass Amherst, Smith and Hampshire Colleges
FTD and Teleflora Wire Services
Knowles Flower Shop
172 North Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Phone 413-253-3805
MasterCard VISA

HEALTHY SKIN
Begins with a deep pore cleansing facial
Also lash and brow tinting, shaping, hair waxing, make-up, therapeutic massage
AESTHETICS SKINCARE
34 Main St., Suite 1, Amherst MA 253-9879

SON OF Main St RECORDS
586 • 1707
21 STATE ST.
NORTHAMPTON
213 MAIN ST.
586 • 5726
Main St RECORDS

24-7 Spyz offer love, peace and gumbo

By DANIELLE DOWLING
Collegian Staff

Gumbo Millenium
24-7 Spyz
In-Effect

There's nothing like a Sizzler's salad bar.

For a decent price, a veritable smorgasbord is offered to satisfy the gastric desires. If one is inclined to eat healthy foods, there are mounds of crisp vegetables separately packed in little tins and surrounded by a sea of ice. If one is feeling fruity, there are scrumptious watermelon slices and strawberries. If one is compelled to increase one's cholesterol level, there are piles of greasy fried chicken.

Gumbo Millenium, 24-7 Spyz's follow-up to their critically acclaimed debut, Harder Then You, is a lot like a Sizzler's salad bar. Combining a variety of musical and lyrical styles, it offers a wide range of sounds to appease the aural desires. This eclectic foursome from the South Bronx promise to please the thrashinskinheadsrastajazz-funkychickencacklelovindancin fool in anyone.

The album begins with the power crunching riffs of "John Connelly's Theory." The song's namesake, Nuclear Assault's vocalist/guitarists John Connelly, created the basic riff for this instrumental. When Connelly roadied for the Spyz, he played this particular riff during soundcheck. It caught the ear of guitarist Jimi Hazel, who learned the riff and consequently stole it. However, on tracks like "New Super Hero Worship" and "Deathstyle," the Spyz showcase their ability to create noise of their own and do it well.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 15

Photo courtesy of In-Effect Records

24-7 Spyz

fine new, used & children's books
European, art & literary periodicals
publishers overstocks at 30%-80% off
special orders • out-of-print book searches

Open 7 days • Mon-Sat 9-9, Sun 10-5 • 36 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 584-0374 • 586-5438

Northampton Bowl
584-4830 Pleasant St.
Thursday Nights 8:45pm-close
College Special
3 Games & Shoes all for $5.00
with College I.D.

CAMPUS Travel CENTER
Get To Know Us!

Campus Travel is staffed by four full time travel consultants. in addition to trainees You may know them already

Laurae Lyster (Manager): An Amherst native trained in the hectic corporate travel industry of New York City in between extensive globetrotting—speaks Chinese, reads French understands some Greek and gets by with English

Ivette(Asst. Mgr. & head of PHD Desk): Another Amherst native, speaks Spanish, some French—is a graduate of travel school, and has been working in a high powered D.C. agency

Kris Grabowski: Our newest agent, she has trained at Central Travel's Travel School in Springfield and has found her niche in handling domestic reservations—ask her for the lowest fares

Debbie Bernashe: Our Carribean specialist-she has cruised and flown the sunny climes—get her talking about our leisure plans

Airline reservations and tickets.
Amtrak reservations and tickets.
Tour packages.
Hotel and car reservations.
Eurail passes.
Cruises.
Charters.
Youth Hostel Cards.
You name it.

WEIGHTLIFTING
FREE WEIGHTS•NAUTILUS•EXERCISE BIKES•CLIMBERS
The GYM at mountain farms mall
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

It's Time To See What's New At J•Rich!
Swatch®
Over 62 Styles To Choose From
Batteries • Guards • Bands
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St. Amherst•253-2013
22 Masonic St. Northampton•586-6336
OPEN 7 DAYS

NORTHAMPTON WOOLS
413-586-4331
11 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 01060
All natural fibers for knitting. Patterns, supplies and classes for every knitting need.
Mon.-Sat. 10-5, Thurs. 'til 9

Fields, lives revived by museum

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Hadley --"Don't swear or lop over neighbors when sleeping . . .

"Don't discuss politics or religion . . .

"Don't smoke a strong pipe inside the coach — spit on the leeward side . . .

"Don't point out where the murders have been committed, especially if there are women passengers . . .

"Don't imagine for a moment that you are going on a picnic."

Reprinted from the Omaha Herald, Oct. 3, 1877.
Tips for riding a stagecoach.

Two hours flew by one rainy, Sunday afternoon while two friends and I waded through Valley history and paths made between troughs, hog walks, apple pickers, cow bells, passenger coaches, axes, and double rippers at the (Free) Hadley Farm Museum.

The 1782 barn that now houses innumerable farm items was originally located on the Porter Phelps Huntington estate and was about to be torn down and was summarily saved.

Hadley native Clifton Johnson was a widely-traveled man who had always said Hadley was an ideal site for any museum.

Meanwhile, his bother Henry R. had passed the management of his Springfield bookshop to family members and was beginning to collect articles of early farm and home life. What better way to satiate Clifton's desire for a museum and save Henry R.'s and others links to a past that was slowly dwindling?

So in 1929, the barn was moved two miles to its present location off of Route 9 in Hadley and renovations took place one year later. The barn was passed to the Massachusetts Society for the Promotion of Agriculture in 1957 for the museum's upkeep and perpetuation. Since 1963, it has rested in the protection of the non-profit organization of the Hadley Farm Museum Association.

The Association's primary members are interested citizens who are not affiliated with any town governmental body and the group functions mainly from donations. Clifton's grandson Irving is president of the Association, although the Johnson family no longer has direct say in museum affairs.

Rows upon rows of seemingly distant lifestyles came nearer and nearer as we strode through ice-skates, sleighs, tins for cooking, butter churns, horse saddles and baby carriages. It was not so much the items themselves that impress: they've been left to retain their originality Curator Geoge Pratt told us.

"It's expensive to restore articles such as these. Few people are knowledgable enough to decipher what these things were actually like. [That information] was available in the past but not now," he said. "It's better sometimes to appreciate the way it stands now, it's difficult to tell how much of it [when restored] is original and what is not original."

Pratt's eyes encompass the entire building as he speaks, it seems. He says his favorite two items are the wooden cow bells that tell the farmer when his cattle have strayed too far and the seven foot-tall apple picker. Before taking on the job as full-time curator of the museum, he worked at the power plant at Smith College and helped occasionally at the museum. After retiring, Pratt was asked to become the building's full-time watchman/historian/tour-giver in 1980.

Collegian Photo John Woo

(See Above)A four-horse, 15 passenger stage coach resides in the Hadley Farm Museum. It is dated 1929 and claims it was last used at the Bartlett Hotel in Rutland, MA.

(See Below)Curator George Pratt stands in front of a showcase of kitchen utensils.

Collegian photo by John Woo

The farm items are donated and within the past several years, Pratt says space has been very tight so the barn can not feasibly accept more items.

It's rather a strange array of memories that have been collected — horsehair in trunks on the top floor, beehives donated by the University of Massachusetts entomology department, windlasses used for hanging beef or hogs after butchering to be dressed, doors with latches, corn-grinders. Objects passed to future generations to study, remember and learn from.

One of the most remarkable articles at the museum is an 18 foot dugout canoe used for trade by the White man in 1784. An article from the Daily Hampshire Gazette July 19, 1980 reported the canoe was gouged from a single pine tree and was acquired by local antique dealer Ray Murphy. Murphy thought it might have been stored in the loft of a local barn for about 200 years before it was found.

A tall, still colorful weathervane that once stood atop the ROTC drill-hall at the Massachusetts Agricultural College (approximately where Boyden Gym is now) stands on the planked floors and stretches to the ceiling.

It is a place that can conjure up images of times past so strongly two hours spent there will seem like a mere 45 minutes. I overheard someone ask if our children and grandchildren will someday gather 'round microwaves, electric hairdryers and vegetable shooters and ponder what it must have been like in such 'simple' times?

Hadley Farm Museum is located at the junction of Routes 9 and 47. Free of charge, the museum is open from May 1 until Oct. 12 from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Sundays 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.; closed Mondays.

Veritable array of fun available at the Big E

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Where else can you experience "West Springfield Day," "Vermont Day," "Grange Day," ride the Giant Green Slide on a rug, buy state foods and go home that afternoon and still be able to return the next day and do 20 more things? The Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield, Massachusetts.

This state fair is in its 69th year and promises a wide assortment of fall fun from September 12 to 23. Group rates are available. With a minimum purchase of 15 tickets, the cost of admission is only $5 per person, which is a $2 savings off the regular adult-priced ticket.

As always, the agricultural show will be the competitive heart of the exposition with livestock breeders, youths and their animals converging on the Big E from all over the Northeast. Wool products including wall hangings, clothing and pillows will be on display. Interpretive educational programs will be offered throughout the agricultural show.

One amazing show available at the Bandshell, to those interested, is the Spinners who are slated to play Sept. 21 to 23. Don't pass this up!

The winning entries of August's "Craftadventure '90" (contest and showcase of fine fiber abd fabric artistry) will be on display. The focus of this year's class from Craftadventure '90, "American Indian Traditions and Treasures" was inspired by the growing influence of American Indian art, design and technique as adapted to this decade's "hard arts."

There have been nearly a million dollars invested in improvements around the exposition grounds over the summer and all upgrades are expected to be completed by summer's end, fairground workers say it will be completed by the Big E's opening.

Further information can be obtained by calling the Big E at (413) 737-2443.

"Lemon Head" by Anne Wood, is one of the many craft objects featured in the 25th ACC Craft Fair.

AL-BUMS NEED EXTRA CASH?
WE BUY*SELL*TRADE
USED CDs, LPs & CASSETTES
All Used Sales Guaranteed.
HIGH QUALITY•EXTRA STURDY
WOOD FURNITURE
Bookcases•LP Shelves•Tables•Stereo Centers
CD & Cassette Racks•Coffee Tables and More!
ALL SHAPES AND SIZES

Fancy Fingers
NAIL & SKIN CARE SALON
The ultimate in nail fashion and skin beauty
FOR APPOINTMENT CALL 256-3113
800 MAIN STREET
AMHERST, MASS. 01002
By Appointment Only
• Manicures/Pedicures
• Sculptured Nails
• Facials - Makeup
• Waxing
• Paraffin Treatment
MC/VISA

Dance Stuff '90
Shoes for Tap, Jazz, Acro, Lyrical
Bloch's soft leather and canvas Ballet
for women, men, and children
Freed, Chacott & Capezio pointe shoes
Exercisewear, Accessories
220 N. Pleasant St. (rear) • Amherst • 253-5201

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
Sep.6 Nu Wave Cafe
COWBOY JUNKIES
7 and 10pm, $17.50 Adv.
Sep.9
FREE SHOW!
HUMAN RADIO
8:30pm Free!
Sep.10 Afro Pop!
CHEB TATI
Algerian Dance Pop
8:30pm $10 Adv.
Sep.13
MIRACLE LEGION
8:30pm $6Adv.
Sep.18 Celtic Punk
CORDELIA'S DAD
8:30pm $5 at door
Sep.24
JORMA KAUKONEN
7 and 10pm $12 Adv.
Sep.25 Nu Wave Cafe
YO LA TENGO
BABY FLAME HEAD
8:30pm $7 Adv.
Sep.27 Nu Wave Cafe
BLUES TRAVELER
Oct.2 Zydeco
QUEEN IDA
7pm $14 Adv.
Oct.4 Guitar God
PAT METHENY TRIO
6:30 and 9:30 $25, 22, 18.50
Oct.7 Nu Wave Cafe
PYLON
8:30pm $9Adv.
NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE
413-586-8686
THE TICKETPHONE
ALL AGES ALL SHOWS
20 Center St. Northampton
413-584-0610

Styles by Deborah
The spa for hair and skin care
Featuring professional hair care
Tinting and facials
body wrapping and waxing
65 University Drive, Amherst
549-5610

$1.00 $1.00
It's not just good ice cream
It's JILLY'S ICE CREAM & MORE
Homemade Ice Cream!
Celebrating 7 years at the Hampshire Mall
(Ad good for $1.00 off any sundae)
expires 9-19-90

Student enters music biz

By DANIELLE DOWLING
Collegian Staff

A lone bead of sweat eeks its way down your spine as an army of fellow beads loom above in your scalp waiting to attack.

You cower in your bed underneath the covers reverting into a fetal position. With a terrified wide-eyed stare, your eyes dart nervously about the room. Your teeth are clenched so tightly that they itch.

You want to scream, "No! This isn't fair. They can't make me leave. I want to remain immature and irresponsible. I don't want to leave school."

When faced with the imminence of leaving college life for the uncertain and cruel harshness of the real world, many college students tend to react with varying degrees of fear. Perhaps it is not as severe as described above, but the thought of finding a real job and having to support oneself could make even the most ambitious student flinch.

However, there are those who calmly stride into the realm of reality. Some even move on without the benefit of a college degree.

Paula Hogan is one such person.

"People are different. They have to do things at their own pace," she explained. "If you want to stop for a couple of years and go pursue something, you only live once. Why should you wait on something? You never know what will happen tomorrow. You've got to follow your heart and if your heart says to go and do something, then that's what you do. People are always going to disagree with it. You've just got to stay true to your self."

Last year, Hogan faced a dilemma that many students have experienced recently due to the budget crisis — she could no longer afford her education. "I didn't know if I was just going to take a semester off and save my money and then go back," she said. "If I did that I would have to do that every other semester. It would have taken me forever."

Hogan was once metal director and host of the weekly metal show "Damaged Incorporated" at WMUA 91.1 FM. "They had never had a metal show at WMUA," she said. "It was a full-time job towards the end. It was very stressful, but it was fun."

Leaving UMass would have meant leaving behind the hard work Hogan had invested into her show and the contacts she had made in the music industry. But then, good friend Bill Pulice, former Giant Record executive, suggested that they get together and start a magazine. Wanting to keep her industry contacts, Hogan accepted Pulice's proposal and Industrial Metal was born.

"There's nothing really behind the name 'Industrial Metal,'" Hogan said. "We really liked the name and all of the people involved were members of the industry."

At first, Hogan worked on the magazine from her parents home in a suburb of Boston. While she worked full-time at a software company, she also attended Northeastern University part-time. Then, in May, she left Massachusetts after a falling-out with her parents.

"My dad's been really supportive of me. He's like one of the magazine's biggest fans. But my mother and stepfather weren't willing to let go," Hogan explained.

Soon, she was headed for New York City where she settled in Elmont, a Long Island suburb. "I'd be too nervous to live in the city. I have some hefty computer equipment that I do the whole magazine on and wouldn't trust it being in the city." "Plus," Hogan added, "I'm used to grass and trees."

For the first two months, she lived on her credit cards and taking temporary jobs here and there. Presently, she works full-time at a management company during the day. At night, she works on the magazine, sometimes until three in the morning. She compares the experience of putting the magazine together to pregnancy.

"It takes me three months to build the thing from doing the editing and the layout."

Initial response to 'Industrial Metal' has been somewhat overwhelming. Warner Brothers and Capitol Records have put the magazine on their mailing list which is impressive for a publication of their stature. Looking toward the future, Hogan claimed, "I'd like to see the magazine stay the way it is at its circulation of 5,000. We have to sell. So, of course if somebody offers us a Slayer interview, we can't say: 'No . . . We're going to interview Pantera before we interview Slayer.' This is costing us a fortune. We've got to keep our eyes open and cover the bands that the kid's know. But then again, we've also got to look for the bands like Dream Theatre, Pantera and Forbidden."

For now, Hogan does not plan to return to school soon. She said she needed time to settle into her new surroundings. A staunch empiricist, she believes that education should be practical. She claimed she was not satisfied with her UMass education because it was too theoretical and offered no applicable knowledge that would be useful in the workforce. In fact, the only thing that Hogan misses aside from the show are the friends she left behind.

"I miss my friends and the kids who listened to the show the most," Hogan said. "Basically, that's what you're gonna remember the most out of the whole time that you're at college."

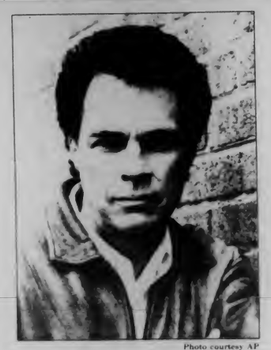

Photo courtesy AP

Richard Beymer plays evil Benjamin Horne on David Lynch's Twin Peaks this fall

AEROBICS
AND FITNESS CLASSES
The GYM at mountain farms mall
• STATE OF THE ART NEO SHOCK FLOOR
• SIX CLASSES DAILY
• ONLY $4.25 PER CLASS
• SAVE BY BUYING PACKAGES OF 10, 20, Or 30 classes.
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

Council Travel
Cheapest Fares to •EUROPE
•ASIA
•AUSTRALIA/ N.E.W. ZEALAND
Plus passports, international student ID tours, and much more. Ask for our free travel catalog
413-256-1261
AMHERST
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002

FUTON SPECIAL
GREAT BACK TO SCHOOL IDEA!
FUTON & FRAME
TWIN $119
FULL $129
QUEEN $139
Also Available: OTHER STYLES & CHOICE OF FABRICS
Special Discount Prices
Designer Furniture Outlet
327 Walnut St., Extension, Agawam, MA 413-789-3666
(Next to Steve's Appliance) Mon.-Fri. 10-6, Thurs. 10-8, Sat. 10-5, Sun. 12-5

SAVE ON USED AND DISCOUNT NEW BOOKS
40-80% Off Pub. List Price
Thousands of popular & academic paperbacks & hardbacks
VALLEY BOOKS
199 N. Pleasant St.
Downtown Amherst
Open 10-8 Sept. 4-7
256-1508 Visa/MC

HEY MAC
DON'T BE AFRAID TO TRY SOMETHING NEW COME WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN
IT'S A HIP EXPERIENCE
ARTS IS IT!
ASK FOR JODY OR JULIE

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT PROPOSAL DEADLINE

Deadline for submission of grant proposals for arts-related projects and events
Friday, September 28
Guidelines and application forms are available at the Arts Council office and the Student Activities Office

UMass Arts Council 125 Herter
545-0202

NOTE: Grantwriting workshops will be held Sept. 26 and Oct. 9. Call the Arts Council for further information.

Twin Peaks fest for fans: new stuff, shows on the way

Photo courtesy of AP

Director/writer David Lynch

For Lynchheads who haven't yet heard: New Twin Peaks episodes are on the way starting Sept. 29, with what producer Mark Frost calls a one-hour "collector's edition" replaying the highlights of last season. New episodes begin the following week with a two-hour premiere directed by Lynch, who'll continue to act as director for the first few hour-long episodes, then step down to resume his role as producer to pursue other cinematic projects

And there's Batman-style marketing strategies too:

Watch for a Twin Peaks soundtrack album by Lynchmaestro Angelo Badalamenti, your own copy of Laura Palmer's diary written by Lynch's 22-year-old daughter Jennifer (who, incidently, will soon be directing a screenplay of her own, entitled Boxing Helena, about a woman's boyfriend who cuts off her limbs and keeps her in a box), and a Twin Peaks novel written in epic form, to supplement the TV show and provide additional clues to devoted viewers. You'll also be able to try that "damn fine" Twin Peaks coffee and cherry pie, drink from your own Double R Diner mug, and listen to Agent Cooper's notes to Diane on your own tape player. There's also talk of a Twin Peaks Nintendo game.

For those who still can't get enough:

Lynch and Frost Productions are also in charge of a new show on Fox called American Chronicles, a documentary-style series about American life, airing at 9:30 p.m. on Saturdays and running until Twin Peaks begins at 10 p.m. on ABC. Chronicles of course features Lynch's signature voyeuristic camera angles and uncomfortable silences.

And there's more:

Lynch's first feature-length film, Eraserhead, will be re-released sometime next year, and you'll eventually be seeing a coffee table-style book of Lynch's paintings, writings and comic strip, The Angriest Dog in the World. Until then, catch Wild at Heart (starring Nicholas Cage and Laura Dern), Lynch's new flick about lurid love-on-the-run, while it's showing at Pleasant Street Theater in Northampton through Sept. 18.

— JODY GABIN

Satiating the sesame noodle urge

By RORY EVANS
Collegian Staff

Obsession can be directed toward many things, and my obsession for this summer was cold sesame noodles.

The fetish began was on Saturday, June 16 when I went to Amherst Chinese and ordered their Cold Noodles. They are not "Cold Sesame" per se, but they did have a tinge of sesame oil. The strong points of this dish were the texture of the noodles, and the thorough tepidness.

On the third of July, I again trekked to Amherst for more Chinese pasta. Panda East's Cold Sesame Noodles seemed the perfect blend of sesame oil, Szechuan hotness, peanut butter goo and noodles. In fact they were so good, that I was concerned I would lose my perspective and objectivity in furthering my quest for the ethereal Asian pasta.

On August 14, a short road trip brought me into the small city of Keene, New Hampshire, where greasy spare ribs and gelatinous fried rice is considered delicate Chinese food. Imperial China, however, does boast a more creative menu. And the Cold Sesame Noodles were quite a creation. The noodles were thick and heavy (see John's photo), and they were so peanut buttery that a paste encompassed my mouth, tongue and throat with each bite. The amalgamous sauce proved to have such a hot after taste that I had to go to the bar and ask for a pitcher of water. These noodles did restore my point of view, and helped me establish a better mental noodle-o-meter.

August 22 brought rainy weather and Lotus Blossum take-out. One dish was

CONTINUED ON PAGE 15

Collegian Photo John Woo

Cold sesame noodles — try em!

All Dressed Up and Nowhere to Go.
EXTREMOS
An unusual Thursday Night 'Club within a Club' hosted by the NORTHSTAR...Northampton 586-9409
From Elvis impersonators and drag queen lip-synchs to Afro-Cuban drummers. 11:30pm shows, dancing to D.J. Hit & Run. Music from the Urban Frontier...Hip-Hop, House and beyond...

EXTREMOS
EXTREMOS and the Sons of Kerry present a Night of a Thousand Drunken Bastards... Live performance with The Big Bad Bollocks, Sep. 6th 11:30 show.

ACI
AMERICAN COMPUTER INNOVATORS

AMHERST'S COMPLETE COMPUTER SOURCE.
LOCAL PERSONALIZED SERVICE AT INTERNATIONALLY COMPETITIVE PRICES.

SEE OUR SPECIAL 5-COLLEGE STUDENT & FACULTY DISCOUNTS
-AVAILABLE WITH A VALID COLLEGE I.D.

*ALL SYSTEMS MAINFRAME READY
SAVE $50.00
WITH THIS COUPON BEFORE SEPT. 15,1990
(coupon good with other discounts)
*PRICES UPDATED BIWEEKLY CALL 549-0701 FOR LATEST SYSTEM PRICES.
ACI is located on 259 Triangle Street in downtown Amherst.

YOU WANT IT, WE GOT IT!

Come on downtown

AMHERST DOWNTOWN MERCHANTS

UMass Chorale troupe tours Eastern Europe

UMass students entertain and enthrall the public in Poland and the Soviet Union

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

For months, news-systems have been pounding out the message: "These are critical times in Eastern Europe . . . things are changing rapidly." Merely one example of a perfect opportunity to seize and learn about these altering times. The University of Massachusetts Chorale took hold of just such a chance this spring.

From May 29 to June 12 they experienced cross-culture as some may never. A total of 55 singers, professors and alumni from UMass traveled to the Soviet Union and Poland and performed their music for the people. They sang and played at the legendary Moscow Conservatory of Music and the Chopin Academy of Music in Warsaw.

According to recent Chorale Manager Christine Gaboury, the trip was a result of their conductor Dr. Richard Du Bois' eagerness for his singers to encounter the new political scene, while intermingling cultural aspects.

Gaboury said the climate in Tallinn, Estonia — where the people are attempting to win independence from the Soviet Union — was a non-violent atmosphere as compared to reports from Lithuania, and friendlier than Moscow — where the Chorale's reception was not half so warm said Gaboury.

"[In Estonia] it seemed they didn't like the Soviet Union much and they spoke their own language," she said.

It was here that the Estonians learned to love a great American cultural dance: the Hokey Pokey. Hillary Steinberg said this is one thing she will never forget from her trip.

"We met another choir who fed us and danced for us. They showed us a cultural dance and we really didn't have one."

As the story goes, Professor Jeff Holmes got on the piano and started to play Beatles' songs. One song led to another and he began playing the Hokey Pokey.

"The Americans started to dance and the Estonians loved it," said present Chorale Manager Doug Dent.

In Lenningrad they performed at the Lenningrad Conservatory of Music, and later in Tallinn they met people their own age at the University, which Gaboury said was remarkable. Language barriers were evident with only one individual from each group speaking minimal Russian or English, however there was no lack of communication, as the music bridged any misunderstandings. Gaboury tells of receiving eight to 10 letters from the Soviet and Polish people inquisitive about American lifestyles.

While in Estonia with Holmes on piano and Professor Horace Boyer as a soloist performing the gospel song "Save Me," they captured the imagination of the people of Estonia and received acclamations. Gaboury reports the Estonians had just heard their first gospel song. The audience in Nowysacz, Poland made the group sing the entire piece a second time.

It was not only celebration for the forging ties of the Europeans with the Americans from Amherst, it was time for reflection as they toured the Warsaw Ghetto — the walled city where thousands of Jews from surrounding villages were herded together during the Second World War. It was here that they awaited trains to take them to various concentration camps. Another sobering experience for the group was the day spent at Aushewitz and Birkenau.

Gaboury said the response to their musical presentations was warmest in Poland, where they were able to interact with the people more According to Dent, they weren't as confined as in the Soviet Union.

"It felt like we were constantly being kept busy in the Soviet Union whereas in Poland they said, 'Well, now you have free time: go do what you want and be back at such and such a time.' It was a much freer atmosphere there," Dent said.

From his visit, Dent noted the incredible acoustics in the Chopin Academy of Music in Warsaw.

"It was absolutely beautiful to hear your voice echo off of the church walls. Something not a lot of us had heard before."

Funding for the trip came from students' pockets and any extra money needed was given by the UMass Arts Council.

As a result of the incredible responses from countries visited in the past and this most recent excursion to Eastern Europe, the group is scheduled to host the Symphony Orchestra of the International Christian University of Tokyo. Dent said he has high hopes for the Chorale this year and terms the trip this spring a great accomplishment

Photo courtesy of Buddy Allen Management

The Spinners will be appearing at the Big E, Sept. 12-23.

charlie's
1 Pray St. Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight

Tonight 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices &
99¢ Nacho & Cheese Platters
9:00p.m. — 12:00 a.m.

Drink of the Week
Denaka Vodka & Cranberry
$1.95

Beer of the Month
Foster's Lager $1.75

Food Giveaways
Mon 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9-12
Tues 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9-12
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9-12

COLLEGIAN

ROCKIN' GOOD NEWS --
YOU CAN WRITE FOR ARTS

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring IMPORTED Beers at Domestic Pricing

Import of the month
$3.70 6/pk.
Maccabee
$11.99 case

Capt. Morgan
$14.69 1.75L

Smirnoff
80 proof
$13.49 1.75L

$4.99 6/pk.
Beck's bots.
$15.99case

Half Kegs
Wide Selection
SALE
Busch
$34.95

Domestic Beer of the Month
BUSCH Suitcase
$8.99 Every day

Labatt's
Beer or Ale
$6.49 12/pk
bots.

Sutter Home
White Zinfandel
3 bots for $11.99

Off Campus
Delivery
253-5441

Kahlua
$10.99 750ml

All Beers plus deposit

Photo courtesy RCA

Cowboy Junkies will be appearing at the Iron Horse tomorrow night.

'Junkies play Iron Horse

In what the Iron Horse calls their "Nuwave Cafe Series," Cowboy Junkies are slated to play two shows there tomorrow night at 7 and 10 p.m.

The "Nuwave Cafe Series" began about five years ago and has been running off and on since then said Iron Hose Manager Katie Sawyer.

"It's a collection of various concerts where the artists do sort of anant garde type stuff," she said.

Well, the Junkies promise an excellent evening with their ability to stir up emotions when they perform. Always compelling and entrancing, they literally glow when live.

Several times, when a singer/group releases a remake of an already exceedingly good song, there can be compromises made and feeling lost in the interpretation. However, Lou Reed has said the Junkies' rendition of his "Sweet Jane" is the most authentic version he's ever heard.

If you've listened to them, no need to explain. If you haven't, spend this Thursday appreciating these Canadians for their country blues/folk talents. Chances are, there will be no disappointments.

For more information contact the Iron Horse at (413) 584-0160. Tickets are $17.50.

— JULIE LIVINGSTONE

BASIC-BANKING

College is expensive.
Basic Banking with CASH•PLUS™ is FREE.

College is hard work.
Basic Banking with CASH•PLUS is easy.

College classes are held on campus.

CASH•PLUS cards can be used almost everywhere.

NEW
Basic Banking with CASH•PLUS for Students from Heritage Bank
- No Monthly Service Charges
- No Minimum Balance
- Free Checks PLUS... Free Automated Teller Machine Transactions at NYCE,® X-Press 24®/CIRRUS,® or CASH•PLUS™

SPECIAL STUDENT HOURS
Some Heritage Bank locations will be open extra hours during the first weekend of school to open your Heritage Basic Banking Account. Call 582-6000 for further information.

Open your Basic Banking student account at the Heritage Bank nearest you:

Amherst	Northampton	South Hadley	Springfield
One South Pleasant Street 582-6000	100 Main Street 582-6000	297 Newton Street 539-8282	(closest to UMASS/NEC and Springfield College) 1500 Wilbraham Rd 539-2794

Twenty-six offices plus access to over 300 ATM outlets in Western Massachusetts and thousands nationwide.

HERITAGE BANK
Member FDIC, DIFM

HEY BABY, Cruise on down to the Arts desk 113 Campus Center

SAVE MONEY ON YOUR PHONE BILL TO 508/617
CALL
FONE HOME
549-3737
Sign-up Fee Regularly $30
For September ONLY $10
Next to Stanley Kaplan
358 N Pleasant St, Suite 210, Amherst

KLONDIKE SOUND CO.
PERFORMER'S SOUND SYSTEMS
THE RIGHT STUFF AT THE RIGHT PRICE,
JUST 20 MILES NORTH OF AMHERST!

LOCAL GEARHEAD FOR OVER 30 PRO AUDIO MANUFACTURERS INCLUDING
ELECTROVOICE • RANE • QSC
LEXICON • DBX • SOUNDCRAFT
YAMAHA • TURBOSOUND
CREST • SWR BASS RIGS

MONTHLY USED EQUIPMENT CLEARANCE SPECIALS

PLEASE CALL FOR APPOINTMENT
(508) 544-2744
BEAR MOUNTAIN ROAD, WENDELL, MA

gumbo

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

Thankfully, the Spyz are not aficionados of raucous speed mongering. Peter Fluid's soulful vocals give an R and B twist to songs like "Don't Break My Heart" and "We've Got a Date." The rhythm section of bassist Rick Skatore and drummer Anthony Johnson give a funky groove to tracks like "Valdez 27 Million?" and then there's the jazziness of "Dude U Knew." These guys are well-rounded musicians and are able to demonstrate their capabilities with finesse.

Their diverse talent does not lend itself to the music alone. Lyrically, they cover an assortment of topics including racism, the Valdez oil spill, runaways, love and ass. The best lyrics can be found in the hip-hop flavored "Don't Push Me." "Forget about the black and the white thing and reflect on the trouble the world is in." While making serious statements such as these, they can get a little goofy too, as tracks like "Spyz on Piano" and the polka madness of "Culo Posse" prove.

So, if you enjoy something that offers you a vast cornucopia of diversity, try Gumbo Milennium or go to Sizzler.

sesame noodles

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

ordered — Cold Sesame Noodles. Opening the box, I was confronted with a ghastly sight of solid sauce, but after vigorous chopstick stirring, the consistency became more edible. The noodles alone were very good, thin and light, and the sesame-peanut buttery sauce was tart and flavorful, if not a bit too separated.

After a summer of such decadent dining-out living, I've resolved to learn how to make my own Cold Sesame Noodles. On Thursday, August 23, a friend, Nathan Krystall, made some of his own that were on the way to being really good. Thoughts of the movie Tampopo are enough to get my pasta water boiling.

Have a Great PICNIC WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

Make The Grade With Pilot.

Win a FREE all-terrain bike in Pilot's Free Wheelin' Drawing.

Head to your college bookstore now and look for Pilot's Free Wheelin' bike display. That's where you'll find entry forms for a chance to win a hot new Columbia Metro 10-speed all-terrain bike – a $160 value. All entries for this campus cruiser must be postmarked by October 1, 1990, so hurry!

And while you're there, don't forget to stock up on Pilot's quality writing products like the Better Ball Point Pen, Spotliter, Penciler and our long-lasting printer, typewriter and calculator ribbons.

From course grades to steep grades, Pilot makes it easy.

PILOT
Quality Office Products Since 1918

PILOT FREE WHEELIN' SWEEPSTAKES

No purchase necessary. Sweepstakes ends October 1, 1990. For complete details and rules visit your campus bookstore. Sweepstakes open to anyone 16 years or older. Void where prohibited by law.

Pilot Corporation of America

WELCOME BACK!

U M A S S T R A N S I T

See What UMass Transit Has To Offer To You

Fare-Free Bus Service To and from UMass, around the UMass campus, to all major apartment complexes, downtown Amherst and the Five Colleges. Express buses to Belchertown Center and South Deerfield. 10 minute service during peak AM and PM periods to Sunderland/South Amherst and North Amherst/Belchertown Road from UMass.
Bus stops conveniently located along North Pleasant street by the Graduate Research Center, Arnold House, Hasbrouck, Morrill, Fine Arts Center, Stockbridge Road and at Haigis Mall. Schedules are available on all UMTS buses, the Campus Center Information Desk and at the UMTS Office on Governors Drive. Call 545-0056 for more information.

Field Trip Service for academic trips, dorm, RSO and Greek Area functions throughout the Western Massachusetts area. Reasonable rates and flexible scheduling to serve students, faculty and staff. The Field Trip Service has a fleet of 7 school buses available year-round for service to the UMass community. For more information, call 545-2498 or 545-0056 during business hours.

Special Transportation Service serves the needs of disabled UM students, staff and faculty with 6 lift-equipped vans for trips to and from class, work and out on the town. This service is for both permanent and temporary needs and operates 7 days per week during the semesters with daytime and evening schedules. Call 545-2086 for more information.

EXCELLENT PART-TIME JOB OPPORTUNITIES! We employ more than 200 UMass students. ALL of our drivers, dispatchers and trainers are students. We offer a flexible work schedule, arranged around your class schedule. You won't find a more rewarding and fun job on campus. It's great Resume experience too. Starting pay is $5.50 per hour.

For further information about this great job opportunity, stop by our office or come to our APPLICATION MEETING on THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th, at 7:00 PM in room 101 CAMPUS CENTER. Our representatives will be on hand at this meeting to talk about the jobs available, our training program and to answer any questions you may have.

DON'T RIDE THE BUS DRIVE IT!

PUBLIC TRANSIT SAVES DOLLARS, FUEL AND OUR ENVIROMENT!

Every bus load of people that goes by means as many as fifty fewer cars are on the road. That's good news for you, our economy, and the enviroment.

Last year UMass Transit carried an average of 18,000 passengers per day, that's over 2.8 million per year!

Please help us keep the buses clean-while riding, no eating or drinking.
- Stay behind the white line in front and off the rear stairs in the back of the buses. Rear doors can open unexpectedly.
- Drivers may board and deboard passengers ONLY at official bus stops. For your safety, do not attempt to catch a bus which has already begun to exit a bus stop at any time.
- No pets except seeing-eye dogs. Thank-You.

UMass Transit Service is located on Governors Drive next to Lot 26. Any Campus Shuttle bus can drop you in front of our office. Our phone number is 545-0056. For information about the Northampton buses, call 582-1320. Save money, time and parking hassles--ride the bus to and from class, work and out on the town!!

WEATHER	ARTS	SPORTS
A partly sunny day, with a high of 80 degrees, cooling off in the evening.	You may wonder why you are so wild about Lynch's "Wild at Heart." Page 16.	Ted Garber is ready to follow in his father's legendary footsteps. Page 32.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 2

Duffey suggests shorter UMass academic year

AP Photo

Dukakis announcing further cuts on Tuesday

By The Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Dukakis ordered another round of spending cuts Tuesday to cope with decreasing tax collections, and President-Chancellor Duffey told a Boston newspaper that he might have to shorten the academic year to counteract the cut.

Dukakis' order to cabinet secretaries to trim another $150 million from their budgets came in the wake of a poll that 47 percent of the state's residents would consider leaving Massachusetts if the economy worsens.

The cuts amount to about 4 percent of executive branch spending and follows a $265 million, 4 percent across-the-board cut in total state spending ordered by the Legislature to balance the $13.4 billion budget.

"I hope this will be the last time I have to ask my cabinet secretaries to make these reductions, but given the uncertainty, it may not be," Dukakis said.

Administration and Finance Secretary L. Edward Lashman said the Executive Office of Human Services would take the biggest hit, more than $90 million, in the latest round of cuts, followed by higher education, at $27.3 million.

Duffey criticized the across-the-board cuts in a Boston Globe story on Wednesday, the first day of classes at the University, as "a big mistake. It's not the way to deal with this problem. The national reputation of the University has already been damaged."

Duffey said he is considering shortening the academic year. He said he would furlough employees and shut down the University if the cuts are too deep.

In an interview with the Collegian last summer, Duffey predicted the end of mid-year reversions, the process of the state slashing the higher education budget after legislative approval.

Acting Higher Education Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery said he would try to make the $27.3 million cut without reducing faculty or students. He said cutting either would be difficult since students already have reported to class.

Bromery told the Collegian that he plans to lobby the governor to reduce the cut to $25.5 million, a potential cut to the Amherst campus of $6 million.

"At my level we are trying to minimize the effect on the campuses and instead of cutting across-the-board we will selectively cut off-campus accounts. This way we will try not to disrupt the classrooms," he said, in a telephone interview from the Regents office in Boston.

Bromery, who has not figured how each of the 27 colleges and universities will fare after the cut, said he hoped Duffey and all other presidents would explore all the possibilities before shortening the school year or shutting down programs.

Terry Zoulas, spokesman for the Board of Regents, said it was too late to impose a tuition increase but that "all bets are off for the spring." He said likely cuts will be in scholarship accounts, the Regents office and in other "off-budget accounts."

Zoulas said higher education has been cut $50 million

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Long lines greet students

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

Students at the University of Massachusetts encountered long pre-registration lines and angry tempers Tuesday morning despite predictions of shorter lines and the recent drop in university enrollment.

Students began forming lines the night before in an effort to fill empty schedules. Timothy Davis, a freshman history major, said he slept out in order to get the classes he needed.

"I only got one class and I've heard bad stories about the [add-drop] lines, so I got here really, really early," he said.

To avoid night-long lines, the English department began a new system of handing out numbers, which English professors and students said was working "very well."

Steven Cloegherty, a freshmam English major, said he waited in line only 15 minutes for an English class. " It's a much better system than standing in line, you just grab a number," he said.

Many students were angered about receiving a small number of classes for the third year in a row. Jennifer Tarlin, a senior journalism major, said she only received one class in her major.

"I'm really upset about this schedule. I'm a senior and I can't get any classes in my major," Tarlin said.

Tara Smith, a sophomore who is undeclared, said the longest line she stood in was at the parking office.

"I got up at seven and waited in a huge line for a parking sticker, and then stood in two more lines for three hours," she said. "Some of the lines were really long, but some of them were incredibly short."

Smith said she was also angered being "short changed" on classes. Although she

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Gulf war beckons UMass
Nat. Guard students face reality

By SARAH DEMASTER
Collegian Staff

If President Bush wanted more help in the Persian Gulf, the approximately 200 University of Massachusetts students enlisted in the National Guard would have to answer the call to serve, according to a UMass military official.

Students in the Massachusetts National Guard can attend any public college or university in the state tuition-free, but are subject to being called up for duty, according to Christy Outchounis, UMass professor of military science and head of the University's Army Reserve Officer Training Corps.

The rules change, however, if the student reservist is also enrolled in the Army or Air Force ROTC program. About 200 students are enrolled to become officers, and these cadets could not be called upon to serve, Outchounis said.

While Army ROTC cadets can choose to be in the reserves, Air Force ROTC cadets do not have that choice. Junior year, Air Force cadets must contract for the National Guard or the Air Force Reserves, according to Captain Rodly Millet, head of UMass Air Force ROTC.

These cadets are then released from ROTC, and placed on full-time inactive reserve. Upon graduation, they are commissioned as officers.

"They may be called on to go after graduation, but they definitely will not be called as a student," Millet said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 19

Congressman and students rally to mobilize campus

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Collegian photo by Jeff Holland

Amherst State Rep. Stan Rosenberg

Student leaders and the Amherst state representative urged some 300 students in the Campus Center Auditorium last night to mobilize the University of Massachusetts campus against the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition and further tuition and fee increases.

Students attending the meeting marched out of the auditorium and around the campus, chanting "No to CLT!"

"Umass is a sleeping giant."said Angus McQuilken, Student Trustee. "If the 30,000 students, faculty, and employees woke up, we could make a lot of noise."

McQuilken said 20 percent of the budget allocated for the university has been cut in the last three years. Including increased expenses due to inflation, the university has lost $62 million since 1988.

Representative Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst) provided the mobilization meeting with figures estimating the impact of the CLT petition, which will be Ballot Question No. 3 in the Nov. 6 state election.

Ballot Question No. 3, if passed, would rollback all tax increases back to 1988 levels. Rosenberg said a mid-year tax rollback in this year's fiscal state budget would mean a 60 percent cut for public higher education.

If the tax rollback petition passes, an additional $25 million will be cut from Umass state allocations before spring semester , Rosenberg said. To compensate for this loss, the university would have to raise the tuition of each student by $2,000 or lay off 750-1250 Umass employees, he said.

A *Boston Globe*poll done last week indicated the CLT petition is presently in favor of passing on November 6.

"It would be cutting quality of education and reducing the quality of the degree,"Rosenberg said. "This would make it difficult for the economy to sustain itself since the Massachusetts economy is driven by people that are college educated."

Rosenberg said next year there will be 400,000 new jobs of which 50 percent will require a college graduate. He said Massachusetts is the only state which has cut higher education funding so

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

For Your Information

For your information is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a pubic service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

Thursday, September 6

Library Tours — Tours of the University Library are offered regularly in the first weeks of the semester. Tours last about one hour and leave from the tower library entrance at 10:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and 2:30 p.m. Those who cannot come at those times can make other arrangements by calling the Reference Department at 545-0150.

Tours of the Physical Sciences Library, on the second floor of the Lederle Graduate Research Center are available at 10:15 a.m. and 2:15 a.m.

Librarians at the Biological Sciences Library, room 214, Morrill Science Center and the Music Library, room 149, Fine Arts Center are also prepared to provide orientation on their collections.

Correction

Administrators at the University of Massachussetts have not planned for the layoffs of 55 faculty members, according to UMass officials.

The Collegian incorrectly reported yesterday formal layoffs would begin next fall among faculty members at UMass. According to John Cole, president of the Massachussetts Society of Professors, these layoffs may occur when the University begins cutting back academic programs, but added faculty members may also be transfered to different departmets or retire as opposed to being laid off.

The Collegian regrets any confusion this may have caused.

Student sentenced

NORTHAMPTON — A former University of Massachusetts student charged with rape pleaded guilty to lesser charges last week of indecent assault and battery of an adult.

Matthew P. LeBlanc, 22, of Fairhaven was given a suspended sentence of three to five years in state prison with three years of probation for each of the three counts of indecent assault and battery. The sentences are to be served concurrently.

Hampshire Superior Court Judge John F. Moriarty ordered LeBlanc to undergo sex offender counseling as part of the conditions of probation.

Moriarty also ordered that LeBlanc have no direct or indirect contact with the victim or her family, and that he stay away from the UMass campus. Moriarty also forbade LeBlanc from readmittance to the university.

LeBlanc dropped out of school last December after the charges were brought against him. The original charges of rape stemmed from an incident on November 14, 1989 that occurred on campus.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Mark Truskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts

It's Time To See What's New At J•Rich! switch®
Over 62 Styles To Choose From
Batteries • Guards • Bands
J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St. Amherst•253-2013
22 Masonic St. Northampton•586-6336
OPEN 7 DAYS

COLLEGIAN
NIGHT
GRAPHICS
POSITIONS AVAILABLE!!
If interested come to
113 Campus Center
3:30 TODAY!
If you cannot attend, stop by anytime and ask for Terry.

Good Stuff for Back to School
LAMPS
Swing Arm Lamp $10.95
• Table Lamps
• Desk Lamps
• Floor Lamps
• Ceiling Lamps
• Extension Cords
• Bulbs, etc.
INEXPENSIVE STORAGE ITEMS
• Crates
• Stacking Bins
• Jumbo Bins
• Utility Trollies
• Desk Carts
• Shower Caddies
• Under Shelf Baskets
• Hampers
• Trunks
POSTERS PRINTS 'N FRAMES
BEDSPREADS PILLOWS RUGS
• All Natural Fibers
• 100's to choose from
• Sheets
• Bed Pillows
• Comforters
• Throws
• Blankets
DORM FURNITURE
• Bookcases
• Desks
• Butterfly Chairs
• Folding Chairs
• Beanbag Chairs
• Directors Chairs
Folding Bookcases $44.95 natural $54.95 black
• CLOCKS
• CORK BOARDS
• CD & CASSETTE STORAGE
• TELEPHONES
• SHADES
• MIRRORS
• MUGS
• BOOK BAGS
NECESSARY EXTRAS
Hardware, Trash Bins, Mops 'N Brooms, Coffee Makers, Laundry Bags, Glassware, Dinnerware, Flatware, Candles, And On, And On
Find it at Faces
n. pleasant st. amherst • main st. northampton • open 7 days

Fairweather-Hall
10 percent off with Student I.D. expires 9/28/90
MIRANDA'S VERANDAH

LOCAL

Amherst Rep. opposes Gov.'s appointments

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Governor Michael S. Dukakis' appointments to the Board of Regents of Higher Education earlier this week were met with criticism from an Amherst State Representative.

Rep. Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst) objected to the four recently appointed Board of Regents of Higher Education members because one is a faculty member at a private institution and none of the appointees represent the education interests of Western Massachusetts.

Governor Dukakis announced his appointments to the Board of Regents last Thursday. The new members will serve five-year terms on the Board, which maintains and controls higher education policies and costs in Massachusetts.

The new members are: Augustus White III of Weston, chief of orthopedic surgery at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston; Hortensia De Los Angeles Amaro of Dorchester, associate professor at Boston University School of Public Health; Daniel S. Taylor of Boston, a partner in the Hill and Barlow Law Firm; and Arnold S. Hiatt of Boston, chairman of the board at Stride Rite Corporation.

Rosenberg said he objected to the appointment of De Los Angeles Amaro because she is a sitting faculty member of a private university.

"We are, in some ways, in competition with Boston University," he said. "We could be setting this person up for a conflict of interests."

De Los Angeles Amaro's appointment was inappropriate because Dukakis could have appointed "good people who have retired from public education," he said.

Terry Zoulas, the press secretary for Higher Education Chancellor Bromery said the Board of Regents already has a number, which he estimated at four, of faculty or board members from private institutions.

"I don't think, in Massachusetts, you can appoint people of prominence and education without some of them having ties to private higher education," Zoulas said.

Since the Board of Regents makes decisions, such as degree granting authority, for private colleges and universities, regents with ties to private institutions would not encounter conflicts of interests, Zoulas said.

"Massachusetts is unique in that half of students who attend school in Massachusetts attend private schools," he said. "Other states have more students in public schools."

Rosenberg said he was concerned that none of the recent appointees represents the interests of Western Massachusetts.

One of the newly appointed regents positions was formerly the seat of Anne H. McHugh of Holyoke, who died on Nov. 16, 1989. McHugh's seat should have been filled by someone from Western Massachusetts, according to Rosenberg.

"A substantial portion of the system, the main campus of UmassAmherst is located in Western Mass., so McHugh's position should have been filled by someone from Western Mass," he said.

Nancy Richardson, the educational advisor to the governor, could not be reached for comment on what geographical decisions the nominating council made to fill the open seats.

The nominating council was specially created by Dukakis about a month ago to choose three candidates for each position.

Campus Pond gets gassed, officials flood with water

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Approximately seventeen gallons of gasoline spilled into a storm drain in Amherst on Monday following an auto accident, contaiminating an underground stream that runs into the Campus Pond.

Five Amherst firemen and two environmental engineers from Southampton Sanitary Engineers Co. spread pads of absorbant cloth in the stream at the corner of Pray street and East Pleasant Street, where it surfaces near McClellan Street in Amherst. The gasoline was cleaned up before it reached the campus pond, according to Paul Lalonde, assistant chief of the Amherst fire department.

The fire department checked the stream at several points where it surfaces between McClellan Street and the campus pond on Tuesday. No traces of gasoline were found, said Lalonde.

"Our efforts were successful, we never had any downstream pollution," said

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Collegian photo by R. DuCree

Gasoline in the sewer between Amherst and the Campus Pond yesterday.

ROTC jumps the puddle

UMass army in training walks on rope

By DAVID FORRESTER
Collegian Staff

The Army ROTC Rangers, an elite infantry training group, landed on campus pond at 0600 hours yesterday and began Operation Puddle Jump.

"Operation Puddle Jump" is the military title given to the University of Massachusetts Army ROTC's annual Rope Walk Easter Seals fundraiser. Officer-In-Command Craig Avery said the event, now a tradition at the university, serves the dual purpose of promoting the ROTC and helping the Easter Seals Society, an organization that provides services and programs for people with disabilities.

The Rangers set up a two-rope bridge between two trees on either side of campus pond and demonstrated how to cross it. After donating a dollar, students attempted to cross the bridge. ROTC cadets time the students as they cross and prizes are awarded for the fastest man and woman.

Cadet Captain Avery, a fourth-year Army ROTC member, said the group plans to repeat the event next Tuesday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. He said the Rope Walk marks the beginning of this year's ROTC events. They plan to sponsor several other charity fundraisers such as the annual Toys For Tots campaign.

Everywoman's Center seeks students' help

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

The Against Violence Against Women Programs of the Everywoman's Center at the University of Massachusetts will launch their counselor and educator advocate training program to combat violence against women, said the volunteer coordinator.

"This is a way for people to get involved and help other people," Deb Levy, coordinator of the program, said. "No prior experience with counselling is necessary but some awareness of violence against women is important."

Counselor/Advocates staff a 24 hour hotline and offer counseling and advocacy to victim/survivors of sexual assault. Educator/Advocates provide preventive and interventive education and political advocacy on issues of violence against women.

Some topics in the training will be rape, battering, child sexual assault, sexual harassment, AIDS and sexual assault and self-defense.

Students can acquire 3 credits through the Women's Studies department. The program requires a 2 semester commitment. Training ends with a graduation ceremony. Contact the EWC by September 10 to participate in the training which starts September 15.

UMass Psych. Prof. Golan dies

Peers and students reflect on the transcendent academic

By SARAH DEMASTER
Collegian Staff

Stuart Golann, a psychology professor at the University of Massachusetts, died last Saturday at St. Mary's Hospital in Milwaukee, WI following a bypass operation. Golann, a resident of Florence, was 54 years old.

Nationally and internationally known for his work in the field of family therapy, he published a number of books and articles. Two of the more noted works are The Handbook of Community Mental Health, published in 1972, and The Bethlehem Diaries, published in 1974.

"He was a renowned authority in community psychology," said Psychology Professor Bonnie Strickland, who has taught at the University for 17 years, and in 1987 served as president of the American Psychological Association.

Born in Queens, NY in 1936, Golann was a professor of clinical psychology at UMass for 22 years. In addition to teaching, he also counseled families and researched psychotherapy.

David Todd, an associate psychology professor at UMass, worked with Golann for 20 years.

"He was very thoughtful and creative," Todd said. "He was never satisfied with the obvious. He always wanted to think things through and look for other ways to do it.

"He would often sit and listen for a long time and not say too much, but then put [ideas] together in a way that would make you think about it — that no one else had really looked at that way."

Laura Cohen, a senior UMass psychology major, agreed that Golann made his students think. Cohen took Family and Film with Golann last spring.

"He was always willing to talk with students to further develop ideas that were introduced in class," she said.

Golann is survived by his wife Ann Anderson, his son Evan Golann, his stepson Joshua Anderson, his stepdaughter Kate Anderson, his sister Adria, and two nephews.

Cops seize rifle from student's car

Compiled by Preston P. Forman
Collegian Staff

Police seized a .22 rifle from a student on Monday after Public Safety officers observed the weapon in a vehicle near Sylvan. Police said the rifle will be held until the owner can make arrangements to take it off-campus.

It is illegal to have a weapon on University property.

ARRESTS

• Dean P. Lajoie, 22, of Longmeadow, was arrested early Wednesday morning on North Pleasant St. for operating under the influence of alcohol and several other motor vehicle offenses.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 18

Univ. employees encouraged to quit

Service Union offers retirement incentives and reduced hours

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The Service Employees International Union at the University of Massachusetts has agreed with school administrators on eight options to save money and avoid involuntary layoffs to the union's 900 members.

In response to a four percent across the board cut in the state budget, resulting in a loss of $5.9 million to UMass, and an additional four percent cut made Tuesday, members of SEIU Local 509 have until September 18 to make proposals for the options, which include early retirement incentives, reduced work weeks, and time-off without pay.

A spokeswoman for the SEIU said the measures are "regrettable, but necessary given the circumstances."

The SEIU formed last fall and represents non-teaching professionals, including 850 administrators below the rank of department head. This is the first contract the Amherst branch is negotiating.

The eight options are:

- Early Retirement: Members of the union who are 55 or older or who have 20 years of credible state service may voluntarily propose early retirement, effective September 30, or on a mutually agreed upon date prior to October 29.
- 43-Week Work Year: Unit members may propose a change from a 52-week contract to a 43-week contract with a 15 percent reduction in salary payable over the 52-week work year.
- Intermittent Time Off Without Pay: Unit members may propose taking intermittent time off without pay. Staff must specify the number of days to be taken over a specific period of time. The total period of time off within a year must not exceed 45 days.
- Voluntary Reduced Work Week: Unit members may propose a reduced work schedule of at least 20 hours but no more than 40 hours a week.
- Staff Development Leave: Unit members who have completed six years of equivalent full-time professional service at the University may propose a staff development leave for 11 months at half pay. The leave must in some way benefit both the University and the unit member.
- Voluntary Unpaid Leave of Absence: Unit members may propose taking an unpaid leave of absence for a minimum of one year. The unit member does not need to explain the reason for the leave.

GEO expects budget woes

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization is anticipating bearing an equal burden in the recent round of budget cuts which has taken about $12 million from the University of Massachusetts' fiscal '91 budget.

Emily Isaacs, a member of the GEO Coordinating Committee said she hopes the University will continue to honor their recently signed contract, but said she sees future cuts made in her organization.

"The administration has agreed not to lower the number of teaching assistants in our contract, but next year I think things might change," she said.

GEO also is considering hiring a staff, Issacs said, to fight the Citizens for Limited Taxation proposal. She said GEO is also planning on a long term plan to work with the entire campus on fighting the CLT proposal.

"GEO is a very active organization, we're hoping to get a lot of people involoved with this," she said.

The Graduate Employee Organization is the union of working graduate students on campus, which includes teaching assistants.

■ Add/ Drop line

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

signed up for six classes she only received two.

Honore Sullivan, another undeclared sophomore, said she was having difficulty talking to professors about what classes she needed and getting the classes she wanted.

"I've been all over campus and really haven't had much luck," she said.

Jennifer Johnson and Anne Collins, both undeclared freshman, said they waited three and a half hours in line at the Psychology department in Tobin Hall.

"The line was pretty bad, but I got the class I need, and I know a lot of people didn't get what they wanted," Johnson said.

Five UMass Profs. accept retirement offer

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

Five faculty members have taken advantage of an early retirement offer made last month by the University of Massachusetts in an effort to offset growing budget difficulties.

The faculty members of the Massachusetts Society of Professors — one each in Afro-American studies, Chemistry, Environmental Sciences department, Psychology and the College of Food and Natural Resources were all granted early retirement effective September 1, according to Karen Sherbin of the UMass news office.

The early retirement package was agreed upon by the MSP, the union that represents some 1,200 faculty members and librarians on campus, on August 8. The deadline for taking advantage of the plan was August 31.

The early retirement package offered a one-time bonus of 50 percent of an employee's annual salary plus regular benefits for those 55 and older.

The plan negotiated last year, according to John Cole president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, offered a one-time pay increase, instead of a bonus, of up to 25 percent of the salaries of union members age 55 or older.

Cole said the recent departure of the five retiring faculty members is a "normal" process but added it may become a problem because the university will be unable to rehire new professors.

He said the MSP is concerned with Tuesday's additional four percent cut because the union has yet to negotiate salary.

Cole said the MSP will take an active role in educating the public about the Citizens for Limited Taxation proposition which would drastically cut the University's budget. "We're a very active organization and we want to participate in a wide effort to inform the community of what is at stake if the CLT proposition passes," he said.

Still the best: lowest prices, biggest selection ... that's Liquors 44!
BEER WINE LIQUORS
Prices do not include deposit
LITE BEER $10.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
IMPORTED Heineken HOLLAND BEER $15.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. bottles
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT case of 24 12 oz. cans $11.79 + DEP
Labatt's BEER & ALE $11.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
BUSCH $8.89 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
FALSTAFF & FALSTAFF LIGHT $7.29 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
COKE CLASSIC & DIET COKE $5.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
Almaden $5.69 4.0 L BAG-IN-A-BOX GOLDEN CHABLIS, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC, RIESLING, BURGUNDY, BLUSH CHABLIS, VIN ROSE, RHINE, CHABLIS
NAPA RIDGE $3.29 750 ml WHITE ZINFANDEL
GLEN ELLEN $3.49 750 ml CHARDONNAY
PAUL MASSON $5.49 3.0 L BURGUNDY, BLUSH, CHABLIS, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE, VIN ROSE
August Sebastiani WHITE ZINFANDEL $5.69 1.5L
Asti Spumante MARTINI & ROSSI $8.49 750 ml
BACARDI BREEZERS $3.79 RUM COOLERS TROPICAL, LIME, PEACH, BERRY 4 pkg.-12 oz. bottles
STOLICHNAYA VODKA SALE $18.49 MAIL-IN REBATE $5.00 $13.49 AFTER REBATE 1.75 L
BLACK VELVET $11.99 1.75 L
BACARDI SILVER RUM $13.99 1.75 L
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH $13.69 1.75 L
SEAGRAM'S GIN $10.99 1.75 L
Cossack VODKA $8.99 1.75 L
KAHLUA $10.99 750 ml
LIQUORS 44
not responsible for typographical errors
9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
TWO LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 8/30/90 THRU WED 9/12/90
TeleCheck

Bart's HOMEMADE
Homemade ICE CREAM frozen YOGURT & Pastries.
It's Cultured & De-licious.
AMHERST
103 N.PLEASANT ST.
253-9371

Novel weekend for writers

48 hr. writing marathon pleases students

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — At 6 p.m. Friday they sat down to computer terminals. Forty-eight hours and thousands of sentences later they got up, proud authors of embryo novels.

The last weekend of summer might spell picnics and barbecues for most, but participants in the First Annual Labor Day Weekend Writing Marathon could boast Tuesday of having written the book on the long holiday weekend — or at least the rough draft.

"It was way past my wildest expectations," Westfield State College English professor Stephen Sossaman said Tuesday. "We had seven students who took the project very seriously for the entire 48 hours. They really didn't do anything but write, except for occasional naps."

The novel approach to Labor Day, designed to give students a chance to unleash their creative impulses, was inspired by a contest Sossaman read about in which professional writers competed against each other to turn out a book in a weekend.

With the help of sophomore J.A. Marshall, the writing marathon was slated for the weekend before classes began.

Three women and four men showed up at Bates Hall with a sleeping bag, toothbrush, change for pizza, a computer disk and imagination. They didn't bring notes or an already written outline.

Sossaman suggested that the seven pick a genre to help them get going, such as horror or science fiction.

"I thought a genre novel a lot easier to write than the great American novel," he said.

For hours at a stretch the clacking of keyboards was the only sound in the room, Sossaman said.

"It's hard to describe how energizing this experience is even though the sleeping was a bit tough," he said in a telephone interview.

Marshall, who got started with the sentence, "He put on the dark black gloves and stared at himself in the mirror," said he switched from science-fiction to psychodrama while tapping out his novel outline.

"It was a wonderful experience. We were able to have such a great block of time to throw into a project," he said.

"The thing was, you'd start to run out, you'd come to a point where the fear would start in and the writer's block would start in and you'd look around and you'd see everybody else was still going," he said.

When it was all over at 6 p.m. Sunday, the seven "more or less" had a novel outline and Sossaman had just about finished a pulp novel on Vietnam combat.

"Everyone wrote quite a bit. No one expressed disappointment. Obviously you can't write a novel in a weekend, but they made some progress," he said.

Sophomore Angela Collette, who almost finished an untitled novel tracing the history of two girls growing up, said she didn't regret giving up any beach time.

"You've had all summer to lie by the pool," she said. "I meant to write this summer instead of just wasting away."

Students and Sossaman said they hope to be back next year.

"Some people think I was crazy to do this but ... I like the idea of creative intensity," Sossaman said.

LBGA events

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

The Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Alliance will start off its semester of events with a coffee social this Friday, September 7, in Campus Center room 803 from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. The social will be followed by a showing of the film 'Torch Song Trilogy' at 7 p.m., also in CC 803.

All students are welcome to come to the LBGA office, located in Student Union 413B, to check out the information board for listings of gay off-campus housing, information on current political issues and legislation, and other local and national gay organizations, as well as to hang out and meet other students.

Tuesday, September 11, will mark the first day of organizational and informational meetings for students who would like to become involved with gay student activities and events. At 4:30 p.m. in CC 805-809, the Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Men's Counseling Collective, a group which trains students to offer peer counseling on issues of sexuality, will have its first information session. At 6:30 p.m. in SU 413B, the LBGA will have its first meeting to discuss events and goals for the semester. At 8:30 p.m. in SU 413B, the Lesbian, Bisexual Womyn's Union, a support and social group for women, will have its first rap group night.

Students are encouraged to come out and take advantage of the numerous groups and activities available this semester.

■ Rally

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

drastically ($550 million) in three years.

"If you believe in the kind of things that make Massachusetts the kind of place you want to live in, then you can't vote for CLT," he said.

The budget cuts to the university already have affected tuition and fee increases as well as Financial Aid allocations at a rate which McQuilken called "appalling."

He said mandatory fees have increased by 105 percent since 1988. The annual total cost for in-state undergraduates, including tuition, fee, and room and board has increased by 53 percent in the three year period, he said. Similar costs for out-of-state students have increased by 56 percent during the same period.

The percentage of unmet financial aid need has increased from 24.5 percent in 1984/1985 school year to 45 percent in 1988-1989 school year.

"They're going to try to increase fees and tuition this spring,"McQuilken said. "We're going to tell them they can't, especially if they can't provide enough financial aid and especially during the mid-year when we can't apply for more Financial Aid."

McQuilken said the only way to stop CLT and further budget cuts is by a strong student vote. Since college age students have the lowest voting percentage, they have no influence over the issues affecting them, he said.

STRETCHY VELVET DRESS BY STREET LIFE IN AVACADO GREEN AND JET BLACK – $78.
ChoNa
150 MAIN STREET, THORNES MARKETPLACE
NORTHAMPTON 413 584 7803

Good Advice — Honest Price.
NEW!

BostonAcoustics HD5 and HD7 Speakers
HD5 $143/pair
HD7 $189/pair
ONKYO TX-811 Receiver $185

ONKYO DX-1400 18-bit CD Player $187

ONKYO TA-W200 Dual Cassette Deck Fully Calibrated! $235

Five College delivery available.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant • Northampton • 584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed, double-spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editors' discretion.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 30 typed lines and columns must not exceed 65 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Reggie Santiago/Gayle Long, Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Students interested in becoming columnists or cartoonists should come down to the Collegian newsroom and ask to talk to Reggie, Gayle or Jeremy.

We look forward to receiving your submissions and comments throughout the semester.

The Editorial Desk is presently in desperate need of columnists and cartoonists from the Five-College Area.
Please call 545-0719 for more information.
Send submissions to Gayle Long/Reggie Santiago, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.
Or come down to the newsroom and talk to us!

LSC petition fights for rights

We are writing out of grave concern for the rights of students on this campus. The UMass Legal Services Office has, for many years, been a strong advocate for students, supplying legal advice, referrals and, until recently, representing students in court.

Twelve consecutive damage suits were won against the University between 1976 and 1986, all filed by the Legal Services Office on behalf of students.

In 1987, the Board of Trustees reacted by abolishing the Legal Services Office entirely, creating a Legal Services Center, with no authority to litigate on behalf of students.

This has left us with no means of obtaining legal representation in court, due to the high costs of private counsel. Students' legal needs, in the areas of landlord/tenant disputes, consumer protection, family law and civil rights, are unmet.

Last semester, the Legal Services Governing Board presented a proposal to Vice Chancellor Dennis Madson, asking for the restoration of limited litigation authority for the Legal Services Center. This proposal does not allow for suits against the University or the town of Amherst.

The proposal was rejected outright, just two days before the end of the semester, for "not being in the best interests of this campus." The University has presented no valid arguments for why we shouldn't have a Legal Services Office with limited litigation authority.

This is your campus, and your legal services, funded by your student activities fee. Shouldn't you decide what is in your best interest?

In the weeks to come, a petition will be distributed on campus, demanding the restoration of limited litigation to the Legal Services Center. We encourage you to help in this effort, by signing the petition or distributing it.

For further information, contact the Legal Services Center at 545-1995 or call the Student Government Association office, 420 Student Union Building, at 545-0341.

Natasha D. Diephuis
SGA President
Angus G. McQuilken
Student Trustee

Silber 'Factbook' shocking

Television advertisements are promoting gubernatorial candidate John Silber as "an outsider," "a straight shooter" and as sympathetic to the "truly poor and the elderly." He points to his record at Boston University since 1971 as his qualifications as governor. The nicknames for his platform ideas on how to run the state effectively are "shockers."

While Silber earns more than the presidents at M.I.T. and Harvard, the average salary of B.U. faculty is lower than the average at other private schools. Silber has failed to recognize any unions on campus. In both April 1976 and December 1979 a majority of faculty members voted for Silber's resignation because they felt he was unfit for office.

Many qualified women have been turned down tenure by Silber despite overwhelming faculty support for them. He has been quoted on many occasions making derogatory comments about women, rape and pregnancy.

What would Silber's definition be of "truly needy" for women applicants for state welfare? The Factbook cites Silber in an interview saying that welfare mothers should be denied money if they become pregnant again or get married.

When Silber first announced his decision to run for governor, the public learned that he had a homosexual son. Silber said he supported his son in every way. Why, then, has the Coalition for Lesbian and Gay Civil Rights denounced Silber's candidacy?

For 10 years, Silber denied the Coalition's request for a clause in B.U.'s anti-discriminatory policy regarding "sexual preference." Silber felt that such a clause was an acceptance of homosexuality as "a normative way of life."

Silber has already "shocked" the students and faculty at B.U. with his aggressiveness, arrogance and ignorance. The B.U. campus wants Silber's record public before the election. . .with good reason.

Kendra Pratt is a Collegian staff member

Kendra Pratt

Concerned faculty and students have also compiled a record of Silber "shockers" in The Factbook on John Silber, published in August 1990. The Factbook hopes to dispel the myths that Silber's public relations team has created to launch Silber into the corner office on Beacon Hill.

Although Silber may be an "outsider" to the fiscal state problems, the Factbook proves Silber horribly mismanaged the B.U. budget. When Silber took his position at B.U. in 1971, the university was in debt by $8 million. Almost 20 years later, with Silber in office, the debt stands at nearly $250 million. The interest on this debt in 1989 alone was $18 million, paid by $1,000 of the students' tuition.

While Silber accuses Bellotti of corruption, Silber's own financial record implies that he has been lining his own pockets with B.U. funds. So much for the straight shooter.

In 1987, Silber raised his salary 26 percent, up to $275,000.

However, the Factbook states that Silber only raised faculty salaries by six percent.

America forgets Vietnam as military in Middle East grows

The ongoing media and press coverage of the crisis in the Mideast recalls the ancient Roman adage: "In war, the first casualty is truth."

Although outright hostilities have been avoided as of this writing, the gleeful backers of the U.S. military response are forgetting the larger historical and diplomatic context in which this crisis is occurring.

Saddam Hussein's naked aggression against tiny Kuwait should not be accepted blandly. However, for so many U.S. citizens to embrace the military option suggests an emotionalism and nationalism that destabilizes the whole world.

In times of possible armed conflict and national crisis, there is a gut-level tendency for people to close ranks. The rare dissenter in such a climate is apt to feel especially isolated; those of us deeply concerned about the rapid escalation of U.S. forces in the Gulf have found frightfully little support in the national media.

Even the Democrats, the supposed loyal opposition, have appeared as disciples of the President's position. As one voice they intone, "The United States is being firm; President Bush is showing resolve." Our attachment to that vague concept of "our way of life" (President Bush) seems to underlie much of our resolve.

Missing from this truncated debate is any sense of history or underlying issues in the region. For starters, what is the untold story of Kuwait's decision to produce more oil prior to Hussein's invasion?

If the U.S. is such a big booster of democracy, why do we turn aside when our ally, Saudi Arabia, continues to allow public beheadings for certain crimes and is run by a wealthy elite?

Jay Allain

Our other pal, Turkey, has an average per capita income of $1,000 and an even more primitive governance. In its report for 1990, Amnesty International reported that in Turkey, "Thousands of people were imprisoned for political reasons, including hundreds of prisoners of conscience. . . among them members of political organizations, trade unions and banned Kurdish groups, as well as journalists and religious activists. . . The use of torture continued to be widespread and systematic."

Overall, the U.S. seems to have forgotten the lessons of Vietnam. Blinded by our supposed military invincibility, we continue to use saber-rattling as our first response to international crisis.

Those voices in the wilderness, which suggest that war is the most vulgar human act, are deemed treasonous, soft on aggression. But Gandhi noted long ago, "Not even our enemies are always wrong."

Hussein had no right to invade Kuwait. But why are there no negotiations between him and the U.S. administration, to air the nature of his grievances and to forge a solution short of armed confrontation? Such a stance could make known the wide international censure for his exploits while allowing Hussein a chance to explain his motivations.

The hastiness with which the U.S. has propelled thousands of troops into harm's way, with so little public debate on the wisdom of all this, must deeply concern those for democracy and peace. Some seldom heard questions include: Are U.S. interests in the region so great that all-out war is feasible? Can the U.S., with its history of armed intervention against Grenada, Guatemala (1953) and Nicaragua (the 1980s), act as if Hussein is doing the unusual by taking Kuwait?

Why has so little been heard about domestic problems since the Gulf crisis began? And why does the press conform so readily?

Jay Allain is a Northampton resident.

Egos itching for a fight

Thousands of people are massing in the desert, armed and ready for combat.

Ready for death.

Saudis, Soviets, English, French, Turkish, Jordanian, Canadian and American citizens armed to the teeth, prepared to fight for their country.

Innocent families are being held hostage in countries they want to flee from, being used as pawns in someone else's war of words and threats.

Meredith O'Brien

President Bush has sent thousands of men and women into the ungodly hot Saudi Arabian desert to serve as deterrents for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's potential aggression, to perhaps persuade him to pull his troops out of Kuwait and go home.

Operation "Desert Shield" is what Bush calls it. But, for all practical purposes, it is a human shield — not only for the muses of Hussein, but for Bush as well.

All of this weaponry, this massive show of military might, may be necessary to stop further aggression. It may be a preventive measure, to prevent what some call another "Hitler" from ordering the murder of millions of his own citizens, along with millions of foreign nationals.

Or, it may just simply be a move to curb Iraqi control over Kuwaiti oil so American businesses and consumers can have their oil, and use it too.

Droves of American Reserves have been called into active duty, shipped to the Middle East like loaded weapons. Not since the ill-fated Vietnam disaster has such a conglomeration of American soldiers and machinery been sent out for potential combat.

Whispers of a draft blow through the hallowed halls of the State Department, the Pentagon. More and more young American men and women are to be called to join a multinational army, navy and air force.

More people called upon to lay down their lives.

But memories of Vietnam cannot be shaken.

Events are shifting too quickly. As the world lies on the edge of another massive war, egos are being used as rapiers, to jab and unruffle the foe. Bush and Hussein, while not the only players in this deadly game, seem to be bolstering their own egos while beefing up the forces to back up their insults.

Patience is running thin. Water supplies are down. American fighter pilots tease Iraqi pilots thousands of feet in the air. . .waiting to shoot, to ignite the keg of dynamite.

According to the latest reports, American troops are itching for a fight. They really can't wait it out to see if the diplomatic methods of resolution pan out. They are sick of sitting in the sand when there is no beach. They are bored.

One shot. That's all it takes.

But finally it seems as though the United States is joining forces with the rest of the world, that much of the world and the United Nations approve of a multinational army (Desert Shield) to stop Hussein.

It seems like an insatiable quest, where many lives could be lost if egos are bruised, if soldiers get bored.

With most of the world in agreement over enforced economic sanctions, backed up by tremendous military artillery, we can just hope no one jumps the gun.

Just one shot. . .

Meredith O'Brien is a Collegian columnist

Female phone fiasco lacks respect in male workplace

"H-e-e-e-y baby, when can you come to my house and fix my phone?" (wink-wink nudge-nudge)

I stood at the top of an open manhole, wearing the usual attire of jeans, tee-shirt, hard hat and safety glasses, hanging tools to my partner below.

Meanwhile, Macho Studman had pulled up alongside the work area. This cross between Arnold Swarzenneger and a dead platypus rode up alongside, blocking traffic, to ask me this rather repulsive question — like I would touch anything that belonged to this man.

Gayle Long

Of course, I could not flip this man the Bird. He'd probably call up the company and have me fired. All I could do was wave him off and give him a tight smile.

(Gee, buddy, thanks for the offer! Boy, I feel much better about myself when people like you make such deep and touching comments. You have made my life complete.)

This was the type of comment I heard all summer. While working at New England Telephone, I was a helper, or more officially, I was an Assistant Splice-Service Technician in the cable repair department.

The job entailed setting up manhole equipment, fetching tools and the like. It was a great job: I rode around in the trucks, learning the finer points of telephone repair services.

Unfortunately, I also had to learn the truth about women in male-dominated professions, or in the workplace in general. As Rodney Dangerfield once said, "No respect."

There was the jealousy factor as well. Men in the other departments were angry they did not get "broads" to drive around in the trucks with them.

One of my female co-workers, at a garage while having the truck repaired with her male partner, overheard the mechanic comment, "Boy, are you lucky. You get your own truck and a chick to ride around with you all day. Where do I sign up?"

Other comments were, "Honey, does your husband know you are here?" (Husband, HA!)

"Darlin', you are wearing the smallest little workboots that I ever did see! You should be home, making lemonade and relaxing. This dirty street is no place for a jewel like yourself."

(Why, first of all, is this guy looking at my feet? Why does he care about lemonade and who said I wanted to relax? A jewel? That's a new one. Wherever could he have learned that term? In a Dickens novel or a smutty magazine? Your guess is as good as mine. Dirty street? I bet the guy was dirtier than the street. Either way, please kill it before it infects.)

"Sugar, if you ever get tired of your summer job, you could always be my helper."

(Gee, am I even supposed to even begin to take a stab at what he needs help with? His hormones, perhaps? Or maybe his lack of brain cells?)

So, if nothing else, I learned a great deal of vocabulary.

My experience was something which I do not look forward to in the real world.

I hope I will be able to hold my own and take it as it comes. Maybe even try to have some class.

It is a question of gaining and keeping respect on the job. Which is what any person, including a woman, wants.

But in case that doesn't work, does anyone know the male equivalent of the word BROAD?

Gayle Long is a Collegian columnist

The Editorial Desk runs a Letters to the Editor section on Thursdays. Submissions are due by noon on Wednesdays.

Letters can be sent to The Editorial Editors, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003, and must bear the writer's name, local address and phone number to be considered for publication.

Or come down to the Collegian newsroom and ask to talk to Reggie, Gayle or Jeremy.

Ignorant citizens blindly follow greedy U.S. government

Lies. Propaganda. More propaganda.

The U.S. government. The media. The American school system.

What does this lead to?

Apathetic, ignorant, patronizing Americans who blindly follow their government.

When it comes down to it, Americans are selfish, self-centered imbeciles who only understand violence. The threat of war has finally woken up the American psyche.

Why are people talking about world events? Why are people using the words Middle East as if they have been there and lived there all their lives? Why has the word Arab become the new vocabulary word of the "wanna-be intellectuals?"

Money and Death. These two words just about sum up the reasons for the new breed of American Middle East analysts who think they know what the hell they are talking about. Americans jump when they hear that gas prices are going up. And they jump even higher when they could have to risk their lives.

NOBODY in this mass of eurocentric barbarians (otherwise known as the good ol' US of A) has even an ounce of understanding or feeling into what is really happening except for those people who have lived in and experienced the Third World.

You think President Bush gives a damn about people's lives and safety? While he and his imperialistic buddies play golf in Kennebunkport, thousands of refugees from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh are in Jordan with no food or water. And many shops in Iraq have no meat to sell to its people because of the amoral food sanctions imposed upon them.

Minu Sebastian

You think Dan Rather, Ted Koppel, Brit Hume or Tom Brokaw could ever really understand or get the truth about what is really happening? They are all fighting over who can get where FIRST. "Ted Koppel is the FIRST American journalist to reach Baghdad. . ." "And now Dan Rather, the FIRST American journalist in an exclusive interview with Saddam Hussein. . ."

Instead of racing all over the Middle East trying to devise ways in which to sell themselves to the American public, American journalists would be much better off having live exclusive reading sessions in the history department of their local library.

History, not the propaganda the U.S. calls history, has many truths to be exposed. They should start with their own history and tell people that this country was created by killing and stealing from an entire race of people; that their country was built by the slave labor of Third World people; that their country, along with the rest of the European community, colonized, killed and destroyed people and cultures all over the world.

What can be revealed by these few lines of truth is that NOTHING has changed. The superpowers: the United States, Great Britain, France and the Soviet Union, along with the rest of the European community, continue to deprive others of what is rightfully theirs.

Why are we in Saudi Arabia? To defend their border and preserve freedom and stability for everyone. If you believe those lies, then you should fly to Saudi Arabia and prepare for a long, hard battle.

Otherwise, you should take a good look at your values, lifestyle and material wealth. All of what you have is because of the imperialistic, barbarian and amoral policies of your government. The U.S. and Europe control most of the wealth of this planet. Because of this, people suffer and die everyday.

On August 2, 1990, Iraq invaded Kuwait and reclaimed what is rightfully theirs. The U.S. and Europe watched in utter disgust and contempt. Why?

Because a person of the ARAB masses might actually have some control of oil, a valuable resource.

Minu Sebastian is a Collegian columnist

■ Shorter Year

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

this year alone and $145 million over the past three years. The higher education budget now stands at $636.7 million.

The Amherst campus' budget before yesterday was $141.9 million, a three-year decrease of nearly $40 million. The university swallowed a $6 million cut in August.

Dukakis said he was ordering cabinet secretaries to implement immediately the 4 percent cuts ordered by the Legislature in the budget he signed Aug. 1.

Cabinet heads have 15 days to prepare plans for the latest cuts. The governor's move followed a report by the Revenue Department that August tax collections had come in $ 26.7 million below estimates.

Lashman said that tax collections for July and August were about $45 million to $50 million below expectations.

Dukakis said he ordered cuts higher than the current revenue shortfall to provide a "cushion" against additional setbacks in the state or national economies.

Dukakis said the cuts are "absolutely essential if we're going to make sure that this state begins to get back on the road to economic recovery."

Asked about the possibility of another tax increase if tax collections worsen, Dukakis said, "I don't think that's at all realistic."

The Legislature this year approved the largest tax increase in the state's history, $1.2 billion this year and $1.6 billion next fiscal year.

But the Revenue Department said that other than some income tax withholding increase, the effects of the tax hike had not begun to show up in the August collections.

The governor's action was endorsed by Richard Manley, head of the business-backed Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, who had warned earlier that the budget was precariously balanced.

It also was supported by Democratic legislative leaders. Republican leaders, while acknowledging the need for cuts, said the move was "too little, too late."

Dukakis predicted further state employee layoffs would result from the new cuts.

Unlike the cuts ordered by the Legislature, the governor's cuts do not affect aid to cities and towns, except for some discretionary programs, Dukakis said.

Human Services Secretary Philip Johnston said he hoped to make some of the cut by holding down rate increases for hospitals and nursing homes under the state's Medicaid program. He said he would meet with representatives of those groups before making any final decision.

The poll also showed 61 percent of those surveyed feel the state's economy is going to get worse over the next six months, compared to only 15 percent who expect it to improve.

The poll had a margin of error of 5 percent.

Dukakis said he could understand younger people, especially those laid off from high technology jobs, wanting to move. But he said layoffs are occurring in California as well and many states face economic problems similar to Massachusetts.

Collegian Staff member Preston P. Forman contributed to this article.

■ Gas spill

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Lalonde.

Shortly after 11:00 a.m. on Monday, a Cadillac Seville backed over a concrete curb on Pray Street, rupturing its gas tank, according to Lalonde.

Seventeen gallons of gasoline then leaked out of the tank into a nearby storm drain, which empties into the stream.

The Amherst Fire Department responded at 11:50 a.m. on Monday, and quickly spread downstream the strips of absorbant fabric, which are designed to attract flourocarbons. The department also poured 2,000 gallons of water down the drain where the spill occurred, to further flush out any lingering gasoline, said Lalonde.

Gasoline that was not absorbed by the fabric rose to the surface of the stream and evaporated when it reached open air, said Lalonde.

"We're fortunate that it was a moving stream," said Lalonde. "That kept things stirred up."

The stream runs underground parallel to North Pleasant Street, surfacing north of McClellan street and again behind a residence on Beston Street.

METROPOLITAN BOOKSELLERS'
BOOK FAIR
W·A·R·E·H·O·U·S·E S·A·L·E
Marches on as
1,000'S OF NEW BOOKS ARRIVE!
TEXTBOOKS $2.50 to $5.00
Extraordinary Selection of Books From Major Publishers at Unbelievably Low Prices!
Publishers: Random House, Simon & Schuster, Harper & Row, MacMillan, Viking, Prentice Hall, Bantam Doubleday, Scribner, Putnam, Morrow
Fiction: Romance, Mysteries, Novels, Fantasy, Suspense, Science Fiction, Westerns, Sports, Gothics, Historical Non-Fiction: History, Firm, Nature, Medical, Health, Philosophy, Hobbies, Literature
Children's: Stories, Fairy Tales, General Interest, Educational Authors: Stephen King, Isaac Asimov, Barbara Michaels, G.B. Trudeau, Colleen McCullough, Richard Condon, Louis Grizzard, John D McDonald, Charles Schultz, William Buckley, Helen H. Santmyer, Alfred Hitchcock, Ruth Rendell, Bill Cosby
Thousands of Books 70% Off! Original Publisher's List Price
Ton of Children's Books 50% Off! Original Publisher's List Price
ALL OTHER BOOKS AT EXCEPTIONAL VALUES!
This Ad is worth $5.00 towards any purchase over $25.00! (limit one per customer)
The Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley, MA
(In the old Almy's Store at The Mountain Farms Mall.)
Hours: Mon-Sat. 10-9, Sunday 12-6
This extraordinary selection is available from publishers' overstocks, returns, special printings and liquidations.

Pearl Street
413 584 7771
10 PEARL ST. NORTHAMPTON, MA

On the 'Brink' of a cure for lyme disease

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — A congressman and a team of researchers plan to visit Christie Brinkley to see if the cover girl has figured out a way to fight Lyme disease.

Brinkley believes the guinea hens she is raising are eating the deer ticks on the Long Island estate she shares with her husband, singer Billy Joel.

The ticks carry Lyme disease, which causes a variety of symptoms and can be fatal.

Rep. George Hochbrueckner quickly seized the [photo] opportunity when Brinkley told the Democrat the tick population dropped after she let the hens wander.

He said researchers will study whether the birds can tell the difference between dog ticks and deer ticks.

They will also try to determine if the deer tick population is lower on the celebrity's property than at neighbors' homes.

The hens are used in Africa to keep ticks out of barnyards, Hochbrueckener said.

Overdue library books could mean jail

State law places strict repercussions on late returns

BOSTON (AP) — If you aren't very prompt about returning library books, take care. Starting this month, overdue books could make you a criminal in Massachusetts.

A new law, signed by Gov. Michael Dukakis in June, would allow for the arrest of library scofflaws if they have received notice that their books are 30 days overdue.

The law drew criticism from one criminal defense lawyer, who says the state's crowded legal system doesn't need to be bloated further with ranks of library scofflaws.

"I think the police are having enough trouble chasing down murderers and rapists without having to keep up with people who have overdue library books," said David Linksy, a criminal defense attorney in Cambridge.

But Gregor Trinkaus-Randall, a collection management consultant for the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, said librarians need tough enforcement tools.

"I think one of the things the attorney is missing is the fact that any library book that is not returned has to be replaced by the library, and is money out of the town's pocket that could be spent on other materials," Trinkaus-Randall said.

In Shrewsbury, for example, the librarian estimates a loss of $12,000 per year in library materials, Trinkaus-Randall said.

Still, Trinkaus-Randall said he expects librarians will use discretion in sending police after those overdue books.

"Most libraries will go through more notification of somebody, giving them the benefit of the doubt," he said. "In most of the cases, they are not going to say on day 31, send the police out."

Linsky pointed out the new law allows for the arrest of those with overdue books without a warrant. He said that goes too far.

"You can't make a warrantless arrest for assault and battery, but you can make one for overdue library books," Linsky said.

"If the police are told by an employee of the library that you have an overdue library book, then the police can arrest you in any public place and put the handcuffs on you," he said. "That's the real horror show of this thing."

The new law also raises the maximum fine for an overdue book from a maximum of $50 to a maximum of $500. Although the law makes no mention of a jail sentence for an overdue book, it allows for a maximum prison sentence of up to five years and a fine of up to $25,000 for the theft of library materials or property worth more than $250. The new law goes into effect Sept. 6.

Massachusetts is not the first state to get tough on those who keep library books at home beyond the due date. In Georgia, a woman was jailed overnight when she failed to appear in court to explain why her books were not returned. The woman said she was sure she had returned the books and sued the county $500,000 last year for being sent to jail.

$99 SPECIAL
3 Days only
Sept. 6th, 7th & 8th
10:00am-4:00pm
While they last
Rollokan Swedish Flatweave
WOOL RUGS
Additional sizes & styles available at up to 60% off
Amsal International Inc.
1120 Federal St.; Rt.9
Belchertown, MA
413-253-2644
Directly on Bus Route

WELCOME BACK! STUDENTS
Photographs & Memories last a lifetime
clip & save
Welcome Back Special $2.00 OFF OUR PROCESSING SERVICES
NOT VALID WITH TUES. OR WED. SPECIAL EXPIRES DEC/15/90
Same Day & 1 Hour Service Available
Passport Photos Available
The Foto Factory
257 Triangle Street In Amherst
549-6490
62 King Street In Northampton
584-2274

How to get something delivered besides pizza.

Gooey, sticky, fattening.....delicious, but once it's gone, there's nothing left but an empty box and a guilty conscience.

Now you can get something more substantial delivered to your dormitory or apartment: The Boston Globe. With The Globe's special college rate, you can get a semester subscription for up to 50% OFF the regular subscription price.

For a deal you can really sink your teeth into, call 1-800-262-6669 x2708 and start enjoying The Boston Globe all semester long!

For a Globe subscription on campus, check off amount, fill out form, and make check payable to:
RON HUBERDEAU
P.O. Box 959 Amherst MA 01004

 Phone Number: 253-7009*
 Fall Term: No delivery during Thanksgiving Recess Spring Term: No delivery during Spring Break

UMASS/Amherst Rates	Fall Term	Spring Term	Full Year
7 Days MON-SUN	( ) $24.95	( ) $25.30	( ) $50.25
6 Days MON-SAT ONLY	( ) $12.95	( ) $13.30	( ) $26.25
SUNDAY ONLY	( ) $12.00	( ) $12.00	( ) $24.00

Name _____ Campus Phone _____
Campus Address _____
If paying by CREDIT CARD please complete the following also: ( ) VISA ( ) MC
Card # _____ EXP DATE _____
Signature _____
Cardholder Name _____

All subscriptions payable in advance. No delivery during School Holidays or Exam Weeks. Students with varying start dates may have subscriptions pro-rated. Fall delivery starts SEP 16.

Division of Student Activities presents

First Week

"First Week at UMass— Be a Part of It!"

Thursday, 6 September

WMUA Print Sale, SUB 9am-5pm First Week Dance, SUB reggae band "New Horizons", $1.00 admission *(permits entry to dance as well as Friday programs), 9pm to 1am.

Friday, 7 September...A taste of UMass night

WMUA Print Sale, see above First Week Movie, Campus Center Auditorium "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles", 5, 7, 9, and 11 pm shows $1.00 admission. *(See admission policy above.)

First Week Night of Bands, Bluewall Cafe, two bands,"We Saw the Wolf" and "Cordelia's Dad", 9pm to 12 mid., all ages show, $1.00 *(see admission policy above). First Week Night of Magic with "Mr. Fingers" Student Union Ballroom, 9pm to 11 pm, $1.00. *(See admission policy above).

Made possible by a grant from the Dean of Students Office

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

Hours for September have been extended for your convenience!

SEPTEMBER HOURS
SUNDAY	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
SEPT 2 CLOSED	3 CLOSED	4 9-5	5 9-9	6 9-9	7 9-5	8 10-3
9 CLOSED	10 9-5	11 9-5	12 9-5	13 9-5	14 9-5	15 CLOSED
16 CLOSED	17 9-4	18 9-4	19 9-4	20 9-4	21 9-4	22 CLOSED
23 CLOSED	24 9-4	25 9-4	26 9-4	27 9-4	28 9-4	29 CLOSED
30 CLOSED	OCT 1 9-4	2 9-4	3 9-4	4 9-4	5 9-4	CLOSED

Five Good Reasons to use the Textbook Annex

- Largest selection of used books
- One stop shopping
- Professional staff
- Confidence
- Service

REGULAR HOURS: MONDAY-FRIDAY 9:00 AM-4:00 PM

VISA MasterCard

LOCATED ON THE TOP FLOOR, EAST SIDE OF THE PHYSICAL PLANT BUILDING

Persian Gulf Crisis

Bush, Gorbachev to unite against Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next weekend's U.S.-Soviet summit will give Presidents Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev a chance to prod slow-moving conventional-arms talks as well as forge "an even stronger bond" of opposition to Iraq's Saddam Husseing, administration officials said Tuesday.

Bush also is considering adding a stop in Europe to brief NATO allies on his way back from Sunday's superpower summit in Helsinki, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Originally, Bush planned to return directly to Washington from the capital of Finland. But Fitzwater said the president would like to be able to brief allied leaders on the summit, Bush stopped briefly in Brussels to brief NATO.

"There is some discussion about whether we need to make another stop," Fitzwater said. "Pack another pair of underwear," he added in an aside to reporters who cover the president.

Bush, on his first day back from an often-interrupted three-week vacation in Maine, met with his Cabinet and other top advisers to discuss the upcoming summit.

"A new foundation for world order is being built and the spadework begins in Helsinki," Fitzwater declared. "It is somewhat ironic that the prospect of war is forging a new blueprint for world peace. Both leaders will want to apply some new brushstrokes to this emerging picture."

Most public attention has focused on what the two leaders might say on the subject of Iraq's invasion and continuing occupation of Kuwait. But arms talks also were sure to be discussed.

Although negotiations on troop reductions are moving along well, officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity said there still are serious problems in negotiating reductions on cuts in aircraft and artillery.

Both countries hope to wing up the Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) pact in time for November's planned 35-country Paris summit of all European nations plus the United States and Canada.

"The two presidents will be negotiating details of this agreement," Fitzwater said. "But they will be attempting to add the impetus that will assure that agreement is ready to sign and that the summit can be held."

The two leaders will also likely discuss progress on a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear weapons. But officials said those talks appear to be moving along smoothly, and less of a push is needed for them than for the conventional arms talks.

Soviet economic reforms will also be on the agenda, Fitzwater and other officials said. In particular, Bush is expected to bring up a study by the International Monetary Fund — commissioned at last July's economic summit of industrial democracies in Houston — of Soviet needs, the official said.

U.S. to forgive $7M Egyptian debt

Baker defends U.S. military escalation in Saudi Arabia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will ask Congress to write off Egypt's $7 billion military debt to the United States as "as symbol of our appreciation" for help in the Persian Gulf crisis, the White House said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State James A. Baker III gave Congress a ringing defense of the Bush administration's decision to pour troops and weapons into the Middle East, saying the United States had to react vigorously to "one of the defining moments of a new era."

He noted that economic effects of the crisis already are being felt, in such ways as higher gasoline prices, but he said the issue was hardly narrow.

"It is, rather, about a dictator who, acting alone and unchallenged, could strangle the global economic order, determining by fiat whether we all enter a recession or even the darkness of a depression," Baker told the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Baker also said the administration would consider "working with others to create a new security structure for the region," lasting beyond the end of the current crisis.

He gave little detail on how such an organization might work, though he pointed to success by NATO in curbing Soviet expansion during the Cold War.

Presidential Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush already had consulted with members of Congress about forgiving Egypt's military debt and felt confident they would give the required approval. But Patrick Leahy, chairman of the Senate foreign aid panel, said the debt forgiveness would lead to similar requests from other nations and "I'm not willing to double or triple our foreign aid budget without a lot more understanding of what the United States gets out of it."

House Republican leader Bob Michel, too, said the White House announcement "may be a little premature." He added, "I would like to hear firsthand from the administration the rationale" for the move.

Fitzwater said, "This decision, one stimulated in part by Egypt's leadership in resisting Iraqi aggression, is an essential component of the ongoing U.S. contribution to the current situation in the Persian Gulf."

In the White House briefing the day after Bush returned from his Kennebunkport, Maine vacation, Fitzwater also said on other Persian Gulf topics:

There "is no conflict with the Saudis'" on ultimate control of the operations of U.S. forces stationed in Saudi Arabia. He said the United States would not launch an offensive operation without consulting the host country, but he insisted that the chain of command for the U.S. forces remains unchanged — from the president through the Secretary of Defense and to the commanders.

Desert conditions damaging U.S. equipment

EAGLE FORWARD BASE CAMP, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The harsh conditions of the Saudi desert are taking a toll on U.S. military equipment, affecting simple mechanical gear as well as high-tech equipment, from M-16 rifles to weapons guidance systems.

The warships patrolling the waters around the Arabian peninsula are also having problems, officers and maintenance crews said.

"When you buy a stereo, what do the instructions say?" Marine Gunnery Sgt. Tate Ingles of Miami asked during a recent interview. "They say you should keep it away from heat, dust and vibration. You put the same electrical gear in the Saudi desert, and, well, there you have it."

Because of the heat and sand, weapons systems that rely on sensitive electronics and computers could be troublesome to operate if extended hostilities broke out, technicians say.

At Eagle Forward, a base camp for Apache gunships and other helicopters of the 101st Airborne Divisions's air assault brigade, the soft Saudi sand blown by desert wind is the biggest headache.

"It's unbelievable. It gets everywhere," a maintenance crew member said.

Crews are flushing out the Apache engines with water every day to rid them of the sand. The powdery sand also finds its way into transmissions and gears that turn the rotors, forcing more frequent maintenance on those systems as well.

"Hovering around in the desert is going to be very hard on the engines," said Maj. Greg Maisel, of Laredo, Texas, the executive officer of a Marine attack squadron.

Helicopters are being fitted with radiator filters much like black wraps often seen on fronts of sports cars.

"We were having a lot of overheating problems because of sand clogging the radiators," squadron leader Lt. Col. Don Cody said. "We think the filters have fixed that."

The sand scours the paint from the rotor blades, exposing the metal that glints in the sun, making helicopters easier to spot.

Sand is the reason the Air Force is cutting the time between its routine maintenance. Tests and routine adjustments made every 100 hours are now being done every 60-75 hours, an air force official said.

One persistent problem is sand clogging air-intake valves of jet engines. Much like the Apaches, the engines of Air Force and Navy planes, on the ground and aboard carriers, are being flushed with water daily.

A Marine sergeant cleaning his automatic rifle noted: "Sometimes I'm not sure it would fire if I needed it to. We train in the desert, but I've never seen anything like this."

Tanks need more frequent filter cleanings and track flushing and higher viscosity oil. Radiators need to be checked constantly to prevent overheating.

The sand cakes on headlights and windshields and can get into the fuel supply if proper care is not taken.

Weapons systems protected from the sand can't escape the scorching sun.

Within days of arriving here, 82nd Airborne units were reporting dead radios because wires were burned out or fused by the heat.

Recycle this

A SELECT FEW at GOOD PAY Needed to Work in a GLAMOROUS FIELD

Work with a fun, fast-paced group of professionals promoting community arts nationwide.

Arts Extension Service is looking for WORK-STUDY STUDENTS.

- self-motivators
- excellent typing skills
- contact with people
- some experience with WordPerfect or MAC

If interested, call Brenda at 545-2360
INTERNSHIPS also available, including two for the prestigious New England Film and Video Festival. Information meetings on Tuesday, 9/11, and Wednesday, 9/12, 4-5 pm, 604 Goodell Building.

CAMPUS Travel CENTER

Get To Know Us!

Campus Travel is staffed by four full time travel consultants, in addition to trainees. You may know them already

Laurae Lyster (Manager): An Amherst native trained in the hectic corporate travel industry of New York City in between extensive globetrotting—speaks Chinese, reads French, understands some Greek, and gets by with English

Ivette(Asst. Mgr. & head of PHD Desk): Another Amherst native, speaks Spanish, some French—is a graduate of travel school, and has been working in a high powered D.C. agency

Kris Grabowski: Our newest agent, she has trained at Central Travel's Travel School in Springfield and has found her niche in handling domestic reservations—ask her for the lowest fares.

Debbie Bemashe: Our Carribean specialist-she has cruised and flown the sunny climes—get her talking about our leisure plans

Airline reservations and tickets.
Amtrak reservations and tickets.
Tour packages.
Hotel and car reservations.
Eurail passes.
Cruises.
Charters.
Youth Hostel Cards.
You name it.
545-0500

ARTS & LIVING

Photo courtesy D. Boatwright

The Equalities

Catch these acts

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

First Week activities at the University of Massachusetts are in full swing and will continue tomorrow with a magician, dance and bands.

Local reggae band New Horizons will provide music for tonight's dance in the Student Union Ballroom. It begins at 9 p.m., and the $1 admission price will be valid for the other activities Friday night.

We Saw the, Wolf, a Salem-based band that expertly mixes punk with traditional lyrical style of Celtic folk, will play at the Blue Wall tomorrow at 9 p.m., and Cordelia's Dad will follow at 10:30 p.m. Both are vying for the attention of crowds with "Mr. Fingers," (a.k.a. Irv Weiner from Needham, MA).

His "Mr. Fingers" label is derived from his youth. Born of deaf, mute parents Weiner communicated with them through a system of finger and facial expressions and soon became adept at such means. The name stuck. It is said his magic is the most economical and never a move is wasted.

He works alone and without music, telling tales of past magicians such as Houdini. During his UMass presentation he will explore the mystery of E.S.P., demonstrate slight of hand and delve into the secrets of magic masters.

Closing his show will be the opening of a package mailed to the University on August 1st said to contain a prediction of the future. . . Or, in lieu of these you can grab a true-taste of UMass with the film "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" in the Campus Center Auditorium at 5, 7, 9 and 11 p.m.

Jose Tolson, organizational advisor for Student Activities said he believes all events have been well-attended and thinks it will continue to be a successful week.

Photo courtesy Judy

Real World

THE GLOBE BOOKSHOP

fine new, used & children's books
European, art & literary periodicals
publishers overstocks at 30%-80% off
special orders • out-of-print book searches

Open 7 days • Mon-Sat 9-9; Sun 10-5 • 38 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 584-0374 • 586-5838

DISTINCTIVE HAIR DESIGNS

Our Stylists work with you to create just the perfect look for your HAIR, FEATURES & LIFE STYLE
Featuring foils, long spirals & skin care
Styles by Deborah
65 UNIVERSITY DR. • AMHERST • 549-5610

Join Now And Get the Whole Semester for $99! when you join with a friend
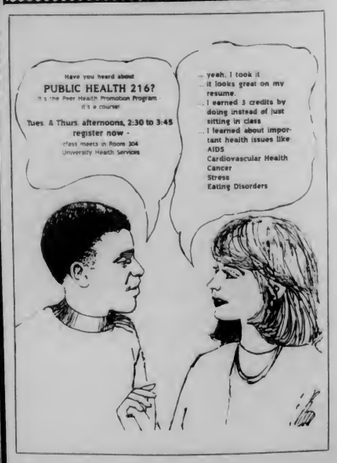
Aerobics Asylum
CALL NOW 586-7503 HAMP PLAZA NORTHAMPTON

ALLIANCE CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP
Welcome Back to UMASS
For more info call Steve or Pauline 253-7206

Classical Acupuncture
Women's Systems
Fertility Issues
FREDERICK E. STEINWAY, Lic. Ac.
NCAA Certificate, Dipl. Ac.
190 University Drive 88 Pine Grove
Amherst
256-0306



Have you heard about
PUBLIC HEALTH 216?
It's the Peer Health Promotion Program
It's a course!
Tues. & Thurs. afternoons, 2:30 to 3:45
register now -
class meets in Room 304
University Health Services
... yeah, I took it
... it looks great on my resume
... I earned 3 credits by doing instead of just sitting in class
... I learned about important health issues like
AIDS
Cardiovascular Health
Cancer
Stress
Eating Disorders

"Hey Bud, Welcome Back!"
-Your favorite music (DJ)
-Sports
-Pool
-Munchies
-Giveaways
-much, much MORE!
Proper ID Required
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET, NORTHAMPTON
50¢ Bud Drafts
Thru Sept. 10th
NO COVER CHARGE!
Proper ID Required

COLLEGIAN NIGHT GRAPHICS POSITIONS AVAILABLE!!
• Paste-Up
• Typesetting
• Stat Camera Operation
If interested come to 113 Campus Center
3:30 TODAY!
If you cannot attend, stop by anytime and ask for Terry.

Mose strikes again

Mose Allison: legendary jazz pianist and vocalist who lives on Long Island with his wife, a school teacher, visits the Iron Horse Saturday night in his annual fall appearance.

He was born on his grandfather's farm near Tippo, just inside the eastern rim of the Mississippi Delta. He began playing piano at age five, discovered soon after that he could play by ear, and resisted the discipline of learning to read music. Allison was also capable of picking out the blues and boogie songs he heard on the jukeboxes. He listened to recordings of Louis Armstrong, Fats Waller, Duke Ellington, Louis Jordan and — an inspiration for him at this time — Nat Cole of the King Cole Trio days.

After a stint in the Army where he spent most of his time in the band playing trumpet, he returned to "Ole Miss" as an economics major. After several years on the road, he attended Louisiana State University and graduated from there in 1952 with a BA in English and philosophy.

He's had over 20 extremely successful recordings, the latest of which, Ever Since the World Ended (Blue Note) was nominated for a Grammy in 1989. Allison has been recorded by Bonnie Raitt, The Who, Van Morrison, The Yardbirds, The Clash and others.

For "hummable, homey tunes" that are supported by his sometimes "twistedly cocktailish piano" join Allison in his annual Fall return to the Valley.

Two shows: Saturday at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the Northampton Box Office in Thorne's Market, Noho or by calling 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK.

Photo Courtesy Judy

Mose Allison

Compliments
Gifts, Gift Baskets, Decorative Accessories
71 N. Pleasant St. (Above Cafe DiCarlo)
Amherst / 256-1551 • Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30
GOURMET FOODS
MEN'S / WOMEN'S TOILETRIES
UNIQUE GIFTS

SUPREME CHEESE™ & ME
FREE!
WITH YOUR COLLEGE ID

This Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 10 & 11, when you present your 1990 College I.D. card with this coupon at the Bruegger's Bagel Bakery on N. Pleasant St. in Amherst, you'll receive a bagel of your choice with Supreme Cheese for FREE! It's our way of introducing you to the deliciousness of Bruegger's Bagel Bakery.
Offer valild 7:30-11:00am Sept. 10 & 11 only
One coupon per customer
Not valid in combination with other offers.
BRUEGGER'S BAGEL BAKERY

JUST STOP!
WAIT!!
KEEP GOING
TYPEWRITER SERVICE
ON ALL MAKES AND MODELS
SMITH CORONA PORTABLE WORD PROCESSOR & LAP TOP
UP TO $250 OFF ON PERSONAL WORD PROCESSOR
with flip top screen. Easy to use and easy to move SUPPLIES! RIBBONS, CORRECTION TAPES SCHOOL & OFFICE SUPPLIES FOR PROJECTS, REPORTS & TERM PAPERS OR FOR ANY TYPE JOB!!!
Amherst TYPEWRITER SERVICE
65 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-5087
Repairs Done On The Premises
Repairs You Can Trust And That Are Done Efficiently WASN'T THAT WORTH IT!

BOARD OF GOVERNORS IS HIRING !
BOARD OF GOVERNORS B.O.G. Working Toward A Better Hour
WE'RE HIRING QUALIFIED PEOPLE FOR:
Assistant Office Coordinators
Assistant Facilities Coordinator
Public Relations Coordinator
Finance Coordinator
B.O.G. Program Council Coordinator
Applications are available in 817 CC
APPLICATIONS DUE BY 5:00 on Sept.18
The B.O.G. is hiring both Work & Non Work Study.
B.O.G. is an AA/EO employer

Audition times for Five College Symphony

Miscellaneous Art and Music Information:

The following is the list of string and wind audition dates and times for the Five College Symphony Orchestra. Any student missing an audition time at their respective College, University may try out during any scheuled time in the Five College system.

Strings

September 6: 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at Mount Holyoke College in the Warbeck Room of the Music Department.

September 7: 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Smith College in Room 32 of the Music Department.

September 7: 9 p.m. to 9:45 p.m. at Amherst College in Room 7 of the Music Department.

September 8: 11 p.m. to 12 noon at Smith College in Room 32 of the Music Department.

September 8: 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. at Amherst College in Room 7 of the Music Department

September 8: 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at University of Massachusetts. (Room TBA, contact the Fine Arts Center main office.)

Wind: All auditions are slated to take place at Bezanson Recital Hall, Music department, UMass on September 9.

10 a.m. — flutes
11:15 a.m. — oboes
12 noon — bassoons
1:30 p.m. — clarinets
2:30 p.m. — french horns
3:30 p.m. — trumpets
4:15 p.m. — trombones and tubas
5 to 5:30 p.m. — any players unable to make the above times may audition by appointment only with professor Burkh by phoning 532-0908.

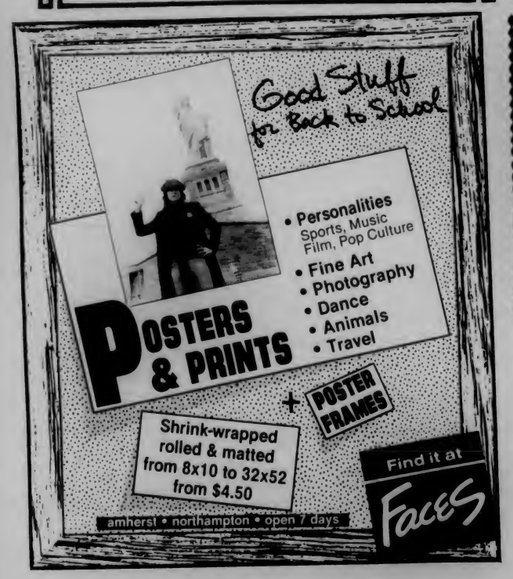
The University Performing Arts Division walk-in registration runs today through the 14th. For complete information contact PAD at 545-0519.

20% off College Supplies
(except sale items — with this ad)
WHALEN STATIONERS
Main Street — Amherst
(next to Buffalo Bill's)
Main Street — Northampton
(next to Cathy Cross)
"Serving Students Since 1958"
coupon expires 9-15-90

WEIGHTLIFTING
FREE WEIGHTS•NAUTILUS•EXERCISE BIKES•CLIMBERS
The GYM at mountain farms mall
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan Szechuan Mandarin or Cantonese style—especially for you!
• Ample Free Parking
• Major Credit Cards Accepted
• Full Liquor License
• Open 7 Days A Week
• Take-Out Service Available
• No MSG
585-0202 261 King St., Northampton, MA

YOUR ONE-STOP AUTO SHOP
For complete auto body and repair services on foreign and domestic vehicles...stop into
ACME AUTOMOTIVE CENTER
Family owned and operated
220 King St., Northampton
584-3710



FREE SHOW!!!
ALL AGES—CHECK IT OUT
CBS RECORDING ARTISTS
HUMAN RADIO
Special Guests: Oat Pearl
SUN. SEPTEMBER 9th 8:30pm
IRON HORSE Music Hall, Northampton
For a chance to win a FREE PASS to this show listen to WMUA or stop by For The Record (Faces, Amherst) or Main Street Records (Northampton)
Remember even a free show can sellout!

For the fun of it all

Just a few shows to pull you through your weekend in Amherst:

At the Iron Horse

Friday: Greg Brown at 7 p.m. tickets are $10 in advance

Saturday: Mose Allison two shows at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. tickets are $17.50 in advance. Jazz piano stylings . . . so cool.

Sunday: Human Radio — could it be? A FREE show? It is and it's at 8:30 p.m. They hail from Memphis, Tennesee and their producer worked with Fishbone. (Lotta funk here.)

Pearl Street invites you all to a Battle of the Bands there. A $5 admission price per evening allows you to hear four different local bands Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Doors open at 8 p.m. Each night all bands are slated to begin at 8:30 p.m., play 40 minute stints and the last band of the evening comes on at 11:30 p.m. Here's what y'all can expect from bottom to top:

On Friday — Free Press, The Mess, Faery Tale Curse and Derttonz.

Saturday brings Grave Goods, Equalities, Rockin' Dave and the Rent Party.

Spend Sunday night with Hal Benoit Band, In the Flesh, The Vestrymen, and Who's Kiddin' Who.

Monday night Real World, Farmhouse, Voices and Image of Man will play.

Local writers, retail people in music and WAQY radio will judge the bands on the following four criteria: stage presence, song content, musical talent and overall impact. Sorry, but these shows are open to the 21-and-older crowd only.

— JULIE LIVINGSTONE

Photo Courtesy of L. Woods

Cordelia's Dad performs at the Bluewall

Get Ready For School
At Elder Lumber
At Both Stores:
• Shelving
• Cinder Block
• Bulletin Boards
• Clamp Lamps
• Paint
And Much more
In South Deerfield Only:
• Ready to assemble bookshelves
• Stationery
• Clocks
• Towels
2 convenient locations
Rte 9 Amherst
North St. S. Deerfield
253-3411
665-8881
ELDER LUMBER Since 1895
major credit cards accepted

A Sure Sign of Glamour... Intrigue... and Perfect Hair
HOLLYWOOD
Ditto...
JUNGLERED
Lower Level. Amherst Carriage Shops
549-1840
JUNGLE RED SALON

TOWER Theaters
"Style and Substance ..."
Come together perfectly in a space devoted to the avid filmgoer. Creative snacks and unique beverages offered in our pleasant deco surroundings are only the start of movie magic at the Tower Theaters.
The Village Commons • South Hadley • 533-2663

The Amherst Drop Zone
Army/NavyStore
Now 2 Locations
Downtown Amherst * 256-0039
(Behind Bart's, next to Panda East)
Route 9, Hadley * 585-5800
(Next to McDonald's)
WELCOME BACK AREA SCHOOLS!
For Unique & Unusual Items The Only Army/Navy Store in the Valley—The Amherst Drop Zone
Open: Mon.-Sat. 10-6
Sundays 12-5
Open evenings 'til 9:30 in Hadley
Photo: Buck Stewart 549-5454
10% Off with this ad
Expires September 31, 1990
Open 7 days a week

Wonder why you're wild about Wild at Heart?

By GEORGE LENTZ
Collegian Staff

Let me put it to you this way: the people who first experienced David Lynch when they sat down to watch Twin Peaks will love Wild at Heart, but they won't have the slightest idea why.

On the other hand, if you've been following Lynch's work since Blue Velvet, his last and best film, or from even as far back as Eraserhead, chances are you'll find Wild at Heart superficially exhilarating and substantially boring. For all of its smashed skulls and raging infernos, Lynch is working with a story that isn't strong enough to keep all the weirdness interesting.

Based upon Barry Gifford's 1989 novel, Lynch's film takes on the guise of a Road Picture following Lula Pace Fortune (Laura Dern) and Sailor Ripley (Nicolas Cage) as two lovers-on-the-lam from Lula's crazed mother (Diane Ladd), who enlists the aide of mobsters to track them down.

The film basically plays like a series of vignettes that are loosely tied together and never really amount to anything. Sailor and Lula ramble along in her T-Bird meeting one weirdo after another as Lynch desperately searches for the film's pulse but only manages to find a few quick beats skimming the surface.

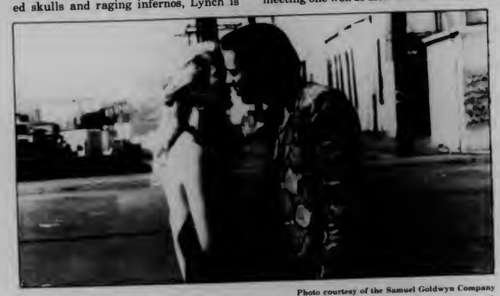

Photo courtesy of the Samuel Goldwyn Company

Laura Dern and Nicolas Cage star as lovers Lula Pace Fortune and Sailor Ripley in David Lynch's Wild at Heart.

After encountering an eerie roadside accident where a crash victim (Sherilyn Fenn of Twin Peaks) dies in Sailor's hands (it's the best scene in the movie and the closest to matching the cool chill of Twin Peaks), the couple pulls over to spend a few days in a trailer park in Big Tuna, Texas. It's here that you would expect Lynch to sink his claws into the story and get beneath the mannerisms of its surface like he did in Blue Velvet.

But Lynch pulls up here, stepping back to observe rather than to dissect. In Blue Velvet he dove into the grass, below the surface to see the insects brooding beneath; in Wild at Heart he stands erect at a distance, throwing an occasional glance at the flies on a puddle of vomit.

Essentially, Lynch plays out the story as if he's pulling levers: most of the scenes and images in the film come out of nowhere and then recede before they have a chance to solidify. We get shots of obese porn queens dancing in the dark, a bizarre old woman sauntering through a spotlight and Willem Dafoe losing his head, literally, during a botched robbery attempt. The images at best are jolting and strange, but they're hardly provocative. It's as if Lynch's probing fascination with rotting Americana has turned into a mere curiosity.

The problem is that Lynch is reaching here, trying to make the most out of "lite" material. Wild at Heart, by its own nature, is a surface-level film that doesn't match the depth of Lynch's dark subconscious. The film is at its best when it lets Sailor and Lula dance to speedmetal in a roadside wheat field than it is when it parades out the obese, dancing porn queens of Big Tuna. Lynch's imagination seems to be showing its limits with this story that is much too mild at heart.

FILM CLIPS: Joel Schumacher's Flatliners is perhaps the most visually stunning film since Stanley Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey, but unlike the powerful visual narrative of that film, Schumacher relinquishes the strength of his imagery to the Catholic guilt of Peter Filardi's script. The story of five ambitious med students who seek the answers to life and death by stopping each others hearts for minutes at a time before bringing one another back borders on the ridiculous, but manages to avoid complete scorn with credible performances by Kevin Bacon and Julia Roberts. But the real star of the film is Schumacher, whose swooping tracking shots and moody lighting creates a Gothic atmosphere that soothes the implausibility of the script.

Andrew Bergman's The Freshman may not be one of Marlon Brando's best films but it's certainly one of his most enjoyable. Brando plays Carmine Sabatini, an importer of exotic animals for questionable business purposes who enlists the aid of unassuming New York University film school freshman, Matthew Broderick to transport the merchandise. Despite Brando's much publicized complaints about the film, the great actor has never seemed more at ease on the screen, while exhibiting a brilliant comic flair (his self-parody of his legendary Don Corleone character is a comic masterpiece).

animal city EXPRESS
Campus Plaza (next to Stop & Shop)
Route 9 Hadley 256-0960
KMart Plaza Holyoke 532-2327
Depot Square Westfield 562-7428

Buy One Fish And Get One For 1¢ (Excludes Feeder Fish And Guarantees) Higher Price Prevails With This Coupon Only — NO LIMIT — Offer expires 9-30-90

25% OFF ANY 3 PC. AQUARIUM SET UP TANK, STAND, FULL HOOD With This Coupon Only. Offer expires 9-30-90

AQUARIUM PLASTIC PLANTS BUY ONE AT REG. PRICE GET ONE FREE! Higher Price Prevails — NO LIMIT — With This Coupon Only. Offer expires 9-30-90

Tetra INTRODUCTORY OFFER! FISH FOOD BUY ONE GET ONE FREE! (Of Equal Size) — NO LIMIT — With This Coupon Only. Offer expires 9-30-90

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS
TONIGHT'S HOMEWORK IS TAKING THAT HILL.
If you're looking for excitement and adventure, you'll find it when you enroll in Army ROTC. It's not your ordinary college elective.
ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.
Contact Cpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army ROTC
545-2321 or 545-2322

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM Tel. 549-2692
Welcome Back! Look at the $AVINGS Scott's has for you!
Bud Light Suitcase cans 24 - 12 oz. $11.99 plus dep
Miller Genuine Draft 12 - 12 oz. bottles $5.99 plus dep
Half Kegs Starting at $27.
Heineken 12 - 12oz cans $8.39 plus dep
Miller Lite 12 - 12oz cans $6.99 plus dep
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 1.75 L (with free sunglasses) $13.99
Smirnoff Vodka 80 proof 1.0L $8.49
Peachtree Schnapps 750ml $6.49
Glen Ellen Sauvignon Blanc 750ml $3.49
Sauza Gold Tequila 750 ml $7.99 -3.00 mail-in rebate $4.99 final cost
ENTER AND WIN ONE OF MASSACHUSETTS' 9 MILLER LITE JEEP® WRANGLERS!
AT SCOTT'S ENTER TO WIN A JEEP® WRANGLER SEE STORE FOR DETAILS
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE
6 University Drive, Newmarket Center, Amherst
Diagonally Across from UMass Stadium
Plenty of FREE Parking
Telecheck for Your Personal Check
MEGABUCKS We Have It! We now have all Mass Lottery games!

PLEASANT ST. THEATER
27 Pleasant St
Northampton
586-0935
Playing Now: Exclusive Engagement
"A WILD RIDE AND A MUST SEE!" "SPECTACULAR AND FUNNY!" "A BONFIRE OF A MOVIE!"
DAVID LYNCH'S Wild at Heart
weekdays at 6:45 and 9:10/Fri. at 4:50, 7:15 & 9:40
Sat. & Sun. at 2:30, 4:50, 7:15 & 9:40pm
First Show Fri. & the Sat. & Sun. Matinees are $3.50
STARTS ON SEPT. 5
Thelonious Monk STRAIGHT NO CHASER

Railroad Stores SALE ENDS SEPT. 13
Rt.9 Hadley, MA 586-7248 | Rt. 5 E. Windsor 623-3368 | 1131 Campbell Ave West Haven, CT (203)933-5468 | 739 Meadow Chicopee 594-2925 | 207 Webster Sq. Berlin, CT 828-9889 | 1 Canal St. Turner Falls 863-4343 | Rt. 184 Groton CT
RUBIE BOUGHT OVER 84,000 YARDS TO SELL AT 40% TO 70% OFF AND MORE
free from ALLIED FIBERS — LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR — DUPONT CERTIFIED STAINMASTER CARPET
RUBIE BOUGHT OVER 35,000 ROLLS INCLUDING ALL THE MOST WANTED COLORS AND FABRICS. SHAW SELLS THE DEALER WHAT HE NEEDS AND WE GET THE REST!
RUGS RUGS RUGS! ALL FIRST QUALITY
9'x12' COMPARE AT $180 NOW $69.99
10'x12' COMPARE AT $199 NOW $79.99
11'x12' COMPARE AT $220 NOW $89.99
12'x12' COMPARE AT $240 NOW $99.99
12'x13' COMPARE AT $259 NOW $104.99
12'x14' COMPARE AT $280 NOW $109.99
12'x15' COMPARE AT $300 NOW $119.99
12'x16' COMPARE AT $319 NOW $129.99
12'x17' COMPARE AT $340 NOW $139.99
12'x18' COMPARE AT $360 NOW $144.99
12'x19' COMPARE AT $379 NOW $149.99
12'x20' COMPARE AT $400 NOW $159.99
PATIO UMBRELLAS FIRST QUALITY • AMERICAN MADE CRANK HANDLE • MANY COLORS
Tinkel California
7½' 8 RIB VALUE $190.00 NOW $39.99
8½' 12 RIB VALUE $260.00 NOW $59.99
STANLEY REMOTE CONTROL GARAGE DOOR OPENERS
THE STANLEY COMPANY SAID THESE ARE REPACKED — BUT THEY LOOK LIKE NEW TO US!
STANLEY U-INSTALL® PREMIER MODEL 3200
• ½ HP — EXTRA POWER TO OPEN HEAVY DOORS UP TO 18' x 7½' • PROVEN STEEL CHAIN AND CABLE DRIVE • 150 WATTS OF LIGHT WITH 4½ MINUTE LIGHT TIME DELAY • 1,024 EASY-TO-CHANGE DIGITAL CODES • TRANSMITTER INDICATOR LIGHT LETS YOU KNOW WHEN BATTERY NEEDS REPLACING • INSTANT DOOR REVERSE WITH BACK-UP TIMED REVERSING SYSTEM
VALUE $169.00 NOW $118.88 YOU SAVE 30% ½HP
OTHER MODELS IN STOCK STARTING AT $88
BRAND NAME LUGGAGE BUY-OUT
AMERICAN TOURISTER GARMENT BAGS ORIGINALLY $79.00 NOW $33
PERSONAL PORTER SUITCASE ON WHEELS ORIGINALLY $149.00 NOW $68
OLEG CASSINI 24" PULLMAN VALUE $79.95 NOW $19.88
VERDI • 26 INCH SUITCASE ON WHEELS GRAND HOTEL PULLMAN NORMALLY $79.95 NOW $24.88
5 PC JUTE & VINYL LUGGAGE SET • DELUXE 26" PULLMAN WITH WHEELS • 24" • 22" • 20" SUITCASES • MATCHING TOTE VALUE $150 SET NOW $77
INNERSPRING MATTRESS SETS SMOOTH TOP
TWIN SIZE SET $98.88 SET | FULL SIZE SET $118.88 SET | QUEEN SIZE SET $158.88 SET

Rock 102 WAQY and Pearl Street present
Battle of the Bands
Fri., Sept. 7
Faery-Tale Curse
Free Press
Dertonz
The Mess
Sat., Sept. 8
Grave Goods
The Equalites
Rent Party
Rippopatamous
Sun., Sept. 9
Hal Benoit Band
In The Flesh
The Vestrymen
Who's Kiddin' Who
Mon., Sept. 10
Real World
Farmhouse
Voices
Image of Man
Semi-Finals Mon., Sept 17 & Tues., Sept. 18
Finals Sat., Sept. 22
Rock 102 Broadcasts live Friday, 9/7 beginning at 7:00pm with Becca Reid
Pearl Street Battle of the Bands Winner Receives
• Hand-Built Graphic Guitar By Dean Courtesy of East Coast Music Mall of Newington CT
• 10 Hour Free Studio Time Courtesy of Longview Farms, N. Brookfield, MA
• $200 Gift Certificate from Downtown Sounds, Northampton, MA
• Dinner for Band Courtesy of Spoletto's of Northampton, MA
• 75 Assorted Cassettes Courtesy of CBS records
SPOLETO
DOWNTOWN SOUNDS
Columbia RCA

■ Cops

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

• Douglass J. Dillon, 27, of Revere, was arrested Tuesday at Thoreau on an outstanding default warrant from the Metro Police.

• UMass student Kevin P. Murphy, 19, of Holyoke, was arrested Monday outside of Washington for being a minor in possession of alcohol.

LARCENY

• A student in Patterson reported to police Tuesday the theft of a Sony CD player. Police said the theft was under investigation. The value was $250.

ACCIDENT

• A PVTA bus was struck Tuesday on Massachusetts Avenue in the left rear by a vehicle making a turn from University Drive. Police said the driver of the car misjudged the lane turn. The operator was cited. The estimate of damage is $3000.00

ALARM

• The 11th floor of Coolidge was flooded Monday night when students moving furniture accidently hit a sprinkler head. Students were not allowed into the building until after 9 p.m. while crews cleaned up the water.

AP Photo

FROM RUSSIA WITH 'ZA — A Soviet construction worker tastes Pizza Hut pizza in front of the very first Pizza Hut to grace Russian soil, with the help of Lisa Williams, a British woman helping the Russian workers adapt to the fast food fad.

STRUT
SHOES FOR WOMEN
197 MAIN ST NORTHAMPTON

PRESTO
201 MAIN ST
NORTHAMPTON

■ Guards in Gulf?

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

About 60 students are enrolled in Air Force ROTC at UMass. Students enrolled in both UMass ROTC programs are drawn from a number of public and private colleges and universities throughout the state. The majority of those enrolled are UMass students. John Prowse, spokesman at the headquarters of the 94th Army Reserve Command at Hanscom Air Force Base in Bedford, said a student reservist who is not enrolled in a ROTC program could not become exempt if asked to serve.

He added that Army cadets who are both enrolled in ROTC and enlisted in the reserves are referred to as "simultaneous members," and their student status would prevent them from having to serve.

Bush has requested only volunteers at this point. Prowse said that not only has his office not considered a draft, but the office has received no calls from the general public concerning a draft.

"There's no need for a draft at this point," he said. "We'd have to go an awful long way to [initiate a draft]."

40 killed in township violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Soldiers fired on thousands of angry Blacks Tuesday and rival gangs fought with axes, knives and spears. At least 40 people were killed in the township violence.

President F.W. de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela visited Black townships near Johannesburg to call for a halt in fighting that has killed more than 550 people since August 12.

The government has imposed emergency restrictions and sent elite army units to the townships, but fighting between Zulu followers of the conservative Inkatha movement and other Blacks loyal to the ANC raged for a fourth week.

In Sebokeng, a pre-dawn clash killed four people at a migrant workers' hostel, police said. The victims were believed to be township residents abducted by hostel dwellers.

About 5,00 township residents angered by the killings gathered at the hostel, police said.

When the mob refused to disperse, army troops were called in and a "shooting incident occurred," said police Col. Frans Malherbe.

"The bodies of 11 persons were found after the mob dispersed."

South African newspaper photographer N. Khumalo told the South African Press Association that "people came toward (the soldiers) waving their hands, saying 'Peace, we are not fighting.' Some of them even sat down."

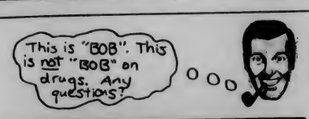
The troops "took up position, cocked their guns — I thought maybe they wanted to scare the people," Khumalo was quoted as saying. "All of the sudden there was shooting. Many of the people ran. Some of the people fell."

The shooting marked the first time soldiers have been involved in a clash that has resulted in a loss of lives since they were deployed last month in in the townships.

In March, police opened fire on Black demonstrators in Sebokeng, killing at least five and wounding more than 150. A judicial inquiry criticized police for the killings saying gunfire was unjustified. Malherbe said both police and military were investigating Tuesday's shooting.

A later police report Tuesday put the Sebokeng death toll at 36, with the other killings occurring in sporadic clashes near the hostel and adjacent areas. Police said more than 150 people were arrested.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2



TOWER Theaters
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY • 533-2663

MY BLUE HEAVEN
Weekday at 3, 7 and 9 p.m.
Fri., Sat. and Sun. at 3,5,7&9p.m.
•Sorry, no Two for One on Mon.

PUMP UP THE VOLUME
starts Friday. Call for times.
"The Passion comes across raw and alive."
—Brook Hersey, Glamour Magazine

Christian Slater PUMP UP THE VOLUME R

UMOC
UMass Outing Club
INVITES YOU TO:

Try:
• hiking
• backpacking
• canoeing
• kayaking
• caving
• cross-country skiing
• rock climbing
• ice climbing
• mountaineering
. . .and more!

JOIN
First Meeting
Mon. Sept. 10
Student Union
Ballroom

7 PM
Slide Show

Our office 423C Student Union 545-3131

You asked for a computer that's real college material.
We heard you.

The ideal computer for college needs certain things. Like a mouse, to make it easy to use. Preloaded software, that'll let you create impressive papers with graphics and spreadsheets. And great tools, like a notepad, calendar and cardfile. It should also be expandable, so it can grow with your needs.

The IBM Personal System/2* has all this at a special student price.* And if you buy before December 31, 1990, you'll receive a TWA* Certificate entitling you to a round-trip ticket for $149/$249. Plus a free TWA Getaway* Student Discount Card application. You'll also get a great low price on the PRODIGY* service.

The PS/2* is perfect for college because you told us just what you needed. And no one knows what it takes to be real college material better than you.

Welcome Back Students! Hope your summer was enjoyable. Back to school time means back to crazy schedules, term papers, presentations....you get the idea. Well why not let IBM help you out. With an IBM PS/2 you'll be able to create great reports, spreadsheets, and much more! Best of all an IBM PS/2 will save you lots of time and eliminate last minute rewrites. So don't waste any time, check out the IBM PS/2 line at the University Store today, and watch for the IBM PS/2 Fair coming to campus September 25 and 26. See you there!!

Open M-F 9-5
Sat. 10-3
Thurs. 9-8

UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center

IBM

This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice. Valid for any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for travel September 18, 1990 through December 19, 1991 at the following round trip fares: $149.00 round trip for travel from September 18, 1990 through June 14, 1991 and September 16, 1991 through December 19, 1991. $249.00 round trip for travel June 15, 1991 through September 15, 1991. Seats are limited. Fares non-refundable. 14 day advance purchase, blackout dates and certain other restrictions apply. Complete details will be shown on certificate. Applicants for TWA's Getaway Student Discount Card must be full time students between the ages of 16–25. *IBM, Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. TWA is a registered service mark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. TWA Getaway is a registered trademark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. PRODIGY is a registered service mark and trademark of Prodigy Services Company, a partnership of IBM and Sears.
©IBM Corporation 1990

COLLEGIAN

New Writer's Meeting

interested in working for:
News
Arts
Sports
Editorial
Black Affairs
Women's Issues
Third World Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Photographers

Meet in the newsroom
113 Campus Center
3 p.m.
Monday September 10

■ South Africa

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19

Police also reported three deaths in Vosloorus and one in Katlehong in overnight street clashes. Both townships are southeast of Johannesburg.

Rival factions continued to skirmish Tuesday in Vosloorus with axes, spears and other crude weapons. Police fired tear gas and shotguns to keep the groups apart.

Mandela visited Sebokeng on Tuesday afternoon and said he was "outraged" after viewing bodies at a mortuary.

The ANC deputy president repeated his accusation that police fueled the violence by siding with Inkatha fighters. But he also said that police arrested more than 100 Inkatha supporters, including youth leader Themba Khoza.

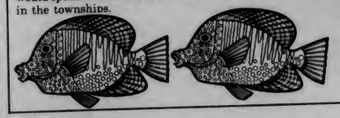
On Monday, Mandela called for an independent investigation in the township similar to the Sebokeng shootings in March.

De Klerk has ordered Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok to investigate the charges of police bias. He and other officials have said some individuals may have acted improperly.

De Klerk made his first visit as President to the Soweto township southwest of Johannesburg where more than 100 people were killed in factional fighting this month.

Youths mobbed the President and shouted "Viva de Klerk!" At one stop he visited a migrant worker hostel where recent battles have occurred.

De Klerk later told a news conference conditions in the hostels were "unacceptable" and that the government would spend millions of dollars for housing and education in the townships.



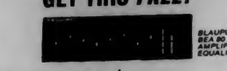
SOUTH AFRICA (AP) — Deputy President of the African National Congress, Nelson Mandela, pleas with Sebokeng residents to halt the Black on Black faction fighting which has left many dead in townships around Johannesburg. He again blamed the police for fueling the fighting by taking sides.

BLAUPUNKT Freebies!

BUY THIS!

BLAUPUNKT ATLANTA REMOVABLE CD/AM/FM STEREO

GET THIS FREE!



BLAUPUNKT BEA 80 AMPLIFIER EQUALIZER

BUY ANY BLAUPUNKT STEREO!

GET A FREE T-SHIRT

CUSTOM CAR SOUND

573 RIVERDALE ST. W. SPRINGFIELD 734-4995

141 DAMOND RD. NORTHAMPTON 586-5258

Fancy Fingers
NAIL & SKIN CARE SALON
The ultimate in nail fashion and skin beauty

FOR APPOINTMENT CALL 256-3113
800 MAIN STREET
AMHERST, MASS. 01002
By Appointment Only

- Manicures/Pedicures
- Sculptured Nails
- Facials - Makeup
- Waxing
- Paraffin Treatment

MC/VISA

ROSES
BOUQUETS
BALLOONS

Always in Bloom

FULL SERVICE FLOWER SHOP
DAILY DELIVERIES ON CAMPUS AND ACROSS THE COUNTRY
253-5545
253-7228
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

Joe's Paradise
31 Boltwood Walk
Downtown Amherst

THE HOME OF JOE'S BUFFALOS
BUFFALO WINGS

FREE DELIVERY
253-7494

Sunday - Wednesday ..... 4:30 - 1:00 a.m.
Thursday - Saturday ..... 4:30 - 2:00 a.m.
• LIMITED AMHERST DELIVERY AREA •

NEW! — Joe's Ribs — NEW!
Home-cooked ribs served with fries and choice of cole slaw or macaroni.
— Regular (5-7).....$4.95
— Large (8-10).....$6.95
COMBO! Joe's Buffalos (10) and Ribs (6) served with fries & slaw or macaroni..$6.95
Free samples with every order of buffalo wings this weekend!

CAFE DICARLO

The Best In Casual Italian Dining

Relax In Our Outdoor Cafe.

Open daily at 11:30a.m.

71 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst MA.
253-9300

Shuttle remains on ground

By MARCIA DUNN
The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA scrubbed the launch of the space shuttle Columbia for the third time yesterday after discovering a leak as liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen were being poured into the fuel tank.

"We will be scrubbing the launch attempt for tonight; the concentrations of hydrogen in the aft compartment (of the shuttle) are too high for launch," said the space agency spokeswomen Lisa Malone.

Columbia was scheduled to blast off with seven astronauts and the $150 million Astro observatory at 1:20 a.m. Thursday. Air Force meteorologists predicted an 80 percent chance of good weather at launch time.

It was only the fifth time NASA scheduled a shuttle launch at night and the first shuttle mission in five years devoted entirely to scientific research.

Assigned to command the nine to 10-day mission was veteran astronaut Vance Brand, who at age 59 would become the oldest person to fly in space.

Speaking to NASA employees via closed-circuit television from the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Vice President Dan Quayle called the mission "cutting-edge space activity."

He said that despite its recent problems, NASA is up to doing the job it was assigned to do.

"Take it from a guy who knows a lot about unwarranted criticism," he said. "Once they pile it on, they just don't know when to stop."

Columbia's journey into space was supposed to have been in May but was delayed when hydrogen leaked during fueling.

After replacing Columbia's leaky fuel lines, NASA had to halt its second launch attempt because of communications problems with the X-ray telescope inside the cargo bay last week.

All four telescopes will remain inside the cargo bay, but the X-ray instrument is controlled by radio from the ground. The problem was corrected Sunday.

"I'm trying to remain relaxed and not get too excited too early," Davidson said.

Standing about 1.5 miles away was Discovery, which was moved to NASA's other shuttle launch pad Tuesday night to await an October flight with the Ulysses satellite that will study the sun.

The National Asronautics and Space Administration was counting on a successful Astro mission to help improve its image and restore public confidence.

Four shuttle astronomers will operate Astro's three ultraviolet telescopes. The X-ray telescope will be managed by computer commands sent from Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

Astro's assigned targets include highly energetic stars, galaxies, a supernova and Comet Levy, which is making its first recorded pass through the solar system. Ultraviolet and x-ray radiation emitted from such objects is absorbed by the atmosphere and is thus invisible from Earth.

Midway through the flight, the astronauts were to conduct "Space Classroom," the first of what NASA hopes will become a regular scientific series for youngsters.

Forty-two middle school students at two NASA centers will question the astronauts. The program will be available via some cable television companies to classrooms.

The crew hoped to contact the two cosmonauts aboard space station Mir, which would be the first time direct radio communication between a U.S. and a Soviet spacecraft. Payload specialist, Ron Parise, a licensed ham radio operator, also planned to contact amateur radio stations around the world.

KENNEDY SPACE CENTER (AP) — Two birds fly by Launch Pad 39-A, which holds the Space Shuttle Columbia, as the shuttle Discovery sits on pad-39-B in the background at right, Wednesday at Kennedy Space Center. The Columbia is scheduled to be launched early Thursday morning and Discovery is being prepared for an October liftoff

LANGUAGE PACIFICA
OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve. Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6-9/17
Amherst Creamery Bldg
150 Fearing St. Ste. 29
549-5065

SAVE ON USED AND DISCOUNT NEW BOOKS
40-80% Off Pub. List Price
Thousands of popular & academic paperbacks & hardbacks
VALLEY BOOKS
199 N. Pleasant St.
Downtown Amherst
Open 10-8 Sept. 4-7
256-1508 Visa/MC

Council Travel

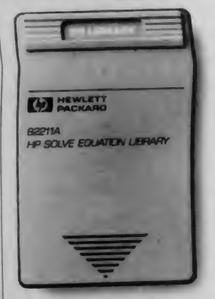
Cheapest Fares to:
• EUROPE
• ASIA
• AUSTRALIA/ NEW ZEALAND

LONDON
FRANKFURT
PARIS
SYDNEY
TOKYO
AMSTERDAM
AUCKLAND
HONG KONG

Plus railpasses, international student ID, tours and much more. Ask for our free travel catalog

413-256-1261
AMHERST
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002

Move 10 years ahead of the class.



The new HP 48SX and a free 'library card' can get you there.

With over 2100 built-in functions, our new HP 48SX Scientific Expandable calculator takes a quantum leap into the 21st century. Buy an HP 48SX between August 15 and October 15, 1990, and HP will send you a free HP Solve Equation Library card (a $99.95 retail value).

The plug-in application card alone contains more than 300 science and engineering equations, as well as the periodic table, a constants library, and a multi-equation solver. It's like having a stack of reference books right at your fingertips.

The HP 48SX calculator is so advanced, it will change the way you solve problems forever. It integrates graphics with calculus, lets you enter equations the way you write them, and does automatic unit management.

Check your campus bookstore or HP retailer for HP's range of calculators and special back-to-school offers. Then check out the calculators that are years ahead of their class.

There is a better way.

HEWLETT PACKARD

Get integrated. Images and details of real HP models. Simulated screens. © 1990 Hewlett-Packard Company PN 12345B

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!

THE STYLING SALON AT
JCPenney

THURSDAYS
MEN'S NIGHT
3-8:30 P.M.
18 yrs. and older
haircuts $8

FRIDAYS
LADIES NIGHT
3-8:30 P.M.
18 yrs. and older
haircuts $8

Hampshire Mall
The Styling Salon at CHARGE IT!!
JCPenney

© 1989, JCPenney Company, Inc
OPEN Mon.—Fri. 9am-8:30pm
Sat. 8:30-5
Salon Phone: 584-7416

"it's finger lickin' good"®
Kentucky Fried Chicken®

Colonel's Dozen
$10.99

12 pieces of Mixed Chicken
Large Mashed Potatoes
Large Gravy
Large Cole Slaw

$1.99 Specials

6 Nuggets with French fries
or
Colonel's Chicken Sandwich w/ fries
2pc. Chicken with small mashed potatoes

Kentucky Fried Chicken at the Mountain Farms Mall
Route 9, Hadley
Open Sun.-Thurs. 10:30-11, Fri.& Sat. 10:30-midnight

Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
□ 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
□ 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts
(2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
□ 4 Racquetball Courts
□ Nautilus & Cardiovascular
Fitness Center
□ Aerobics

CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte. 116, Sunderland
(Opposite Bub's BBQ on Bus. Route)
Open 7 Days • 7:00am-11:00pm
Cut and present coupon before Sept. 30 and pay only $99 for a 3 month Nautilus membership

3 Months for $99
CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA 01059 (413) 549-4545 C

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses

Sale
20 to 50% off selected
Clothing

Great Gifts & Cards
THE MERCANTILE
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

Bellotti attacks Silber in TV advertisements

By DANIEL BEEGAN
The Associated Press

Democratic candidate for governor Francis Bellotti attacked primary election rival John Silber in a television ad Tuesday that ties Silber to Senate President William Bulger.

Meanwhile, Silber's campaign unveiled an ad that outlines the Boston University president-on-leave's accomplishments in education and his concern for children.

In other campaign developments:

• Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy, campaigning against Bellotti, a former attorney general, and Silber for the Democratic nomination for governor, prepared a speech reiterating her strong support for abortion rights.

• Republican candidate for governor William Weld criticized the legislative record of opponent Steven Pierce, the House minority leader. But Pierce picked up the endorsement of Senate Minority leader David Locke of Sherborn, who defended Pierce's performance as a lawmaker.

• Democratic lieutenant gubernatorial hopeful William Golden showed off a television ad that will be part of a $375,000 campaign to win a three-way race with Marjorie Clapprood and Nicholas Paleologos, both of whom are running lower budget campaigns.

• Republican lieutenant gubernatorial candidate Peter Torkildsen previewed radio campaign ads that stress his support for the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition to roll back taxes and fees to 1988 levels.

Bellotti's television ad took aim at Silber's campaign slogan: "the outsider the insiders are afraid of."

It played up his ties to Bulger and accused the two men of playing politics in the sale of the Commonwealth Armory in Boston to Boston University.

But Bulger, who reiterated his support Tuesday for Silber, said the ad was an effort to have it both ways.

Bulger said Silber's opponents attempt to portray him as a man unable to work with others and then play up his ties to the Senate president.

"But why should we expect consistency?" Bulger said.

He said he did not take the ad personally and considered all three Democratic candidates for governor "pretty good people."

But Bulger said, "John Silber's a very honest person. He offers us a chance for some really drastic change. Some of it might not be to my liking. There's a feeling of protest. That's one of the reasons I support John Silber."

Bulger also said Boston University was the only private college in Boston to offer scholarships to graduates of the city's public and parochial schools.

The Bellotti ad ends with "Silber and Bulger — partners? Reformers?" followed by laughter.

Silber campaign manager Robert Donahue said the latest ad showed, "Frank Bellotti doesn't have a message. The only message he has is to stop John Silber."

Donahue said Silber has never tried to hide his friendship with Bulger, while Bellotti had downplayed heavily his ties to outgoing Gov. Dukakis.

The Silber ad, which follows three ads that attacked Bellotti's record, opens with Silber playing with a grandchild. It credited him with helping to develop the Head Start program for pre-schoolers, for turning around BU and for BU's decision to take over the Chelsea school system.

It ends with, "The outsiders the kids love and the insiders are afraid of."

Donahue described the ad as "transitional" and said he would not rule out further ads before the Sept. 18 primary that were critical of Bellotti.

Bellotti's latest ad before his latest one linking Bulger and Silber concentrated on his own record, including his proposals for solving the state's fiscal crisis.

But Donahue said that Bellotti ad was weak on specifics and referred to it as "cotton candy."

Murphy, in her speech to a public policy forum, said she was "the only candidate you can count on" to protect abortion rights.

While all three Democratic candidates have labeled themselves pro-choice, Murphy has taken the strongest stand.

Bellotti has said he favors existing state law, but as attorney general defended some laws pro-choice advocates opposed.

Silber said he also favors current law, but opposed a proposed state constitutional amendment that would guarantee abortion rights through the ninth month of pregnancy, saying that would border on "infanticide."

Weld accused Pierce of having a meager record of accomplishments as a state legislator, calling him "the Wizard of Oz of Massachusetts politics."

"Rep. Pierce has based his entire candidacy for governor on his record in the Legislature," said Weld, a former U.S. attorney. "But when you pull back the curtain, as Toto did in the Wizard of Oz, there is nothing there."

But Pierce picked up the endorsement of his Senate counterpart, Senate Minority Leader David Locke of Sherborn, who said it was Pierce and he who warned in 1988 that the state was heading for fiscal disaster.

Locke said Pierce and other legislative Republicans deserve credit for many ideas that become law only after they are appropriated by Democratic leaders.

"We in the minority do not measure our successes by bills that we file that become law. Most good ideas filed by Republicans are stolen by the Democrats," Locke said.

Work at the Collegian and you can play with us! See Terry at 3:30...

Welcome Back Blowout

Pearl Street Nightclub

Hit Music Power
HMP 99.3 FM

Thursday September 6
Western Massachusetts Biggest Dance Floor!

PRIZES! DANCING! BUD LIGHT BOTTLES—$1

Live Radio Broadcast with 99.3 FM's
DON SHAMS

ADMISSION ONLY 99c ALL NIGHT

• Doors open at 9pm
• 10 Pearl St. Northampton
• 584-7771

Dukakis blasts Murphy for 'playing politics'

BOSTON (AP) — An angry Gov. Michael Dukakis blasted his own lieutenant governor yesterday after she threatened to take over the ailing state government while he was gone on a European trade mission.

Dukakis, who decided to postpone his trip, accused Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy of playing politics in her bid to win the Democratic nomination for governor.

Dukakis spoke with Murphy yesterday, and afterwards said, "what I heard was a candidate who was trying to use this state's fiscal situation for personal political gain."

Earlier in the day, Murphy said she was waiting for Dukakis to leave the state so, as acting governor, she could push her own plan for curing the state's fiscal troubles.

"I'll put my proposals on the table if he continues on his trip," Murphy said. "When I'm in charge, I'll show you how I make some decisions.

"The governor's in charge," she said. "When he wants my opinion, he can ask for it."

She did not make any details of the plan from Dukakis, who has low popularity and is not seeking re-election.

Dukakis had been scheduled to leave for Europe on a trade mission earlier this week. But he postponed his travel plans after learning that state tax collections fell below projections for the second straight month.

On Tuesday, Dukakis ordered cabinet secretaries to devise plans to cut $150 million from the $13.4 billion fiscal 1991 budget. In the previous fiscal year, the state ran a deficit above $1 billion, due, in part, to overly optimistic tax projections.

Dukakis called the latest cuts "absolutely essential," but Murphy said the governor was not taking enough action.

"He hasn't cut yet," she said. "He asked for plans. There has to be a sense of urgency."

She said the state must "get on with doing some things that save money, and do it immediately."

"Whoever wins this governor's office is owed the opportunity to walk in with public. And a Dukakis administration source said she even refused to provide the governor with details in a telephone conversation when he asked her for them.

"This is Alexandra Haig with Nixon's secret plan," said Dukakis spokesman Stephen Crawford, referring to then Secretary of State Alexander Haig's comments that he was in charge of the White House when President Reagan was shot by John Hinkley. Richard Nixon said during the presidential elections that he had a plan to end the Vietnam War, but did not make it public.

Murphy made her comments while looking to inject life into her campaign for governor. Murphy has been trailing her two Democratic opponents, Francis X. Bellotti and John Silber, who have tried to link her with the states fiscal disaster under the Dukakis administration.

Murphy has said in the past that she disagreed with the state's spending practices. But her statements Wednesday marked one of her sharpest departures balanced books for this year and a chance to avoid further deficits," she said.

At a campaign appearance yesterday, Silber estimated the budget, without additional cuts, would end up at least $300 million out of balance.

Robert Donahue, campaign director for Silber, said Murphy "had the opportunity when the state was in a mess, when the governor was campaigning for president in 1988. She ignored it then."

Murphy has said she warned the governor in writing in 1988 that the state could be facing financial trouble.

Dukakis had planned to leave the state Monday, but then was prepared to depart yesterday. Aides said no decision had been made on when Dukakis would leave.

Dukakis said he intended to join the trade mission, but "I'm going to deal with this problem first."

Dukakis said he wanted to "make sure this campaign and this particular candidate doesn't make some kind of charade of what are some very serious problems."

Deerfield Data Systems
"New England's HP Specialists Since 1981"
HEWLETT PACKARD
665-3742
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA
1/2 mile east Cliffside Apts.

Hewlett-Packard Overstock Sale!!!
Classic Printers at Outrageous Prices!
All prices for cash or COD; 3% charge for VISA, MC, AMEX.

Hewlett-Packard LaserJet Series II Printer
$1199
• NEW, with 1 year warranty
• 8 pages/minute, 640K memory
• includes HP toner cartridge
Quantities limited; pricing good only while supplies last!

HP DeskJet Clearance—WHILE SUPPLIES LAST!
$299
• New, with 3 year warranty
• Laser-quality printing
• Silent, 2 page/minute, 300 dpi

HP Business & Scientific Calculators—25% OFF!
Including the HP 48SX, 28S, 12C and other models

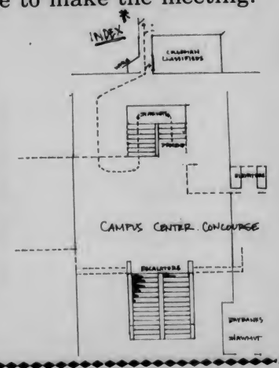
Welcome Back Students!
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Busch Pitchers $3.50
Gin & Tonics $1.50
Woo Woos $2.00
Lunches now served

The Index Yearbook has openings for editor & staff positions in the following areas:

photography	Greeks
layout	seniors
copy writing	student life
sports	business
organizations	marketing

Come to our introductory meeting on Thursday, September 13 at 7pm in room 103 in the Campus Center Basement (near the Collegian).
Call 545-0848 if you are interested but unable to make the meeting.

Index Yearbook



FULL LINE OF BILLIARD & GAMEROOM SUPPLIES
BROWN'S BILLIARDS
Mt Farms Mall, Route 9, Hadley MA 01035

Brown's Billiards is the largest pool room in Western Massachusetts with 21 tables and an antique Brunswick Billiard Table. A CD Juke Box will also be installed for this season.

Lessons will be given by Mr. Brown on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning October 1. Leagues will also be forming at that time. Brown's gives professional pool exhibitions throughout the year.

Brown's carries a full line of equipment and pool cues for sale by such names as McDermott, Viking and Willie Misconi as well as numerous others. We sell and service pool tables. Franchising opportunities are available.

Pool Hall Hours:
Sunday thru Thursday; 11 am to midnight
Friday & Saturday; 11am to 1am

Rates:
$3.00 per hour per person

STUDENTS: 10 percent discount with I.D.

WOMEN'S SPECIAL: Play for HALF PRICE on ./ednesdays.

Brown's can be reserved for parties and large groups.

WORLD

Hussein calls for 'holy war' to oust U.S. forces

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein urged Arabs yesterday to rise up in a holy war against the West and former allies who have turned against him, and he claimed that international trade sanctions are killing Iraqi children.

Western women and children detained in Kuwait and Iraq continued to trickle out in small groups, but they left behind hundreds who await permission to leave. Iraq said it was doing everything it could to expediate departures.

As a multinational armada in the gulf grew, U.S. Army officials in Saudi Arabia said the military was using night convoys to move heavy firepower — including ground-to-air missiles and rocket launchers — into the northern Saudi desert.

Although Washington says its troops are deployed to defend the Saudis, the recent moves increase the offensive capabilities of the U.S. forces.

President Bush indicated yesterday the United States has not ruled out an offensive role, telling lawmakers back from the gulf that if sanctions do not succeed, "we will review our options."

Secretary of State James A. Baker III was headed for the Middle East, where he said he planned to discuss with U.S. allies a proposed new regional security structure for the Persian Gulf.

In the Gulf of Oman, U.S. forces released an Iraqi-flagged freighter that they intercepted and boarded Tuesday as it headed for Iraq with a cargo of tea.

The Navy said the ship was allowed to proceed to an unspecified port after a 30-hour search. Shipping sources said it was headed for Yemen.

Taleb Subah, an American teenager from Davenport, Iowa, arrived in Jordan and gave a chilling description of life in Kuwait since the Iraqi invasion Aug. 2.

"Kuwait was living hell," he said. "You go to sleep to bombing, and you wake up to it. . . There are lots of dead people. They throw them in the trash."

Saddam has promised to free all foreign women and children but to keep the men as human shields against attack at strategic sites.

In another attempt to play on Western anxiety about the captives, he released messages Tuesday purported to be from seven such hostages, including one American.

Also, London-based Kurdish dissidents from Iraq pinpointed six installations where they said hostages were being held. They included a chemical weapons factory, an air force training college and other military bases.

In other developments:

• Britain pledged to a U.S.-led effort to help nations suffering from the U.N.-ordered sanctions against Iraq. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher made the commitment at a meeting with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

• Diplomatic efforts continued, with King Hussein of Jordan flying to Baghdad for talks with Saddam and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz meeting in Moscow with Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The Soviet president meets Bush on Sunday in Helsinki, Finland, to discuss the crisis. Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, who met Gorbachev yesterday, said later he hoped Aziz might pass a message to Gorbachev to relay to Bush at the summit.

• Bush placed a morale-boosting call to U.S. Ambassador Nathaniel Howell at the besieged U.S. Embassy in Kuwait city, where a skeleton staff remains in defiance of Iraqi orders to close.

• Saddam, in the latest of a series of televised statements since the invasion, called upon "all Arabs within the teachings of Allah and according to the Moslem Holy War of Jihad, to fight this U.S. presence of non-believers and to fight the stance taken by Arab agents who have followed these foreigners."

He was referring to Saudi Arabia, which has allowed U.S. troops onto its soil, and countries such as Egypt and Morocco, who have sent contingents to fight in the multinational force.

Addressing the people of those countries, he said: "We call on them to revolt against the traitors . . . and fight the presence in the Holy Land [of Western forces.]"

He also claimed that the U.N. sanctions are resulting in deaths. "The trade embargo on Iraq is depriving the people of food and medicine," Saddam said. "The children in Iraq are dying because of a foolish decision taken by certain people."

Saddam reiterated that his people would defy the boycott and emerge victorious. "They will never let you down, they will survive and resist this boycott. . . the land of Iraq will always respond," he said.

AL-BUMS NEED EXTRA CASH?
WE BUY • SELL • TRADE
USED CDs, LPs & CASSETTES
All Used Sales Guaranteed
HIGH QUALITY • EXTRA STURDY
WOOD FURNITURE
Bookcases • LP Shelves • Tables • Stereo Centers
CD & Cassette Racks • Coffee Tables and More!
ALL SHAPES AND SIZES
Hours Mon-Sat 10-6 Sun 12-5 181 n. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-7137

Dance Stuff
Shoes for Tap, Jazz, Acro, Lyrical
Bloch's soft leather and canvas Ballet
for women, men, and children
Freed, Chacott,& Capezio pointe shoes
Exercisewear, Accessories
220 N. Pleasant St. (rear) • Amherst • 253-5201

LOTS for LITTLES
TOYS • RECORDS • BOOKS
Plus New and Recycled
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
20% OFF ANY ONE ITEM with this coupon, except sale items
201 No. Pleasant St. Amherst • 256-6823
Mon-Sat 9:30-5:30 Sun 12-5

BRITTANY MANOR
(413) 256-8534
Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE NOW!
STARTING $499 PER MONTH
Rent includes heat and hot water.

• Fully-Equipped Kitchen, Including Disposal
• Large Livingroom with Ceiling to Floor Windows
• On the UMass Bus Route
• Wall-to-Wall Carpeting
• Large Dining Area
• Oversized Bathrooms
• Wall-to-Wall Closets
• Storm Windows
• Dead-bolt Security Locks
• Cable T.V. Available
• Ample Parking
• Swimming Pool

Are you an Undergraduate Parent who needs money for child care?
Up to $950 available for child care assistance through the Undergraduate Child Care Tuition Assistance Program per semester. Applications available in the Off Campus Housing Office, 428 Student Union, 545-0865.

New Writer's Meeting
interested in working for:
News
Arts
Sports
Editorial
Black Affairs
Women's Issues
Third World Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Photographers
Meet in the newsroom
113 Campus Center
3 p.m.
Monday September 10
COLLEGIAN

3 COUNTY FAIR

Hurry.....Ends SEPTEMBER 8!

Gates Open 10am
Admission: Adults $5
Children (7-12) $2
Under 7 Free

Just 20 minutes from Springfield and Greenfield; 45 minutes from Hartford

For Fair information call (413) 584-2237

It's Back In Town!

- ►Entertainment!
- ►Games
- ►Circus Acts!
- ►Music!
- ►Rides!
- ►Animal Shows!
- ►Exhibits!
- ►Dancing!
- ►Great Food!
- ►Thoroughbred Racing Daily! (post time 1:30pm)

Every day is jam-packed with fun for the whole family!

Route 9, Off I-91 Northampton, MA

Summer Saving Specials ANDY'S PIZZA FROM & RESTAURANT

Andy's Pizza Fall Specials

Small 2-way pizza-$4.50 plus tax
Large 2-way pizza-$8.00 plus tax
2 Large Cheese Pizzas-$12.00 plus tax
With any Large Pizza-1 liter of soda free
2 dinners for $9.50 plus tax

Only 1 Special per order

Specials good through the semester
Ask for Specials over the phone

Full Liquor License, Beer and Wine

175 University Drive (by Price Chopper)
256-8147, 256-8148

OPEN EVERY DAY WITH FREE DELIVERY
11am-2am; Fri. and Sat. until 3am

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Friendly's

Great Food & Ice Cream

Stop in and sign up to win '55 Chevy Classic Auto Sweepstakes

Car on Display:

Sept. 10th & 11th
11am - 7pm
Russell St.

Sept. 12th - 14th
9:30am - 9:30pm
Hampshire Mall

Friendly's

Great Food & Ice Cream

coupon

55c single dip cone
Sept. 5th - 7th

Good at Hampshire Mall and Russell St. only

NATION

Churches against buildup

Religious leaders criticize Bush's actions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The leader of the nation's largest Black church body is criticizing President Bush's troop buildup in the Persian Gulf, breaking the cautious response of many American religious groups.

"There is a moral issue," said the Rev. T.J. Jemison, president of the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Inc. "It's over oil. We're jeopardizing our fine young men and women over oil in the Persian Gulf."

The convention is expected to vote Thursday at its 110th annual meeting on a resolution attacking the troop deployment that followed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. With an estimated 78 million members, the Baptist Convention is the nation's third largest Protestant denomination, and refers to itself as the largest organization of Blacks in the world.

Jemison's strong statement, made in a recent interview, contrasts with the caution shown by most of the nation's other large church bodies.

"I think the caution reflects different opinions, which means no one is feeling empowered to speak on behalf of the church on this issue," said Dale Bishop, director of the Middle East office of the National Council of Churches.

Bishop said Tuesday the churches are weighing their general opposition to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein with concerns that U.S. goals be directed more toward humanitarian ends than merely protecting oil supplies. He said the executive committee of the council, the nation's largest ecumenical body, is scheduled to meet Sept. 12 to discuss the U.S. military involvement.

In the 53 million-member Roman Catholic Church, Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, has made no judgments on the deployment.

In his most recent statement, Pilarczyk said late last week he was praying for a peaceful solution so "that soldiers, sailors and air men of all forces now arrayed in the region may soon be restored to their families."

In a recent meeting, bishops in the 5.3 million-member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America expressed general concern for people being sent overseas. They asked the U.S. government "to exercise restraint, to encourage inter-Arab cooperation, and to avoid destabilization and unnecessary bloodshed in the region."

Evangelist Billy Graham offered support for Bush, but only in the president's call for prayer.

"May these events also remind us that our ultimate security must not be in economic or military strength alone," Graham said.

Many U.S. Jewish leaders have strongly supported Bush's policy.

Following an August 24 meeting with Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, 11 leaders from a broad range of Jewish organizations issued a statement assuring the administration "that the U.S. Jewish community fully supports President Bush's policies and actions in addressing Iraq's aggression. History taught us that there can be no appeasement of an aggressor."

Marking a 'war's' anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — One year after President Bush delivered a nationally televised speech laying out his drug war strategy, his chief lieutenant in that war says some of the battles are being won.

"We think that overall, in many ways, progress is being made," said national drug policy director William J. Bennett. "Things are significantly better, by lots of measures. Things are certainly not getting worse."

Bush and Bennett were marking the anniversary of the drug speech today by releasing a "white paper" on the drug war.

In an interview Tuesday, Bennett contrasted the current drug picture with the situation when he took office 18 months ago.

At the time, he recalled, people said his job was "undo-able. Mission Impossible. Figurehead. Nothing can happen."

Instead, Bennett said, "The government actually can get some things done if it is given the right equipment, the right direction and the command of the president, and we made some progress."

However, he said, this no time to let up and stop pursuing the drug strategy that stresses tough enforcement of drug laws when violated by either traffickers or users as well as increased spending or treatment and education.

"There's plenty more to do," Bennett said. "There are some places that are not getting better."

The announcement of the drug strategy last Sept. 5 was Bush's first prime-time televised speech. In it, the president said he wanted" to make our streets and neighborhoods safe." He referred to people being " mugged on the way home from work by crack gangs" and children dodging bullets as they went to school.

In the past year, thanks in large part to Colombia's crackdown on the cocaine cartels that was strongly supported by the United States, the supply of cocaine to this country has decreased.

But instead of making the streets of America safer, Bennett said Tuesday, the cocaine shortage increased the violence because of greater competition among drug dealers. "There will be the same number of dogs fighting over a smaller number of bones," he said.

Asked whether the American people might be wondering just what the drug war is all about if battles won cause more violence, Bennett said "the violence fuels the national interest and the interest of citizens, but it isn't the only thing that fuels their interest."

"I think the largest part of the concern that people have is how it will affect their children," he said. "This is not, in the first instance, a fear on the part of most parents that their children will get shot in gang warfare on the street, but rather that their kids will get into drugs and be harmed by it."

The high level of violence is not always connected to the drug trade, he said. He noted that the murder rate has declined in some cities — Detriot, Dallas, San Francisco and San Diego — which are "not necessarily the same cities where we're seeing the greatest progress in the war on drugs."

Two Exciting Programs at the University!

BIG COUNTRY! Discover it through The National Student Exchange Program

The National Student Exchange Program transports you to new and exciting places that will transform your educational experience forever!!! Students can spend a semester or year at over 94 participating colleges and universities across the country, paying in-state tutition, fees, room and board directly to the host school or paying tuition and fees to UMass with room and board to the host institution.

Interested??? Our first information session will be on Sept. 24, in room 804 Campus Center, from 4-5 PM. Places and dates for more info. sessions will be posted in our office . For applications, brochures, and catalogs, contact us at E-26 Machmer Hall (office hours posted).

AND

Try The Greener Grass On The Other Side
5 COLLEGE INTERCHANGE

The Five College Interchange enables undergraduates in good academic standing at one of the five colleges to take courses for credit at the other four. There is no extra tuition! Eligibility begins after the first semester of freshman year.

5 College Interchange Office
E-26 Machmer Hall
Hours Posted

REGISTRATION THROUGH THE 18TH

TACO VILLA
WELCOME BACK!
Food still good.
We're still here.
Downtown Northampton • Downtown Amherst
Sumner Ave., Springfield

湘園
PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
Open Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 11:30am-10:00pm
Fri. & Sat. 11:30am-11:00pm
Sunday 2:00pm-10:00pm
LUNCH HOURS: Mon.-Sat. 11:30am-3:00pm
103 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 (413)256-8924

FREE BOXER SHORTS
WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY FUTON & FRAME
GOOD NIGHT BEDDING OUTLET STORES
320 RIVERSIDE DRIVE NORTHAMPTON 585-0660
9 E. PLEASANT STREET AMHERST (next to the Mercantile) 549-3507

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small Cheese Pizza $3.50
Large Cheese Pizza $5.99
2 Toppings $1.00 extra
549-6098 549-6073
Located at Patterson corner of Southwest no coupons with the special

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL!
from AMERICA'S NUMBER ONE Automobile Fluid Maintenance Service!
The Full Service Jiffy Lube®
Mon - Fri. 8 am-6 pm
Sat. 8 am-5 pm
Sun 10 am- 3 pm
✓ Change oil ✓ Install a new oil filter
✓ Lube chassis ✓ Check and add transmission fluid
✓ Check and add Brake fluid ✓ Check the Differential fluid
✓ Check and add Power steering fluid
✓ Check and add Battery fluid ✓ Check the air filter
✓ Check wiper blades ✓ Vacuum interior
✓ Properly inflate tires ✓ Fill windshield washer fluid
✓ Wash your car, too!
All in Just Ten Minutes!
No Appointment Ever Needed!
HADLEY 347 Russell St., Rt. 9 586-6795
NORTHAMPTON Hamp. Plaza, North King St. 586-6142
SPRINGFIELD 1130 Boston Rd.
CHICOPEE 2017 Memorial Dr.
WEST SPRINGFIELD 788 Memorial Ave.
EAST LONGMEADOW 475 North Main St.
BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL!
Value 1/100 cent
$4 OFF!
1 FULL SERVICE JIFFY LUBE®
Just $19.99 Complete (with this coupon)
Valid at: Western Massachusetts locations only.
May not be used with any other offer.
EXPIRES: 10/14/90

Chopped beef with bacon, sauteed onions, mushrooms, cheese, lettuce and served with steak fries.
Loaded Burger $5.35
late night $6.25
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
with coupon, offer expires 9-21-90
Also, try our New! Spicy French Fries
"lightly coated in crispy seasonings" 50¢ extra
OPEN Sun.-Thurs. 6am-3am Fri.& Sat. 24 hours
James H. McManus
Senior Citizen Discount 10% anytime (w/id with coupon)
NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP RTE. 9 HADLEY/AMHERST 256-6889

STADIUM STORAGE
• RESIDENTIAL ITEMS • LOCK CHECK
• BUSINESS ITEMS • 7 DAY ACCESS
• WELL LIGHTED • VARIED SIZES
Pleasant St
University Dr
Amity
Rocky Hill Rd.
STADIUM
STADIUM STORAGE
We are located on the Amherst/Hadley line, only 1 mile from Amherst center - just continue down Amity Street.
ROCKY HILL RD., HADLEY 586-6908

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"What are you gonna tell your dad, Chuck?"

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG

THE FIRST ROAD DESIGNED EXCLUSIVELY FOR USE BY UNSURE PARENTS SENDING THEIR KID OFF TO SCHOOL.
YES
U
TURN
U-MASS next EXIT
NERVOUS BREAKDOWN LANE

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

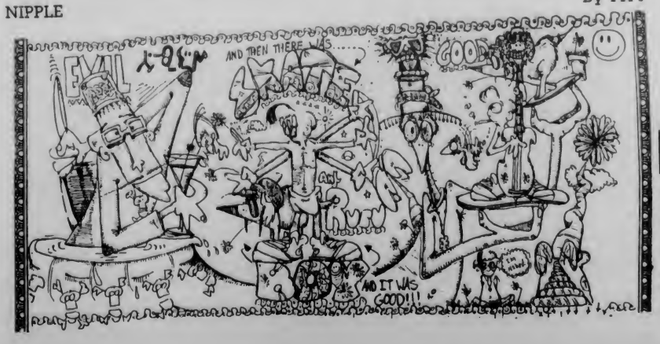
DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

WELL, CAMPERS, THAT'S IT FOR TONIGHT! I AM OUTA HERE!
WHERE TO, YOU ASK? BIG DOINS, FOLKS! SLACKMEYER, SENIOR, HAS SELECTED A LOVELY YOUNG STEPMOTHER FOR YOURS TRULY! TODAY'S THE BIG DAY
NOTHING LIKE A LITTLE LAST-MINUTE, INTERFAITH, TRANS-GENERATIONAL WEDLOCK TO STIR THE HEART, I ALWAYS SAY!
YOU MUST BE THE FATHER OF THE BRIDE! LOVE THE BEANIE!
GO SIT WITH THE CATERER, WILL YA, PADRE?

TANGELO PIE
By Tim Sniffen

~ATTENTION~
To avoid the all-too-common problem of "First Day Comic Strip Jitters," our main character will be appearing behind 19,000 lbs of asparagus, where he will make his opening comments.
~ And now, Gabriel Mark.
...w-w-welcome to Tangelo Pie.
Feel better now?
actually, I feel like smearing butter on my head.

NIPPLE
By PITT



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
French Dip Sandwich Veggie Quiche	Baked Chicken Shells in Cheese Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Veggie Grinder Veggie Quiche	Baked Chicken Shells in Cheese Sauce

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

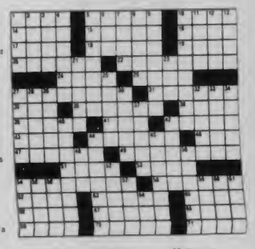
ACROSS
1 Biblical verb
5 Controls
10 Strong desire
14 Sailing
15 "Tear jerker?
16 "Heartburn" author Ephron
17 Broadway luminary
18 Mother-of-pearl
19 Egyptian goddess
20 Forgive
22 Weaken
24 Ready for publication
26 Pennsylvania port
27 Fruit-filled pastry
31 Worked for wages
35 — if by land...
36 Jog the memory
38 Eastern garb
39 Land measures
41 Hawaiian food
42 Ica pinnacle
43 Derogatory remark
44 Powerful
46 Noun suffix
47 Teacher's goal
49 Biology and physics
51 Mom's ara best
53 Sicilian peak
54 Beethoven's Sixth
58 Union member
62 Fancy case
63 Excuse
65 Kind words from a critic
66 Powder and shot, for short
67 Civet's cousin
68 Corrida cheers
69 Before long
70 Senator Kefauver
71 Departed

DOWN
1 Look part
2 Travel agent's org.
3 Rip
4 Inura
5 Plot
6 "The Faerie Queene" heroine
7 Part of a Hunan meal
8 Carried
9 Jibed
10 Cosmos
11 Soprano Ponselle
12 Sometimes it's true
13 Give comfort
21 Scents
23 Inlet
25 Pace
27 Breakfast fare
28 Mother's brother
29 Summer TV offering
30 Sprashes of color
32 Of the nose
33 Observare
34 Cuts into cubes
37 Sister's daughter
40 Outburst from 53 Across
42 Mamo taker
44 The House of Lords
45 Twerps
48 Grande, for one
50 Limited in range
52 Stora avents
54 Like — in a pod
55 Sphera starter
56 Japanese wrestling
57 Cotton Castoff
59 Green vegetable
60 Tie score
61 Take a break
64 Honey producer

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	A	G	E	S		A	B	E	L	E		B	A	N
A	G	A	T	E		M	O	R	I	A	N		E	R	A
G	I	O	T	O	T	H	E	D	O	G	S		L	I	S
			T	U	N	E	S		I	N	L	E	T
R	A	P	I	E	R	S		F	L	O	S	S	Y
A	L	U	D	E	L		F	O	R	E	S	T
B	A	S	E	S		M	I	R	I	E	S		H	A	S
I	T	S	A		A	L	L	E	D		M	E	R	E
D	I	E	Y		M	A	R	I	S		P	A	C	E	D
		W	A	N	T	E	D		C	R	E	A	T	E
A	M	I	G	O	S		T	O	A	S	T	E	R
V	A	L	E	T		F	E	R	M
A	L	L		H	O	R	S	E	A	R	O	U	N	D
I	T	O		E	V	I	T	A		I	N	N	E	R
L	A	W		R	A	T	E	S		E	S	S	A	Y

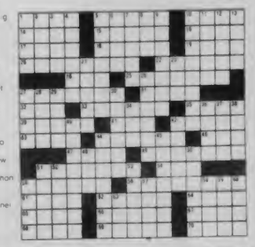
9/6/90



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

H	O	S	T			T	I	N	G		A	B	A	S
E	D	I	E			S	H	E	E	R		L	O	C	H
L	O	L	A		H	O	R	S	E	O	P	E	R	A
O	N	E	S	S	E	R		T	A	P	E	R	E	D
			N	A	R			E	L	S	E
I	N	T		T	A	R	E		N	A	C	T
S	O	F	A		E	L	I	S		M	E	T	H	O	S
A	N	I	M	A	T	E	D	C	A	R	T	O	O	N
R	E	L	I	C		G	A	D		M	A	R	T	E
S	W	E	A	R		E	D	A	M			U	S	E
			R	E	D			P	O	P	S
A	T	A	T	I	M	E		G	I	O	D	E	S
C	O	M	E	D	I	E	N	N	E		P	I	L	L
E	R	I	N		T	R	E	A	D		T	R	I	O
R	E	D	O		S	E	E	P		S	L	A	T

5/15/90



TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor ..... Will Georgiades
Copy Editor ..... Mike Webber
Layout Technician ..... Terry Starmer
Photo Technician ..... Richard DuCree
Production Supervisor ..... Terry Starmer
Typesetter ..... Sue Kent
Production ..... Nicole Dumas, Rick Seto, Seth Kaye, Danielle Dowling, Mike Carvalho

UMass logo change in infant stage

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

In the administration's attempt to license a logo as well as protect that logo from misuse, the possibility of altering the University of Massachusetts nickname/motto/mascot/color was also raised this summer, according to Dan Melley, Interim Vice Chancellor for University Relations and Development.

He said the issue also encompassed changing the state seal to meet the needs of the university, as well as creating a marketable school logo.

Thus far, this has all been informal talk, said Melley. He said he would like to see a few solid ideas emerge before going through the motions of forming a committee.

"After all, there are more important things to be addressed at the university right now," he said.

Baseball head coach Mike Stone took a survey of mascot ideas from coaches. He insisted the arduous process was still in an infant stage.

"The licensing and marketability are another issue," Stone said. "This is a long, complex process."

Assistant Athletic Director Elaine Sortino said it would be good to unify the athletic departments by coordinating uniform color selection.

"Uniformity among the teams would be good for generating enthusiasm and identity for the student body and the athletes," she said. "Identity for the athletic teams could also help unify the athletic department."

Currently some team uniforms range from scarlet to cardinal to maroon. Unfortunately, dye lots usually change every five years making re-ordering and matching often difficult.

The Chancellor's office seems to have solved the color problem on their own. Maroon and white are still the official colors of the university, according to Melley, Stone and Sortino.

The Minutemen logo has some disadvantages according to Melley and Stone. They both sited the confusion of the press (whether to refer to the team/players as 'Minuteman' or 'Minutemen'), the gender-specific mascot (there were no 'Minutewomen'), the militarism of the 'Minutemen' (he holds a musket), and the cumbersome title.

A disadvantage to altering/changing the Minutemen includes getting the proper permission from the proper people, including alumni, administrators and students. Stone said some alumni want the change, others think it would be drastic.

Melley's feedback has also been mixed. He cited a few people have critically asked if the university planned to change its mascot every 20 years.

Melley said that along with altering/changing the mascot, came the aim to standardize the colors and type of print associated with the university.

"It's too bad there's been no uniformity in the past," said Stone. "There's no common ground in the athletic department."

"The Minutemen logo simply doesn't sell," Melly said in reference to the low sales of Minutemen paraphenalia in Amherst and the campus stores.

Both men have talked about avoiding a human-associated mascot, and switching to an animal, as most other schools have done. They agreed that the mascot should somehow be related to the region and state, in order to be identified specifically with UMass/Amherst.

Both Stone and Melley said changing the mascot wouldn't be easy.

"It will be a drastic and difficult change," Stone said. "I don't see any simple solution to this," said Melley.

Sports notice

For any men and women interested in track and field: There will be a meeting today at 4:45 p.m. in Boyden room 249.

■ football

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 32

played."

"I earned their respect as a player," Cullen said. "I hope to earn their respect as a coach, too."

Collegian file photo

Joe Cullen, a three-time second team All-Yankee Conference selection on the defensive line, is coaching the Minuteman backfield this fall.

AEROBICS
AND FITNESS CLASSES

- STATE OF THE ART NEO SHOCK FLOOR
- SIX CLASSES DAILY
- ONLY $425 PER CLASS
- SAVE BY BUYING PACKAGES OF 10, 20, Or 30 classes.

The Loyal at mountain farms mall
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

Car Care Coupons
CAR CARE Specials

Lube Oil Filter Change
Reg. $24.95
Student Price $14.95 up to five qts. motor oil install new filter
lubricate chassie
*most cars
9/30/90

ALIGNMENT

	Reg.	Student
Front End	$39	$29
Thrust	$45	$35
4-Way	$59	$49*

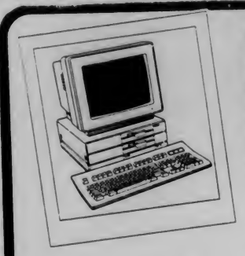
Shims and Labor extra!
9/30/90

9/30/90
TIRE DISCOUNT
Extra 10 percent off with coupon!
(excluding tires on sale)
9/30/90

FREE
SAFETY INSPECTION
- Belts
- Hose
- Tires
- Front End
- Suspension
- Filters

Coupons expire 9/30/90
Hadley Tire & Auto Center
439 Russell St.
Hadley MA 01035
253-9911 253-9054
MC/Visa Amex Discover Card
$1000 Instant Credit

Student Valley Productions
Interested in Theatre?
First Meeting Tues. Sept. 11
5:30PM FAC 08
(Fine Arts Center)
Auditions for
"TORCH SONG TRILOGY"
Wed. & Thurs. Sept. 5 & 6
Sign up on Theatre Dept. Bulletin Board



Computer Rentals Starting at $46 Per Month

IDEAL RELATIONSHIP:
Compatible PCs seek temporary relationship with demanding, economy-minded user. Into heavy work-outs, late nights—your software or mine. 586-7405

VALIDATA: SALES/RENTALS
Mountain Farms Mall
Hadley, MA 01035

■ women's soccer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 32

midfielder- forward Amy Trunk and defender Paula Wilkins. After Tracy Arwood went down hard in the 32nd minute, Trunk replaced the junior at right midfield and displayed good speed and ball control. Wilkins entered the lineup after the half and played well with the veteran group in the back.

What was not encouraging to see in the preseason match was the continuance of the nagging injuries that have plagued the Reds' preseason. This rash of injuries certainly hasn't helped Rudy in his evaluation of his team, but he said of the upcoming Rutgers game, "We can put 11 on the field, the question is, 'can we keep them there?'"

Giants linebacker signs record pact

Lawrence Taylor joins fold for reported $1.6 million per year.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Lawrence Taylor became the highest paid defensive player in the NFL yesterday when the perennial All-Pro linebacker ended a 45-day holdout and signed a new three-year contract.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but Taylor's agent, Joe Courrege, said he was the highest paid defensive player in the NFL, meaning $1.6 million was the likely figure.

"Nobody gets exactly what they wanted," Taylor said at a news conference that was supposed to be for coach Bill Parcells to discuss this week's season opener against Philadelphia.

"It's not like that. I'd look kind of stupid bitching at the money I will be making because it is good money," said Taylor, who said he always knew he would sign with the Giants.

The question is how can Taylor play Sunday in the season opener against the Eagles?

Taylor, 31, left no doubt he would, and Parcells said he would be remiss if he did not play Taylor if he was ready.

The Giants have asked the league for a two-week roster exemption for Taylor so he will not count on the 47-man roster. The exemption would run out early if Taylor played.

Chris Doleman of the Minnesota Vikings reportedly is about to sign a contract that would pay him as much a Taylor's reported salary. Reggie White of the Eagles will make $1.51 million this season.

HONDA
Come ride with us.

- Motorcycles
- Scooters
- A.T.V.'s
- Power Equipment

Valley Motorsports
216 N. King St., Rte. 5
Sales & Service
584-7303
731-9965
Northampton, MA

The 1991 Honda Motorcycles are ready for viewing
Always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing

YOUR PARTNERS IN TRAVEL

TWA Student Discount Cards 10 percent off any fare in the USA 365 days a year.
Also 10 percent off Europe—with a few summer exceptions.
Call or stop by for applications & reservations.
Cost $15/yr. or $25 for 2 yrs.
586-8953
Maplewood Shops-Old South St.-Northampton, MA

Hours:
Mon-Sun - 7am-3pm
Late Nite
Fri & Sat 10pm-3am
Special Daily
Breakfast served all day
MYERS EATERY NORTHAMPTON
88 Pleasant St.
584-4145

Looking to cut out some fat and cholesterol in your diet?
CUT IT OUT RIGHT NOW!

Buy one small cup of nonfat yogurt & get one FREE
Amherst Bolfwood Walk
Northampton Main Street

While current stock lasts, Hurry, they'll go fast!
Tech 1260 12MHZ-286 IBM compatable includes

- Microprocessor—12 MHZ 286 Intell
- Coprocessor supported
- Clock Speed 12/8 MHZ ZERO wait state
- 1 Megabite of ram
- 101 keyboard
- Monochrome Monitor
- 2 Serial/ 1 Parallel ports
- MGA Graphics
- Slim Line Case
- FCC Class B certified

Student Booster Sale
$799.95
Complete
Word Perfect Version 5.1 $135.00
20 Meg Hard Drive System Only $999.95
40 Meg Hard Drive System Only $1149.95
DR. SOFTWARE INC.
SOFTWARE • COMPUTERS • ACCESSORIES
POTPOURRI SHOPPING MALL
241 KING STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
TEL. (413) 586-3210

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE • 20 WORDS OR LESS • THREE DAYS $3.50 • 20 CENTS FOR EACH ADDITIONAL WORD • DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

WELCOME TO UMASS! Interested in Christian fellowship? The Alliance Christian Fellowship welcomes you! More info: call Steve or Pauline 253-7206

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM
$1000 in just one week
Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization. Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed. Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 50

VISA OR MATERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back. Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. M-1207.

WELCOME BAHA'IS!!
Get together! This Friday 7pm. Call 549-9905. Get ready for a great year! See you all Friday!

AUTO FOR SALE

79 DATSUN WAGON 107K AM/FM 4 speed Alfred (W)545-4837 (H)549-5423

1984 DODGE ARIES, 4-dr, low miles, 1 owner $2250.00 253-2096

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great. Excellent condition. 50 MPG $4500 586-7163

CHRYSLER NEWYORKER 1972, wonderful cond 77,000 miles, $1,900. 549-1578

DODGE VAN RV style 1977 ex cond $995 549-2656

FOR SALE: 1988 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, highway metallic gray, excellent shape, best offer call 413-253-9397

SEIZED CARS, trucks, boats, 4 wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. C-1675

FOR RENT

SPACIOUS SINGLE ROOM located in farmhouse on bus route. 192 per month 253-9047

FOR SALE

1966 OLDSMOBILE 4 dr, hardtop, needs new transmission line - estimated $80, asking $150 253-2626

COMPUTER 512K MACINTOSH, 800K external drive. Image Writer I printer 665-8954

COMPUTER DISKS - cheap
3½ 5¼ DD HD
Call Ashley at 548-1612

FUTONS AND FRAMES top quality, lowest prices, free delivery. Fly-By-Night Futon Co 123 Hawley St., Northampton 586-1464

IBMXT 640K coprotc 20MBHD TAU compatible $700 549-2656

LOTUS 123 Ver 3.0 unopened $100 549-2656

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD HOMES available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent foreclosures. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. H-2009 for repo list your area.

SOFA, ARMCHAIRS, Vacuum-cleaner, pool-table, lamps. 549-1578

WATER-BED KING SIZE 12 drawer pedestal will set up $300.00 253-2098

WEIGHT BENCH and assorted weights - $40 Black and white TV - $15 256-1158

FOUND

BRACELET/ANKLET in Field House first floor elev. link on Monday. Contact Mark at 6-3890.

HELP WANTED

CHILDCARE/MOTHER'S HELPER for terrific Amherst toddler. Must have car. Non-smoker. Flexible day/evening hours call 548-9474 9am-9pm

CHRISTMAS. Spring break, summer travel FREE. Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. F-1426

COSMETIC SALES
Earn unlimited income! Become a cosmetic consultant. Flexible hours, high commission, company will train 1-800-359-1961.

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 228 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 min walk from UMass) No phone calls please

EASY WORK! EXCELLENT PAY!
Assemble products at home. Call for information 504-641-8003 ext. 598

FASTIDIOUS, RELIABLE Housecleaner, 1 morning/wk. $25. Experience, references required. 253-7840

INTELLIGENCE JOBS
CIA, US Customs, DEA, etc.
Now hiring. Call 1-805-687-6000 Ext. K-9618

LOOKING FOR A fraternity, sorority, or organization that would like to make, $500-$1000 for a one week on-campus marketing project. Must be organized and hardworking. Jennifer 800-592-2121

STUDENT MGR. POSITION $100/week 10 hours/week flexible hours- bonuses that should double pay. For more info. Call 1-800-246-3087

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS
Sept 17 - Oct 29, Mon 7-9pm $50.00
Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE
Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL
Language Pacifica 549-5065

WANT TO BE A MATH TUTOR? Enroll for a 3 credit practicum course. Pay available after successful completion of course. Come to rap office, B-35 Brett. For more info and to enroll

MOTORCYCLES

1975 HONDA 360CB 12,000 miles excellent condition $450 253-2098

PERSONALS

AV-BABY! You're the greatest! Boo

GORMAN GANG: Here's to a great semester!

SALLY, Welcome back to school! I wish I could be there with you. Have a fun semester, but don't party too much! It's almost your B-day, so we'll party together then. I love you and always will. Love, MC

SWEET SQUASH: Come back and make our garden grow again! Love, Sweet Pea

ROOMMATE WANTED

MALE ROOMMATE WANTED non-smoker clean neat Townehouse looking for mature individual. Call Townehouse ask for Judi Re No 68 549-0839

SERVICES

LEGAL QUESTIONS? The Legal Services Center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

TRAVEL

TRAVEL FREE!!!
Sun Splash Tours offers the most exciting and affordable Spring Break Packages to Jamaica and Cancun! Earn free trip and extra $$$. Call 1-800-426-7710

TYPING

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications, 256-6373.

SPORTS

Ted Garber takes lacrosse reins from retired father

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

When he retired, Dick Garber left some big shoes for his son, Ted, to fill at the helm of the University of Massachusetts men's lacrosse team. Contrary to popular belief, Ted Garber is pretty excited about those shoes.

"This was a challenge worth taking on," said Garber. "It's a good move for me.

"I've had other coaching offers down south but this is the only school I would have left New Hampshire for and I'm glad the opportunity arose."

This year will be a time of adjustment and acclimation. Coaching is about all this Garber will do, since he won't be teaching any classes this year, as his father had done in the past. Between the complex phone system, recruiting and sackfuls of mail likened to those of Santa Claus, the new head coach will more than have his hands full.

"They'll be plenty to do for awhile," he agreed. Having already taken care of some preliminary business, two graduate assistants have been named to the team. Tom Carmean (UMass '87) and Aaron Jones (Cornell '87) will be helping part-time coach Glenn Maller. Tri-captains have also been decided: senior Jim McAleavey, senior Rich Senatore and junior Rick Mullins.

Summer activities (aside from moving) for Ted Garber included heading up a lacrosse camp in which four team players participated. Senior Bill Beigen, junior Eric Carroll, junior Rick Mullins and sophomore Jim Panetta coached and drilled young area lax players during the third week of July.

"My players in the past have had fun, and I think some of that information has trickled down to UMass players," Garber said of his reputation among the Gorillas.

Also during the summer, coach Garber mailed letters along with the usual athletic forms to the players. The letters explained to the athletes what he expected of them, as well as discussed styles of play, according to Garber.

"I like the unsettled play," he said. "I look for momentary opportunities.

About the upcoming season he said, "This will definitely be an exciting team to watch. I'm looking to find our strengths and emphasize them as the season progresses, combine individuals' skills as a team."

The attitude of the fans toward a coach and a sport can be uplifting or depressing. According to Garber, he's trying to keep things in perspective.

"It's great to see student support for programs but I think you put yourself and your players into a dangerous situation when you try to play up to the fans' expectations," he said. "You don't want it to effect the players. Dad's been real good at that."

Scrimmages and exhibition games are not far behind regular fall schedule as a West Point trip will host opponents C.W. Post and Stonybrook, on Oct 1. A round robin at Hofstra will see Maryland and Rutgers, scheduled for Oct. 21. A Brine Lacrosee Club match is still in the workings.

"I think this will give them something to shoot for," said Garber of the preseason games. "It'll get the team solidified."

The NCAA allows only 19 days of contests, including both preseason scrimmages and regular season games. The annual spring trip may be on hold since most of the scheduling for that time slot was done during the summer, before Garber was notified of the new job. He said he plans to get feedback from the coaches and players as to what they would like to accomplish and where they think they could do it.

Other schedule changes include Army dropping from the list of UMass competitors, as Delaware was picked up for a home game. Dartmouth expressed a desire to also drop UMass but Garber said he talked them into at least one more year, a home game to boot.

By making the changes some schools have made (by dropping tougher opponents), they are essentially dodging the competition in order to get into the NCAA finals, said Garber in reference to actions taken by Army and Dartmouth.

"The parity is catching up," he said. "More schools are competing in Division I lacrosse and recruiting is becoming much more competitive. He cited Villanova, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Michigan State and Georgetown as new homes for NCAA lacrosse.

"They've seen what other schools have done with their programs and now they're following suit," Garber said. "It's an exciting game for the fans and also a money-maker."

Despite some changes in the former program, Dick Garber, may continue to somewhat coach his Gorillas, according to his son.

"He said as long as he doesn't get in the way, and kids come to me instead of go to him with questions, he'd be glad to help me out," the younger Garber said. "I would be good to have his input. His expertise and judgement are really valuable."

Joe Cullen lights fire in UMass backfield

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

After spring practice, University of Massachusetts football coach Jim Reid considered moving Joe Cullen back where he came from.

When assistant Brad Hokin left just before the start of practice last spring, Cullen, UMass's starting nose guard from 1986-1989, was hastily tabbed to take his place as backfield coach. A ferocious defensive lineman, coaching running backs — Reid has his doubts.

"You know how running backs are, they always have the neatest lockers, and you can't talk back to them because they start to cry," said Reid. "Joe is just a tough, tough, tough guy. He was screaming and yelling at them. It was unbelievable."

But before Reid could make up his mind, he was approached by tailback Jerome Bledsoe and other members of the backfield.

They wanted Cullen to stay.

This fall, Cullen is back as coach of the UMass backfield, which, according to Bledsoe, has become a tight, disciplined and determined group, and has benefitted from the infusion of attitude Cullen brought with him from the defensive line.

"He gives us our objectives and points out why we're doing it, it's not like 'just do it and don't ask why,'" said Bledsoe.

"He knows how a defense would prepare against us, he tells us what they're thinking. That's what makes it kind of exciting. Joe wants us to work hard, but it's fun.

"And he has that mentality."

Cullen is not in entirely foreign territory. He played some fullback in high school, at Quincy High, and was converted to full-time nose guard when he arrived at UMass as a walk-on, five falls ago.

Cullen had 272 career tackles for the Minutemen, was captain of the team last season, and was named second team All-Yankee Conference in his sophomore, junior and senior years.

As an assistant coach, Cullen now wants to instill a defensive lineman's work ethic in his players, he said.

"Our goal is to be the hardest-working group on the field at all times. It's the attitude that when we're on the field we're superior and no one is going to beat us. You've got to think like that," said Cullen.

"As a defensive player, there are times when you've got to play hurt, when things are going bad and you've got to pick yourself up. I try to bring that attitude here."

Bledsoe, Duncan MacRae and David Mitchell, among others, played with Cullen.

"They have great respect for his toughness and the way he played, so he can get after them pretty good," said Reid. "He might be using language that instructors don't normally use in class, but they have to respect what he says, because that's the way he

CONTINUED ON PAGE 30

Reds scrimmage Amherst HS boys

By RICK SETO
Collegian Staff

For the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, it was a classic matchup of boys versus girls, oops...boys versus ladies. That was the difference yesterday afternoon, as the Amherst Regional High School boys' team scrimmaged the Reds to a 1-1 tie at Upper Boyden Field.

In its penultimate preseason match, UMass defeated a pesky Keene State squad 2-0 in its penultimate preseason warmup.

The Reds, who finished with a final record of 12-4-4 last year and advanced as far as the NCAA quarterfinals, will open their season at 17th-ranked Rutgers University Saturday (1 p.m.).

The idea for scrimmaging guys originated from head coach Jim Rudy's coaching tenure at the University of Central Florida. "It was something out of necessity because there were no women's team that would stay in the state and keep up with us," Rudy explained.

"We did it as a measure of getting somebody who could compete with us, and when I thought the team was getting too big for its britches, we'd bring on an under-19 team," Rudy said. "Up here, I decided it was a nice way to end up."

The eleven that took to the field for the Reds yesterday probably will also do so in the season opener at Rutgers University Saturday. Coach Jim Rudy placed seniors Margie Jaede, Robin Runstein, and Sue Gaudette up front. The midfield consisted of freshman Amy Trunk, senior April Kater in the middle, and junior Michele Woodside. The back was made up of seniors Becky Bonzano and Kim Montgomery, sophomore Holly Hellmuth, and freshman Paula Wilkins. Rudy started sophomore Skye Eddy, but will probably not decide his starter between the pipes until game day.

The Amherst team's greatest asset was their speed, but the Reds showed why they garnered a No. 6 ranking in the preseason Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America poll — with good strategy and tactics.

The boys ran wild, trying to use their speed to their advantage chasing loose balls. A veteran UMass squad countered with composure and an assuredness of what to do on the field.

The Reds knotted the match at one apiece after Amherst scored off a cornerkick. The schoolboys scored as the initial kick from the corner was headed out and then knocked past sophomore keeper Skye Eddy.

UMass scored minutes after, as Margie Jaede hustled to a ball that was through the box from Michele Woodside.

UMass coach Jim Rudy slowed play in the second half, but Amherst still managed the better scoring opportunities. Eddy, coming off a successful first season, was the star as she stuffed several breakaways and one-on-ones that were near goals.

"A tie was nice for both teams, but they probably had a few more good cracks at our keeper than we did at their's," Rudy said. "But basically they were a product of speed and counterattacks."

Against Keene State in the first half, the Owls' play not only bore a resemblance to Rutgers with their black and red uniform, but also with their physical, scrappy play.

Keene State, which advanced as far as the Division 2 Final Four last year under coach Bert Poirier, kept pace with the Reds in the first 45 minutes, but did not seriously threaten freshman goalkeeper Briana Scurry (3 saves) all day

Collegian file photo

April Kater (2) and the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team tied Amherst High School boys yesterday and beat Keene State University Sunday. The Reds open their season Saturday at Rutgers University.

After failing to finish on several occasions, senior Sue Gaudette broke the scoreless tie after breaking the left flank at the 28th minute. Last season's second-leading scorer, Gaudette (9 goals-11 assists-29 points) received a beautiful lead pass from senior Margie Jaede.

All-American midfielder April Kater (11-9-31 last year) gave UMass a 2-0 lead into halftime with her trademark — the header — off a cornerkick in the 38th minute. Jaede tallied her second assist, providing Kater with a perfect pass as she rushed the keeper from the weakside of the corner set.

In the second half, the Owls were less of a threat, as they seemed to fatigue under the sweltering sun while the Reds' possession-oriented offense took over.

Two freshmen who played particularly well were

CONTINUED ON PAGE 31

WEATHER	NEWS	EDITORIAL
Today will be mostly cloudy, with a chance of a thunderstorm. Highs around 75-79.	The Text Book Annex was not only crammed with books — but with people. Page 3.	Daniel Cohen discusses the ordeal of dialing long-distance in the dorms. Page 7.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 3

CLT petitions for tax cuts, alterations

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Citizens for Limited Taxation want to do more than rollback taxes back to 1988 levels in the Nov. 6 election. They want to change the way the Massachusetts government operates.

"We have a bigger project than Ballot Question No. Three, which is to turn state government around," said Barbara Anderson, executive director of CLT.

The CLT petition to roll back taxes to 1988 levels will appear as Ballot Question No. 3 in the upcoming election.

The state government has been playing with its constituents, according to Anderson. She said for the last three years Massachusetts legislators have overestimated the revenues of the state budget at the beginning of the fiscal year so that the budget appears balanced.

Anderson said legislators spent the money they overestimated as if they really had it, creating a deficit. She also said they bonded the deficit and raised taxes to pay for it.

"The legislators play this game so at the end of the fiscal year they can say, 'We can get away with tax increases. We can't help it," she said. "They set people up to feel guilty if they don't want to pay for the bond."

Anderson criticized how the State Legislature has timed their tax increases over the last three years. She said the legislature "fakes" the budget until the end of year and then "slices and dices."

"Everyone gets hit (by budget cuts), but at the most inconvenient time," she said.

She suggested that the legislators choose to cut in popular area, such as education, to drum up support for tax increases. She called this tactic "psychological warfare."

"If Question No. Three doesn't pass, we will have a deficit of $500 billion," she said. "No. Three will give the new governor a back-up to reset government planning."

Anderson said CLT are particularly concerned in the amount of spending in the state for human services. Massachusetts has the third highest spending per capita for human services in the country, she said.

A critic of CLT, State Rep. Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst), has condemned

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

Collegian photo by Dondi Ahearn

BACK TO SCHOOL — David and Jimmy and their friends play tackle football outside of Butterfield after the first day of school.

Dukakis leaves for Europe after breaking mutiny

BOSTON (AP) — After being held a political hostage by a mutinous lieutenant governor, Gov. Michael Dukakis prepared to depart on a trade mission Thursday as his allies moved to quash the rebellion.

Dukakis was forced to change his travel plans Tuesday by Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy, who promised to seize control of Massachusetts' feeble finances once he left.

And while Dukakis allies rallied to his defense Thursday, with references to a new form of 'Murphy's Law' and an "attempted bloodless coup," Murphy said her boss was acting "weird" by not letting her assert herself.

"There's no good will here and certainly no mutual respect," Murphy said Thursday.

Murphy had been a strong supporter of Dukakis in his 1988 bid for the presidency. But with the state in a fiscal disaster and Dukakis not seeking re-election, politicians have been treating him as a liability.

Murphy took this anti-Dukakis revolt to a new level Wednesday when she disclosed she was waiting for the governor to the leave the state so, as acting governor, she could push a secret plan for solving the state's financial woes.

Dukakis decided to postpone his travel plans to Europe, prompting some political observers to say he was being held hostage by his own lieutenant governor.

But Dukakis bitterly denounced the tactic as a political maneuver designed to gain favor with voters in her bid to succeed him in the governor's office. On Thursday, aides to Dukakis echoed that charged: "I just think this whole thing is pathetic," said L. Edward Lashman, state secretary of Administration and Finance.

"Here's a lady who isn't going to get elected governor no matter what she does, and she is dangerously flirting with the economic health of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. That's irresponsible," said Lashman,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Mass. libraries empowered by law

Law will be useful against drop-outs, alumni

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

Libraries in Massachusetts are getting tough and fighting back against impromptu returns with a new law that went into effect September 6.

The new law, signed by Gov. Dukakis in June, would allow for the arrest of library scofflaws if they have received notice that their books are 30 days overdue.

Gordon Fretwell, associate director of public services at the University of Massachusetts Tower Library said he doubts that the University would resort to the extreme new law.

Fretwell said the University has other ways to collect fees for overdue or unreturned books form students, but say the new law will be helpful in collecting fees from students who have dropped out or graduated from the University.

The University policy for collecting funds has generally been adding the charge on the student's tuition bill, which must be paid in order for a student to enroll in classes, he said.

He added the University has always held the right to take a student to Small Claims Court, but no case has gone that far yet.

Bonnie Isman, director of the Jones Library in Amherst, said she also thinks her library will not need the new law.

"I think we would only use the law in extreme cases, but I don't think we'll have to go that far," she said.

Isman said she is unsure if the Jones Library will adopt the new measures because she has yet to discuss the measure with the library's board of trustees.

She said the library has a computerized billing system which keeps track of patrons who have not kept up with bills.

Students, she added have never been a problem more so than regular library patrons.

"We've never really had problems with materials being kept out," she said.

The new law also raises the maximum fine for an overdue book from a maximum of $50 to a maximum of $500.

Although the new law makes no mention of a jail sentence for an overdue book, it allows for a maximum prison sentence of five years and a fine of up to $25,000 for the theft of library materials or property worth more than $250.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

The Tower Library

For Your Information

For Your Information is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 7

Library tour— Tours of the University Library are offered regularly in the first weeks of the semester. Tours last about one hour and leave from the tower entrance lobby at 10:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and 2:30 p.m. Those who cannot come at the scheduled times can make other arrangements by calling the Reference Department, 545-0150.

Tours of the Physical Library, on the second floor of the Lederle Graduate Research Center lowrise, are planned for 10:15 a.m. and 2:15 p.m. today and September 10-14.

Librarians at the Biological Science Library, Room 214, Morrill Science Center (545-2674) and the Music Library, Room 149 Fine Arts Center (545-2870) are also prepared to provide orientation to their collections.

Coffee Social— The LEGA will spouse a coffee social in Room 803 of the Campus Center from 3-6 p.m. Free refreshments will be served, all are welcome.

Film—The film "Torch Song Trilogy" will be shown at 7:00 p.m., also in Campus Center 803.

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 9

Picnic and Party— Hillel's Annual Picnic & Party by the Pond 12 noon to 5 p.m. games and food. All free.

Planetarium Shows— AMHERST— The stars and planets are yours and they are free. The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association in cooperation in cooperation with Amherst College will present four free planetarium shows this month beginning Sunday, Sept.9. The weekly shows will be held at the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium in Morgan Hall. The shows will begin at 3 p.m. and will be open to the public. The programs will include a look at late summer and fall constellations, where to find the visible planets this month and other interesting astronomical happenings.

The Bassett Planetarium is located in the second building on the right going south on Route 116 where the road intersects with Route 9 in Amherst Center. Other dates for the planetarium shows for September are Sept. 15, 22 and 29.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003.
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor ..... Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors ..... Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor ..... Chris Muther
Sports Editors ..... Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors ..... Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor ..... Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor ..... Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor ..... Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Ali Woolwich
Business Manager ..... Susan George
Advertising Manager ..... David Melnick
Finance Manager ..... Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager ..... Susan Kent
Promotions Manager ..... Mark Truskin
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager ..... Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

AMHERST CINEMA
The Freshman
starring
Marlon Brando
and
Matthew Broderick
Mon.-Thurs.
One show only 7:30
Fri.-Sun. 2 shows, 7&9
Only $2.50 w/ student ID

WEIGHTLIFTING
FREE WEIGHTS•NAUTILUS•EXERCISE BIKES•CLIMBERS
The GYM
at mountain farms mall
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

Dance Stuff
Shoes for Tap, Jazz, Acro, Lyrical
Bloch's soft leather and canvas Ballet
for women, men, and children
Freed, Chacott,& Capezio pointe shoes
Exercisewear, Accessories
220 N. Pleasant St. (rear)•Amherst•253-5201

Fancy Fingers
NAIL & SKIN CARE SALON
The ultimate in nail fashion and skin beauty
FOR APPOINTMENT
CALL 256-3113
800 MAIN STREET
AMHERST, MASS. 01002
By Appointment Only
• Manicures/Pedicures
• Sculptured Nails
• Facials - Makeup
• Waxing
• Paraffin Treatment
MC/VISA

Division of Student Activities
Presents
First Week
THE WEIRD & WONDERFUL WORLD OF MR. FINGERS
First Week Night of Bands, Bluewall Cafe, two bands, "We Saw the Wolf" and "Cordelia's Dad", 9pm to 12 mid., all ages show, $1.00 admission.
SUB
7 Sept 90
9 PM
$1.00
Made possible by a grant from the Dean of Students Office

There's only one problem with religions that have all the answers. They don't allow questions.
If you sometimes have questions about God and the meaning of life, come and join the search for answers in the fellowship of the Episcopal Church. The Episcopal Church
What do John Irving, Horace Boyer, and the Paul Winter Consort have in common?
The Ark!
Join us this and every Sunday Night for Dinner and Fellowship, 6:00pm
THE ARK
758 NORTH PLEASANT STREET
549-5929

LOCAL

UMass to centralize campus rape reports

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

The University Advisory Committee on Sexual Assault at the University of Massachusetts recently implemented centralized reporting of sexual assaults in an effort to keep track of growing rape statistics on this college campus.

"It is a way to tag what is happening on campus. Without centralized reporting, statistics get lost. No one knows what is going on for the total picture of the entire campus." Steve Blane, assistant director of graduate students, Center for Counseling and Academic Development said.

When a sexual assault is reported to direct service agencies such as the Dean of Students, Mental Health or University Health Services, UMass police, Everywoman's Center and Victim/Witness a questionnaire will be given to the student so he or she can anonymously report their assault.

The Everywoman's Center will compile statistics based on the questionnaire at the end of each month and release the information to the public.

Blane said the new way of collecting statistics will help the University improve its policy surrounding assaults on campus.

"Centralized reporting is important for prevention of potential violence and to find out if there are certain ares on campus that need more security."

"The Sexual Advisory Committee thought it important to have a good count of sexual assaults on campus," Eileen Stewart said.

Stewart said the goals of the committee are:

- Collect an accurate number of victims reporting.
- Rid rumors surrounding assaults.
- Document services that are provided for victims.
- Develop a mechanism of third party reporting.
- Identify assault patterns.
- Develop an internal and public policy for sensitively handling information surrounding assaults.
- Garner improvement.
- Track information regarding perpetrators.

The following list of services is being circulated as a "Victim Fact Sheet." They can assist a survivor of a sexual assault in a number of capacities.

The Counselor/Advocate program of the Everywoman's Center in Nelson House offers 24-hour services, 7 days a week to victims of sexual assault. The hotline number is 545-0800.

Mental Health services located at Hills North provides counseling services for sexual assault survivors and has a 24-hour number 549-2671.

University Health Services provides 24-hour medical care for sexual assault victims. A medical examiner will treat any injury incurred by the assault, consider the possibilities of sexually transmitted disease or pregnancy, and obtain legally correct evidence in case the survivor decides to prosecute.

Survivors of a rape are asked not to bathe or douche before having the exam. They should also bring any clothes they were wearing at the time of the assault. Their 24-hour number is 549-2671.

The UMass police has a sensitive crime unit, which is specially trained to deal with sexual assault. Reports can be made confidentially and be done by someone else on your behalf. They can be contacted at 545-COPS or 545-2121.

The Victim/Witness Assistance Unit is a specialized unit within the Office of the Northwestern District Attorney, designed to help victims and witnesses of crimes

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Collegian photo by John Woo

WE'VE GOT THE BEAT — Junior UMass student Matt Power works on his drum technique outside the Old Chapel during the Minuteman Marching Band Camp.

Annex reaches capacity; police restrict entry

By GARRON J. CARVALHO
Collegian Correspondent

The Text Book Annex yesterday afternoon reached capacity when almost 1300 students crowded inside the building forcing University police to restrict access to the building while a line of 500 students developed outside.

After being summoned by police at about 4:30 p.m., Environmental Health and Safety ordered the building closed temporarily as police regulated the number of people inside the building to under 610 as mandated by the state building inspector.

By 5 p.m., lines had dissipated to a five-minute wait at the cash registers, and slightly longer on the credit card registers, compared to a 30-minute wait to enter the building earlier.

Richard Mears, fire and safety officer with EH&S, said an incident of this sort occurs at the beginning of every semester, but especially in the fall.

"It's not unusual — it happens every semester," he said. "But it's worse in the fall it seems."

William Harris, director of the Campus Center, said "It was becoming very uncomfortable inside and a concern for the safety of the book buyers."

John Kuusisto, general manager of the University Store, said the first Thursday after classes begin is traditionally the busiest day. He said this combined with the good weather contributed to the overcrowding.

Scott Cashman, manager of the Text Book Annex, said the customers exceeded the capacity of the building but noted that lines would diminish during dinnertime. He explained some of the longer lines in the morning were because most of the cashiers are students and were at classes.

"That is why all the registers were not open," he said.

Scott Wilson, a senior, was relieved to get out of the Annex. He said it was "ridiculous" that he waited over one hour to get his books.

"It was the worst I've ever seen," he said.

Wilson also complained of the heat and inefficient check out lines.

Kuusisto said the credit card lines set up last spring in response to student demands contributed to the longer lines. He said the Annex had to replace registers normally used for cash and checks — which tend to move faster — with slower credit card terminals.

Not all students were annoyed with the wait. Judi Blanchard a recent transfer student from Northeastern University in Boston, considered the hour wait 'par for the course' at any large university.

Cashman said lines likely would not be as long as they were yesterday.

Trustee calls for student support

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

Student leaders at the University of Massachusetts are optimistic that students will rally enough support to defeat further budget cuts.

Student Trustee Angus McQuilken said the emergency meeting called Wednesday night by the SGA went "amazingly well" and 150 students have signed up to help plan a strategy.

"We're hoping to start a big movement going on campus, we want people to know what will happen if further cuts go through," he said.

McQuilken said he thinks it is imperative that Proposition 3, the petition supported by the Citizens for Limited Taxation, is defeated. If passed in November, the petition will roll back tax levels to 1988, cutting an estimated $25-$35 million from the UMass budget.

Students should be more concerned about the upcoming election, he said, because their futures are at stake.

"If students don't make some noise about this [CLT petition] there won't be anything left of this University," he said.

McQuilken said the SGA is planning a series of events to get students active against the CLT question.

"MassPIRG is planning a major voter registration drive October 2 and 3," he said. "We're also planning on a picket of CLT headquaters."

He said students from Amherst will also join students from the Boston campus of UMass in fighting the CLT petition.

Advocacy group to file bill

Public education alumnus may become Regent

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

A Massachusetts student advocacy organization for public higher education plans to file a measure sometime during this legislative session, granting membership to an alumnus from a public college or university to the Board of Regents of Higher Education.

The State Student Association of Massachusetts is a student-run organization which represents the students' views and concerns to the State Legislature, Board of Regents of Higher Education, and college and university administrators.

"What we're hoping to do is to file legislation that would guarantee at least one alumnus of public higher education be appointed to the Board of Regents," said Joe Langis, executive director of SSAM.

He said the legislative precedent for this planned petition is a law which guarantees a labor/union representative seat on the Board of Regents.

The Board of Regents oversees higher education in the state.

At the Universities of Massachusetts in Amherst and Boston, as well as at the University of Lowell, there are guaranteed seats for alumni on the Board of Trustees, he said. The alumni who sit on the Board of Trustees for these universities are elected by the Alumni Association.

Although there are a few alumni of public higher education on the Board of Regents, Langis said that "on the level of the Board of Regents, this shouldn't happen by chance."

"We want a person that would at least have the credentials, the background, and the understanding of public higher education," he said.

AEROBICS
AND FITNESS CLASSES

- STATE OF THE ART NEO SHOCK FLOOR
- SIX CLASSES DAILY
- ONLY $4.25 PER CLASS
- SAVE BY BUYING PACKAGES OF 10, 20, Or 30 classes.

The CLYM Inn at mountain farms mall
Route 9 Hadley
Call 584-2175

20% off College Supplies
(except sale items — with this ad)
WHALEN STATIONERS
Main Street — Amherst
(next to Buffalo Bill's)
Main Street — Northampton
(next to Cathy Cross)
"Serving Students Since 1958"
coupon expires 9-15-90

Get Ready For School At Elder Lumber

At Both Stores:
- Shelving
- Cinder Block
- Bulletin Boards
- Clamp Lamps
- Paint

And Much more

In South Deerfield Only:
- Ready to assemble bookshelves
- Stationery
- Clocks
- Towels

2 convenient locations

Rte 9 Amherst — 253-3411
North St. S. Deerfield — 665-8881

ELDER LUMBER
Since 1895
major credit cards accepted

SUPREME CHEESE™ & ME
FREE!
WITH YOUR COLLEGE ID

This Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 10 & 11, when you present your 1990 College I.D. card with this coupon at the Bruegger's Bagel Bakery on N. Pleasant St. in Amherst, you'll receive a bagel of your choice with Supreme Cheese for FREE! It's our way of introducing you to the deliciousness of Bruegger's Bagel Bakery.
Offer valild 7:30-11:00am Sept. 10 & 11 only
One coupon per customer Not valid in combination with other offers.
BRUEGGER'S BAGEL BAKERY

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

Hours for September have been extended for your convenience!

SEPTEMBER HOURS

SUNDAY	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
SEPT 2 CLOSED	3 CLOSED	5 9-9	5 9-9	6 9-9	7 9-5	8 10-3
9 CLOSED	10 9-5	11 9-5	12 9-5	13 9-5	14 9-5	15 CLOSED
16 CLOSED	17 9-4	18 9-4	19 9-4	20 9-4	21 9-4	22 CLOSED
23 CLOSED	24 9-4	25 9-4	26 9-4	27 9-4	28 9-4	29 CLOSED
30 CLOSED	OCT 1 9-4	2 9-4	3 9-4	4 9-4	5 9-4	CLOSED

Five Good Reasons to use the Textbook Annex
- Largest selection of used books
- One stop shopping
- Professional staff
- Confidence
- Service

REGULAR HOURS: MONDAY-FRIDAY 9:00 AM-4:00 PM

VISA MasterCard

LOCATED ON THE TOP FLOOR, EAST SIDE OF THE PHYSICAL PLANT BUILDING

CLT

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

both the CLT and their tax rollback petition as "the undoing of Massachusetts."

Rosenberg has lambasted CLT repeatedly, saying they were "taking advantage of the anger and insanity"caused by the state's financial woes.

He said CLT is propelled by Libertarian ideas whose political philosophy that everything should be paid for privately except for the militia, the courts, and the police. The political organization has close ties to the Republican party and is funded by corporate executives, he said.

According to Rosenberg, the tax rollback will cut deeply into the funding for higher education which has already faced heavy cuts. The Amherst campus could lose $25-$35 million dollars in allocated state funds on top of the $62 million dollars cut since 1988.

Anderson said opposition to CLT has been trying to assert that CLT supporters care nothing about higher education in the state.

"Why would anyone not support education?" Anderson said. "Even self-interests reason tells you you want students to support your Social Security payments."

Even if CLT doesn't pass, Anderson said there will still be a significant tuition increase for public college and university students.

Rosenberg estimated that a drastic midyear cut to the budget of UMass from the passage of the CLT petition would raise tuition $2,000 per student for the upcoming spring semester.

Student Trustee Angus McQuilken has said the estimated tuition increase to absorb the $6 million budget cut to the University without the impact of the CLT petition would mean a $350 tuition increase per student for next semester.

Anderson said CLT is working on "a means rate" to determine how much the state should subsidize individual students' public higher education. They are trying to devise a plan that would determine the amount of tuition a student should pay by the income of their parents, she said.

"Tuitions should be based on affordability," she said. "A rich parents' kid shouldn't go to school for the same rate as poor parents' kids."

The CLT petition will not rollback any of the tuition increases set in the last three years. Anderson said at the time they were drafting the petition in the summer of 1989, the tuition costs were below the national average. At that time, she felt tuitions should be raised.

The quality of public higher education in Massachusetts has been brought into question by CLT.

"A lot of us aren't sure what you are getting for an education," she said. "You have teachers encouraging you to leave classes and to protest Ballot Question No. 3.

"That's not the definition of education — it's propaganda. The state shouldn't have to pay for propaganda."

Deerfield Data Systems — New England's HP Specialists Since 1981
HEWLETT PACKARD
665-3742
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA
1/2 mile past Cliffside Apts.

Hewlett-Packard Overstock Sale!!!
Classic Printers at Outrageous Prices!
All prices for cash or COD; 3% charge for VISA, MC, AMEX.

Hewlett-Packard LaserJet Series II Printer $1199
- NEW, with 1 year warranty
- 8 pages/minute, 640K memory
- Includes HP toner cartridge

Quantities limited; pricing good only while supplies last!

HP DeskJet Clearance—WHILE SUPPLIES LAST!
$299
- New, with 3 year warranty
- Laser-quality printing
- Silent, 2 page/minute, 300 dpi

HP Business & Scientific Calculators—25% OFF!
Including the HP 48SX, 28S, 12C and other models

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Burger King Broiler—Medium French Fries
—Medium Soft Drink—
Only $3.69
Please present this coupon before ordering. Limit one coupon per customer. Not to be used with other coupons or offers.
Expires 9-16-90. Good only at Hadley and Northampton
Void where prohibited.
SOMETIMES YOU'VE GOTTA BREAK THE RULES.

FOUR SEASONS
Wines/Liquors

Busch $8.99cs
24 12oz. cans

Rolling Rock
$10.'33'cs.
"A meaningful price"
24 12oz. Bottles

Bud Dry
$11.99cs.
24 12oz. cans

Sam Adams
$17.99cs.
24 12oz. bottles

Miller Genuine Draft
12pk.$5.99
12 12oz. bottles

Michelob Light & Dry
12 pk. $6.99
12 12 oz. cans

Beck's
12 pk. $7.99
12 12 oz. bottles

1/2 Keg Busch
$32.99
Keg and tap deposits can be made with check or credit cards — no cash necessary

BASS ALE
$4.99 6pk.

Sutter Home
4pk. $3.99
White Zinfandel
Sauvignon Blanc

Absolut Citron
750ml $10.99

Cuervo Gold
750ml $8.99

Jack Daniels
750ml $10.99

Sun Country Coolers
2 Lt. $2.99

Four Season's
Vodka and Gin
1.75 L $8.99

584-8174 • Rt. 9 - Near McDonald's and Burger King

■ rape reporting

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

throughout the court process.

Anyone can call or meet with them confidentially to ask questions about a particular assault and how the court might handle it.

The Dean of Students Office can help a student with new housing, phone number changes, privacy on academic records, changes in classes or schedules and help with related school and academic problems. They can be reached at 545-2681.

Survey: Americans sexually unaware

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans would flunk a test of basic knowledge about sex, says a new survey that's old news to sex experts.

Fifty-five percent of people surveyed could not get at least 10 of the 18 questions right on the test, designed by the Kinsey Institute.

Half didn't know that a woman can become pregnant while having her period, the report said. Half also did not know that some lubricants, like petroleum jelly, shouldn't be used with condoms or diaphragms. Petroleum jelly weakens rubber.

Half the respondents incorrectly believed anal intercourse itself can cause AIDS, even if neither partner is infected by the virus; only 30 percent knew that menopause doesn't cause most women to lose interest in sex; and only 35 percent knew that problems with achieving erections usually are physical and can be treated.

"I'm not surprised at all" by the poor showing, Virginia Johnson Masters, director of the Master & Johnson Institute in St. Louis, said in a telephone interview.

She said people just do not seem to absorb factual information they hear about sex, unless a sex-related problem affects them or a family member or friend, or they are health professionals who deal with sexual problems, or they have a good understanding of sexual function and behavior.

The results also made sense to Debra Haffner, executive director of the Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S., a nonprofit organization that promotes sex education.

The group "believes that until there is comprehensive sexuality education for all people from childhood through adulthood, that we will continue to see this alarming degree of sexual ignorance that causes both personal pain as well as significant disease and dysfuction," she said.

Kinsey Institute director June Reninisch said Wednesday the questions were drawn from those most often asked of the institute.

Among the poll's other findings: Only about 25 percent knew that the typical American has first intercourse at age 16 to 17, or that an estimated 30 percent to 40 percent of married men have had an extramarital affair.

And only 21 percent knew that more than a quarter of American men have had a sexual experience with another male as a teen-ager or adult.

Poll results emphasize a need for sex education of pre-teen children and of medical school students, because the poll found people turn to doctors for sex information, Reinisch said.

Less than 20 percent of poll participants got at least 12 questions right, and only five people out of the 1,974 polled answered at least 16 questions correctly, Reinisch said.

The poll is discribed in a new book, "The Kinsey Institute New Report on Sex." At a news conference, Reinisch said the poll was financed by book publisher St. Martin's Press and the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction.

The Amherst Drop Zone
Army/NavyStore
Now 2 Locations
Downtown Amherst * 256-0039
(Behind Bart's, next to Panda East)
Route 9, Hadley * 585-5800
(Next to McDonald's)
WELCOME BACK AREA SCHOOLS!
For Unique & Unusual Items
The Only Army/Navy Store in the Valley—The Amherst Drop Zone
Open: Mon.-Sat. 10-6
Sundays 12-5
Open evenings 'til 9:30 in Hadley
Photo: Buck Stewart 549-5454
10% Off with this ad
Expires September 31, 1990
Open 7 days a week

FREE BOXER SHORTS
WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY FUTON & FRAME
GOOD NIGHT BEDDING OUTLET STORES
320 RIVERSIDE DRIVE NORTHAMPTON 585-0660
9 E. PLEASANT STREET AMHERST (next to the Mercantile) 549-3507

Still the best: lowest prices, biggest selection ... that's Liquors 44!
BEER WINE LIQUORS
LITE BEER $10.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
Almaden $5.69 4.0 L BAG-IN-A-BOX
GOLDEN CHABLIS, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC, RIESLING, BURGUNDY, BLUSH CHABLIS, VIN ROSE, RHINE, CHABLIS
STOLICHNAYA VODKA SALE $18.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $5.00 $13.49 1.75 L AFTER REBATE
IMPORTED Heineken HOLLAND BEER $15.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. bottles
NAPA RIDGE $3.29 750 ml WHITE ZINFANDEL
BLACK VELVET $11.99 1.75 L
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT case of 24 12 oz. cans $11.79 + DEP
GLEN-ELLEN $3.49 750 ml CHARDONNAY
BACARDI SILVER RUM $13.99 1.75 L
PAUL MASSON $5.49 3.0 L BURGUNDY, BLUSH, CHABLIS, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE, VIN ROSE
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH $13.69 1.75 L
Labatt's BEER & ALE $11.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
August Sebastiani WHITE ZINFANDEL $5.69 1.5L
SEAGRAM'S GIN $10.99 1.75 L
BUSCH $8.89 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
Asti Spumante MARTINI & ROSSI $8.49 750 ml
Cossack VODKA $8.99 1.75 L
FALSTAFF & FALSTAFF LIGHT $7.29 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
COKE CLASSIC & DIET COKE $5.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
BACARDI BREEZERS $3.79 RUM COOLERS TROPICAL, LIME, PEACH, BERRY 4 pkg.-12 oz. bottles
KAHLÚA $10.99 750 ml
LIQUORS 44
not responsible for typographical errors
SALE PRICES THURS 8:30:00 THRU WED 9:12:00
9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
◄ TWO ► LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
TeleCheck

Bart's
Homemade ICE CREAM from YOGURT & Pastries.
It's Cultured & De-licious.
AMHERST 103 N.PLEASANT ST. 253-9371

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Welcome to UMass — one gigantic, complex community

Hello, freshmen, welcome, etc.

You are now in college, which means you are basically on your own from here on out.

At the moment, you may be feeling absolutely alone in a big place with lots of people who all seem to know what they are doing. If it is any consolation, think of me — three years or so ago almost to this day, standing on the steps of the Student Union with a wrinkled campus map, asking for help finding the Tower Library.

A passerby's exact words: "Here's a memory aid. It's a tower."

That's OK. It is a natural process. If you feel dumb for a while, that's because you are dumb, for a while, until you get your bearings. It is one of the beauties of this place — there re / is not anybody here who is going to hold your hand and gently usher you toward a diploma.

To survive at UMass, you have got to be able to fend for yourself. And to be able to fend for yourself is a good thing.

Some other good things:

The Pioneer Valley (you are standing in it right now) in late September/early October is simply the nicest place on the planet, when every tree on campus is celebrating its diversity — get used to that phrase — and the air is entirely clear and almost cold. Find a tall building and head for a top window, and take a look around. Then go outside and play; winter comes soon enough.

Last year at this time I was on the West Coast, on exchange to Oregon, where, in the fall, things just turn different shades of green. Amherst in autumn — something I had taken for granted — was unbearable to be away from.

Sam Silverstein

They could — could, not should — cut the budget here down to seven dollars and twenty six cents and this would still be a great place to spend the fall.

You are also going to bump into some people here who are sincerely, sometimes shockingly, different from you. Those faces in the brochure are very real on campus. People of every imaginable ethnicity, religion, sexual preference, political orientation, shape, size, texture, etc. are your classmates.

Keep an open mind, and you can learn as much from them as any textbook or lecture.

If you were looking to go to school with something a little more homogeneous (say, preppies from all over the world), you have gone one stop too far on the bus. Amherst College is thatta way.

And if you do want to surround yourself with something a bit more familiar, with people of similar backgrounds and interests, for example, then there is plenty of room for that, too.

In fact, there is plenty of room for lots of things here. By my count, UMass has about 28 different reputations ("You're from Massachusetts?" I was asked once in Oregon. "You must be smart."), and all of them are true

As true, at least, as you make them. A party school? ZooMass? Of course. 20,000 kids and no parents — sounds like all the key ingredients to me. A great education? If you want to go rooting around a bit for it, sure, there is as much to be learned here as anywhere else. A weak education? You could probably find that here, too. Jock school? Earthy-crunchy? Hick?. . . Yes to all, and no to any, if you so wish.

So, welcome again, to a big campus with pretty trees and strange people, and boundless opportunities for success, and failure.

Sam Silverstein is a Collegian staff member

Telephone turbulence terrifying

I have just tried to call my parents long distance for the fifth time on this stupid phone.

Either this machine was built as a conspiracy against students or I am a bigger moron than I thought I was. Either option is depressing.

Daniel Marks Cohen

I usually can get the hang of mechanical devices pretty quickly, but this time I feel like I'm building a dishwasher. ". . . press transfer while the first party is on hold . . . and then press one of those two buttons on the bottom of the phone . . . you know, the one that looks like an asterisk and the other that looks like the number sign . . ."

To my surprise and utter horror (not to mention further confusion), those two damn buttons actually have names.

The asterisk is called the "star" key, and the other one is the "pound" key. Oh, wait, I thought I screwed that up, isn't it the other way around? Oh, heck!)

And to make matters worse, the phone now has all these other buttons that I doubt I will ever learn to use.

Here are two of the obnoxious features that the new system offers: Call Park (PARK? My phone can park?) and Follow Me (What?!). And we call this progress?

You want to impress me? Have my phone mix drinks or cook dinner or, even better, do laundry. Now, if my phone could do that, I would be impressed.

I can't even use the shiny new answering machine I shelled out sixty bucks for last semester. You just know that Duffey and the telephone answering machine company of New England made a deal beforehand.

Another wonderful aspect of this system is that it has conference call. "Up to eight people!" it says in the tiny pamphlet distributed to me, in a half-hearted attempt to explain this mess.

Eight people on a conference call. Oh, my sweet petunias! How confusing!

How would you be able to tell who was talking, never mind the fact that I have trouble talking to just ONE person?

When was the last time you wanted to talk to eight people on the phone, all at the same time?

I don't need a pamphlet to understand this monster.

I need a three-credit intensive crash course on telephone operations.

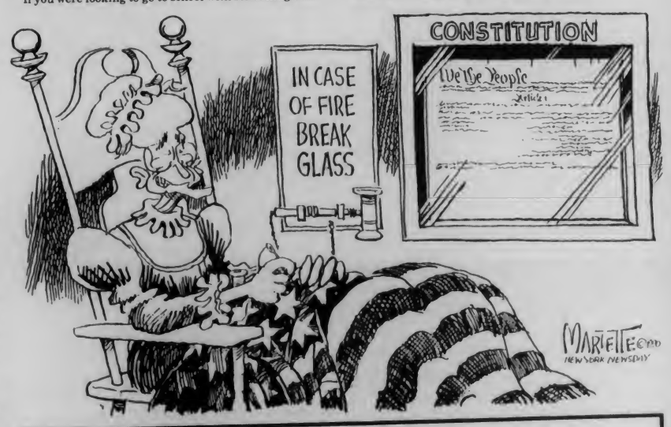
I need the Maytag repairman. I need a sedative. I need my mommy.

I need sixty bucks.

Anybody want an answering machine? It's only been used a little bit — and it's still shiny! And I have the box it came in.

Maybe I'll just WRITE my parents. . .

Daniel Marks Cohen is a UMass student



Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed, double-spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editors' discretion.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length. Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned. The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 30 typed lines and columns must not exceed 65 typed lines.

Columnist status is granted only after having five columns printed on the Page within one semester.

Submissions must be addressed to The Editorial Editors, Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Students interested in becoming columnists or cartoonists should come down to the Collegian newsroom or call 545-0719 and ask to talk to Reggie, Gayle or Jeremy.

We look forward to receiving your submissions and comments throughout the semester.

Should Americans be in the Persian Gulf? Are they fighting for democracy, or something else? Are we witnessing the beginning of another Vietnam? Do Americans really support the President? Is the military out of our control? Is the government thinking of the welfare of the people of the Middle East? What should our economy expect from a lengthy battle with Saddam Hussein?

The Editorial Desk will be running a Point/Counterpoint section next week. Send all submissions to The Editorial Editors, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

UMass Prof. on leave promotes math in Washington

AMHERST (AP) — People react nervously when they find out what Ed Connors does for a living.

He is, after all, heading the Washington lobby of the nation's three main mathematical societies. But Connors says it's time for people to get over their math anxiety and realize that mathematicians count.

It's not an easy pitch. Connors, who has taken a leave from the University of Massachusetts where he taught math for 21 years, maintains that mathematicians have too long ignored society's slights.

Typically the first reaction many people have when they are introduced to a mathematician is an edgy "Oh, I always hated math" or "I was always lousy in math," Connors said.

"You can understand when you consider what most people were exposed to in the mane of mathematics instruction."

The psychological shudder says a great deal about the attitudes of the nation, he said. It also explains why the U.S. is lagging in producing mathematicians and why political leaders from President Bush on down have taken to calling math education in elementary and high schools a national crisis, he said.

And it is what has led the American Mathematical Association, the Mathematical Association of America and the society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics to join forces and step up their efforts to promote the field, he said.

In his new job, Connors will be trying to raise the level of math awareness in Congress, particularly when it comes time to portion put grants for education, said Kathleen Holmay, public information director for the Joint Policy Board for Mathematics, the organization formed by the three societies.

"He's going to be doing legislative and public affairs work, which is interacting with federal agencies, all the math societies, particularly their science policy committees and working with places like the National Science Foundation," she said.

Connors said that even when it comes to other sciences,"we've always been at the back of the bus," contending that research and other funding for math has traditionally lagged and math departments are often the first places administators look to cut.

"I blame mathematicians," he said. "Mathematics isn't boring, unpopular or a man's game. Mathematicians simply don't do a good job of promoting the field."

"They tend to just ignore what people think."

But, he maintained that the nation has fallen so far behind that mathematicians can no longer remain quiet.

This year, U.S. citizens made up 46 percent of the 919 people who received doctorates in math at U.S. colleges and universities, he said. Fifteen years ago, U.S. citizens got 75 percent of doctorates in math.

Women, who make up half of those getting bachelor's degrees in the field, have made considerable gains. A quarter of the doctorates issued this year to American citizens went to women, but the increase hasn't been enough to cover the steady declines in the number of American men going into the field. This year 319 men got doctorates in math, compared to 696 in 1973.

Two years ago Connors who for years has chaired the joint committee of the math societies that keeps track of growth in the field, compared mathematicians to an endangered species.

"The big difference is there is no penalty for laying off a math teacher, even though school superintendents ought to be fined as severely as for killing a bald eagle," he said.

"At the same time that President Bush is saying we need to train twice as many people as math teachers, we still have headlines talking about math teachers being laid off," he said.

"There is more of an awareness on the part of politicians and governmental leaders," he said. "But I'm not sure if it is the awareness of a problem with declining test scores or a willlingness to make a commitment."

Show to continue

BOSTON (AP) — Foes of a controversial exhibit of photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe were rebuffed in a bid to stop the show.

Boston Municipal Clerk Magistrate Rosemary Carr Wednesday denied three complaints against the show at a Boston art museum. The complaints would have prompted an investigation by the district attorney.

Although she said, "personally I wouldn't pay five cents" for the pictures, Carr moved quickly to deny the request by the American Family Association, which argued the photos were obscene.

The group had sought complaints that the exhibit — is exploitative, constitutes dissemination of obscene materials and dissemination of matter harmful to minors.

Lesley Pasquini, who filed the complaints against Boston's Institute of Contemporary Art, said members of her group will discuss their next step.

METROPOLITAN BOOKSELLERS'
BOOK FAIR
W·A·R·E·H·O·U·S·E S·A·L·E
Marches on as
1,000'S OF NEW BOOKS ARRIVE!
TEXTBOOKS $2.50 to $5.00
Extraordinary Selection of Books From Major Publishers at Unbelievably Low Prices!
Publishers: Random House, Simon & Schuster, Harper & Row, MacMillan, Viking, Prentice Hall, Bantam Doubleday, Scribner, Putnam, Morrow
Fiction: Romance, Mysteries, Novels, Fantasy, Suspense, Science Fiction, Westerns, Sports, Gothics, Historical Non Fiction: History, Film, Nature, Medical, Health, Philosophy, Hobbies, Literature, Children's, Starter, Fairy Tales, General Interest, Educational
Authors: Stephen King, Isaac Asimov, Barbara Michaels, P.B. Trudeau, Colleen McCullough, Richard Condon, Louis Gizzard, Jimmy D. McDonald, Charles Schultz, William Buckley, Helen H. Garttmyer, Alfred Hitchcock, Ruth Rendell, Bill Cosby
Thousands of Books 70% Off! Original Publisher's List Price
Ton of Children's Books 50% Off! Original Publisher's List Price
ALL OTHER BOOKS AT EXCEPTIONAL VALUES!
This Ad is worth $5.00 towards any purchase over $25.00!
(limit one per customer)
The Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley, MA
(In the old Almy's Store at The Mountain Farms Mall.)
Hours: Mon-Sat. 10-9, Sunday 12-6
This extraordinary selection is available from publishers overstocks, returns, special printings and liquidations

FOR RENT IN AMHERST
SALEM PLACE CONDOS
AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY
We have a 2 bedroom, a 3 bedroom, and a 2 bedroom townhouse for rent starting at $850.00 per month.
We are seeking mature, quiet tenants to commit to at least a 1 year lease (subletting is allowed). Terms are negotiable.
CALL: 584-0292 OR 256-0919

amc THEATRES
$2.50 'TWILITE SHOW' LIMITED TO 6 P.M. SHOWS
MT. FARMS 8 584-915
PRESUMED INNOCENT
TAKING CARE OF BUSINESS
DARK MAN
MY BLUE HEAVEN
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
THE LEMON SISTERS
GHOST
FLATLINERS
PUMP UP THE VOLUME MEN AT WORK

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

LANGUAGE PACIFICA OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve. Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6-9/17
Amherst Creamery Rdg.
150 Fearing St. Ste. 29
549-5065

Council Travel
Cheapest Fares to:
•EUROPE
•ASIA
•AUSTRALIA/NEW ZEALAND
LONDON, FRANKFURT, PARIS, SYDNEY, TOKYO, AMSTERDAM, AUCKLAND, HONG KONG
Plus railpasses, international student ID, tours and much more. Ask for our free travel catalog.
413-256-1261
AMHERST
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002

Persian Gulf Crisis

U.S. man shot in Kuwait while trying to escape

(AP) — Few details were available on the reported shooting of the American in Kuwait.

American diplomats in Baghdad told a briefing yesterday that the Foreign Ministry has not allowed them access to the man, who they said was in a Kuwait hospital. They had no word on his condition.

In Bahrain, a Western diplomat said the American was shot in the hand and broke his leg as he was trying to jump out of his window.

Saddam, in a statement read on Iraqi television Wednesday, called upon "all Arabs, within the teachings of Allah and according to the Moslem Holy War of Jihad, to fight the stance taken by Arab agents who have followed these foreigners."

He was referring to Saudi Arabia, which has allowed about 60,000 U.S. troops onto its soil, and countries such as Egypt and Morocco, which sent contingents to Saudi Arabia to help stand up to Iraq.

Saddam offered yesterday to allow Bush to speak directly to the Iraqi people on Baghdad television, a response to U.S. officials' complaints about the extensive air time given the Iraqi leader in the West.

Naji al-Hadithi, the director general of the Information Ministry, said he had received the instructions from Saddam and that an Iraqi television crew was ready to conduct an interview with Bush in Washington.

The White House reacted skeptically. Aides said it was "unlikely" that the president would accept the offer, but spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the proposal was being looked into.

Yesterday, an Air France jet flew into Paris from Jordan carrying 153 Westerners allowed to leave Iraq, including at least nine Americans.

In Baghdad, a British convoy of thousands of hungry Asians stranded in Jordan after fleeing Iraq and Kuwait finally drew million in pledges by other nations, but there was concern the aid could come too late.

Nearly 20,000 cross into Jordan every day, but only half that number leave daily, reported the official Jordanian news agency Petra. More than 100,000 are stranded in the country.

Soviets call for UN military forces

Iraq tightened the screws on trapped Westerners yesterday, warning that anyone trying to leave without permission could face life in prison. The Soviet Union for the first time called for sending a U.N. military force to the Persian Gulf.

Washington and Moscow, meanwhile, scrambled to prepare for the weekend superpower summit they hope will bring a break in the 5-week-old crisis.

At the United Nations, diplomats said U.N. Secretary-General Javier Prez de Cuellar planned to send an envoy to occupied Kuwait who was trying to avoid capture. Department spokesman Mark Dillen called Iraq's behavior "outrageous."

As the United States redoubled its efforts to win financial support for the huge military effort, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher pledged more forces to bolster the U.S. contingent in the gulf. She did not elaborate on the deployment plans.

Egypt, too, said it was beefing up its small gulf contingent.

President Bush said the United States was determined to force Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait, which Iraqi troops overran Aug. 2 in a dispute over land, money and oil. "We will not stand by while one country devours another unthreatening country whole," Bush said at a Kansas fund-raiser. "Our cause may not be easy, but it will always be right."

In a surprise move, Bush said he would make a statement for broadcast an interview with Bush, but the White House said the president would tape a statement instead.

Statements by the Iraqi president — which White House wags call "Saddamathons" — have received ample air time in the United States, and the Bush administration was reportedly irritated about this.

U.S. continues search for economic support

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady's globe-touring search for billions of dollars to support the economic and military campaign against Iraq's Saddam Hussein is entering its final but possibly toughest phase.

Brady was scheduled to meet on Friday with South Korean President Roh Tae-woo. Later the same day, he flies to Tokyo for talks with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

The Bush administration also dispatched Secretary of State James A. Baker III to oil-rich nations of the Middle East to look for economic support.

These discussions followed on the heels of Brady's talks Tuesday and Wednesday with French officials and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

But in those cases, the meetings involved countries which already have a sizable military presence in the Persian Gulf and have indicated a willingness to provide at least some aid to alleviate the economic suffering on Egypt, Jordan and Turkey from enforcement of the trade embargo against Iraq.

Crisis impacts hard on NE consumers

New Englanders most dependent on Mideast oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — New England is well stocked with home heating oil going into this winter and consumers who buy early can hedge against price shocks driven by the Mideast crisis, oil dealers said yesterday.

Economists, politicians, utility executives and wholesale oil dealers met on Capitol Hill to discuss the impact on New England of events in the Middle East, particularly the United Nations-backed embargo on Iraqi oil.

Not surprisingly, most agreed that New England will be the hardest hit section of the country because it is most dependent on foreign oil and has no energy natural resources of its own.

But the participants prescribed a way for the region to buffer the shock. For the region's politicians, the strategy is to unite around common energy policy goals. For utilities it is to use natural gas or nuclear power as alternatives to oil for electricity generation.

And for consumers, most of whom already drive fuel-efficient cars and live in insulatated homes, a little financial planning can help protect against the rapid changes in the world of international oil.

"There are vehicles by which consumers can hedge," said Edward Bulmer, president of Sprague Energy, an oil wholesaling company in Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire. By buying during the summer months under fixed-price plans, Bulmer said, consumers can guarantee a price of between 65 and 80 cents per gallon for home heating oil.

It protects them from the sudden price shocks all too familiar to New Englanders who saw their fuel bills double in a few weeks during last December's cold snap.

"Sophisticated consumers may well ride this thing out and not see $1.20 heating oil," Bulmer said. "It takes education and it takes a consumer who says, 'I can live with that price and I'm not going to get greedy and assume that the price drops 10 cents a gallon."

New England residents are already paying the price of the Mideast crisis through higher gasoline, fuel and utility bills. Rep. Edward Markey (D-Mass), said the tab comes to an extra $10 million per day for the six New England states compared to a month ago.

Markey said the major oil companies, not middleman dealers, are the culprits behind the rapid rise of prices.

The oil market, he said, seems to be able to raise its prices instantaneously.

"But there's an incredible ability, almost like Michael Jordan, for the prices, once they're up there, to stay up there in suspension," Markey said.

The solution, according to Markey, is for politicians representing New England and other energy-dependent regions, to join forces and set a clear agenda. The agenda, he said, should include support for natural gas pipeline projects like the Iroquois pipeline linking New York, New England and New Jersey with Canada's gas fields.

Richard Bornemann, vice president of the Connecticut-based United Illuminating Co., warned that Markey's prescription would pit New England against an overwhelming coalition of legislators from Texas, Arkansas, Louisana and other oil-producing states.

"That's a war between the states and this time the North would lose," Bornemann said.

For the short term, according to Michael E. Canes, an expert in oil supply with the American Petroleum Institute, New England has adequate fuel reserves going into this winter.

"The stocks are in pretty good shape," Canes said. "Even if there were quite a cold winter there should be no problem meeting demand."

That is the stark contrast to last winter, when a short pre-season supply and several major mishaps at refineries around the country combined with cold December temperatures to send home heating oil prices skyrocketing.

Bernard Smith of the New England Fuel Institute, a group representing independent oil dealers in New England, said improved heating fuel efficiency instituted by consumers after oil shocks of the 1970s has left the region in a better position.

In 1973 during the Arab oil embargo, the average New England home used from 1,500 to 2,000 gallons of home heating oil per year. Today, that average is down to between 600 and 950 gallons per year.

New England senators warn Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid high praise for the Bush administration's handling of Mideast diplomacy, three New England senators waned of military and financial troubles unless the United States gains more substantive help from its allies.

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee showered Secretary of State James Baker III with praise for the Bush administration's role in marshaling world opposition to Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

But Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass), said he is concerned that the U.S. may be making a political blunder if it pushes to reinstall Kuwaiti emirs if Hussein's forces can be pushed out of the oil-rich nation.

Committee chairman Sen. Claiborne Pell, (D-R.I.) also questioned the U.S. support for the deposed Kuwqaiti government, saying an Iraqi pullout may not end the crisis.

"The question of objectives is extremely complex," Pell said before questioning of Baker began. "We see the withdrawl of Iraq from Kuwait. But do we seek the return of the emir or a democracy? Moreover, is Iraqi withdrawl a sufficient objective?"

The world community cannot stand by, Pell said, "while the ruthless regime in Baghdad proceeds in its quest for a nuclear capability that might eventually bring terror and devatation to the entire region."

Dodd called the response by the Bush administration and the United Nations "a first-rate example of how foreign policy in the latter part of this century and certainly into the next is going to have to be conducted."

But Dodd said U.S. policy should not merely focus on the removal of Iraq from neighboring Kuwait but on the restoration of a legitimate Kuwaiti government. "Bringing back the old crowd is a bit of a concern," Dodd said.

Iraqi offcials attempt to end isolation

(AP) — Iraqi officials traveled to Moscow and Beijing in a bid to break out of international isolation, but the Kremlin yesterday reiterated its demand that Saddam Hussein withdraw from Kuwait and restore its former rulers.

China said food and medicine should be provided to Iraq.

In occupied Kuwait, an American was reported in the hospital after being shot in the hand by an Iraqi soldier and breaking his leg as he tried to avoid capture. U.S. officials said they had no word on the American's identity or condition.

Also yesterday, Iraq said it was reviving a law calling for prison terms up to life for any foreigner caught trying to leave without an exit permit.

The country's justice minister was quoted as saying by the official Iraqi News Agency: "A foreigner violating the entry and exit procedures . . . will be sentenced to a life or temporary imprisonment and all cash in his possession will be confiscated."

About 11,000 Westerners are still stranded in Iraq and Kuwait.

Saddam kept up his propaganda barrage, calling Wednesday for a holy war against the U.S.-led Western forces that flooded the Persian Gulf region after he overran Kuwait on Aug. 2.

More freed Western women and children headed home yesterday, but hundreds were held back.

U.S. officials got a sympathetic ear but no immediate funding from European allies for what appears increasingly to be a long-term American military commitment in the gulf.

In Jordan, tens of thousands of Asian refugees from Iraq and Kuwait remained stranded in desert camps, awaiting a way to get home.

The quest for a peaceful solution continues yesterday as Jordan's King Hussein held talks with Saddam in Baghdad, sources in the Iraqi capital reported.

Taha Yassin Ramadam, Iraq's deputy prime minister, arrived in Beijing in an apparent mission to seek help from a long-term ally.

China's Foreign Ministry said food and medicine should be sent to Iraq, despite the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade.

On Wednesday, Iraqi Foregn Minister Tariq Aziz met Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Moscow. The official Soviet news agency Tass stressed yesterday that Moscow did not waver in its insistence on "the immediate withdrawal of all Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the restoration of that country's independence and sovereignty."

The Soviets have backed the U.N. resolutions banning trade with Iraq and authorizing military enforcement of the embargo.

State says oil prices stable

BOSTON (AP) — The average price for gasoline in Massachusetts has stabilized, after showing sharp increases since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait last month, the state reported yesterday.

A survey conducted Wednesday by the Division of Energy Resources found the statewide average prices for a gallon of unleaded gasoline at a full-service station was $1.38. This showed no increase from the week before.

The lowest average price, $1.33 per gallon, was found in the greater Boston area and the highest price of $1.42 was found on Cape Cod.

The average self-serve price for an unleaded gallon of gasoline was $1.28.

The average price for home heating oil dropped a penny to $1.17 a gallon across the state with some dealers lowering their prices as much as 10 cents since last Tuesday.

GLB programs hit by budget cuts

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

From lack of funds for teacher's assistants to ebbing office supplies, the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, a division of the Dean of Students office, will be one of the many campus resources that will suffer in the wake of recent budget cuts.

Staff positions have been cut from two T.A.s and one part-time clerical worker to one T.A.

Chris Macek, the currently employed T.A., explained the situation. The Program could only hire him for the month of September, since the level of funds is still being worked through due to the cuts imposed by the executive-branch ordered 4 percent across-the-board spending decrease.

However, Macek's tuition waiver for being a T.A. is based on the salary he would receive for the semester from the Program.

When his bill is reviewed in October by the Tuition Board, his fees will be raised due to not being employed by the Program, and he said will be forced to leave school.

Once this T.A. position is vacated, it is likely that it will be eliminated. This will leave the Program severely understaffed, as to interfere with its ability to continue offering the services it currently provides.

The Program's lending library may suffer a purchasing freeze; funds for new books, periodicals and journals are determined by what is left in the budget after expenses.

This year, that remainder will be minimal to none.

Students' access to services and events will decrease in various ways.

- The monthly newsletter that was free may now have to have a charge for printing and postage costs.
- Less guest speakers may be brought to campus.
- Events will be less well publicized due to the costs for printed flyers and local media advertising.

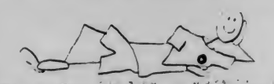
The Program's staff face having to spend considerable time fundraising in order maintain the current level of operation.

The Program operates a lending library for members of the LBGA community and also coordinates the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Speakers Bureau on campus.

"Hey Bud, Welcome Back!"

-Your favorite music (DJ)
-Sports
-Pool
-Munchies
-Giveaways
-much, much MORE!
Proper ID Required

Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET, NORTHAMPTON
50¢ Bud Drafts
Thru Sept. 10th
NO COVER CHARGE!



Hours:
Mon-Sun - 7am-3pm
Late Nite
Fri & Sat 10pm-3am
Special Daily
Breakfast served all day

MYERS EATERY NORTHAMPTON
88 Pleasant St.
584-4145

Good Stuff for Back to School

LAMPS
Swing Arm Lamp $10.95
• Table Lamps • Desk Lamps • Floor Lamps • Ceiling Lamps • Extension Cords • Bulbs, etc.

INEXPENSIVE STORAGE ITEMS
• Crates • Stacking Bins • Jumbo Bins • Utility Trollies • Desk Carts • Shower Caddies • Under Shelf Baskets • Hampers • Trunks

BEDSPREADS PILLOWS RUGS
• All Natural Fibers • 100's to choose from • Sheets • Bed Pillows • Comforters • Throws • Blankets

POSTERS PRINTS 'N FRAMES

DORM FURNITURE
• Bookcases • Desks • Butterfly Chairs • Folding Chairs • Beanbag Chairs • Directors Chairs
Folding Bookcases $44.95 natural $54.95 black

• CLOCKS • CORK BOARDS • CD & CASSETTE STORAGE • TELEPHONES • SHADES • MIRRORS • MUGS • BOOK BAGS

NECESSARY EXTRAS
Hardware, Trash Bins, Mops 'N Brooms, Coffee Makers, Laundry Bags, Glassware, Dinnerware, Flatware, Candles, And On, And On

Find it at Faces
n. pleasant st. amherst • main st. northampton • open 7 days

ABSOLUTE AUCTION
8 GOLF COURSE CONDOS AT FAIRWAY VILLAGE, NORTHAMPTON, MA
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1990 AT 10:00 A.M.
UNITS Bx-1, B-2, Bx-3, Bx-4, B-5, B-6, B-7 and Bx-8
FAIRWAY VILLAGE, SPRING ST, NORTHAMPTON, MA
OPEN HOUSES: Friday, Saturday & Sunday, Sept 7th, 8th & 9th -11 AM to 4 PM each day
Viewing only: Mon-Fri, September 10-14, 11 AM to 4 PM
Offering 8 luxury Residential Condo Units situated on 80 acres of land bordering the Mill River. Property is located along the fairways of the Northampton Country Club, a nine-hole private golf course. All units have Southern exposure to allow for the greatest view and privacy.
TERMS: THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($3,000.00) deposit per unit in cash, certified or bank cashier's check at the sale. Balance due within forty-five (45) days at closing. (*4 UNITS TO BE SOLD ABSOLUTE - BUYER'S CHOICE) 5% BUYER'S PREMIUM WILL BE ADDED TO THE FINAL HIGH BID
UP TO 95% FINANCING AVAILABLE TO QUALIFIED BUYERS & RATES AS LOW AS 8.65%.
CALL TODAY FOR BROCHURE AND INFO
AMERICA' REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS
JEROME J. MANNING & CO., INC.
AUCTIONEERS
TOLL FREE - 1-800-521-0111

$99 SPECIAL
3 Days only
Sept. 6th, 7th & 8th
10:00am-4:00pm
While they last
Rollokan Swedish Flatweave
WOOL RUGS
Additional sizes & styles available at up to 60% off
Amsal International Inc.
1120 Federal St.; Rt.9
Belchertown, MA
413-253-2644
Directly on Bus Route

Students caught stealing sign

Compiled by PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Police were called Wednesday to the Washington Residence Hall Cluster Office on a report of two students removing a tow ..one sign from a pole.

University action will be taken against the students by the Housing staff.

ARRESTS

- Robert Douglass, 21, of Southwood Apartments, was arrested Wednesday on University Drive for operating a motorcycle without a license and permitting a passenger without headgear.
- Peter Ochs, 20, of 1301 Coolidge, was arrested Wednesday outside of the hall for being a minor carrying alcohol.

LARCENY

- A man reported to police Wednesday that his vehicle parked in the Stadium Lot was damaged during a breaking and entering attempt to steal the stereo. The damage estimate was $250.

■ mutiny

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

who added he was not publicly supporting any candidate.

Murphy is well behind in her two Democratic opponents in the race for governor, according to the recent public opinion polls. Prior to this week, she tried gently to disassociate herself form Dukakis, claiming she warned him in writing in the spring of 1988 that the state was headed for trouble.

Yet despite her past allegiances, Murphy has not always been a close political ally of Dukakis. In fact, during the 1986 campaign, the same delegates who endorsed Dukakis for governor supported another democrat for lieutenant governor, who ultimately lost to Murphy.

"She's elevated Murphy's Law to an art form," said Stephen Crawford, a Dukakis spokesman "Whatever can go wrong, she'll make sure goes wrong."

20% off College Supplies
(except sale items — with this ad)
WHALEN STATIONERS
Main Street — Amherst
(next to Buffalo Bill's)
Main Street — Northampton
(next to Cathy Cross)
"Serving Students Since 1958"
coupon expires 9-15-90

New Writer's Meeting
interested in working for:
News
Arts
Sports
Editorial
Black Affairs
Women's Issues
Third World Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Photographers
Meet in the newsroom
113 Campus Center
3 p.m.
Monday
September 10
COLLEGIAN

Chopped beef with bacon, sauteed onions, mushrooms, cheese, lettuce and served with steak fries.
Loaded Burger $5.35
late night $6.25
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
with coupon, offer expires 9-21-90
Also, try our New! Spicy French Fries
"lightly coated in crispy seasonings" 50¢ extra
OPEN Sun.-Thurs. 6am-3am Fri.& Sat 24 hours
James H. McManus
Senior Citizen Discount 10% anytime (not with coupons)
NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP RTE. 9 HADLEY/AMHERST 256-6889

FULL LINE OF BILLIARD & GAMEROOM SUPPLIES
BROWN'S BILLIARDS
Mt Farms Mall, Route 9, Hadley MA 01035
Brown's Billiards is the largest pool room in Western Massachusetts with 21 tables and an antique Brunswick Billiard Table. A CD Juke Box will also be installed for this season.
Lessons will be given by Mr. Brown on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning October 1. Leagues will also be forming at that time. Brown's gives professional pool exhibitions throughout the year.
Brown's carries a full line of equipment and pool cues for sale by such names as McDermott, Viking and Willie Misconi as well as numerous others. We sell and service pool tables. Franchising opportunities are available.
Pool Hall Hours:
Sunday thru Thursday; 11 am to midnight
Friday & Saturday; 11am to 1am
Rates:
$3.00 per hour per person
STUDENTS: 10 percent discount with I.D.
WOMEN'S SPECIAL: Play for HALF PRICE on Wednesdays.
Brown's can be reserved for parties and large groups.

The Index Yearbook has openings for editor & staff positions in the following areas:
photography
layout copy writing
sports
organizations
Greeks
seniors student life business marketing
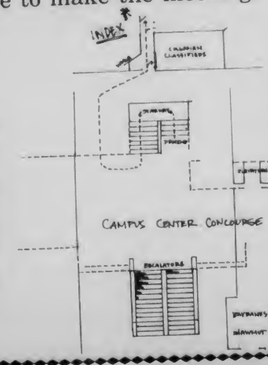
Come to our introductory meeting on Thursday, September 13 at 7pm in room 103 in the Campus Center Basement (near the Collegian).
Call 545-0848 if you are interested but unable to make the meeting.



Index Yearbook

Railroad Stores
SALE ENDS SEPT. 13
Rt.9 Hadley, MA Rt. 5 E. Windsor 586-7248 623-3358
1131 Campbell Ave West Haven, CT (203)933-5468
739 Meadow Chicopee 594-2925
207 Webster Sq. Berlin, CT 828-9889
1 Canal St. Turner Falls 863-4343
Rt. 184 Groton CT

RUBIE BOUGHT OVER 84,000 YARDS TO SELL AT 40% TO 70% OFF AND MORE
free FROM ALLIED FIBERS
LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR
DUPONT CERTIFIED STAINMASTER CARPET
RUBIE BOUGHT OVER 35,000 ROLLS INCLUDING ALL THE MOST WANTED COLORS AND FABRICS. SHAW SELLS THE DEALER WHAT HE NEEDS AND WE GET THE REST!
RUGS RUGS RUGS! ALL FIRST QUALITY

9'x12' COMPARE AT $180 NOW $69.99
10'x12' COMPARE AT $199 NOW $79.99
11'x12' COMPARE AT $220 NOW $89.99
12'x12' COMPARE AT $240 NOW $99.99
12'x13' COMPARE AT $259 NOW $104.99
12'x14' COMPARE AT $280 NOW $109.99
12'x15' COMPARE AT $300 NOW $119.99
12'x16' COMPARE AT $319 NOW $129.99
12'x17' COMPARE AT $340 NOW $139.99
12'x18' COMPARE AT $360 NOW $144.99
12'x19' COMPARE AT $379 NOW $149.99
12'x20' COMPARE AT $400 NOW $159.99

PATIO UMBRELLAS
FIRST QUALITY • AMERICAN MADE
CRANK HANDLE • MANY COLORS
7½' 8 RIB NOW $39.99 VALUE $190.00
8½' 12 RIB NOW $59.99 VALUE $260.00

STANLEY REMOTE CONTROL
THE STANLEY COMPANY SAID THESE ARE REPACKED — BUT THEY LOOK LIKE NEW TO US!
GARAGE DOOR OPENERS
STANLEY U-INSTALL® PREMIER MODEL 3200
• ½ HP — EXTRA POWER TO OPEN HEAVY DOORS UP TO 18' x 7½' • PROVEN STEEL CHAIN AND CABLE DRIVE • 150 WATTS OF LIGHT WITH 4½ MINUTE LIGHT TIME DELAY • 1,024 EASY-TO-CHANGE DIGITAL CODES • TRANSMITTER INDICATOR LIGHT LETS YOU KNOW WHEN BATTERY NEEDS REPLACING • INSTANT DOOR REVERSE WITH BACK-UP TIMED REVERSING SYSTEM
VALUE $169.00 NOW $118.88 YOU SAVE 30% ½HP
OTHER MODELS IN STOCK STARTING AT $88

BRAND NAME LUGGAGE BUY-OUT
AMERICAN TOURISTER GARMENT BAGS ORIGINALLY $79.00 NOW $33
PERSONAL PORTER SUITCASE ON WHEELS ORIGINALLY $149.00 NOW $68
OLEG CASSINI 24" PULLMAN VALUE $79.95 NOW $19.88
VERDI • 26 INCH SUITCASE ON WHEELS GRAND HOTEL PULLMAN NORMALLY $79.95 NOW $24.88
5 PC JUTE & VINYL LUGGAGE SET • DELUXE 26" PULLMAN WITH WHEELS • 24" • 22" • 20" SUITCASES • MATCHING TOTE VALUE $150 SET NOW $77

INNERSPRING MATTRESS SETS
SMOOTH TOP
TWIN SIZE SET $98.88 SET
FULL SIZE SET $118.88 SET
QUEEN SIZE SET $158.88 SET

Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
□ 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
□ 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts (2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
□ 4 Racquetball Courts
□ Nautilus & Cardiovascular Fitness Center
□ Aerobics
CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte. 116 Sunderland
Opposite Bub's BBQ and Bear Rocker
Open 7 Days • Summer Hours
pay only $49 for a 3 month Nautilus membership

3 Months for $99
CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA 01059 (413) 549-4545 C

We Accept Pizza Hut®, Bruno's & Avanti's Coupons!
FREE DELIVERY in 30 min.
FREE DELIVERY in 30 min.
AMHERST/HADLEY
256-8911
Hours:
Mon.-Thurs. 11am-2am
Fri. 11am-3am
Sat. 11am-3am
Sun. 11am-2am
FREE DELIVERY
Large Cheese Pizza $6.50 Only
Extra toppings ONLY $1.50 each
One coupon per order. Expires 9-28-90
Small Cheese Pizza $4.50 Only
Extra toppings ONLY $1.00 each
One coupon per order. Expires 9-28-90
12inch cheese Pan Pizza Only $5.50
Extra toppings ONLY $1.00 each
One coupon per order.
CARRY OUT ONLY PIZZA
FREE Pizza
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA or 12" PAN STYLE PIZZA GET ONE of equal or lesser toppings FREE
Not good with any other order. Good thru 9-28-90
CARRY OUT ONLY

Republicans hopefuls debate

Pierce, Weld contrast on solutions for state

BOSTON (AP) — In a debate less than two weeks before the primary election, Republican gubernatorial hopefuls Steven Pierce and William Weld accused each other of being out of step with Massachusetts voters.

While Piece claimed Weld was proposing "liberal solutions" to problems such as teen pregnancy, Weld said his opponent wanted to "turn back the clock" on issues such as women's rights and the environment.

Weld, a former U.S. attorney, has been tailing in public opinion polls and focused most of his attacks on Pierce.

But Pierce, the House minority leader, not only took aim at Weld but also criticized the Democrats who control the State House.

The debate Wednesday night was the second televised encounter in a week between the two candidates. Weld had been pressuring for debates for weeks after he was soundly defeated by Pierce at the state Republican convention in March.

As with previous meetings, Weld criticized Pierce's lack of a legislative record and also accused him of not giving full support to the tax-cutting ballot petition sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation.

Pierce, meanwhile, stressed the working-class values he said he represents, and he also reiterated he supports the CLT petition as "the only way to force the Democratic leadership to restructure state government."

Also, Pierce took a shot at Weld's record, noting that a former Justice Department official did not cite "good management" as a strength of the U.S. attorney's office under Weld's tenure.

But Weld responded that this assessment came from William Bradford Reynolds in 1988, after Weld had left the Justice Department. Reynolds was a chief assistant of former Attorney General Edwin Meese, whose term was marked by "misconduct," Weld said.

Weld said he would bring sound management to the governor's office, and insisted he could find $800 million worth of savings in the budget through federal reimbursements and by changes in Medicare and special education.

On the subject of the economy, each candidate was asked how he was feeling the pinch of tough times along with a raise in state income and gasoline taxes.

Weld, who is wealthy, said he feels the taxes at the gasoline pump. Also, he said the state needs to improve its business climate by straightening out its finances.

Pierce said he and his wife are frugal, and he did not believe he was cutting back on anything. But he used the opportunity to say once again that he was more in touch with middle income people.

"They are not theoretical to me," he said.

The issue of class became a central topic prior to the Republican convention. Weld said Wednesday he did not think it was appropriate, though he added a "certain amount of innuendo has come out of Pierce quarters."

Weld was careful, however, to mention that he fought for the "little guy" as U.S. attorney, prosecuting white-collar crime.

The most heated confrontations occurred on the subjects of abortion and sexual education. Pierce, who is anti-abortion, said the state should do all it can to encourage adoption of unwanted babies. He also criticized Weld for supporting the distribution of condoms at schools."

"Bill has a lot of positions that put him out of the mainstream," Pierce said.

State colleges threaten reduced academic year

Boston (AP)— Officials of state public colleges and universities, faced with the second 4 percent budget cut of the summer, are considering closing for two weeks and asking employees to take a week off without pay.

The thing they don't want to do, the say, is to cut the quality of education.

After two straight months of less tax revenues than anticipated, Gov. Dukakis on Tuesday ordered every executive department to reduce allocations by 4 percent and tell him how they would do it within 15 days.

University of Lowell President William T. Hogan said he will have to take drastic measures if asked to male further cuts, and one option is for "everybody to take a week off without pay."

Sherry Penney, chancellor of the University of Massachusetts at Boston, said she is considering closing the campus for one or two weeks.

"You just run out of things to do," she told the Boston Globe.

She said she will have a hard time controlling student-related costs, "because we already have the students in classes.

"What do you do with the students who are here? Walk around to every fifth one and say, "OK, you leave?"

Tuition was increased at the colleges and universities for this year, and there could be an additional increase for the spring semester.

Terry Zoulas, spokesman for Chancellor of Higher Education Randolph Bromery and the Board of Regents of Higher Education, said a tuition hike "is open for the spring," according to the Telegram & Gazette of Worcester.

The Board of Regents decides how much of the state money for higher education will go to each of the 27 institutions.

It is not known how much each institution will lose under the new 4 percent budget cut, because the board has not produced a plan. Bromery said it will not be an across-the-board cut but that he will chose among colleges and accounts.

Kalyan K. Ghosh, acting president of Worcester State College, said Bromery has called a meeting of all state university and college presidents for Tuesday.

The system of financing the colleges has been questioned.

"Some colleges receive four times as much state funding as others because of political "accidents" of fate that have never been rectified," an unidentified college president told the Globe.

"To me that's the hidden public policy issue that the regents have never had the stomache to approach— the crazy disparity of state funds."

North Shore Community College President John Dimitry said the regents were created in 1980 to "determine budget distribution, with the guiding principle being equity."

The uncertainty of the state budget apparently affected choices made by prospective students.

"We called people who had been accepted here but who didn't come, and budget situation was the one thing they said they were worried about," Hogan said, "They worried the department they wanted to major in might not be around in a couple of years.

AL-BUMS NEED EXTRA CASH?
WE BUY • SELL • TRADE
USED CDs, LPs & CASSETTES
All Used Sales Guaranteed.
HIGH QUALITY • EXTRA STURDY
WOOD FURNITURE
Bookcases • LP Shelves • Tables • Stereo Centers
CD & Cassette Racks • Coffee Tables and More!
ALL SHAPES AND SIZES
Hours: Mon-Sat 10-6 Sun 12-5 181 n. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-7137

ROSES BOUQUETS BALLOONS
Always in Bloom
FULL SERVICE FLOWER SHOP
DAILY DELIVERIES ON CAMPUS AND ACROSS THE COUNTRY
253-5545
253-7228
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

LEGAL PROBLEMS?
Call the Legal Services Center of UMass!
HOUSING · FAMILY · STUDENT RIGHTS · CIVIL RIGHTS · WORKERS RIGHTS · CRIMINAL AND CONSUMER LAW ·
Call 545-1995

animal city
Campus Plaza (next to Stop & Shop) Route 9 Hadley 256-0960
KMart Plaza Holyoke 532-2327
Depot Square Westfield 562-7428
Buy One Fish And Get One For 1¢ (Excludes Feeder Fish And Scavengers) Higher Price Prevails With This Coupon Only — NO LIMIT — Offer expires 9-30-90
25% OFF ANY 3 PC. AQUARIUM SET UP TANK, STAND, FULL HOOD With This Coupon Only Offer expires 9-30-90
AQUARIUM PLASTIC PLANTS BUY ONE AT REG. PRICE GET ONE FREE! Higher Price Prevails — NO LIMIT — With This Coupon Only Offer expires 9-30-90
Fritz INTRODUCTORY OFFER FISH FOOD BUY ONE GET ONE FREE! (Of Equal Size) — NO LIMIT — With This Coupon Only Offer expires 9-30-90

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM Tel: 549-2692
Welcome Back! Look at the $AVINGS Scott's has for you!
Bud Light Suitcase cans 24 - 12 oz. $11.99 plus dep.
Miller Genuine Draft 12 - 12 oz. bottles $5.99 plus dep.
Half Kegs Starting at $27.
Heineken 12 - 12oz cans $8.39 plus dep.
Miller Lite 12 - 12oz. cans $6.99 plus dep.
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 1.75 L $13.99 (with free sunglasses)
Smirnoff Vodka 80 proof 1.0L $8.49
Peachtree Schnapps 750ml $6.49
Glen Ellen Sauvignon Blanc 750ml $3.49
Sauza Gold Tequila 750 ml $7.99 -3.00 mail-in rebate $4.99 final cost
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE
6 University Drive, Newmarket Center, Amherst
Diagonally Across from UMass Stadium
Plenty of FREE Parking
Telecheck for Your Personal Check
MEGABUCKS We Have It
We now have all Mass Lottery games!

ARTS & LIVING

Incomplete buyer's guide for a music loser

By MARK STURM
Collegian Staff
and PHIL STRAUB
Collegian Correspondent

Right, old news first. By now, you're probably tired of the controversy surrounding Florida's bizarre obscenity policy and the milquetoast music industry's attempts to ease the pressure of foam-frothing bandwagon extremists through excessive self-inflicted restrictions.

You've probably worked hard to acquire or at least hear music from 2 Live Crew's Nasty album. If so, then you've probably also reached the conclusion that two entire albums worth of songs ranting and raving about sex not only comes off as sounding desperate, but boring as well. Hardly something worthy of the intense amount of controversy that it has received.

If vulgarities and an x-rated depiction of life are your bag, then by all means go with Ice Cube. AmeriKKKa's Most Wanted boasts the potent lyrical abilities of NWA's best member (as evidenced by Compton's latest bid for pop stardom) and the slick production of the Bomb Squad, the creative force behind Public Enemy. With the inventive theatrics of "The Drive-By" and "The Execution," Flavor Flav's guest spot on "I'm Only Out For One Thang, Get Off My Dick And Tell Your Bitch To Come Here," and "Message To An Oreo Cookie," there's little doubt that this is one potent slab of complete viciousness. Then again, maybe you'd rather listen to "Me-So-Horny."

Yeah, well, there's plenty of nasty bits out there in every genre. Punk rocker types who thrive on throbbing thrash thrills and consider (correctly) the Misfits to be "classic rock," and are not too hung up on the over played, tired, redundant "politically correct" hardcore thang have just received a present from Seattle. The Dwarves newest album, Blood, Guts, and Pussy is a surprising, bold and encouraging effort from Seattle's popular Sub Pop label. The first two songs are "Fuck You Up And Get High," an around-a-minute-long thrashish delving into the underbelly of true scum rock, which leads without pause to "Insect Whore," a pleasant little ditty with great fly audio thrown on top. Because of the

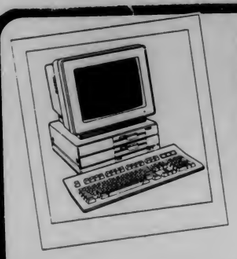
CONTINUED ON PAGE 16

YOUR ONE-STOP AUTO SHOP
For complete auto body and repair services on foreign and domestic vehicles...stop into
ACME AUTOMOTIVE CENTER
Family owned and operated
220 King St., Northampton
584-3710

THE GLOBE BOOKSHOP
fine new, used & children's books
European, art & literary periodicals
publishers overstocks at 30%-80% off
special orders • out-of-print book searches
Open 7 days • Mon-Sat 9-9; Sun 10-5 • 38 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 584-0274 • 586-5439

STRETCHY VELVET DRESS BY STREET LIFE IN AVACADO GREEN AND JET BLACK – $78.
ChoNa
150 MAIN STREET, THORNES MARKETPLACE
NORTHAMPTON 413 584 7803

TACO VILLA
WELCOME BACK!
Food still good.
We're still here.
Downtown Northampton • Downtown Amherst
Sumner Ave., Springfield



Computer Rentals Starting at $46 Per Month
IDEAL RELATIONSHIP:
Compatible PCs seek temporary relationship with demanding, economy-minded user. Into heavy work-outs, late nights—your software or mine. 586-7405
VALIDATA: SALES/RENTALS
Mountain Farms Mall
Hadley, MA 01035

Local boys psych out Beantown

By WILLIAM GEORGIADES
Collegian Staff

Sasquatch
Middle East Cafe
Wednesday, Aug. 29

Tearing into the cramped crowd huddled before them with slashing chords, hurling drums and a thudding bass line, Sasquatch announced their arrival last week, with music that combined subtle lyrics with some ferociously tight two guitar, one bass and drums music.

Comprised of locals from the Valley area who have shuffled over to Boston to get something more than musical tofu in their jaws, this band is comprised of Peter Gowdy on lead vocals, Josh Bluh on bass, Dane Burrita on guitar, and, temporarily, Jay Potts on drums.

While some may disagree, Sasquatch doesn't ascribe to the Boston scene. Says Bluh, "We're not a Boston band, we're a hill town band from the big city, we don't fit the hard rock scene."

All the band members, save for the drummer, grew up in the Conway/Plainfield area and have been friends, making music together, for over 10 years.

REVIEW

All have had experience with the plethora of open mikes in the area, mostly known from jumping the stage at Sheehan's and the now defunct L'Oasis. Bluh in particular seems to have gotten disillusioned with it all: "It's good for a while, maybe for airing a few songs, being on a stage, but it's nothing like being in a good band. And there's this feeling of complacency that gets fostered."

But those open mikes did bring the three core members of Sasquatch together in front of audiences, something to be grateful for. Aside from which Boston doesn't fare too much better in Bluh's mind, with the exception of the urban intensity to offset that small town musical complacency.

He describes the Boston "scene" as consisting of bands like Seca, Slaughter Shack (winners of the Boston rumble), the Slaves and Shoot the Dog, "All heavy metal, like with WFNX radio playing that washed out trendy crap...we don't want to be anything like that. We want to play music we'd enjoy listening to."

That material can almost be described by the names of some of the 13 original songs they've come up with in the past year, of writing and two months of steady practices, as well as by the only cover song they have yet done, a fine version of the TV Personality's classic "I Know Where Syd Barret Lives."

"On your Knees," written by Bluh is a whirling instrumental that drives the listener to that position, while "Drowning Fish" and "Wet Dream," both by Gowdy, suggest an obsession with losing it. "So Slow" by Burrita isn't quite, but it all comes together beautifully, thanks to some seamless musical craftsmanship — not so much individual excellence, as a combined unit, a tight formation that's been playing together in various stages for years.

That unity is also obvious on the playing, where all three front members swap around the guitars and bass to fit the song. Personalitiy conflicts do not seem to plague this band though Bluh does admit to minor resentments over tone.

They are only just beginning. They have high hopes, but explain, "We don't have any delusions of surrounding our goals, we don't fantasize, we know we're just another band, but we want to do something, it's not the key to life, we're just making music."

Bluh also describes the band as being "in the fetal stage," but it's the very rawness, and indifference to the complacent conformism of most music around them that sets Sasquatch apart. Make way for the big feet.

Calendar listings

A FEW CALENDAR LISTINGS:

SATURDAY, SEPT. 7: Twister's Tavern in Amherst hosts ska band the High Hats at 9:30 p.m. 21-and-over.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 9: Pequot Place, a restaurant located in Southampton, will be sponsoring an all-day outdoors "Bluesfest," featuring Sweet Daddy, Cool Breeze.

Pequot Place is located off of route 202 at Hampden Ponds. The festival will be held rain or shine and food and drink will be provided as well. Admission is $10. For more information call 533-8073.

— JODY GABIN

586-6344
45 State Street
Northampton, MA
The INDIA HOUSE RESTAURANT
Where Indian Food Is Not Just Curry
• TRADITIONAL TANDORI INDIAN COOKING SEALS IN FRESH FOODS' NATURAL FLAVORS
• COMPLETE VEGETARIAN MENU
• EXTENSIVE WINE LIST
• BEWITCHING BIRYANIS
• ENTICING CURRIES
NOW OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

Styles by Deborah
The spa for hair and skin care
Featuring professional hair care
Tanning and facials
body wrapping and waxing
65 University Drive, Amherst
549-5610

Friendly's
Great Food & Ice Cream
Stop in and sign up to win '55 Chevy Classic Auto Sweepstakes
Car on Display:
Sept. 10th & 11th
11am - 7pm
Russell St.
Sept. 12th - 14th
9:30am - 9:30pm
Hampshire Mall
Friendly's coupon
Great Food & Ice Cream
55c single dip cone
Sept. 5th - 7th
Good at Hampshire Mall and Russell St. only

BRITTANY MANOR
(413) 256-8534
Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE NOW!
STARTING $499 PER MONTH
Rent includes heat and hot water.
• Fully-Equipped Kitchen, Including Disposal
• Large Livingroom with Ceiling to Floor Windows
• On the UMass Bus Route
• Wall-to-Wall Carpeting
• Large Dining Area
• Oversized Bathrooms
• Wall-to-Wall Closets
• Storm Windows
• Dead-bolt Security Locks
• Cable T.V. Available
• Ample Parking
• Swimming Pool

■ Disc junkie

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14

blood, nudity and dwarf covering his genitals with a rabbit on the cover, you may have to order this gem direct from Sub Pop to help your local store owner avoid getting beaten up.

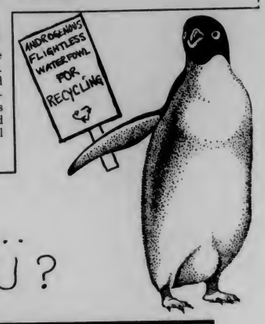
At the point both the Dwarves and Ice Cube records are getting pretty old so we may as well mention that it behooves you to purchase any and all Roscoe Mitchell, Anthony Braxton, Cecil Taylor with Archie Shepp, and Ornette Coleman records. This is no way meant to imply that you should ignore the new CD-only release by the Fringe entitled, Return of the Neanderthal Man on the Popular Arts label, but we suspect that it will soon be covered by staff columnist Bill Rosenblatt.

Bill probably won't write about the new seven-inch entitled "Swampdick" by Smegma on the Sympathy For The Record Industry label. They list bass, vibraslap, guitar, toy, violin, musette, record skips, sheet metal, radio, duck calls, drums and coronet as the instruments played, and claim seven band members. In addition, the vinyl is a reddish pink addition to the Sympathy trademark marbleized vinyl collection. You can still get it if you move quickly, and you probably should. Collector scum take heed.

Corrections

Corrections and a few imperfections are in order for the first week at the Arts desk. Due to some hectic hours, editing and layout errors, The Equalites were incorrectly identified and corresponding photos for the stories on First Week '90 and weekend shows at the Iron Horse and Pearl Street were swapped.

We apologize for this.



THIS BIRD RECYCLES... DON'T YOU?

Division of Student Activities Presents

First Week

Tonight

Night of Bands

"We Saw the Wolf"
"Cordelia's Dad"

9 PM
Bluewall Cafe
$1.00

Made possible by a grant from the Dean of Students Office

Good Advice — Honest Price.

NEW!

Boston Acoustics HD5 and HD7 Speakers
HD5 $143/pair
HD7 $189/pair

ONKYO TX-811 Receiver
$185

ONKYO DX-1400 18-bit CD Player
$187

ONKYO TA-W200 Dual Cassette Deck Fully Calibrated!
$235

Five College delivery available.

Sound & Music

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Human Radio casts waves in the Valley

By AMIE FINKELSTEIN
Collegian Staff

I'm offering you an opportunity you can't refuse. You haven't heard this one before. There are no strings attached. You don't have to buy anything. You just have to read on . . . I have one name for you: Human Radio. A hot new band (on Columbia Records) that's playing over at the Iron Horse in Northampton this Sunday night. Here's your opportunity. It's FREE. Absolutely FREE. No charge. One of the greatest places to see a show, and it's FREE.

Human Radio, based out of Memphis, is a five-guy set-up whose influences range from that unforgettable Frank Zappa quirk to North African stomp. This "organically grown" quintet has fashioned a contemporary clear-channel rock style that can not be fairly compared to anything else.

Their debut album, entitled Human Radio, co-produced by David Kahne (Fishbone) and David Leonard (the Rave-Ups, Sheena Easton), blends the group's knack for vivid storytelling with their eclectic musical tastes. Songs like "Me and Elvis," "My First Million," and "These are the Days," with their trenchant humor and unpredictable meters, reveal Human Radio for the quick-witted souls they are.

PREVIEW

"I try to throw monkey wrenches into the music and create a song where you cannot see the craft of the seams," said lead singer/keyboardist/chief songwriter Ross Rice. "What's most important is that the song have some significant meaning, but I go for the unobvious."

Human Radio, formed in Memphis in 1988 by Rice, drummer/pal Steve Ebe and guitarist Kye Kennedy (all graduates of Memphis State University) joined Peter Hyrka, a classically trained violinist and bassist Steve Arnold, who had studied with Jeff Berlin and Jaco Pastotris. Once in place, the band toured small clubs, building a following through word-of-mouth.

"None of us had any rich uncles," recalls Steve Ebe.

In time, Human Radio drew acclaim throughout the region and won a slew of NARAS Premier Player Awards in 1988 and 1989. These included Best Songwriter, Local String Player, Local Drummer, Local Guitar Player, Miscellaneous Instrument and Best Keyboardist. Human Radio itself won Best Band. From there? Columbia Records, the debut of their first album and the tour.

"We're not just a collection of personalities and haircuts," says Rice. "We're all committed to this for the long haul." That's how it is with Human Radio. The lines are open.

Soooooo . . . if Columbia Records is so confident in Human Radio that they can flip the tab and not charge a cent for admission, you know it's an opportunity you can't pass up.

Columbia only makes hit records. And, as so many have said,

"The best things in life are free," music included. As it should be.

abcdef Write for the Collegian!

While current stock lasts, Hurry, they'll go fast!

Tech 1260 12MHZ-286 IBM compatable includes

- Microprocessor—12 MHZ 286 Intell
- Coprocessor supported
- Clock Speed 12/8 MHZ ZERO wait state
- 1 Megabite of ram
- 101 keyboard
- Monochrome Monitor
- 2 Serial/ 1 Parallel ports
- MGA Graphics
- Slim Line Case
- FCC Class B certified

Student Booster Sale
$799.95
Complete

Word Perfect Version 5.1 $135.00
20 Meg Hard Drive System Only $999.95
40 Meg Hard Drive System Only $1149.95

DR. SOFTWARE INC.
SOFTWARE • COMPUTERS • ACCESSORIES
POTPOURRI SHOPPING MALL
241 KING STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
TEL. (413) 586-3210

IMMORTAL SOLES.

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

HONDA
Come ride with us.

• Motorcycles • Scooters • A.T.V.'s • Power Equipment
Sales & Service
584-7303
731-9965
Valley Motorsports
216 N. King St., Rte. 5 Northampton, MA
The 1991 Honda Motorcycles are ready for viewing
Always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing

YOUR PARTNERS IN TRAVEL

TWA Student Discount Cards 10 percent off any fare in the USA 365 days a year.
Also 10 percent off Europe—with a few summer exceptions.
Call or stop by for applications & reservations.
Cost $15/yr. or $25 for 2 yrs.
586-8953
Maplewood Shops-Old South St.-Northampton, MA

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring IMPORTED Beers at Domestic Pricing

Import of the month $3.70 6/pk. Maccabee $11.99 case
Capt. Morgan $14.69 1.75L
Smirnoff 80 proof $13.49 1.75L
$4.99 6/pk Beck's bots. $15.99case
Half Kegs Wide Selection SALE Busch $34.95
BUSCH
Domestic Beer of the Month BUSCH Suitcase $8.99 Every day
Labatt's Beer or Ale $6.49 12/pk bots.
Sutter Home White Zinfandel 3 bots for $11.99
Kahlua $10.99 750ml
Off Campus Delivery 253-5441
All Beers plus deposit

Photo courtesy L. Woods

In the Flesh will be competing in the Battle of the Bands at Pearl Street.

Battle of the Bands explodes in a first at Pearl St. tonight

By LINDA WOODS
Collegian Staff

Starting tonight, Pearl Street will be hosting a Western Mass. Battle of the Bands competition. The competition will run for seven nights and will include 16 local and regional bands.

It is somewhat surprising that a show like this hasn't been produced before, considering this is an area where music is taken very seriously and local bands are a prime source of business for the area's bars and clubs. Unfortunately, many eager and accomplished musicians in the Valley still often slide unnoticed past potential listeners, possibly due in part to the limited amount of venues in the area. Essentially, hard working musicians from Western Mass. have to work even harder than fellow musicians from the Boston area, to gain the level of exposure needed to forward their careers.

Ideally, Pearl Street's Battle of the Bands will be a successful first attempt, growing into a watched-for annual event. With press exposure and public interest, a competition like this could eventually rally interest from influential promoters and producers.

Perhaps soon the importance local musicians give to their careers will be matched by increasing interest from record companies and new, larger audiences.

If you want to get a feel for which bands you might pay that cover charge for this semester, the Battle of the Bands is buffet style. Since the bands are randomly grouped, each night will offer a variety of musical styles. Come, listen and decide which tunes are flavorful enough for a second serving.

The line-up is as follows: Friday, Sept. 7: Dertone, Free Press, The Mess, Faery Tale Curse.

Saturday, Sept. 8: Rippopotamus, The Rent Party, The Equalites, Grave Goods.

Sunday, Sept. 9: Who's Kiddin' Who, The Vestrymen, In the Flesh, Hal Benoit Band.

PREVIEW

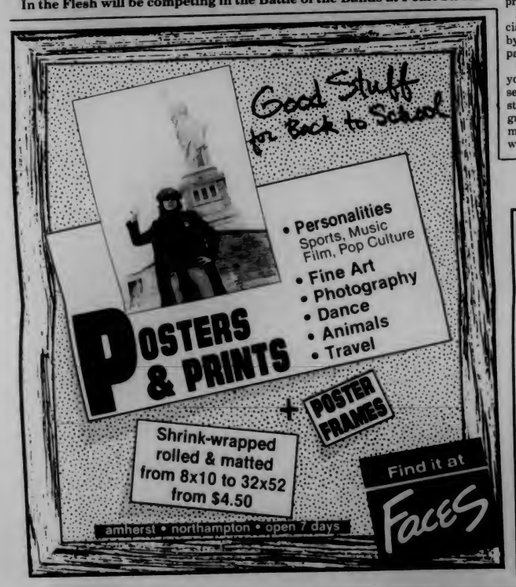
Monday, Sept. 10: Image of Man, Voices, Farmhouse and Real World.

Winners from the first four nights, along with two wild card bands, will advance to the semi-finals on Monday, Sept. 17 and Tuesday, Sept. 18. The two winning bands will then compete in the finals on Saturday, Sept. 22.

There will be four different judges for each night, representing varied involvement in local music, including radio DJs and personnel, reviewers, promoters and record company affiliates. Since the bands are randomly grouped, each night will offer a variety of musical styles.

Winning bands will be awarded prizes, including 10 hours of recording time at Longview Farms, a $200 gift certificate from Downtown Sounds, dinner for the band at Spoleto's in Northampton and a generous collection of cassettes and CDs from CBS, Columbia, Epic, RCA and Arista.

Pearl Street is located at 10 Pearl Street in Northampton. For more information call 584-7810.



Good Stuff for Back to School
• Personalities Sports, Music Film, Pop Culture
• Fine Art
• Photography
• Dance
• Animals
• Travel
POSTERS & PRINTS
+ POSTER FRAMES
Shrink-wrapped rolled & matted from 8x10 to 32x52 from $4.50
amherst • northampton • open 7 days
Find it at Faces

SAVE ON USED AND DISCOUNT NEW BOOKS
40-80% Off Pub. List Price
Thousands of popular & academic paperbacks & hardbacks
VALLEY BOOKS
199 N. Pleasant St. Downtown Amherst
Open 10-8 Sept. 4-7
256-1508 Visa/MC

Join Now And Get the Whole Semester for $99!
when you join with a friend
CALL NOW 586-7503 HAMP PLAZA NORTHAMPTON

TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

Computerized upper body conditioning
Ultimate low impact aerobic machines
Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY READERS POLL 1989 1st PLACE Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"
NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL
Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. | South Amherst | Karate Health Fitness Center 256-0060

WELCOME BACK! STUDENTS
Photographs & Memories last a lifetime
clip & save
Welcome Back Special
$2.00 OFF
OUR PROCESSING SERVICES
NOT VALID WITH SALES OR WED. SPECIAL EXPIRES OCT. 15 '90
Same Day & 1 Hour Service Available
Passport Photos Available
The Foto Factory
257 Triangle Street in Amherst 549-6490
62 King Street in Northampton 584-2274

Bellotti proposes federal link to simplify state income tax while Silber's stance on crime gains support of police

BOSTON (AP) — Democratic candidate for governor Francis Bellotti proposed yesterday to link the Massachusetts state income tax to the federal tax, while rival John Silber spelled out a tough anti-crime platform.

Meanwhile, the two Republican candidates for governor resumed campaigning after a televised debate Wednesday night both said they won.

Bellotti's plan, which would require a constitutional amendment, would "piggyback" the Massachusetts income tax onto the federal income tax.

Bellotti also called for the repeal of the recent expansion of the state sales tax to business and professional services.

The income tax tax proposal, Bellotti said in a speech to business executives, would simplify the state tax since taxpayers could use their federal return as a model.

It would also have the effect of giving Massachusetts homeowners a deduction on their state taxes for home mortgage interest.

The constitutional amendment would be required because the state constitution now mandates a flat-rate tax. The only exception is to allow different rates for earned and unearned income.

The tax system envisioned by Bellotti would be similar to the one now in effect in Vermont, where the state income tax is a percentage of a taxpayer's federal liability.

"This system would be the most significant change we have ever made in our tax system," Bellotti said. "Aside from making the Department of Revenue vastly more efficient, this change would make the Massachusetts tax system more progressive."

Bellotti said it also would help the real estate, banking, and construction industries by reducing the net cost to homeowners of a mortgage.

Silber unveiled his anti-crime program while picking up the endorsement of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, one of the state's larger unions for municipal police and county corrections officers.

"We need someone who will be tough on crime and Dr. Silber fits that mold," said Raymond McGrath, a Worcester patrolman who chairs the union's International Committee.

Some police officers from 43 departments participated in a ceremony endorsing Silber, Boston University president on leave, in front of the Statehouse.

Silber endorsed the death penalty for people convicted of killing on-duty police officers and prison guards.

He also called for arming police with more powerful firearms to combat the high-powered weapons being used by drug dealers.

Silber also recommended computerizing police records, as is done in most other states, to allow police departments to better exchange information on criminals.

Silber also pledged to overhaul the state's court system and to build a new state crime laboratory.

The BU president also said he would work with the state's congressional delegation to secure federal permission to convert unused military bases into prisons, a move he said would speed prison construction and lower costs.

Welcome Back Students!
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Busch Pitchers $3.50
Gin & Tonics $1.50
Woo Woos $2.00
Lunches now served

DEBATE
the issues of our time
First meeting
September 11th, 8pm
Trailer No. 3
(behind Thompson)
Practicum credit available
Call 545-2055, Denice, Ace, Yanni, Tom Conroy

3 COUNTY FAIR
Hurry.....Ends SEPTEMBER 8!

Gates Open 10am
Admission: Adults $5
Children (7-12) $2
Under 7 Free
Just 20 minutes from Springfield and Greenfield; 45 minutes from Hartford.
For Fair information call (413) 584-2237

It's Back In Town!
►Entertainment!
►Games
►Circus Acts!
►Music!
►Rides!
►Animal Shows!
►Exhibits!
►Dancing!
►Great Food!
►Thoroughbred Racing Daily! (post time 1:30pm)
Every day is jam-packed with fun for the whole family!
Route 9, Off 191 Northampton, MA

"it's finger lickin' good"
Kentucky Fried Chicken
Colonel's Dozen
$10.99
12 pieces of Mixed Chicken
Large Mashed Potatoes
Large Gravy
Large Cole Slaw
$1.99 Specials
6 Nuggets with French fries
or
Colonel's Chicken Sandwich w/ fries
2pc. Chicken with small mashed potatoes
Kentucky Fried Chicken at the Mountain Farms Mall
Route 9, Hadley
Open Sun.-Thurs. 10:30-11, Fri.& Sat. 10:30-midnight

Suspect in Gainsville murders described as 'savage'; his threat to kill female inmate keeps bond at $1 million

By IKE FLORES
The Associated Press

SHARPES, Fla. — A judge refused today to lower the bond of a suspect in the Gainesville college student slayings after a corrections officer testified that he had described himself as "a savage" and threatened to kill a female inmate.

Also today, investigators began searching the apartment of the suspect, 18-year-old part-time student Edward Lewis Humphrey. He is charged only with beating his grandmother but has been labeled as one of several suspects in the killings that terrorized Gainesville.

"I see a great deal of psychotic behavior," said Judge Martin Budnick said in declining to reduce bail. "I see before me a very disturbed individual."

Humphrey's attorneys had sought to have his $1 million bond on the assault charge reduced.

Brevard State Attorney Norm Wolfinger, arguing for the high bond, said: "The fact remains he is a suspect in the Gainesville murders and he knows that."

Public Defender J.R. Russo objected, and Buknick agreed that he couldn't set a bond based on a case Humphrey hasn't been charged in.

However, Budnick said he would be doing "a disservice to the community" if he allowed Humphrey to go free after hearing yesterday's testimony.

As the hearing was under way, searches in Gainesville and at Humphrey's grandmother's home in Indialantic were "begun simultaneously" at about 9:30 a.m., said Alachua Sheriff's Lt. Spencer Mann. Mann said search warramts were obtained late Wednesday, and would remain sealed temporarily.

Detectives used a key to open Humphrey's door at the Hawaiian Village apartment complex, one to two miles from the locations where bodies were found more than a week earlier. The detectives walked into the sparse apartment carrying attache cases.

Yesterday was the first time investigators have acknlowedged obtaining search warrants in the case. They have said Humphrey is one of eight suspects.

Bodies of four women and one man, all students at the University of Florida or Santa Fe Community College, were found in three separate apartments Aug. 26, 27, and 28. Some of the victims were mutilated.

Humphrey was arrested Aug. 30 on a charge of aggravated assault after he allegedly battered his 79-year-old grandmother. An initial bond of $10,000 was increased after task force investigators said he was a possible suspect in Gainesville.

Emily Glaab, a Brevard corrections officer, testified yesterday that the day after his arrest, Humphrey was hostile and told officers "he was dangerous, he was a savage."

As he was being taken to his cell, Glaab said, he yelled at a female inmate and said, "That bitch has got to die."

Humphrey called himself "John," Glabb said, and added, "John doesn't take no prisoners."

Earlier, Humphrey's grandmother, Elna Hlavaty, testified she wanted the assault case dropped.

"I wanted it dropped . . . definitely," Hlavaty, her right cheek and right eye badly bruised, said as Humphrey watched in the courtroom in Sharpes.

Sophomore holds six at gunpoint

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — A high school sophomore held a half-dozen classmates at gunpoint for several hours yesterday, demanding such things as soft drinks, candy and a school bus before finally surrendering to police.

Forsyth County Sheriff Wesley Walraven said the youth surrendered shortly before 2 p.m., about 5 hours after the incident began. There were no injuries.

The hostages were middle school pupils attending the combined South Forsyth middle school-high school, said Joyce Shadburn, a spokeswoman for the county's school superintendent.

charlie's
1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight
SUNDAY 10¢ POTATO SKINS
9:00PM - 12:00AM
Drink of the Week
Denaka Vodka & Cranberry
$1.95
Beer of the Month
Foster's Lager $1.75
Food Giveaways
Mon 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9-12
Tues 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9-12
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9-12
We accept MC/Visa/Amex

Are you an Undergraduate Parent who needs money for child care?
Up to $950 available for child care assistance through the Undergraduate Child Care Tuition Assistance Program per semester. Applications available in the Off Campus Housing Office, 428 Student Union, 545-0865.

Back to Cool

Make the creamy, delicious taste of Colombo frozen yogurt part of your curriculum.
Colombo FROZEN YOGURT
BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
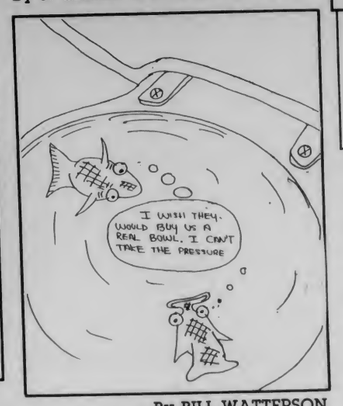
Amherst
Boltwood Walk
Northampton
Main Street

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
India Print Bedspreads
Mugs
Earrings
Chinese Shoes
Rings
Bracelets
Chains
Socks
Leather Sole
Happy B'day Cards
Hawaii Posters
Indonesian Prints
Incense
Toys
Candles
Hats
Bags
Area Rugs
Skirts
Baskets
Paper Lampshades
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
Great Gifts & Cards
THE MERCANTILE
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"Whoa, Frank . . . Guess what youuuuuu sat in!"

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



By BILL WATTERSON

CALVIN AND HOBBES

CALVIN, I...
YIKE!
YOU'RE HOME! I DIDN'T EVEN FINISH PACK... THAT IS, UM...
LIES! EVERYTHING MISS WORMWOOD SAID ABOUT ME WAS A LIE! SHE JUST DOESN'T LIKE ME! SHE HATES LITTLE BOYS! IT'S NOT MY FAULT! I'M NOT TO BLAME!
SHE TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NOODLES, RIGHT? IT WASN'T ME! NOBODY SAW ME! I WAS FRAMED! I WOULDN'T DO ANYTHING LIKE THAT! I'M INNOCENT, I TELL YOU!
WHAT NOODLES?
OH.... UH.... HA HA! DID I SAY NOODLES? YOU MUST HAVE HEARD WRONG. I DIDN'T SAY NOODLES.

By GARRY TRUDEAU

DOONESBURY

HEY, SOLDIER! MIND IF I JOIN YOU?
PRETTY GRIM RATIONS, EH? OF COURSE, THIS IS A FEAST COMPARED TO THE FARE I DINED ON DURING THE SEVEN-DAY WAR! WE HAD TO PICK THE SCORPIONS OUT OF OUR STEW!
NOT THAT A FEW SCORPIONS WOULDN'T HAVE TASTED PRETTY GOOD DURING THE CIVIL WAR IN ANGOLA! AH, WELL... NO ONE EVER SAID IT WAS EASY BEING A WAR CORRESPONDENT!
ESPECIALLY IF YOU LOOK LIKE A DUCK HUNTER.
UM... RIGHT. ANY IDEA WHERE I CAN GET ONE OF THOSE HELMETS?

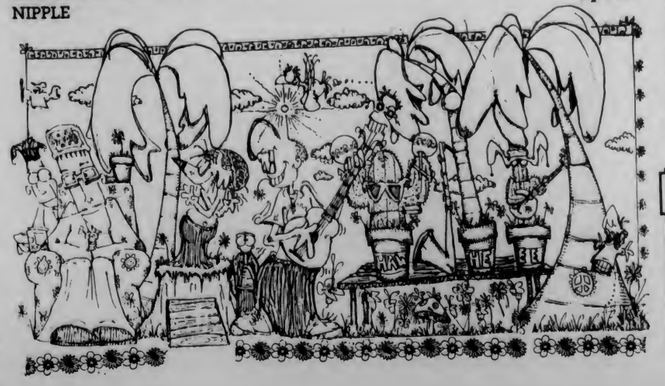
TANGELO PIE

By Tim Sniffen

knock knock!
Hello! I'm the campus operator.
hi.
that means I'm the person who picks up the phone when someone calls and says "University of Massachusetts, may I help you?"
how nice.
-I'm also the person who, for only $50, will say "Oops, that extension is busy" whenever your parents call.
I'll get my wallet.

NIPPLE

By PITT



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Fish munchies Tacos	Quarter pound burger Egg roll/duc sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Fish munchies Vegetable tacos	vegetable croquettes Egg roll/duc sauce

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

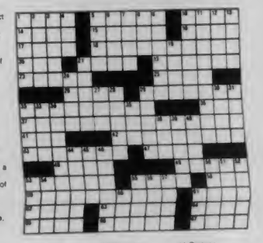
ACROSS
1 Burr-Hamilton combat
5 Toweled
10 Can. province
14 Nine: Comb form
15 Freud's colleague
16 Young adult
17 Salamanders
18 Close by
20 Cutting device
21 Brit. carbine
22 — Einsford-Hill: "My Fair Lady" role
23 Sandal feature
25 Singer Tennille
26 Delicious
29 Missing, in Roma
32 Travel
36 Lesage's Blas
37 Fighting time
41 "Mighty — a Rose"
42 Mess hall queues
43 There came — over all the land: Acts
47 Eden outcast
48 Don Juan, for one
49 Sousa product
53 '— class tigerin' man': Kipling
55 Ticket part
58 Expression of amused surprise
59 Con artist
61 Tel —
62 Vocalist Paul
63 Bete —
64 One of the Kellys
65 Bulldoze, in Soho
66 Reaction to a sweet treat
67 Inland sea of Asia

DOWN
1 Cooper role, with "Mr."
2 Out of shape
3 Stage direction
4 Brown of renown
5 Desire
6 Rene's brainstorm
7 Scheme
8 Musket or cannon follower
9 Sketches, in a way
10 Olympian deity, in a way
11 Fooling
12 See to
13 Griffith or Williams
19 Mythical founder of "had" city
21 Reject disdainfully
24 Jai —
27 Mayday!
28 Low cupboard
29 Type of committee
30 Cricket term
31 Certain lodge members
32 Festive celebration
33 Mild oath
34 Act rashly
35 Extreme degree
38 — Beach, town on S Oahu
39 Use a ladder
40 Director Wertmuller
44 Main arteries
45 Corrosion
46 Muscular pain
50 Gadabout
51 Land of the Great Wall
52 Humble dwelling
53 — cry long distance
54 Moslem concept
55 Remove the cream
56 Semester, e.g.
57 Chemistry Nobelist: 1934
60 Gering
61 Turkish title

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	A	D	I	E		S	I	L	O		C	L	A	R	K
E	T	R	E		P	R	E	P		L	A	M	I	A
T	O	O	L	S	M	E	D	S		U	N	I	O	N
G	L	I	S	T	E	N		A	V	I	E	R	I	S	E
O	I	T		O	R	E		E	D	E
			R	O	S	E		G	A	B	E	N	E	S
M	A	D	A	M	E		C	L	O	P		O	G	E	E
I	D	O	L		A	L	I	S	T		W	A	N	I
N	A	S	T		H	A	H		A	N	D	I	E
G	R	E	E	N	H	U	M	B	S
			E	E	R		E	A	T		B	O	A
S	P	I	R	A	W	L		T	R	I	S	C	U	I	T
A	I	R	E	N	T		S	P	R	I	N	K	L	E	R
P	I	A	N	O		P	O	E	T		A	L	A	I
S	E	D	A	N		A	P	S	E		T	I	N	A

9/8/90

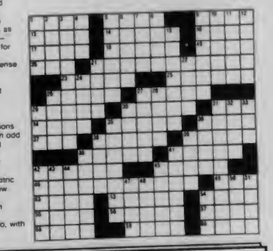


DOWN
1 Pastry tray item
2 Theater award
3 Canadian symbol
4 Fr. holy woman
5 Element
6 Tapestry
7 Construction beam
8 Dorothy's dog
9 Cereal fruit
10 — and kicking
11 Aladdin's benefactor
12 Acorns, e.g.
15 Hit the spot
21 Innoculation
22 Calendar entry
24 Ripped
26 Skip town
27 Wrongful acts
28 Cartwright son
29 Fold in eggs
30 Sail support
31 British symbol
32 Bridge fee
33 Born to be shorn
35 Faux pas
36 Weather word
38 Wanton look
39 Seed cover
40 Adjust in advance
41 Cross out
42 Catch some z's
43 Before glycerin
44 Reduce
45 Slows a steed
47 Part of a decade
48 Spirit in Seoul
50 Garfield's dog
51 Garden plots
54 Fannie —

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

H	A	R	M		S	E	T	A		R	A	Y	S	O
I	D	E	A		S	M	A	R		E	T	H	E	L
M	A	I	N	E		I	L	L	A	N	D	S
		M	O	Z	A	R	T	C	O	N	C	E	R	T
			A	L	E			E			T			O
L	O	A	N	I	N	G		D	O	S	S	A	P
O	M	N	I		T	A	L	O		T	A	P	E	R
B	E	E	T	H	O	V	E	N	S	O	N	A	T	A
E	N	S			E	T		T		I	N	Y
S	I	M	O	N		I		M	A	R	I	N	A	S
		W	H	O				M	A	P
B	R	A	H	M	S		S	Y	M	P	H	O	N	Y
L	U	C	I	A		T	O	N	E		O	I	A	L
O	S	I	R			E	Y	E	D		E	L	L	A
G	E	D	E	S		N	O	D	E		S	E	E	D

5/7/90



TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Gayle Long
Copy Editor.....Preston Forman
Layout Technician.....Terry Starmer
Photo Technician.....Dondi Ahearn
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Typesetter.....Kim Frisino
Production.....Danielle Dowling, Ali Woolwich, Nicole Dumas

■ football

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 24

an outside chance at becoming the Crusader's all-time leading ground-gainer.

Gallagher, billed as the Crusader's "Mr. Excitement," caught 49 passes for 711 yards last season, and can also handle the punting and punt-returning chores.

Craig Callahan anchors the defense from the right outside linebacker slot.

UMass received some good news in recent weeks as Steve Brothers and Paul Mayberry, both battling chronic injuries, are healthy enough to start on Saturday. Brothers, a 6-foot-4, 250 pound senior, will start at left tackle, and will be joined by Jim Mancaruso and Rich Kane on the defensive line. Mayberry, 6-foot-2, 265 will start at left guard.

Matt Tulley had been expected to debut at inside linebacker, but has a sore shoulder and is questionable.

The rest of the Minuteman lineup should read as advertised throughout the fall season. On offense, Gary Wilkos will quarterback, with Jerome Bledsoe and David Mitchell in the backfield, and Ron Blauvelt and Mike Tobin as receivers.

Ron Villone, Kai Dietiker, Anthony Giudice, Jay Gabbe and Rich Cavanaugh will join Mayberry on the offensive line.

Scott Asencoa, Mario Perry and Bobby Burke are listed to start at linebacker, with Tulley's status in doubt. Allen Williams, Vaughn Williams, Pat Doran and Don Caparotti are listed atop the depth chart in the UMass secondary.

Water polo set to battle Cadets

By JOE DEGLORIA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts water polo team travels to West Point this weekend to participate in the annual Army Invitational Tournament, against teams from Army, Queens, Dayton, St. Francis and Boston College.

UMass, as well as Army, will be split up into two squads for the event. Starters and more experienced players will make up the A team. The B team will be made up of younger players. All UMass A squad games will count in the standings.

For the UMass A team, tomorrow's first opponent will be last year's nemesis, Army's B team (UMass lost 9-6 to the Cadets last year). The UMass B team meets Queens at 9:00 a.m.

The winner of the UMass-Army game will go on to face the winner of the Dayton-Boston College matchup. That victor will face either Queens, Army's A squad, or St. Francis in the finals.

Coach Russ Yarworth feels confident that his team will fair well in the tourney. "I would consider us the team to beat this year," he said.

This year's contingent boasts a lot of experience as well as a comphrensive and strong bench. Yarworth sees this season-opening tournament as an opportunity to fine-tune the team before their tough schedule starts.

"I would like to see a controlled counter-attack as well as an all-out strong effort because of all of the depth we have," said Yarworth. "I want to create situations, not wait for them to happen and react."

Yarworth said his team will perform this weekend with an important advantage.

"We worked out a bit in a large outdoor facility to develop our fast break," he said.

The UMass team is led by returning starter and All-New England Jon Miller. The high-scoring Miller will be assisted by Brian McIver and Alex Yelensky to provide offensive support.

Todd Larson will goaltend. Scott Reed and 6-foot-6 freshman Tasan Engin will also start for UMass.

Yarworth also hopes the B team will pick up some valuable experience from live play.

Sports Notice

There will be a NON-CREDIT physical conditioning course offered to students running from 6:45 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday in the Boyden weight room. If interested, attend the first class on Monday.

STOCKBRIDGE: There will be a Soccer and Basketball meeting at 4 p.m., Sept. 10 in Boyden room 223. If unable to attend, please contact Jack Leaman at 545-1301 or stop by Boyden room 228.

ALLIANCE CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP
Welcome Back to UMASS
For more info call Steve or Pauline 253-7206

LOTS for LITTLES
TOYS • RECORDS • BOOKS
Plus New and Recycled CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
20% OFF ANY ONE ITEM with this coupon except sale items
201 No. Pleasant St. Amherst• 256-6823
Mon-Sat 9:30-5:30 Sun 12-5

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!

THE STYLING SALON AT JCPenney
THURSDAYS MEN'S NIGHT 3-8:30 P.M. 18 yrs. and older haircuts $8
FRIDAYS LADIES NIGHT 3-8:30 P.M. 18 yrs. and older haircuts $8
Hampshire Mall The Styling Salon at JCPenney
CHARGE IT!!
© 1989, JCPenney Company, Inc.
OPEN Mon.—Fri. 9am-8:30pm Sat. 8:30-5
Salon Phone: 584-7416

CAMPUS PIZZA RESTAURANT
• Grinders & Dinners
• Full Liquor License
Open 7 Days—Delivery after 5pm
Call 586-3880

SOMETHING IS ALWAYS HAPPENING AT THE HADLEY PUB
35¢ Drafts
Friday
Arthur James and Truth
Saturday
Tight Fit

Volleyball to compete at new Hartford Sports Center

Two-day tourney features four teams

By LIOR BEN-AHARON
Collegian Correspondent

When the University of Massachusetts women's volleyball team enters the newly-built University of Hartford Sports Center today for a two-day tournament, the one word on everybody's mind will be 'accelerate.'

Accelerate on hitting, accelerate on defense and accelerate on serving.

That is what, according to coach Carol Ford, the Minutewomen must do to have a successful weekend and a successful season.

Unlike some of the other teams participating in the tournament, this will be the first time the Minutewomen have competed this season, aside from a pair of scrimmages.

Despite this, Ford is confident about her team's chances this weekend. After two-and-a-half weeks of practice, Ford said the team is prepared and, as long as they concentrate on playing their game, will have a good chance to pick up some victories.

"When we're playing our best, we can beat anybody," said Ford. The Minutewomen, however, cannot expect to play poorly and still come away with victories, she added.

To open the tournament, the Minutewomen will face a tough Villanova team. Although they are going through a transitional phase, Villanova is sure to give the Minutewomen a difficult match. Next in line will be Drexel University. Drexel has a very good team, known for being solid and winning by executing the basics.

After these tough matches, UMass will face Army on Saturday.

This is the first year Army will play in Division I after being a Division II powerhouse for many years. Known for winning by intimidation, Army will definitely pose as an ominous threat to the Minutewomen.

Physically, the only question mark for the Minutewomen entering the tournament is starting freshman setter Angela Paolucci, who missed most of the practice season due to illness.

However, Ford is confidant in Paolucci's ability to bounce back and in the play of backup setter Kathy Smith.

Joining Paolucci and Smith, other key players are outside hitter and team captain, Nancy Sullivan, outside hitter Danielle Micheal, middle blockers Sharon Panoff and Rachel Bredemeier, and defensive specialist Patricia Diorio.

Collegian file photo
The volleyball team will try-out Hartford's new sports facility during this weekend's tournament featuring Army, Drexel and Villanova.

■ women's soccer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 24

The UMass Reds scrimmaged Keene State, a Division III school, in order to prepare for a physical, collegiate game, according to Gozley.

"The purpose behind playing them was to tune up for the season," she said. "They play a lot like Rutgers.

"We have the depth. We're gonna have to be ready for the battle. I think our girls are up for it."

In reference to the keeper Webber, Gozley said, "We'll have to let her know she's in for a long day."

The Reds open their season at 1 p.m. Saturday in Piscattaway, N.J.

湘園
PANDA EAST CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
Open Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 11:30am-10:00pm
Fri. & Sat. 11:30am-11:00pm
Sunday 2:00pm-10:00pm
LUNCH HOURS: Mon.-Sat. 11:30am-3:00pm
103 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 (413)256-8924

Thai House
Thai Restaurant
Business Hours:
Mon.- Sat. 11:30 - 10:00 pm
Sun. 12 pm (noon) - 10:00 pm
430 Russell Street, Route 9
Hadley, Mass 01035
ONLY THAI RESTAURANT IN AMHERST

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE—CC 113 MON.-THURS 8:30-5:30 FRI 8:30-2:30 DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

'DANCE' Welcoming party Saturday September 8th Campus Center Aud 9pm 1am Come and have fun Sponsored by I S A

SHOTOKAN KARATE CLUB!! Returning members! There will be a meeting tonight Friday September 7 at 7 00pm in Totman

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST invites all UMass students to the "JESUS" film Friday at 7 00pm in the Campus Center

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM $1000 in just one week Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext 50

NUCLEAR WINDS! HI Wind Sailboard Club forming now Call 253-7366, Shred!

VISA OR MASTERCARD! Essablish credit guaranteed or double your money back Call 1-805-682-7555 ext M-1207

AUTO FOR SALE

79 DATSUN WAGON 107K AM/FM 4 speed Alfred (W)545-4637 (H)549-5423

1974 VOLVO Georgia car almost no rust less than 100 thou miles new tires, shocks and brakes. Vince Woolley 549-1330

1983 HONDA ACCORD LX Hatchback 4 cylinder autotrac pwr steering Car alarm and more $3,300.00 256-8022

1984 DODGE ARIES, 4-dr, low miles, 1 owner $2250 00 253-2098

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great Excellent condition 50 MPG $4500 586-7183

CHRYSLER NEWYORKER 1972, wonderful cond. 77,000 miles $1,900 549-1578

DODGE VAN RV style 1977 ex cond $995 549-2656

FOR SALE: 1988 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, highway metallic gray, excellent shape, best offer call 413-253-9397

NEED A DEPENDABLE CAR for cheap? 1981 Honda Civic 4 dr, sun roof, AM/FM 100W stereo speakers, new tires, 5-speed, high gas mileage great car $800 or best offer Call Theresa at 546-0923

SEIZED CARS, trucks, boats, 4 wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA Available your area now Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext C-1675

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4057

EDITING/TUTORING

RETIRED TEACHER WITH graduate degree will edit papers for proper grammar, spelling, clarity, good writing and documentary form - any subject Fast professional Wordstar wordprocessing also available if you are not a typist or are rushing to meet a deadline Especially interested in working with international students (trained as English speech specialist), but enjoy helping all students, any level Usually available on short notice Reasonable rates D Reed, 253-3364 (This ad will appear only briefly - clip for future reference)

FOR RENT

SPACIOUS SINGLE ROOM located in farmhouse on bus route 192 per month 253-9047

FOR SALE

1966 OLDSMOBILE 4 dr, hardtop needs new transmission line - estimated $80, asking $150 253-2626

COMPUTER 512K MACINTOSH, 800K external drive Image Writer I printer 665-8954

COMPUTER DISKS cheap 3½ 5¼ DD HD Call Ashley at 546-1612

FURNITURE OPEN HOUSE - Come tomorrow 9/8/90 between 12 to 4, for selection of quality new furniture at inexpensive prices Call Steve for directions and intormation at 549-4756

FUTONS AND FRAMES top quality, lowest prices, free delivery Fly-By-Night Futon Co 123 Hawley St , Northampton 586-1464

GUITARS FOR SALE 2 B C Rich 1 w/Kahler $275 1 w/o $225 Ovation Classical Acoustic/Electric $275 Call John 1-786-9618 Leave Message

IBMXT 640K coproc 20MBHD TAU complete $700 549-2656

LOTUS 123 Ver 3 0 unopened $100 549-2656

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD HOMES available from government from $1 without credit check You repair Also tax delinquent foreclosures Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext H-2009 for repo list your area.

SEGA GENESIS VIDEO game system with three games and two joysticks 16 Bit graphics Call Phil at 546-2448 Will take best offer.

SOFA, ARMCHAIRS, Vacuum-cleaner pool-table lamps, 549-1578

WATER-BED KING SIZE 12 drawer pedestal will set up $300 00 253-2098

WEIGHT BENCH and assorted weights $40 Black and white TV - $15 256-1158

FOUND

BRACELET/ANKLET in Field House first floor elev lobi on Monday Contact Mark at 6-3890

GOLD BRACELET found near campus center Please call 549-8028 to claim it

HELP WANTED

CHILDCARE/MOTHER'S HELPER for fa-rrific Amherst toddler Must have car Non-smoker Flexible day/evening hours call 548-9474 9am-9pm

CHRISTMAS, Spring break, summer travel FREE, Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext F-1426

COSMETIC SALES Earn unlimited income! Become a cosmetic consultant Flexible hours, high commission, company will train 1-800-359-1961

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 228 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 min walk from UMass) No phone call please

EASY WORK! EXCELLENT PAY! Assemble products at home. Call for information 504-641-8003 ext. 596

FASTIDIOUS, RELIABLE Housecleaner, 1 morning/wk, $25, Experience, references required. 253-7840

LOOKING FOR A fraternity, sorority, organization that would like to make, $500-$1000 for a one week on-campus marketing project Must be organized and hardworking Jennifer 800-592-2121

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS Sept. 17 - Oct. 29, Mon 7-9pm $50.00 Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL Language Pacifica 549 5065

MOTORCYCLES

1975 HONDA 360CB 12,000 miles ex cellent condition $450 253-2096

1990 KAWASAKI EX500 Blk & Rd, less than 2K miles, mint condition $2950 Call 256-4609 evenings

HONDA NIGHTHAWK 1983 550cc 4cyl fast new tires, radar detector, extras, 9,000 miles mint condition, 1,100 or best offer 549-6083 Jim

PERSONALS

ED MANDY:
Happy 21st Tiger
Here's to a great year.
Love, Kathy, Paige, Chris, and Ozzie

GINA, JIM, KAREN, Tom, John, Mike and everyone!!!
I'm going to miss you all so much Have a fun and safe semester and write!
Love you all, Maria
ps Buena suerte y no beben demasiado cerveza.

HONEY, Thanks for everything this last year It's been the best year of my life! I hope it lasts for ever. I love you lots. Love your sweetie

MY HONEY PIE-
Happy Birthday!!!
I love you to the goopooplex!!!
Love, Your sweetie pie

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 OR 2 GIRLS wanted for condo behind Baybanks Great location! Call 549-9376

AMHERST CENTER female to share room $170/mo 549-9377

MALE ROOMMATE WANTED non-smoker clean neat Townehouse looking for mature individual Call Townehouse ask for Judi Pd No 68 549-0839

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING!
Basic course start 9/10 $190
Adv course starts 9-17 $170
Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 $360
For further information call 549-8407

TRAVEL FREE!!!
Sun Splash Tours offers the most exciting and affordable Spring Break Packages to Jamaica and Cancun! Earn free trip and extra $$$ Call 1-800-426-7710

TYPING

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1 50/pg Free pickup and delivery Laser printing and copying available KCommunications, 256-6373

WANTED

KEGULATOR OR COLD TAP 19 Phillips 549-8198

WHO SAID GARBAGE WASN'T FUN?

TAKE A CLASS IN RECYCLING EDUCATION
3 credits - guest speakers, lectures, field trips and hands-on experience Call Pei-Jen 549-5291 or Sharill 5-1153 for info.

SPORTS

Field hockey take on Iowa tourney

Trip to Iowa City preps team, coaches for regular season

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

Where does the University of Massachusetts field hockey team open the season?

Amid the corn fields in Iowa.

Saturday, the Minutewomen take on Ball State, and Sunday, host Iowa provides the competition.

The trip to Iowa City should give UMass coach Pam Hixon a better idea of how good her team is.

"We're not satisfied with how we're playing yet," Hixon said. "We're still competing with one another, which is healthy. Having a trip like this gives people a chance to get to know one another."

Hixon said that the trip to Iowa is not a vacation. "We're going to play field hockey," Hixon said. "We're going down a day early so that we can practice on their field. It will also give me and my assistants an opportunity to watch Ball State and Iowa play."

The season has yet to start and already, the Minutewomen have a goalie conflict. Phillipa Scott, who was the starting goalie last season, and emerged as one of the true stars, had the upper hand going into the regular season, but Hixon would not say that Scott was Saturday's starter.

"We haven't settled on a goalie," Hixon said. "Lisa Charron has been playing very well. We are going to practice [today] and depending on who has a better session, they will be the starter."

You might recall, last season, the Minutewomen were not settled on a starting goal keeper until the sixth game. Scott eventually won the position, and went on to have a fantastic season.

Ball State appears to be the weaker of the two teams that the will Minutewomen encounter.

"They graduated seven kids," Hixon said. "They have a strong nucleus returning."

Rumor has it that the Ball State goalie is coming off of a serious knee injury. If the rumor turns out to be true, she could be lacking in mobility.

"We would be foolish to look past Ball State, just because their goalie may not be 100 percent," Hixon said.

The Hawkeyes are a grass-field team like UMass. Playing on their opponent's home turf should give the Minutewomen all they can handle.

One factor working in UMass' favor is the fact that Ball State and Iowa will be playing back to back games.

"It is physically difficult to play back-to-back games at the beginning of the season," Hixon said. "In that respect, it is an advantage for us.

"If we play well, we have an excellent chance of beating both teams, but we'll have to play," Hixon said.

Collegian file photo

The field hockey team travels to Iowa City to open their season against Ball State and Iowa.

Collegian file photo

UMass football coach Jim Reid.

Football to tackle HC

Crusaders will host season-opening game

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

The Holy Cross football team has lost four games in the last four years, winning the Patriot League three times. The Crusaders return 12 starters from last year's team, which won ten games. They are the fourth-ranked team in Division 1-AA in the preseason poll.

Why would University of Massachusetts coach Jim Reid even think of scheduling such an opponent for the first game of the season?

He didn't. The Minutemen were originally scheduled to play Morgan State University last Saturday, but were forced to drop the contest because of cuts in the budget. That set up tomorrow's contest, on Fitton Field in Worcester, as the season opener. Kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

The game will be televised live on SportsChannel, with Bob Lobel and former Crusader Gordie Lockbaum broadcasting, and on radio on WMUA 91.1 FM, WTTT 1430 AM, and WSPR 1270 AM. So, we will find out sooner than expected just what kind of team the Minutemen are going to be this season. "We're excited about it. Right now they're the team to beat in New England, even higher rated than Boston College," said Reid.

Holy Cross features a three-pronged attack on offense — quarterback Tom Ciaccio, fullback Joe Segreti and flanker Mark Gallagher — and has a quick, athletic defensive unit.

Ciaccio, a sophomore, passed for 23 touchdowns and nearly 3,000 yards last year, his first as a starter. Segreti rushed for 1,099 yards last season and has

CONTINUED ON PAGE 22

Reds face aggressive Rutgers

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

After romping the 'boys' of Amherst, these women are ready to get down to business.

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team heads to Rutgers this weekend to open their regular season against the Red Knights.

If any game will prove to be a physical one, this is it.

"They're a solid, physical team," said assistant coach Lisa Gozley. "They play a fast game and we'll have to be ready for that."

Rutgers has some preseason wins of their own. They eeked out a 1-0 win over Rochester, then plowed Scranton 4-0.

Sophomore Danielle Gabriel scored the only goal of the Rochester game, and two against Scranton. Freshman Tracy Foster and sophomore Dana Zonkle each scored a goal against Scranton.

They will have eight returning players, including the Red Knights' all-time leading scorer junior Kris Kurzynowski, who has 28 career goals and five assists for 61 points. She has scored 10 game-winning goals in the last two seasons.

"Offensively, they have a few speed demons," said Gozley, "but our back four [defenders] can shut them down."

Sophomore goalkeeper Saskia Webber had four shutouts in 19 games last year. She had a goals against average of 1.20 and a save percentage of .85. She has qualified to play on the Olympic B team.

"Defense may be their key," Gozley said. "Their keeper is very good, very intimidating."

This could be the season UMass is ready for Rutgers. A late season game caught the Reds off guard last year, resulting in a 2-1 overtime loss.

"This is sort of our revenge match," Gozley said. "Last year we got caught flat. They came out strong and were able to beat us.

"I think our girls are up for it," she said of this Saturday's game. "We've learned we can't underestimate anyone."

Rutgers is currently ranked third in the Northeast region, bowing to William & Mary and George Mason, respectively. Nationally, they mark the 17th spot. The Red Knights competed in the ECAC finals last year, losing to Vermont 1-0 in overtime.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 23

Men's soccer unfurls season on Hill

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team is in for a busy weekend.

This afternoon, the Minutemen face St. Bonaventure at 4 p.m. at Upper Boyden Field. Sunday, Penn State also visits that spot for a 1 p.m. match.

But these are not just the first two games of the year for the Minutemen. They are also two crucial Atlantic 10 matches that could go a long way in deciding if UMass makes the conference tournament at season's end. These factors have coach Jeff Gettler concerned.

'We're flat right now, mentally and physically," he said of his team. "I'm worried about how we'll come out against St. Bonnaventure. We've got a lot of young players, and I don't know how they'll react.

"A big part of how they'll preform is if they come out as freshmen or as soccer players. If they're nervous and uptight, and play that way, we could have problems. If they come out as soccer players and play the way they could, we could put ourselves in good position for the tournament," said Gettler.

St. Bonaventure comes into today's game with the Minutemen with a record of 0-4. Bonnie head coach George Perry admitted that his squad was a young group.

"Four or five of our starters are freshmen, and seven or eight play regularly," he said.

The Bonnies may be young, and winless in four tries, but they are also an improving group. Coach Perry cited goalie Jim Kane as strong in goal, and senior midfielders Chris Boyle and Tom Hogan as team leaders.

The Bonnies held nationally-ranked Rutgers to two goals in the first half of their last match (Rutgers, 6-0), and according to UMass coach Gettler, they'll be up for today's game.

"We don't want to look past St. Bonnie," Gettler said. "It's a conference game, and they'll come out like gangbusters. We're a team they have to beat to make the A-10 tournament."

Perry echoed Gettler's sentiments regarding today's match.

"UMass is a very well-coached, disciplined team. We'll be in for a real strong game," he said.

Penn State awaits the Minutemen Sunday. The Nittany Lions are 2-0, pending a Friday game with Campbell College of North Carolina.

"They're the best team we'll play all year," Gettler said of Penn State.

The Nittany Lions' main weapon is All-American Danny Kelly.

"Kelly is as good a forward as there is in the nation," said Gettler. "He's a money player, the kind of player Penn State will go to if the game's on the line." Penn State head coach Bary Gorman put forth midfielder Thomas Ageson and defenders Einer Dahle and Nigel Sparks as his best players. Gorman also said he expects a "real competitive game, a real entertaining game for the fans," out of Sunday's contest on the Hill.

Gettler stressed the importance of taking each game one game at a time.

"We can't afford to look past St. Bonnie," he said. "We can't worry about Penn State until we get there."

UMass has never played either Penn State nor St. Bonaventure in men's soccer until this weekend. The schedule change was prompted by the NCAA, requiring the A-10 to play a round-robin schedule (all league teams play each other once) in order to keep its automatic berth in the national tournament.

Both Bonnie coach Perry and Penn State coach Gorman said they were excited to play UMass.

UMass will be starting sophomore Steven Armenti in goal against St. Bonaventure, and junior Jon Gruber against Penn State.

With that exception, the starting lineup has been set for the Minutemen. Junior Ray Cuhna and sophomore Kire Trajkovski will start at attack. Juniors Dan Lawrence and Brett Anthony will center the midfield, with freshmen Aaron Zandy and Justin Edelman on the wings. On defense, senior Peter McEvoy will start at sweeper, junior Matt Bearce will start at stopper, and junior Darren Stone and freshman Todd Kylish will be the marking backs.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 4

WEATHER

Today will be cold and rainy, with possible clearing in the afternoon and temps 70-75.

EDITORIAL

David Holper faces some formidable financial foes with magic and phone calls. Page 7.

SPORTS

UMass football team returns from Holy Cross with dramatic 10-10 tie. Page 12.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

Saturday marked the end of the Three County Fair in Northampton, where Dorchester native Paul Luce broke the track record for most wins by one jockey (17).

Leaders call for defeat of CLT

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Student leaders from various state public universities and colleges met Saturday at the University of Massachusetts to attempt to capitalize on the defiance of Acting Gov. Evelyn Murphy and to initiate a statewide college campaign against the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition.

Student Government leaders from the Universities of Massachusetts at Amherst and Boston, from Framingham, Holyoke and Greenfield Community colleges and Massachusetts College of Art shared strategies and ideas at the third meeting of the Student Alliance for Education. State Rep. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst) also participated in the meeting.

Angus McQuilken, the student trustee from UMass-Amherst, suggested that all who attended the meeting call Murphy to ask her to restore funding to higher education in Governor Dukakis' absence.

McQuilken said since the restoration of higher education funding is one of Murphy's campaign promises, student leaders should tell her to fulfill her promises now while she is the acting governor of the state.

"Say to (Murphy), 'You say you want to invest in public education, so do it,'" he said. "We can try to capitalize on this situation because she's crazy this week."

The executive changes Murphy has made may be rescinded when Dukakis returns to Massachusetts on Friday from Europe. His staff, however, will assess Murphy's budget-cutting proposals this week.

"It's worth a try since everything has been so crazy at the Statehouse," McQuilken said.

Greg Rotatori, the SGA president from Framingham, proposed that student leaders work with the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group to defeat the CLT petition. MassPIRG is an environmental advocacy group which has made statewide voter registration its goal for this year, he said.

Natasha Diephuis, the SGA president of UMass-Amherst, said forms to obtain absentee ballots should be distributed by student leaders on all campuses.

The CLT petition will be ballot question Number Three in the Nov. 6 election. The question, if passed, would roll back state taxes back to 1988 levels. State funding for

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Universities to construct memorial

By ERICK OLSEN
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts, in conjunction with Hokkaido University in Japan, will begin construction within the next two to four weeks of a major public art project on campus, the William Smith Clark Memorial.

The project will be located on the "eastern gateway" of the campus, between Butterfield and Van Meter dormitories.

Funding for the $140,000 memorial was contributed by both UMass and Hokkaido University, their alumni, Hokkaido Prefectural Government, Kanzaki Specialty Papers, Inc. and individual donors.

William Smith Clark was the first sitting president of UMass, and went on to help create and serve as president of Hokkaido University.

He has been called a pioneer in the field of international collaboration, and is considered to be "the father of Japanese modern agriculture."

The idea for the half-acre project came in 1986 when President-Chancellor Duffey requested suggestions from the Hokkaido Committee to commemorate the centennial of Clark's death. The Hokkaido Committee was established to maintain the bond between the two universities started by Clark.

The committee chose the design of UMass alumnus Todd Richardson, whose previous accomplishments include the award-winning Hampden Court in Southwest.

Richardson collaborated on the design with landscape architecture professor Barrie B. Greenbie, landscape professor Shoichiro Asakawa of Hokkaido University, and Fumiaki Takano, a Hokkaido University alumnus and Tokyo landscape architect.

"The purpose of the memorial is to celebrate and

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

Defiant Murphy unveils plan to ease state's troubles

Officials say plan won't yield $150M

By JONATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — With the suspense over, Gov. Dukakis' staff is assessing the budget-cutting proposals unveiled by his defiant lieutenant governor, but some observers said Saturday her plan won't solve the state's fiscal troubles.

And despite getting a new set of orders from a temporary chief executive, Dukakis' staff is still carrying out an original set of orders the governor issued before he gave up brief control of state government.

Evelyn Murphy, who shed the role of lieutenant governor and took the title of acting governor, unveiled her much-awaited plans Friday. She seized command after Dukakis left the state the previous day on a European trade mission.

But Murphy, needing some life in her lagging campaign for governor, raised expectations about her proposals by refusing to disclose them as long as Dukakis was still in Massachusetts. Instead, she said she was waiting for the governor to depart so she could assume authority.

That prompted a dramatic power struggle, with Dukakis initially refusing to leave and then deciding to join the trade mission, putting the burden on Murphy.

See related campus story, page 3

On Friday, Acting Gov. Murphy unveiled several items, including a pair of executive orders. Among the steps were cutting management positions in each cabinet secretariat by 25 percent, as well as slashing the payroll by 10 percent in the department of Administration and Finance.

Murphy said her proposals would save up to $150 million annually. Earlier in the week, Dukakis ordered cabinet secretaries to find $150 million worth of cuts for the current fiscal year, which is already two months old and running short of tax collection.

Dukakis refused to comment Saturday on the proposals. "I've got a very good team in place [at home] and I want to get on with this trip," he said in Bitterfeld, East Germany.

Asked if he was aware of what Murphy had done, Dukakis replied, "I'm always in touch with the Statehouse."

But Dukakis administration officials indicated Murphy's numbers were misleading, saying they would realistically save only about $17 million this fiscal year.

"In terms of real dollar savings, it doesn't match up to the $125 million to $150 million which she says it is," said Stephen Crawford, a Dukakis spokesman.

"For people looking to an end to this year-long nightmare, I don't think we saw it yesterday," said James Braude, head of the Tax Equity Alliance for Massachusetts, a group that has supported higher taxes to help solve the state's fiscal woes.

Nonetheless, Crawford said the governor's staff would be assessing Murphy's plans over the next week. Dukakis is scheduled to return Friday.

Dukakis had said he might cut his trip short if any action Murphy took threatened to hurt the state's stability. But after Murphy issued her orders, Crawford said he saw no reason for the governor to return early.

He noted that executive orders requiring payroll cuts would not take effect before Dukakis comes back, since such actions take 10 days to implement. Once the governor returns, he can rescind Murphy's actions, but Crawford could not predict what action Dukakis might take.

Murphy's orders do not supersede the instructions Dukakis issued earlier in the week to make cuts, which means cabinet secretaries will still carry out those plans, Crawford said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

ALL SORTS OF PEOPLE READ THE COLLEGIAN!

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

THE MORE YOU USE YOUR HEAD, THE MORE MONEY YOU CAN GET FOR COLLEGE.

Up to $4000 a year. Just enroll in Army ROTC at college and serve part-time in the Army Reserve or National Guard.

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.

Contact Cpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army ROTC
545-2321 or 545-2322

University of Wisconsin Platteville

See Castles in the Air

And learn your way around the world

"If you have built castles in the air, now put the foundations under them." Henry David Thoreau

Study in London for $4325 per semester. Includes air fare, resident tuition, field trips, home stay with meals.

Study in Seville, Spain, for $3625 per semester. Includes resident tuition, field trips, home stay with meals. No foreign language proficiency required.

Summer program also available in London.
For further information, write or call:

Institute for Study Abroad Programs
308 Warner Hall
University of Wisconsin-Platteville
1 University Plaza
Platteville, Wisconsin 53818-3099

608-342-1726

ADD A NEW CHAPTER TO YOUR LIFE!

SORORITY RUSH FALL '90

TUES., SEPTEMBER 11 ORIENTATION
CAMPUS CENTER, ROOM 101, 6:00 P.M.

LOCAL

Hampshire celebrates 20 years

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

Collegian photo by Richard DuCree

Hampshire College celebrates its 20-year anniversary this fall, continuing its long tradition of educating its students in an atmosphere of academic freedom.

Imagine a prestigious, private liberal arts college which doesn't have exams, grades or demands classroom attendance. And one doesn't even need to take the SAT to get in.

What seems like a facetious academic concoction is one of the most recognizable trademarks of Hampshire College, which is celebrating its 20th year anniversary this fall.

As an experimental college, unique in its structure and longevity, Hampshire had inaugurated a new academic standard that challenged the utility of traditional education and came up with a few surprises.

Administrative offices on campus are likely to display newspaper clippings on their walls, noting Hampshire graduates who have either received a national award or completed an important scientific research.

Out of the 4,500 alumni, 857 have distinguished themselves in most fields of human endeavor, from arts and sciences to business and sports.

Hampshire has produced Academy Award-winning film makers, National Award-winning novelists, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and a gold-medal athlete, according to the Hampshire College Public Information Records.

In addition, Hampshire alumni have been nominated for Grammy and Emmy Awards, become banking executives, actors on Broadway, as well as successful entrepreneurs. Some have even worked with Woody Allen.

Stephen Deutsch, a third-year Hampshire student studying American Humor, said the success of Hampshire alumni is often linked to its inquiry-based education, which is founded upon the hypothesis that one can progressively acquire the ability to teach oneself.

"Most of the time at Hampshire is spent 'learning to learn,' which makes it easier in a workplace," he said

To teach students how to learn and to understand better the community they lived in were some of the major incentives for Hampshire's creation.

Francis D Smith, the first Dean of the School of Humanities and Arts at Hampshire, said in 1969 that the function of liberal education was to "serve not as a tourist's view of life from the cruise ship, but as an encounter with contemporary man's condition."

In the fall of 1970, after 15 years in the making, Hampshire was opened to students. Created as an experimental college by the administrative leaders of Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke Colleges and the University of Massachusetts, Hampshire was to "help young men and women learn to live their adult lives fully and well, in a society of intense change, immense opportunity and great hazards," said Franklin Patterson, Hampshire's first president, in his book The Making of A College.

He added Hampshire was created to help solve the crisis being faced by the American higher education, particularly the dramatic increase of the undergraduate enrollment in state universities.

Hampshire's most innovative approach towards education was the rejection of its most sacred traditional tenets. Hampshire was not to have a regular, four-year attendance, but a system based on three sequential divisions.

The fulfillment of requirements in each division included the completion of independent projects and the passing of comprehensive examinations.

The grading system was abolished. Instead, teachers were to rank students through a written evaluation. The students would have an almost complete autonomy in the process of their education, and in return they were expected to be responsible, independent and ethical. Their teachers would be mentors, not pedants.

The academic freedom at Hampshire worked for the advantage of many students, particularly those who later became entrepreneurs.

"After being at Hampshire, students find it difficult to have bosses," said Andrea Wright, director of the Career Options Resource Center at Hampshire.

However, a recent survey conducted by the CORC found that the academic freedom at Hampshire does not always prepare students for conventional modes of education.

The survey found that former Hampshire students who are attending graduate schools are least prepared for things like exam-taking strategy and competition. The students also found difficulty in "playing the game of not rocking the boat" and accepting the status quo, the survey said.

Students at Hampshire have grown accustomed to rocking the boat in the past 20 years. They have been active in all major issues, from civil rights to feminism, from the arms race to gay rights.

Hampshire prides itself on being the first college in the nation to divest from South Africa in 1977, and the students are still encouraged to demonstrate, overtly and through scholastic means, against what they feel is an injustice to society.

In his inaugural address last year, Hampshire College President Gregory S. Prince addressed students and asked them to continue to be active.

"We do indeed exist to educate for social justice," he said. "And to encourage that a part of our energy be directed towards the transformation of our society."

"We should not forget that only 20 per cent of all United States citizens complete college by the age of 25," he added.

"With so few, we indeed must consider it our responsibility to educate for social justice."

UMass prepares to face 4 percent slashing

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

While University of Massachusetts students on the first day of the fall semester were buying notebooks, textbooks and pencils, higher education administrators in Amherst and in Boston were frantically trying to realize the impact of a $27.3 million cut.

In a conversation last Wednesday with Gov. Dukakis, President-Chancellor Duffey expressed grave concerns about spending cuts ordered by the governor. He also met with Acting Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery on that day to map out a strategy for the campuses to deal with the 4 percent across-the-board cut.

> "We were still preparing for the first cut (ordered in July) when this one was announced," he said. "Every cut this University has taken reduces the capacity of being a university and functioning as one."

"We were still preparing for the first cut [ordered in July] when this one was announced," he said. "Every cut this University has taken reduces the capacity of being a university and functioning as one."

The Amherst campus, the largest school in the 27-campus system, faces a $6 million slice of the $27.3 million ordered cut. Duffey, however, said he believes the University will see a significant decrease in this figure.

"The Regents have the authority to take the 4 percent from various accounts like scholarships accounts," he said. "They are seeing what options they have without disrupting the campuses."

Duffey confirmed during a weekend interview that students will likely see an increase in tuition or the "curriculum fee support," an additional fee placed on the tuition bill by the University which ranges from about $200 to more than $500.

Because of state accounting practices, tuition revenue is placed into the General Fund but curriculum fees are directed to the university or college.

Last week the press spokesman for the Board of Regents of Higher Education also said a tuition hike is likely.

Duffey said the University might be forced into a reduced academic year if operating funds run out, an option he acknowledged will be "very unpopular and very controversial."

"We have to go through the cut and further cuts might have to be done by closing down early," he said. "It has to be an option on the table."

He was the first state college president to float the trial balloon of shortening the school year. Since the governor's announcement Tuesday several other presidents have detailed similar proposals.

Duffey refused to call the proposal a "last resort" but an "option being considered." He said he believes shutting down is not only a "viable option" but an action the University may legally take.

"There are two questions about the legality of closing down early: 'Can you legally shorten the academic year?' and 'Can you legally shorten the work year?' These are two different questions that must be answered," he said. "But I suspect it would be upheld in the courts."

Duffey also noted that Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy's proposals advanced on Friday, in the position of acting governor since Dukakis is out of the state, is a reasonable attempt at making cuts to the state budget.

"I hope they won't be dismissed under the cloud of politics," he said.

Terry Zoulas, press spokesman for the Board of Regents of Higher Education, said Thursday that the office was still calculating how much each college will lose. He said the office would be releasing the dollar amounts probably

■ Murphy's plan

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

In fact, the work being done to cut costs will fit within the spirit of both orders, said S. Stephen Rosenfeld, the governor's chief of staff.

"It's really a moot point," he said.

A spokesman for the Executive Office of Human Services said his agency would proceed with the spending cuts ordered by Dukakis.

"The secretary's strong position is that he works for Mike Dukakis," said Kenneth Schwartz, chief of staff for Human Services Secretary Philip Johnson.

Mark Longabaugh, a spokesman for Murphy, said Saturday that Murphy stands behind her savings projections.

One element of her plan did not receive as much attention as the payroll cuts, he said, but was highly important. That order would require the department of Administration and Finance to submit monthly budget reports, documenting whether the state's books are in balance. Cabinet secretaries who fail to remedy their deficits could lose part of their salaries and possibly their jobs.

Murphy has been criticized using the state's budget woes to make a last-ditch effort to save her gubernatorial campaign. She will face two other opponents in the Sept. 18 Democratic primary, and public opinion polls put her well behind the pack.

A-HARBOURCOAT-7 CHINESE BROS.-B-EAT FOR TWO-PLEASE FORGIVE US-SOUTH CENTRAL RAIN-PRETTY PERSUASION-TIME AFTER TIME-THE BIG PARADE-TROUBLE ME-YOU SECOND GUESSING-LETTER NEVER SENT-RAMERA-ROCKVILLE-HAPPY PUPPET-HEADSTRONG-POISON LITTLE AMERICA [redacted] IN THE WELL-DUST BOWL-THE LION'S SHARE-HATEFUL HATE-JUBILEE

TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

Computerized upper body conditioning

Ultimate low impact aerobic machines

Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST IN THE VALLEY READER'S POLL 1989 1st PLACE
Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"

NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL

Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. | South Amherst | Karate Health Fitness Center 256-0080

SAVE MONEY ON YOUR PHONE BILL TO 508/617
CALL
FONE HOME
549-3737
Sign-up Fee Regularly $30
For September ONLY $10
Next to Stanley Kaplan
358 N Pleasant St, Suite 210, Amherst

By Popular Demand
COWBOY JUNKIES
Sun Sept 16, 7&10PM
Iron Horse Music Hall
Northampton Box Office 2nd Floor Thornes 586-8686
WIRSY

This semester, take some electives in communications.

Gabrielle Kreisler • Skidmore College • Class of 1991

Introducing AT&T Student Saver Plus.
If you're an off-campus student, it'll be easier to get through college this year. Because AT&T has put together a program of products and services to save you money.

60 minutes of long distance. For free. Movies. Videos. And more. For less.
Just by choosing any Student Saver Plus program, you'll get up to 60 minutes of free long distance calls. You'll also get a free coupon booklet good for savings all around town.

Call from anywhere to anywhere.
We'll give you a free AT&T Calling Card, even if you don't have a phone. So you'll be able to make a call from almost any phone and have it billed to you, wherever you live.

You don't need to wait till spring to get a break.
With the AT&T Reach Out America Plan*, you'll get savings 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Including 25% off our already low evening prices.

To enroll in the AT&T Student Saver Plus programs that are right for you, or to get the best value in long distance service, call us. They just might be the most profitable electives you'll ever take.
1 800 654-0471 Ext. 1231
AT&T. Helping make college life a little easier.

AT&T The right choice.

*This service may not be available in residence halls on your campus.
Discount applies to out-of-state calls direct-dialed 5-10 pm, Sunday-Friday.
© 1990 AT&T

*ABSOLUTE AUCTION
8 GOLF COURSE CONDOS AT FAIRWAY VILLAGE, NORTHAMPTON, MA
REF # 90-489
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1990 AT 10:00 A.M.
UNITS Bx-1, B-2, Bx-3, Bx-4, B-5, B-6, B-7 and Bx-8
FAIRWAY VILLAGE, SPRING ST, NORTHAMPTON, MA
OPEN HOUSES: Friday, Saturday & Sunday, Sept 7th, 8th & 9th -11 AM to 4 PM each day
Viewing only: Mon-Fri, September 10-14, 11 AM to 4 PM
Offering 8 luxury Residential Condo Units situated on 80 acres of land bordering the Mill River. Property is located along the fairways of the Northampton Country Club, a nine-hole private golf course. All units have Southern exposure to allow for the greatest view and privacy.
TERMS: THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($3,000.00) deposit per unit in cash, certified or bank cashier's check at the sale. Balance due within forty-five (45) days at closing. (*4 UNITS TO BE SOLD ABSOLUTE - BUYER'S CHOICE) 5% BUYER'S PREMIUM WILL BE ADDED TO THE FINAL HIGH BID
UP TO 95% FINANCING AVAILABLE TO QUALIFIED BUYERS & RATES AS LOW AS 8.65%.
CALL TODAY FOR BROCHURE AND INFO
AMERICA' REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS
JEROME J. MANNING & CO., INC.
AUCTIONEERS
TOLL FREE - 1-800-621-0111

UMOC
UMass Outing Club
INVITES YOU TO:
Try:
• hiking
• backpacking
• canoeing
• kayaking
• caving
• cross-country skiing
• rock climbing
• ice climbing
• mountaineering
. . .and more!
JOIN
First Meeting
Mon. Sept. 10
Student Union
Ballroom
7 PM
Slide Show
Our office 423C Student Union 545-3131

The UMass Music Theatre Guild
is now accepting applications for:
Director
Assistant Director
Music Director
Vocal Coach
Choreographer
for our Fall, 1990 production of
Sweet Charity
to be performed November 29 through December 1 in Bowker Auditorium
Contact Kara Jenkins in the Guild Office 423 Student Union or call 253-3863. All applications due by September 17, 1990

univs build memorial

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

memorialize the relationship between UMass and the University of Hokkaido and to create a social center for the students in Van Meter and Butterfield," said Greenbie.

According to program director Marjorie Tuttle, the physical layout of the memorial reflects the architectural structures important to Clark's life both here and in Japan, as well as the actual Japanese landscape of Hokkaido University.

Construction will not be complete until late fall or early winter, followed by a reception in the spring, said Tuttle. Exhibitions and open forums to inform students about Clark and the memorial will be offered through September and October.

UMass cuts

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

within 10 days.

Bromery said Wednesday that the Regents will not institute the 4 percent across-the-board budget cut as the state imposed it but rather would pick and choose among accounts and colleges.

Zoulas told the Collegian on Wednesday that the cut from higher education system will most likely come out of "non-campus accounts," such as scholarship funds and the Regents budget.

Bromery assured that classrooms and students would not feel the effect of the cut.

• Dennis Madson, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, called the cut "devastating" to the University in light of the previous 4 percent across-the-board cut ordered by the Legislature in late July.

LSAT GMAT GRE
WHAT IF YOU DON'T GET INTO THE GRAD SCHOOL OF YOUR CHOICE?
Sure, there are other schools. But why settle? Kaplan prep courses help students raise their scores and their chances of being admitted into their first-choice schools. Fact is, no one has helped students score higher!
KAPLAN
STANLEY H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.
OTHER COURSES: MCAT, DAT, NCLEX, NTE, CPA, BAR REVIEW, & OTHERS
GRE classes begin NOW!
LSAT classes begin NOW!
GRE classes begin NOW!
358 No. Pleasant Street • 549-5780

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL!
from AMERICA'S NUMBER ONE Automobile Fluid Maintenance Service!
The Full Service Jiffy Lube®
Mon.-Fri. 8 am-6 pm
Sat. 8 am-5 pm
Sun. 10 am-3 pm
✓ Change oil ✓ Install a new oil filter
✓ Lube chassis ✓ Check and add transmission fluid
✓ Check and add Brake fluid ✓ Check the Differential fluid
✓ Check and add Power steering fluid
✓ Check and add Battery fluid ✓ Check the air filter
✓ Check wiper blades ✓ Vacuum interior
✓ Properly inflate tires ✓ Fill windshield washer fluid
✓ Wash your car, too!
All in Just Ten Minutes!
No Appointment Ever Needed!
HADLEY 347 Russell St., Rt. 9 586-6795
NORTHAMPTON Hamp. Plaza, North King St. 586-6142
SPRINGFIELD 1130 Boston Rd.
CHICOPEE 2017 Memorial Dr.
WEST SPRINGFIELD 788 Memorial Ave.
EAST LONGMEADOW 475 North Main St.
BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL!
$4 OFF!
1 FULL SERVICE JIFFY LUBE®
Just $19.99 Complete (with this coupon)
Valid at: Western Massachusetts locations only
May not be used with any other offer
EXPIRES: 10/14/90

Collegian Circulation Drivers needed
$10/hour
Must Have Mornings Free 9-11am
Must be Reliable
Come Apply 113 CC

THE LAUNDRY CLUB
The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!
8 am-11 pm • 7 days
★ Self-Service Wash & Dry
★ 'State-of-the-Art' Machines
★ Drop-off Service
★ Appetizers & Munchies
★ Big Screen TV
★ Pool Table
★ Senior Citizen Discount!
wash 1.50
dry .25¢ (8 Minutes)
$2.00 OFF Drop-Off Laundry Service 10 Lb. Min. ONE COUPON PER VISIT expires 9/30/90
FREE WASH Save $1.50 Top Loaders Only ONE COUPON PER VISIT expires 9/30/90
10 percent OFF DRY CLEANING ONE COUPON PER VISIT expires 9/30/90
6 UNIVERSITY DRIVE/Next to Louis Foods/AMHERST (413) 549-2640

FOR RENT IN AMHERST
SALEM PLACE CONDOS
AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY

We have a 2 bedroom, a 3 bedroom, and a 2 bedroom townhouse for rent starting at $850.00 per month.

We are seeking mature, quiet tenants to commit to at least a 1 year lease (subletting is allowed). Terms are negotiable.

CALL: 584-0292 OR 256-0919

■ leaders to protest

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

human services and public education would be drastically cut if this question is passed, he said.

Another strategy Rotatori proposed to the student leaders was to encourage students to vote against the CLT petition and to cooperate with the Campaign for Massachusetts' Future on a visibility campaign. The Campaign represents human service groups against state funding cuts.

UMass-Boston held its first demonstration against the CLT petition this morning in front of the main entrance of their campus.

The more visibility students have, the better, according to Mary Sullivan, the SGA president of UMass-Boston.

"People want to back the legislators against the wall [with the CLT petition] to force them to make substantial cuts," she said. "People are sick of being taxed."

Rosenberg said the student vote can defeat the CLT petition if all students are educated about the potential effects of the ballot question.

"The student vote is really key," Rosenberg said. "Remember that it was the voices of the students in the 1960s that changed peoples' minds about Vietnam."

DEBATE

the issues of our time
First meeting
September 11th, 8pm
Trailer No. 3

(behind Thompson)
Practicum credit available
Call 545-2055, Denice, Yanni, Tom Conroy

Hillel's
One Credit Courses
Fall Term 1990

Jewish Views on Modern Social Issues
J.S. 192A No. 417516 Tuesdays 2:30-3:30pm, Hillel House instructor: Rabbi Saul Perlmutter.
This course will explore Jewish approaches to the issues of Sex, Abortion, Intermarriage, and environment.

Jewish Artists
J.S. 192B No.417663 Alternate Mondays 4-6pm Hillel House Instructor: Tamar Shadur
Survey of the development of Jewish Art from the Israelite (pre-Solomon) era through the 20th century; viewing ceremonial and religious art, illuminated manuscripts, 19th century Jewish artists in Europe, America, and Israel.

Contemporary Jewish Women Writers
J.S. 192D No. 417817 First class: Wed. Sept 12, 7-9pm Herter 400. All other classes: alternate Mondays 7-9. Hillel House instructor: Rosemary Horowitz
Explore the writings of Ozick, Piercy, Rich, Paley, and others.

100 Years of Zionism
J.S. 192E No.417964 Alternate Wednesdays 3-5pm Herter 107 Instructor: Micha Balf
From the ideas and struggles that led to the founding of the state of Israel through the events of the last decade.

To register: bring Registrar's add-drop form to Hillel, 388 N. Pleasant St., or to Judaic Studies Office, Herter 7th Floor
ALL CLASSES BEGIN THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 10.

The TI-68.
The engineering calculator designed to handle tough technical problems.

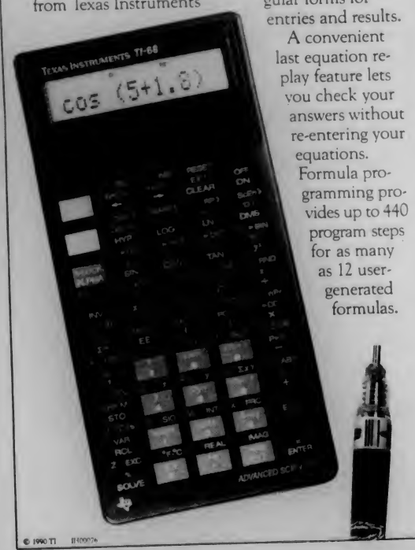
The further you go in engineering, math or other technical courses, the more you need a scientific calculator that speeds you through complex problems. With 254 powerful advanced scientific functions, the TI-68 from Texas Instruments is both a smart choice and an exceptional value.

The TI-68 easily solves up to five simultaneous equations with real or complex coefficients. It evaluates 40 complex number functions. It allows polar and rectangular forms for entries and results.

A convenient last equation replay feature lets you check your answers without re-entering your equations. Formula programming provides up to 440 program steps for as many as 12 user-generated formulas.

You can perform operations in four number bases, one and two-variable statistics, and Boolean logic operations. And, the polynomial root finder calculates real and complex roots of quadratic, cubic, and quartic equations.

Only the TI-68 delivers so much functionality, value and ease in one compact, advanced scientific tool. For more information on what the TI-68 can do, pick up a free copy of the TI-68 technical brochure at your bookstore.



TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

© 1990 TI

MICHAEL'S
Billiard Room & Sports Bar

Featuring Monday Night Football—TONIGHT

- Five 9 ft. Championship Tables
- Your favorite sporting events on large screen TVs
- $1.00 Drafts in ice cold mugs
- 25 cent hot dogs
- Appetizer menu
- This Week: $1 Rolling Rock Bottles
- Thursday is Ladies' Night—Ladies play pool for half price on Thurs. Night

Amherst's Newest & Most Exciting Billiard Room & Sports Bar

Formerly Changes Nightclub
256-8284

11 am to 12 Midnight Daily

21 and older

MICHAEL'S
Rt. 9, Amherst
(Next to Hunan Garden Rest.)

Proper ID required

Have you heard about
PUBLIC HEALTH 216?
It's the Peer Health Promotion Program
It's a course!
Tues. & Thurs. afternoons, 2:30 to 3:45
register now
class meets in Room 304
University Health Services
...yeah, I took it
...it looks great on my resume
...I earned 3 credits by doing instead of just sitting in class
...I learned about important health issues like:
AIDS
Cardiovascular Health
Cancer
Stress
Eating Disorders

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

CLT petition must fail

The election on Nov. 6 stands as the pivotal point for the future of public higher education in Massachusetts.

If the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition passes, more drastic budget cuts will fall on the shoulders of the student body of this University.

The petition calls for a tax rollback of the present state budget to 1988 levels. No tuition or fee increases that have been imposed in the last three years will be included in the rollback; however, the rollback will decrease the already slender higher education budget.

A rollback will cut between $25-35 million allocated to our University by the state. The $62 million already cut in the past three years has already put the University in a financial state of emergency.

There is no more fat to cut from our budget.

Our administrators will have to take one of two desperate measures if the CLT petition passes. At UMass-Amherst, it is estimated that tuition will increase $2,000 per student or 750-1250 UMass employees will be laid off next semester. Neither alternative will salvage this University.

Although recent polls indicate the petition may pass, the UMass campus alone can defeat CLT.

On Nov. 6, we have a chance to vote for our future. And we will.

The first step is to register to vote. Not voting is equivalent to voting in favor of CLT.

We also need to spread the word to our friends and families about what repercussions the CLT petition could have on the future of public higher education in Massachusetts.

If each of the 30,000 employees, students and faculty at UMass convince five other people to vote no on question three, we can stop the CLT petition from passing.

Our time is running out.

Unsigned editorials reflect the majority opinion of the Collegian Board of Editors

Should Americans be in the Persian Gulf? Are they fighting for democracy, or something else?

Are we witnessing the beginning of another Vietnam?

Do Americans really support the actions taken by the President? What should our economy expect from a lengthy battle with Saddam Hussein?

The Editorial/Opinion page will be running a Point/Counterpoint section this week about the crisis in the Middle East.

Submissions must not exceed 50 typed, double-spaced lines. Letters and columns must contain the writer's name, local address and phone number.

Send all submissions to The Editorial Editors, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Receiving rightful financial aid a terrifying quest

Editors' note: This is one of a two-part series.

Step aside, Don Quixote! If you think that tumbling windmills with a lance is the stuff of heroic, if ill-fated heroes, try dealing with the Kingdom of Financial Aid at the University of Massachusetts in this time of shrinking state education budgets.

I lowered my lance on August 6, 1990 while black clouds gathered on the formidable horizon, completely snarled with red tape and threatening dire menace. My quest: To seek out the elusive $400 fee waiver for the fall semester.

I went forth in my task, dialing the number with stern resolve. Unfortunately, the Kingdom line was busy. I tried again. And again. Twenty times the snarling busy signal rang its sour note in my ear. Finally, a happy female recorded voice said that I should beware the treacherous new phone system and "Have a nice day," while suffering the indefinite Kingdom of Financial Aid 'hold.'

I waited patiently until at last a mortal's voice welcomed me to the Kingdom. Endlessly patient Erica Ressmeyer-Lovas listened to my woeful saga as I explained the facts: No, I hadn't filed a Financial Aid Form because my veterans' benefits and Teacher Assistantship provided me basic sustenance, and I thought the $8 filing fee for an FAF an unnecessary burden when all I wanted was to be considered for an in-house waiver.

"Ah, my sorry knight,' she replied, "your ignorance is as wide as the sea. This year everything has changed in our Kingdom. Now, everyone needs an FAF, even if they are guaranteed to get nothing (as you undoubtedly would) after having filled out its numerous pages and paid the filing fee. Because you lack the FAF, I'm happy to say, you are beyond the pales of the Kingdom's responsibility."

"But the deadline is long past for the FAF and late filers are never considered for priority financial aid."

She laughed at my naivete. "That is all true, but we must know your eligibility, brave knight. The FAF tells us that."

"Fair maiden, all you need to do to figure out my income eligibility is multiply nine payments of my monthly veterans' benefits and add it to my Teaching Assistantship stipend."

"But that's not the rules, so be bold and seek out help from your department!"

David Holper

I departed the Kingdom and set forth to find Robert Bagg, the gallant head of the English department. "Ye hellish dogs of war!" he cried after hearing my tale. "What scoundrels they be in the Kingdom of Financial Aid. But perhaps you could at least fill out a fee waiver form and have the gallant secretary of your program attach a memo requesting special consideration from their Kingdom."

"Ah, your name is written by the hand of God, wise leader, thank you for such sagely advice!" I said and departed, my heart gladdened with the possibility of an easy solution.

I came again to the gates of Financial Aid and let forth with my cheery salute.

After 75 busy signals on the first day, followed by 24 on the second day, a familiar woman's voice answered me from the tops of the ramparts. "You want what?" Erica laughed, "Oh, God, not another one. It's no good, you lazy academe, we have no waiver form and we will let no one pass who has not an FAF!"

"But can't I just give you a copy of my last year's taxes?"

"That magic won't work here anymore," she cried, then threw down several large stones and a bucket of cold dishwater to show her earnest.

I began to take my quest more seriously. I called the Graduate Dean's office — busy. I called the Provost, having seen several times for myself the awesome power of this fearsome individual.

The siren-like voice of Sue Pearson floated into my ear. "Ah, yes, it is a sorry tale you tell, tired knight. But fear not, for I will grant you assistance in your quest. Only heed the magic words I speak: Let me get back to you in a day or two."

Two days went by while I camped in a dark wood, trying to buoy my spirits with Sue's promise, then I called again.

The fair secretary explained that Sue was in an alchemical meeting, in which the Provost's staff was trying to figure out how to turn student flesh into gold.

The meeting lingered on through the following day, thus casting me into a weekend of sodden gloom.

On Monday Sue was on vacation.

On Tuesday she went back to her meeting and could not return any of my several messages. . .

David Holper is a UMass graduate student

Tune in tomorrow for the dramatic conclusion!

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed, double-spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editors' discretion.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length. Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned. The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 30 typed lines and columns must not exceed 65 typed lines.

Columnist status is granted only to writer's who have five columns printed on the Page within one semester.

Submissions must be addressed to The Editorial Editors, Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Students interested in becoming columnists or cartoonists should come down to the Collegian newsroom or call 545-0719 and ask to talk to Reggie, Gayle or Jeremy. We look forward to receiving your submissions and comments throughout the semester.

ARTS & LIVING

Nothing compares 2 Sinead at MTV Awards

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Irish pop singer Sinead O'Connor breezed past American bombshell Madonna for top honors at the seventh annual MTV Music Video Awards, in a ceremony marked by a protest against censorship.

The outspoken O'Connor took video of the year, best female video and postmodern video for her stark "Nothing Compares 2 U" during the three-hour ceremony broadcast live Thursday night.

Madonna's "Vogue" video won for direction, cinematography and editing. Madonna, dressed in an 18th century French costume bursting at the bust, performed a racy version for the video during the awards show.

Ex-Eagle Don Henley beat Billy Idol and M.C. Hammer in the best male video category for "End of the Innocence." But Hammer's "U Can't Touch This" won in rap and dance categories.

O'Connor caused a flap last month when she threatened to walk out on an audience of 9,000 at the Garden State Arts Center in New Jersey if the state-owned amphitheater played the national anthem before her show.

"I'd like to say I had a great respect for people of all countries, including American people," she told the sell-out MTV crowd, which gave her a standing ovation.

"I don't see aesthetically what national anthems have to do with any country," she said after the ceremony. She said the incident taught her to be "much more conscious of other people's feelings and not so obsessed with my own."

The rap group 2 Live Crew performed "Banned in the USA." The performance sparked a dance-fest by audience members who waved bumper stickers reading "Censorship is UnAmerican." The rappers decried the banning of their explicit As Nasty As They Wanna Be album from some record stores.

It was a disappointing night for last year's big winner, Laker-girl-turned-megastar Paula Abdul, whose "Opposites Attract" video was shut out, despite six nominations. Last year, Abdul won for best female, dance, editing and choreography for her "Straight Up" video.

Two older groups enjoying new success also picked up awards: the B-52's for best group and art direction for their exuberant "Love Shack" and Aerosmith for metal-hard rock for "Janie's Got a Gun."

Janet Jackson, sister of pop icon Michael Jackson, was named in advance as the recipient of the 1990 Video Vanguard award, MTV's highest honor.

Student checking free for a year!

Open a BayBank checking account today, and you'll pay no normal monthly service charges for one full year. Plus, you'll enjoy the unmatched convenience of the BayBank Card—chosen by more Massachusetts students than any other. Only the BayBank Card lets you—

- Bank 24 hours a day at over 1,000 X-Press 24® banking machines on campus and around the state.
- Access up-to-the-minute account information with unique Card features like Account Update™ and Check Update.™
- Get cash where you shop, with over 200 BayBank X-Press 24 CASH® machines at convenience stores and supermarkets in Massachusetts.
- Get cash when you travel at over 30,000 NYCE® and CIRRUS® automated teller machines nationwide

So look for us on campus—or stop by the nearest BayBank office today to open your free checking account. And get the Card that's number one in its class!

NOBODY DOES IT BETTER.™

24-HOUR CUSTOMER SERVICE CENTERS AND BAYBANK TELEPHONE BANKING: BayBank Boston (617) 648-8330, BayBank First Easthampton (413) 586-8600, BayBank Harvard Trust Company (617) 648-8330, BayBank Middlesex (617) 387-1808, BayBank Norfolk (617) 461-1740, BayBank Southeast (508) 823-2212, BayBank Valley Trust Company (413) 732-5510

Members FDIC

LANGUAGE PACIFICA
OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve. Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6–9/17
Amherst Creamery Bldg
150 Fearing St. Ste. 29
549-5065

A HEALTHY COMPLEXION AND BODY
begins with a deep pore cleansing treatment and a full body massage
Improves how you look and feel relaxing • refreshing revitalizing also lash and brow tinting and hair waxing
AESTHETICS
THERAPEUTIC SKIN CARE AND MASSAGE
AMHERST • 253-9979

SAVE ON USED AND DISCOUNT NEW BOOKS
40-80% Off Pub. List Price
Thousands of popular & academic paperbacks & hardbacks
VALLEY BOOKS
199 N. Pleasant St.
Downtown Amherst
Open 10-8
Sept. 4-7
256-1508
Visa/MC

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

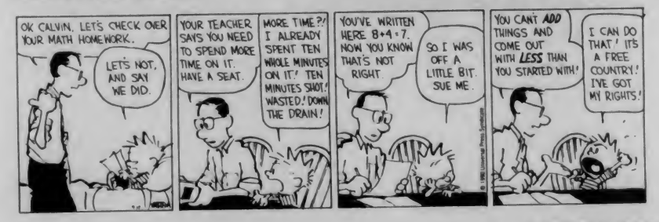
"Dang! . . . Sorry, buddy."

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

ANYBODY HEARD ANYTHING ABOUT DEPLOYMENT YET?
NOPE.
THE LID'S BEEN ON FOR WEEKS
MAN, THAT'S THE WORST PART—NEVER KNOWING WHAT'S GOING ON! I REMEMBER THAT FROM 'NAM!
USE A CIGARETTE, MAN!
YEAH... YEAH, I COULD. I HAVEN'T SMOKED IN YEARS, BUT MAYBE IT'LL SETTLE MY NERVES. THANKS, BUDDY!
AIN'T WAR A BITCH?
OH, I DUNNO...

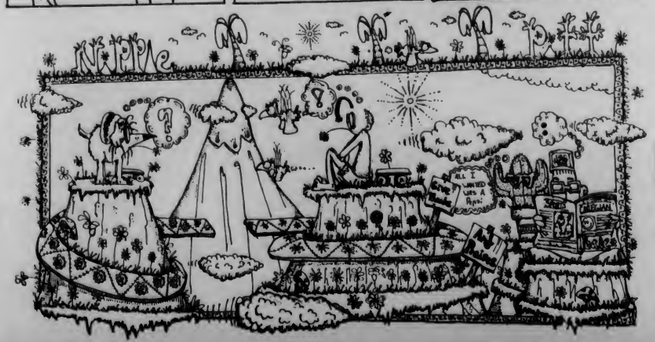
CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



OK CALVIN, LET'S CHECK OVER YOUR MATH HOMEWORK.
LET'S NOT, AND SAY WE DID.
YOUR TEACHER SAYS YOU NEED TO SPEND MORE TIME ON IT. HAVE A SEAT.
MORE TIME?! I ALREADY SPENT TEN WHOLE MINUTES ON IT! TEN MINUTES SHOT, WASTED! DOWN THE DRAIN!
YOU'VE WRITTEN HERE 8+4=7. NOW YOU KNOW THAT'S NOT RIGHT
SO I WAS OFF A LITTLE BIT. SUE ME.
YOU CAN'T ADD THINGS AND COME OUT WITH LESS THAN YOU STARTED WITH!
I CAN DO THAT. IT'S A FREE COUNTRY! I'VE GOT MY RIGHTS!

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

MOM IF I HAD MY OWN TRANSPORTATION YOU WOULDN'T HAVE TO CHAUFFEUR ME AROUND.
IS THIS YOUR SUBTLE WAY OF ASKING FOR A BIKE?
NO! I WANT A CAR!!
©1990 PRICE VAN RAY



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Duchess Meat Pie Grilled Cheese	Pan Shish Kebab Fried Shrimp
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Caponata Pocket Grilled Cheese	Golden Carrot Bake Fried Shrimp

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

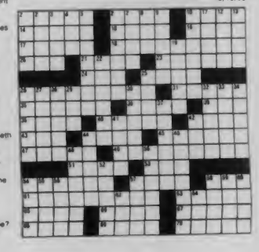
ACROSS
1 Bet
6 Lansbury role
10 Lee J. or Ty
14 Thrill
15 Beasts of burden
16 — avis
17 "John Joe"
18 Go to bed
20 Parker's place
21 Oh dear!
23 Sharpies
24 Pull
25 Talkative bird
26 Symbols of Nazi tyranny
31 Assortment
35 Astaire-Rogers film: 1935
36 Stravinsky ballet score
38 Printemps follower
39 Lariat
40 Topsoil
42 Ducts
43 Lamprey
44 Jason's vessel
45 — Restaurant
47 Demolish
49 Baryshnikov never executes only one
51 Desertlike
53 Bumpkin
54 Kublai Khan follower
57 Equable
58 Select
61 Italian range
63 Hit TV show
65 Connecticut bulldogs
66 Brother of Seth
67 Heavens: Comb. form
68 Confederate
69 Presume
70 Novelist Anne

DOWN
1 Links
2 Landed
3 A bit too ripe?
4 Greek letter
5 Annual event at Henley
6 Five Nations tribe
7 Indian deer
8 Encountered
9 Recorded item
10 Old movie heavy Lard
11 Diamond Head site
12 Scottish hillside
13 Kaneohe and Kawaihae
19 Chinese province
22 Hang about
25 NCO
26 Spread widely
27 Hand-seeker
28 Rome, for one
29 Haggard title
30 Hitler Hank
32 Attain
33 Confused
34 Baker's need
37 Maureen and John
41 Up in years
42 London's Old — Theatre
44 Ohio city
46 Ignored?
48 Glass role
50 Muss
52 Trojan War epic
54 Ballerina Plisetskaya
55 Australian export
56 Actress Carter
57 Scoff
58 Spoken
59 Window part
60 U.S. ballistic missile
62 Cagers' org.
64 Ferret out

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

D	U	E	L		W	I	P	E	D		A	L	I	A
E	I	N	N	E		A	D	L	E	R		T	E	E	N
E	F	F	T	S		M	E	A	B	I	A	T	M	A	M	O
O	I	E		S	T	E	I	N		F	R	E	D	D	Y
S	T	R	A	P			T	O	N	I
			A	U	S	H		A	S	S	E	N	T	E
G	E	T	A	R	O	U	N	D			G	I	L	L
A	G	A	I	N	S	T	T	H	E	C	L	O	C	K
L	A	K	E		C	H	O	W	L	I	N	E	S
A	D	E	A	R	T	H		G	A	I	N
R	O	U	E				M	A	R	C	H
A	F	I	R	S	T		S	T	U	B		O	H	O
F	A	S	T	T	A	L	K	E	R		A	V	I	V
A	N	K	A		N	O	I	R	E		G	E	N	E
R	A	S	E		Y	U	M	M	Y		A	R	A	L

9/10/90

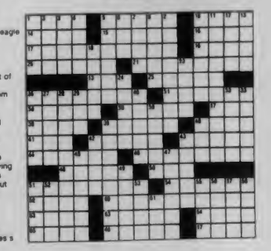


ACROSS
1 Singer Joan
5 Wharves
10 Melville captain
14 Italian wine sector
15 Copland ballet score
16 Observe
17 Visiting
19 Graf —
20 Two-wheeled carriage
21 Flyleaf
23 Lager holder
25 A Belafonte
26 Annoyed
31 African antelopes
34 Clothe
35 Conical tents: Var.
37 Logic or graphic beginning
38 — tube
39 Energy
40 Mideast title
41 Elec. unit
42 Dundee denizens
43 Ballerina's quality
44 Condor or eagle
46 Steel mill worker
48 Jots
50 Trouble
51 Small point of land
54 Toolbox item
59 Olympian Korbut
60 Supporting
62 Dark red
63 — beagle: lawyer
64 — nut tree
65 Actress Irving and others
66 Growing out
67 North Sea feeder

DOWN
1 Wild party
2 The Charles's tertiar
3 Harrow rival
4 Zooms
5 Basic school text
6 Charged particle
7 Advantage
8 Checks, à la Cordero
9 "Sweeney Todd" composer
10 Actor Michael of "Broken Arrow"
11 Furious
12 To — ideal
13 It's on tap
18 Slammer
22 Laurel and Hardy, e.g.
24 Reach
26 Fictional elephant
27 Bouquet
28 Visiting
29 Idle talk
30 Nutritionists concerns
32 Thaw
33 Doubly tender
36 Frattona staple
39 Breakfast treat from Philly
40 Shorebird
42 Toppers
43 Amelia — Curtis of opera fame
45 Present times
47 Small wave
49 Temptress
51 Short-billed rail
52 Stylize
53 Forum garb
55 Brack
56 Selves
57 Dominate
58 Ski support
61 Actor O'Neal

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

W	A	G	E	R		M	A	M	E		C	O	B	B
E	L	A	T	E		O	X	E	N		R	I	A	R	A
O	I	M	A	R		H	I	T	T	H	E	H	A	Y
S	T	Y		A	L	A	S		R	O	G	U	E	S
		T	O	W		M	Y	N	A
S	W	A	S	T	I	K	A	S		A	N	R	A	Y
T	O	P	H	A	T		A	G	O	N		E	L	E
H	O	P	E		E	A	R	T	H		V	I	A	S	A
E	E	L		A	R	G	O		A	L	L	I	E	S
W	R	E	C	K		E	N	T	R	E	C	H	A	T
			A	I	N		I	D		O	A	F
M	O	N	G	O	L		J	U	S	T		O	P	I	T
A	P	E	N	N	I	N	E	S		O	P	R	A	H
Y	A	L	E		A	R	E	A		U	R	A	N	O
A	L	L	Y		O	A	R	S		T	Y	L	E	R



TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Anna Regina Santiago
Copy Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Layout Technician.....Rick Seto
Photo Technician.....K.A. Burke
Production Supervisor.....Rick Seto
Typesetter.....Joanne Quimby
Production.....Terry Starmer, Nicole Dumas, Jennifer Arnold, Tania Ivany

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Fall 1990

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

WMUA 91.1 fm Presents.. UMass Football

WMUA BRINGS ALL THE ACTION OF UMASS FOOTBALL FROM THE OPENING KICKOFF TO THE FINAL WHISTLE. JOIN YOUR FM SOURCE FOR UMASS SPORTS, 91.1 WMUA IN AMHERST.

Sept.	15	Maine	1:15
	29	Boston Univ.	1.15
October	6	at Rhode Island	1:15
	13	Connecticut	1:15
	20	at Delaware	12:45
	27	Northeastern	1:15
November	3	at Richmond	12:45
	10	Villanova	12:45
	17	at New Hampshire	12:15

Starting time includes 15 min. pregame

WMUA 91.1 FM

Student-run radio for UMass and the Pioneer Valley

New Members' Meeting

Monday, Sept. 10th, 7pm

Campus Center 101 (Next to the WMUA studios)

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

Hours for September have been extended for your convenience!

Five Good Reasons to use the Textbook Annex

- Largest selection of used books
- One stop shopping
- Professional staff
- Confidence
- Service

REGULAR HOURS: MONDAY-FRIDAY 9:00 AM-4:00 PM

SEPTEMBER HOURS

SUNDAY	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
SEPT. 2 CLOSED	3 CLOSED	7 9-5	5 9-9	6 9-9	7 9-5	8 10-3
9 CLOSED	10 9-5	11 9-5	12 9-5	13 9-5	14 9-5	15 CLOSED
16 CLOSED	17 9-4	18 9-4	19 9-4	20 9-4	21 9-4	22 CLOSED
23 CLOSED	24 9-4	25 9-4	26 9-4	27 9-4	28 9-4	29 CLOSED
30 CLOSED	OCT. 1 9-4	2 9-4	3 9-4	4 9-4	5 9-4	CLOSED

VISA MasterCard

LOCATED ON THE TOP FLOOR, EAST SIDE OF THE PHYSICAL PLANT BUILDING

Field hockey handed one win, loss in Iowa

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

Pam Hixon enjoyed her trip to Iowa so much, she may even schedule another trip there.

Saturday afternoon the University of Massachusetts field hockey team successfully opened its 1990 season at Hawkeye Field in Iowa City with a resounding 3-0 win over the Ball State Cardinals.

The Minutewomen bombarded Ball State goalie Kellie Rowker with 34 shots. Rowker who deserved a better fate, saved all 14 shots in the first half, but in the second stanza, UMass proved to be too much for the Cardinals. The Minutewomen raised their game to a higher level, assaulting Rowker with shot after shot, 20 to be exact.

UMass forward Dawn Trumbauer finally broke the ice almost 16 minutes into period two. From there, Mara Frattasio scored and Trumbauer notched her second goal of the game, icing a satisfying win for the Minutewomen.

Phillipa Scott started in goal for the Minutewomen. Scott was not really tested, but she did manage to save all three shots that she faced.

Sunday the Minutewomen got a taste of their own medicine. Iowa goaltender Eillene Moyer turned away six UMass shots and Kris Fillat scored with five minutes left in the game to give host Iowa a 1-0 victory.

Scott, who earned her second straight start, played well, making 18 saves.

"Scotty played great," said Hixon.

Iowa took control of the game early. "We seemed to be intimidated for some reason," said Hixon.

"We're off to a good start. We played great defense, which is good to have this early in the season. I enjoyed the trip, it was easy and smooth, and there was good competition. I'd like to go back in maybe two years."

Sports Notice

STOCKBRIDGE: There will be a soccer and basketball meeting at 4 p.m. today in Boyden room 223. If unable to attend, please contact Jack Leaman at 545-1301 or stop by Boyden room 228.

charlie's

1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight

New Game Room with 2 Pool Tables

Tonight 10c Mozzarella Sticks 9:00p.m. — 12:00 a.m.

Beer of the Month Foster's Lager $1.75

Drink of the Week Denaka Vodka & Cranberry $1.95

Food Giveaways
Mon 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9-12
Tues 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9-12
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9-12

We accept MC/Visa/Amex

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

Hiring Now For The School Year

Interesting, part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm, and Saturday, 11am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $5.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to maximum $6.00/hr.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, 586-8635.

Abt Associates Inc.

Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035
An Equal Opportunity Employer

TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE

Catch all your sports at the Top!

Lounge Hours:
Mon-Fri: 11:30 am-12:30 am
Sat-Sun: 5:00 pm-12:30 am

San Francisco at New Orleans
Tonight at 9 pm

Monday Night Football

11th Floor • Lincoln Campus Center • (413) 549-6000 ext. 7634
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

CLASSIFIEDS

ACTIVITIES

1ST UPC MEETING. Get involved with great concerts! Tuesday Sept. 11th at Earthfoods! Great fun, cool people! Call 545-2892 for details!

SCIENCE FICTION CONVENTION Looking for volunteers to organize fun weekend. First Meeting Tues Sept. 11 7pm Campus Center 166

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION RECYCLERS - Housing Services Recycling Program needs students! Do an internship, practicum or independent study with us - we're proof that garbage can be fun - 545-1153

COME TO WMUA'S New Person's Meeting tonight, 7pm, CC101. Join your radio station: learn skills, gain experience.

EMTS & FIRST RESPONDERS Pelham Fire & First Aid Unit is recruiting. Paid details. Meeting Sept. 18, 7pm N409 Morrill. Call 545-5115 5-Th 7-9pm or stop by N416.

NUCLEAR WINDS! Hi Wind Sailboard Club forming now. Call 253-7366 Shred!

UMASS MUSIC THEATRE GUILD looking for Assistant Director, Music Director, Vocal Coach, Choreographer for Nov. 3-5 production of "School House Rock". Contact Kara Jenkins in Guild office 423 Student Union or call 253-3863. Deadline 9/12/90

VISA OR MATERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back. Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. M-1207

AUTO FOR SALE

79 DATSUN WAGON 107K AM/FM 4 speed Alfred (W)545-4637 (H)549-5423

1974 VOLVO Georgia car almost no rust less than 100 thou miles new tires, shocks and brakes. Vince Woolley 549-1330

1980 NISSAN 200SX Runs good. $1000 or B/O Tel 549-4675

1983 HONDA ACCORD LX Hatchback 4 cylinder auto/ac pwr steering Car alarm and more $3,300.00 256-8022

1984 DODGE ARIES, 4-dr, low miles, 1 owner $2250.00 253-2098

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great. Excellent condition 50 MPG $4500 586-7163

DODGE VAN RV style 1977 ex. cond $995 549-2656

FOR SALE: 1986 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, highway metallic grey, excellent shape, best offer call 413-253-8397

MERCEDES 300D 1975 $3000/BO rebuilt engine A/C FM/cassette 545-2569/256-4928 Diane

NEED A DEPENDABLE CAR for cheap? 1981 Honda Civic 4 dr, sun roof, AM/FM 100W stereo speakers, new tires, 5-speed, high gas mileage...great car. $800 or best offer. Call Theresa at 546-0923

SEIZED CARS, trucks, boats, 4 wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. C-1675

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions! Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4067

DANIEL R.M.

WANT TO GO to an after hours?...no, just shake me all night long ABERDEEN

EDITING/TUTORING

RETIRED TEACHER WITH graduate degree will edit papers for proper grammar, spelling, clarity, good writing and documentation form - any subject. Fast professional Wordstar wordprocessing also available if you are not a typist or are rushing to meet a deadline. Especially interested in working with international students (trained as English speech specialist), but enjoy helping all students, any level. Usually available on short notice. Reasonable rates. D. Read, 253-3354. (This ad will appear only briefly - clip for future reference.)

FOR RENT

AMITY PLACE - looking for a male roommate to share room, fully furnished. For more info call Leanne, Donna, or John at 549-5318

SINGLE BEDROOM in house on N. Pleasant St. 5 min walk to UMass. $265 mo. Call now - 549-0961 ask for Marilyn

SPACIOUS SINGLE ROOM located in farmhouse on bus route. 192 per month. 253-9047

STILL LOOKING for a place to live? Beautiful house less than 2 miles from UMass. $250 plus utilities 549-6951

FOR SALE

GUITARS FOR SALE 2 B.C. Rich 1 w/Kahler $275 1 w/o $225 Ovation Classical Acoustic/Electric $275 Call John 1-786-8618 Leave Message

IBMXT 640K coprroc 20MBHD TAU compatible $700 549-2656

LOTUS 123 Ver 3.0 unopened $100 549-2656

RED DORM FRIDGE excel. cond. a steal at $50 Valerie 549-8416

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD HOMES available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent foreclosures. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. H-2009 for repo list your area.

SLEEP WITH US Full size Futon and Frame $150 We'll beat anyone by 5%. Metawampe Furniture 1-800-3-FUTON-1

SOFA, ARMCHAIRS, Vacuum-cleaner, pool-table, lamps. 549-1578

WATER-BED KING SIZE 12 drawer pedestal will set up $300 00 253-2098

FOUND

GOLD BRACELET found near campus center. Please call 549-8028 to claim it

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $3000 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

CHRISTMAS, Spring break, summer travel FREE. Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. F-1426

COSMETIC SALES Earn unlimited income! Become a cosmetic consultant. Flexible hours, high commission, company will train 1-800-359-1961.

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 228 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 min walk from UMass) No phone call please

EARN $300 TO $500 per week reading books at home. Call 615-473-7440 Ext. B-281

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard. Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Boston 40C, Boston, MA 02215

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS Sept 17 - Oct. 29 Mon 7-9pm $50 00 Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL Language Pacifica 549-5065

LOST

LOST SET OF KETS near Student Union w/room key and name plate call 8-1937

MOTORCYCLES

1975 HONDA 360CB 12,000 miles excellent condition $450 253-2098

1990 KAWASAKI EX500 Blk & Rd, less than 2K miles, mint condition $2950 Call 256-4609 evenings

HONDA NIGHTHAWK 1983 550cc 4cyl fast new tires, radar detector, extras, 9,000 miles mint condition, 1,100 or best offer 549-8083 Jim

PERSONALS

LISA G. of Tri-Sigma - Welcome back form Israel! Time for another meeting. Dorchester or South Africa?? Love ya, Jules

TRI-SIGMA SISTERS - Welcome back! Get ready for the best semester yet!!

YO, WHINY KLEINY - Congrats on your new job and for having such a great roomie!

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA Fall Special small cheese $3.50 large cheese $5.99 2 Additional Toppings only $1 more Must mention this ad! 549-8073 549-8096

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 OR 2 GIRLS wanted for condo behind Baybanks. Great location! Call 549-9378

2 SINGLES AVAILABLE in house on Lincoln Ave. for spring semester across from campus Call 549-5258

AMHERST CENTER female to share room $170/mo 549-8377

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course start 9/10 - $195 Adv course starts 9/17 - $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 - $360 For further information call 549-8407

TRAVEL FREE!!! Sun Splash Tours offers the most exciting and affordable Spring Break Packages to Jamaica and Cancun!! Earn free trip and extra $$$ Call 1-800-426-7710

TYPING

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications, 256-6373

WANTED

KEGULATOR OR COLD TAP 19 Phillips 549-8199

WHO SAID GARBAGE WASN'T FUN?

TAKE A CLASS IN RECYCLING EDUCATION 3 credits - guest speakers, lectures, field trips and hands-on experience. Call Pei-Jen 549-5291 or Sherill 5-1153 for info

SPORTS

Minutemen battle Crusaders to 10-10 tie

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

It was a tie that was a win and a loss.

The University of Massachusetts football team was picked to lose to Holy Cross by as much as three touchdowns Saturday, and did not.

But the UMass locker room did not celebrate following the game. For coach Jim Reid and many of his players, months of work on the practice field produced 60 minutes of sensational defense against the Crusaders. But the bottom line — a tie — was unsatisfying.

With 0:08 remaining, Marco Gabrielli's game-winning 49-yard field goal attempt was blocked. Holy Cross was left with time for one last play, but Minuteman linebacker Bobby Burke hauled down fullback Joe Segreti at midfield, preserving a 10-10 draw. There is no overtime play in non-conference games.

"I'm extremely disappointed, our boys have worked very, very hard," said Reid. "I told these guys that I wanted this to be a game they could take with them for the rest of their lives. . . we almost got that goal.

"We came here for a purpose, it wasn't for a tie."

Gabrielli's attempt was set up by a two-minute, 50-yard march by the Minutemen, after the Crusaders' last drive of the game was knocked cold at midfield by an Allen Williams blitz on third down.

"We were excited. We broke it down and we thought we could punch it in," said quarterback Gary Wilkos. "We were moving the ball well."

The story of the game for the Minutemen, however, was the defense, a three-linebacker, bend-but-don't-break concoction used by Reid for the first time in his career.

Reid said he planned to abandon his usual alignment of three linemen and four linebackers even before starter Matt Tulley injured a shoulder in practice and could not play. With John Creamer in as a fourth defensive lineman much of the time, the Minutemen were able to contain Holy Cross' potentially explosive run-and-shoot offense.

"The defense we played against them today we've been practicing since this spring," said Reid. "We have just not been able to match up with the run-and-shoot teams. . . that's why we tried to do something different today."

The defense yielded several long drives — including a 12-play, 83-yard Segreti-dominated monster in the first quarter that gave the Crusaders a 7-0 lead — but turned the Crusaders away from the goal line when it counted most, late in the game.

Holy Cross drove the length of the field in the third quarter, from its own nine-yard line to the UMass five. There, quarterback Tom Ciacco tossed an awkward pitch back to Segreti, who fumbled. Tackle Bill Durkin recovered for UMass.

The UMass offense sputtered — with starting tailback Jerome Bledsoe out since the last moments of the second half with a severely sore right ankle — and the Crusaders mounted another drive, to the UMass 30-yard line.

With eight minutes left in the game, Williams stripped flanker Mark Gallagher of the ball down the right sideline, however, and UMass sidestepped another threat.

Before injuring his ankle, Bledsoe tied the game at one touchdown apiece early in the second quarter, with an inspired, 37-yard ramble down the right sideline.

Scott Kania pushed the Crusaders back on top 10-7 with a 30-yard field goal, before Gabrielli retaliated with a 47-yard blast, 18 seconds before the half.

Collegian photo by Eric Goldman

Freshman tailback John Johnson, filling in for the injured Jerome Bledsoe, ran for 39 yards on 10 carries in Saturday's 10-0 tie at Holy Cross.

Soccer teams look good, bad in season-openers

● Women knock off Rutgers Red Knights, 3-0

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

So far the hard work of pre-season training has paid off for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, and head coach Jim Rudy is very pleased with his squad.

"We played a pretty mature game for the first game of the season," he said of the 3-0 victory over Rutgers Saturday. "It's a good start for us."

Traditionally, Rutgers has played a very physical match, and this weekend was no exception. But the Reds of UMass knew better than to play their game.

"We didn't buy into the emotional game," Rudy said of the physical competition. "Psychologically, we handled it very well. It toned down [Rutger's] game.

"We dominated going uphill," Rudy said. Rutgers got off no shots in the first half, finishing the game with seven, compared to UMass' 14.

Corner kicks continue to be the Reds' most intimidating artillery. They got off two, as Rutgers got one.

"That continues to be our strong point," Rudy said of corner kicks. "We've got some jumpers."

Scoring was initiated by Holly Helmuth 22 minutes into the game. Margi Jaede served a corner kick, sailing over Aprile Kater's head, to be met on the far post by Helmuth's hard-struck header.

Fourteen minutes later, Jaede again took the initiative by stripping Red Knight Pam Pitchok of the ball. Jaede's left-footed chip from 35 yards out completed the scoring for the first half.

Kim Montgomery marshalled the UMass defense as sweeper back. Playing a big part of that defense was Briana Scurry who ended the game with five saves. Rutgers gave her three decent opportunities to show her stuff, and she effectively fielded the 'fairly routine" shots on goal.

"She played very well," Rudy said. "She did a nice job."

Skye Eddy was scheduled to start the game in goal but was struck with a virus and was much too ill to compete.

Seventy minutes into the game, Kater completed a pass to Sue Gaudette who made a chip shot from five yards out. Getting clean of the Rutgers sweeper, another defender touched the ball and changed the angle of the shot. It was good for the final goal of the game.

Rutgers' Saskia Webber took home 10 saves. Almost all the shots were made when the defense was scrambling.

"We put her under pressure right away," Rudy said. "We worked her well."

During the last 10 minutes of the game, the Reds stalled and slowed play. The momentum of the game was winding down.

"We forced them to commit," said Rudy. "They gave us a lot a space."

Looking ahead is what Rudy is best at. Upon hearing final scores of opponents, he got excited about upcoming games.

"We're being optimistically cautious," he said of what the season brings.

● Men wind up weekend with 2-0 win, 1-0 loss

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

After Sunday afternoon, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team stands at 1-1 overall and at 1-1 in the Atlantic 10. They could easily be 2-0.

After shutting out St. Bonaventure 2-0 Friday afternoon, the Minutemen saw their luck run out Sunday against Penn State, losing 1-0 in overtime.

Three great scoring chances, all breakaways, went awry in the first thirty minutes against Penn St. The teams stayed deadlocked until 108:00, when Nittany Lion midfielder Thomas Ageson headed a Danny Kelly corner kick past UMass goalkeeper Jon Gruber and into the back right corner of the net. That goal stood through the final eight minutes of overtime, and Penn St. escaped with a 1-0 overtime win.

"We had three chances . . . we should've buried them," said head coach Jeff Gettler.

The Minutemen controlled most of the first half, setting up their scoring bids through smart passing and aggressive defense. They ran out of gas, however, in the second half.

"We got conservative in the second half," said Gettler. "That was not our game plan. We hung back and let them come to us, and we got caught flat-footed."

Sunday's game was characterized by aggressive, physical play. Forty-nine red and five yellow cards were handed out by referee Helder Dias. The Nittany Lions accounted for 32 of those fouls and four of five yellow cards.

"It was a tough game," said Penn St. coach Bary Gorman. "It was typical of a conference game this early in the year."

The St. Bonaventure game was a different story, as UMass came out of its preseason lethargy. Freshmen Matt Edgerly and Randy Jacobs teamed up for the season's first goal in the first half, while Peter McEvoy added an insurance goal in the second half.

At 38:42, Jacobs sent a low-bounding cross though the Bonnie defense from the right side. Edgerly took control of the ball, hesitated until Bonnie goalie Jim Kane committed, and sent a low line drive scooting into the goal.

McEvoy's score at 59:43, off a corner kick, was helped by a bit of good luck. The senior sweeper's line drive from the left bounced off a Bonnie defender and hit the inside of the right goalpost. It was ruled a goal.

UMass goalie Steve Armenti robbed the Bonnies blind on their best chance of the afternoon. On a direct kick from 20 yards out, Armenti lept high to bat away Joe Nora's line drive.

While the team's weekend wasn't a total success, Gettler appeared confident about his team's chances of further success after the Penn St. game.

"I think right now we're capable of playing and beating any team on our schedule," said Gettler. "But we lost three points we should've had."

Volleyball drops four

By LIOR BEN-AHARON
Collegian Correspondent

Going into the University of Hartford Invitational Tournament this past weekend, the UMass women's volleyball team believed the words of its coach, Carol Ford, that "every team was beatable" if the Minutewomen played up to their potential.

The Minutewomen obviously did not play up to their potential, as they left Hartford with a 0-4 record.

Their first opponent was Villanova, and UMass showed all the rustiness of a team playing its first match of the season.

After losing 4-15 and 12-15, the Minutewomen came back to win 15-9, only to lose the next game and eventually the match 8-15.

The next opponent for UMass was Drexel University, and not only did they lose the match, but they also lost the services of starting setter Angie Paolucci. After losing the first set 12-15, Ford said Paolucci, who had missed much of pre-season due to illness, just "ran out of gas" and went to the infirmary. UMass went on to lose the match 2-15 and 10-15.

On Saturday, UMass faced Army, the eventual tournament champion. UMass fell quickly and quietly 1-15, 8-15 and 6-15. UMass also faced Boston College in a consolation match and lost in three grames 7-15, 8-15 and 11-15.

"Not having Angie really hurt us," Ford said. "Having her makes all the difference in the world."

With or without Paolucci, however, Ford admitted "We have a lot of work to do."

Water polo takes Army

By JOE DEGLORIA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts water polo team came back from the Army Invitational with three wins and a lot of confidence. UMass took the tournament with wins against Army's B team, Boston College and Army's A squad. Coach Russ Yarworth was pleased with his team's performance.

"I think we accomplished what we wanted too. There were times when we were a little sluggish, but in retrospect I feel that we did fine," said Yarworth.

In the first game, UMass's A team cruised to a 17-5 victory over Army's B squad. (Both Army and UMass were split up into A and B teams with the A squad's games counting in the standings.)

"The first game was a good opportunity to play everyone and evaluate," said Yarworth of the lopsided affair.

The second game was a different story, however, as the BC Eagles proved to be a real test. The UMass A team found themselves down by 2 goals, 8-10, with 2:30 left in the contest.

UMass woke up and scored 3 straight goals to come away with the win, though Yarworth said his team never really got it together and that play was inconsistent.

In the finals, UMass' A met Army's A team and won, 11-6, taking the tournament. Yarworth was satisfied with the play of all the returning starters as well as G.T. Ladd and freshman Tasan Engin.

UMass is participating in the Eastern Varsity Tournament Saturday.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 5

WEATHER	EDITORIAL	ARTS
It will be partly sunny today, 79 to 84 degrees in the afternoon. Patchy fog in the evening.	David Holper continues his two-part series of his tale of money woes at UMass. See page 7.	Careful readers of new book can solve the Laura Palmer mystery. See page 11.

Murphy drops out of gubernatorial race

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff
and THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After a controversial week of "palace coup" leadership in Massachusetts, Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy announced yesterday that she would end her lagging bid for governor. The stunning reversal came less than a week after Murphy tried to prove she could lead state government, defying the requests of Gov. Dukakis by introducing her own plan for aiding the Massachusetts economy.

In a press conference yesterday from the State House in Boston, Murphy announced she would end her campaign for governor and throw her support to fellow Democratic candidate Francis X. Bellotti.

"Now there can be no confusion," Murphy said, "This is not a political ploy. It is an honest act of leadership."

From the same podium where she revealed the budget proposals Friday, Murphy said the main reason for her withdrawal was the simple fact that she could not win.

"There is no time for business as usual, or politics as usual," Murphy said.

Murphy proposed various steps to slash state spending and solve the government's financial difficulties. But those maneuvers, which were blasted as a political stunt designed to rescue her campaign, caused a wave of defections from within her ranks.

Murphy had unveiled proposals to slash state spending to help overcome the budget crunch.

Michael Goldman, a campaign strategist, said surveys conducted over the weekend showed Murphy's support was growing, but not enough to land her the nomination in the September 18 primary.

He said Murphy made the decision Monday morning, and aides relayed the decision to one of her rivals, Bellotti, who has been leading in the opinion polls.

There was no discussion about giving Murphy a job if Bellotti should win, Goldman said.

The third Democratic candidate is Boston University president-on-leave John Silber, who has staked out the conservative wing of the Democratic Party along with independent voters.

The announcement came on the same day that Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn, along with other leading liberals, said they would back Bellotti.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Collegian file Photo

Evelyn Murphy

Murphy's drop-out surprises students

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

Students at the University of Massachusetts reacted with surprise at the announcement that Lt. Governor Evelyn Murphy had dropped out of the race for governor.

The announcement, made yesterday at a press conference in Boston, came after a week of turmoil in the State House during which Murphy proposed her own budget-saving ideas to aid the ailing Massachusetts economy.

Mike Berinato, a junior history major said he thinks

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

Superpowers agree on Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yesterday's adversaries can become today's allies when they find they need one another, as Washington and Moscow do now.

President Bush needed and got Soviet backing for the U.S.-led effort to force Iraq's Saddam Hussein out of conquered Kuwait. He needs Soviet cooperation for the creation of a new East-West security system in Europe, and for arms control deals that may yet spare some military spending and produce the elusive peace dividend.

The latter aims mesh with Mikhail S. Gorbachev's goals, including his urgent need to revive a collapsing Soviet economy with Western support and, perhaps, with U.S. economic assistance.

Sunday's summit at Helsinki served all those aims. It produced no further steps to be taken against Iraq in case United Nations-approved economic sanctions don't suffice. Both sides said they were satisfied.

Bush and Gorbachev repeated in person the demand their governments had made before, that Iraq obey the United Nations and withdraw unconditionally from Kuwait. That didn't alter the position of the two powers, but dramatized it, and Brent Scowcroft, Bush's national security advisor, said their solidarity had to be terrible news for Saddam Hussein.

There were points of difference.

The Soviet Union, long the major arms supplier to Iraq, still has military advisers there. Gorbachev said they were gradual-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

AP Photo

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — U.S. President George Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev recently hold a joint news conference in Helsinki after their summit talks.

Regional plan proposed

Duffey objects to the merging of universities

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff
and The Associated Press

BOSTON — A plan to lump state public colleges and universities into five geographical regions in which they would share courses and library material will be proposed by interim Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery today.

The proposal is aimed at improving efficiency when budget money is scarce but college presidents, including University of Massachusetts President-Chancellor Duffey, have rebuked the plan.

"We're going to have to do something," Bromery told The Boston Globe Monday. "We'll be extremely lucky over the next three years to get even level-funding."

He said the proposal, which he planned to present today to the Board of Regents of Higher Education, would provide more academic programs to more students.

Courses could be shared through satellite transmissions and television, videos, and computers, and buses could shuttle students between the campuses, he said.

Duffey, in an interview yesterday with the Collegian, was skeptical of the proposal and said while it should be studied, attention should be focused primarily on finances for the higher education system.

"Any proposal deserves to be looked at but this plan does not address the idea of cost," he said. "He is trying to find a way to deflect the continual anger and frustration over the lack of funds for public education."

Bromery said a college might not have to build a new dormitory or create additional class sections if students could be served by facilities and programs within the region.

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith, Amherst, and Hampshire colleges now have a similar arrangement, which is said to be Bromery's model.

Duffey, however, said while some savings might be reaped, the plan in its present form is flawed. "There might be some savings in terms of sharing physical facilities but I can't see people taking a bus even to Greenfield [the nearest community college, about 35 miles from Amherst]."

Duffey said a better implimentation of the plan — which he called an "interesting first draft" — would be to draw the community colleges closer together and put the state colleges into a consortium, but let the universities operate in a more independent atmosphere.

"I think [UMass-Amherst] should be granted a charter as other large state universities have," he said. "We would tend to our own affairs instead of being a part of a public agency."

Duffey said his form of the plan was not partisan but rather in keeping with how a university functions. "There's a great difference in Amherst compared to any other institution in the state in respect to research and teaching."

Terry Zoulas, press spokesman for the regents, said the proposal, born of frustration with budget cuts and fear

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Womens Forum

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12
Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch Series — The Series offers speakers followed by discussion every Wednesday. One credit is available for those who come to every program and participate. Registration takes place at the first lunch in room 903 of the campus center. Beverages are provided. For more information contact the Women's Studies Department at 545-1922.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 16
Lecture — Judith Plaskow is scheduled to speak on "Claiming the Power to Name: Towards a Jewish Feminist Theology" at 4 p.m. in the Neilson Browsing Room at Smith College.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22
Womanshelter/Companeras — Companeras is a shelter providing service to battered women and their children in the Holyoke and Chicopee Area. Volunteers are needed for the 24-hour hotline, children's program, advocacy, fundraising, and to work in the office. Training starts September 22. For more information call Edie Jennings Wigfall at 538-9717.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24
Necessities/Necesidades — N/N is looking for volunteers to staff their 24-hour hotline, and provide counseling, advocacy and community education. The training begins October 11 but they must be contacted by September 24 at 586-1125.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Reproductive Freedom Committee of the Progressive Women's Network will hold meetings on the 2nd and 4th Wednesday of each month at the Unitarian Church in Northampton at 7 p.m.

The Everywoman's Center is offering an incest survivor, rape survivor, and a post-abortion support group. For information on the first two groups call 545-0800. For information on the last group call 545-0833.

Murphy

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Murphy had portrayed herself as a champion of the liberal wing of the Democratic Party. But her support, which was already lagging, was disintegrating among progressives before the revolt last week.

Murphy took control of state government when Dukakis left on a trade mission to Europe. Before his departure, she said she was waiting for him to leave so she could seize control of the state's ailing finances.

Murphy claimed she was simply looking out for the well-being of the state, trying to downplay the political overtones of her revolt against the unpopular Dukakis.

But critics said her move was an act of desperation and would not sell to voters.

Goldman said Murphy intended to stay in the race up until Sunday, and he continued to insist her actions last week were not politically motivated.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dasbidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Mark Truskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

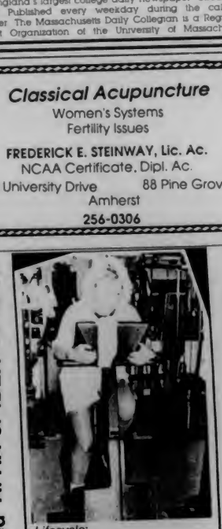
PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski, Rory Evans
Graphics

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation, 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

Recycle this newspaper

Classical Acupuncture
Women's Systems
Fertility Issues
FREDERICK E. STEINWAY, Lic. Ac.
NCAA Certificate, Dipl. Ac.
190 University Drive 88 Pine Grove
Amherst
256-0306



Aerobics Instructors Wanted AFAA or IDEA Certified
Lifecycle:
Pedal Pushing!
Students
$185 NOW 'TIL MAY 21 1991
10 percent discount for normal membership
584-4975
NORTHAMPTON NAUTILUS, INC.
216 North King Street
Northampton
Aerobics•Nautilus•Lifecycles
•Tanning•Free Weights
Call for Information

Mary, Roger & Terry
INTRODUCING
JUNGLE RED SALON
Lower Level
Amherst
Carriage Shops
549-1840

AIM HIGH
MAJOR IN CAREER SUCCESS THROUGH AIR FORCE ROTC.
Whether you're majoring in a highly specialized area or seeking a broader liberal arts education, you can build a higher level of total career potential: Join Air Force ROTC.
That one step distinguishes you above all others in your field. It shows that you're serious about cultivating greater long-term opportunities. It gives you the chance to develop leadership skills that will serve throughout your life. Call CAPT RODLY J. MILLET 413-545-2451
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

LOCAL

Bellotti and Pierce respond to questions

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Gubernatorial candidates Steven Pierce and Frank Bellotti responded positively last week to a questionnaire regarding their financial and political positions toward public higher education in Massachusetts.

The questionnaire was conducted by the State Student Association of Massachusetts which represents the interests of students attending public institutions.

The candidates disagreed over Chancellor Bromery's proposal to merge state schools and universities in order to save state funds.

Bellotti stated that none of the presently proposed plans to merge any state colleges and universities appealed to him.

The public higher education in the state needs restructuring, according to Pierce. He replied by suggesting the system be redesigned to eliminate program duplication, to streamline administrations, and to better serve regional needs.

"All that would go far to educating young people," Pierce said.

Although neither candidate formally stated that they would privatize schools if elected governor, Pierce said "I think private organizations are often managed with a greater degree of cost-efficiency and effectiveness."

However, he did not think that privatization of public schools would reduce the costs of attending college in Massachusetts.

Bellotti stated he would seek financial support for public education in the private sector and would not consider privatization.

"Private colleges and universities do a fine job educating many of our students; however, public higher education is an essential resource for our state's economic future," he said.

The candidates disagreed over whether the Board of Regents of Higher Education should be abolished. The Board of Regents is an elected board which oversees and sets tuition rates for higher public education in the state.

The Board of Regents should not be abolished, according to Bellotti, but members should be more understanding of what level of fees students are paying when they are setting tuition rates.

"I do not believe that the Board of Regents should be abolished, but I do believe that its members should be more responsive to the financial constraints placed on public higher education students," he said.

Pierce responded that the Board of Regents adds to the already "top-heavy" state bureaucracy and should be abolished.

"It is important that we avoid waste at the administrative levels of our government like that at the Board of Regents, so that we may focus our resources on the 'operational' end — the students," he said.

Both candidates vowed to urge the congressional delegation to restore federal cuts from financial aid funding to private schools.

"I would make the case that the future of our economy in the world marketplace is dependent upon our investment in education, and I would tell President Bush that he cannot be the 'Education President' while at the same time making cuts in pro

CONTINUED ON PAGE 15

Collegian photo by Susan Cornelissen
TIME TO MOW THE LAWN — A Leverett barn struggles to rise above a yard overgrown with weeds.

Four assaulted in Southwest

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Police are investigating an early Sunday morning assault committed against a woman, her male companion and a third person on the 21st floor of John Adams by four persons.

Police said the four persons entered the room and proceeded to ransack the room and attack the three occupants.

One woman was thrown across the room, receiving injuries to her hand. A man received a possible broken nose but declined medical attention. The third subject was struck in the jaw.

The incident was precipitated by a fight earlier in the evening at a party on the 13th or 14th floor of the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

New phones cause 300 complaints

Family housing residents want subsidized monthly phone rates

By MEREDITH O'BRIEN
Collegian Staff

Though the University of Massachusetts' newly-installed $22 million high-speed telecommunications system has been predicted to "modernize" the University, it has not been free from its share of glitches.

Since students moved in last week, the department of Housing Services has received more than 300 calls from students complaining about the new phone system, said Gerald Quarles, assistant director of Housing Services.

While Quarles said he anticipated at least five to six percent of the 12,000 new phones would have problems, the complaint rate was "on the high side" of the administration's calculations.

"We would have liked to see no complaints and will try to minimize them," he said. "But [the number of complaints] does not make us comfortable."

Quarles said the majority of the complaints were due to the large number of phones that were faulty, or simply dropped and broken. "The breakage rate is much higher than we expected, but we're basically within reasonable parameters," he said.

The University has a one-year warranty with the Ericsson Business Communications Company who will replace faulty and broken phones at no cost to the University.

Other complaints concerned the assignment of the same phone numbers to two different phones and the delay in the activation of the new voice mail system.

The system is being offered to students for $30 per semester or $50 per year in lieu of conventional answering machines which will not work with the new system. Many students have complained that the system has not been activated quickly enough.

Randy Sailer, director of the University's Telecommunications Network Services, said he received the first batch of requests for voice mail yesterday and will activate them as soon as possible.

"We've had over 700 people requesting voice mail as

CONTINUED ON PAGE 15

Mullins Arena and Boyden Gym to have solar heat system

By MARK HENSLEY
Collegian Correspondent

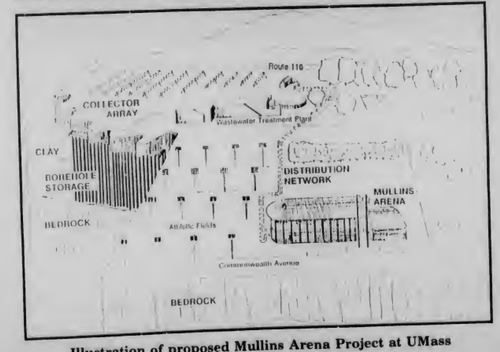


Illustration of proposed Mullins Arena Project at UMass

Researchers from the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Massachusetts have plans to use solar energy to heat the proposed 10,000-seat Mullins Arena as well as a large portion of the Boyden sports facility in what will be the first solar facility of its type in the United States.

After a two-year, $230,000 study funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, the new arena and gym will use a unique system of solar heat which is currently being used in Europe with great success.

The $3 million system, designed by mechanical engineering professor Edward J. Sunderland and senior research associate Dwayne Breger, will consist of an array of solar collectors located behind the university wastewater facility which would pipe heat into a large, clay, underground thermal storage area during the summer months.

Approximately 85 percent of this heat could then be recovered and utilized during the heating season resulting in an estimated six-year payback period.

Although Sunderland says the project has received "marvelous support at all levels on campus," researchers are awaiting a federal grant needed to complete the final 18 months of design work which would be followed by eight months of construction.

Developed in close cooperation with design teams from Europe, where approximately 30 similar systems are successfully being operated, the system would be a significant step for the U.S. solar industry.

Greger said although "the U.S. solar industry has made some major technological advances, the low-temperature solar flat plate collector industry is still a very small industry. Installations like this system are really what that industry needs to get going."

"Coming at a time of harsh economic realities and a threatened oil supply, solar systems like this one offer many advantages," he added.

Sunderland said he thinks one of the big-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking.

With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

LIBRARY MURAL COMPETITION

The University Library announces a competition for murals to be installed in the stairways and in the elevator lobby of the 26th floor of the Library.

To be chosen by jury:
Five proposals for stairway landings
Scheme for elevator lobby–by individual or a group

Honoraria:
$250 for each stairway mural
$1500 for elevator lobby scheme

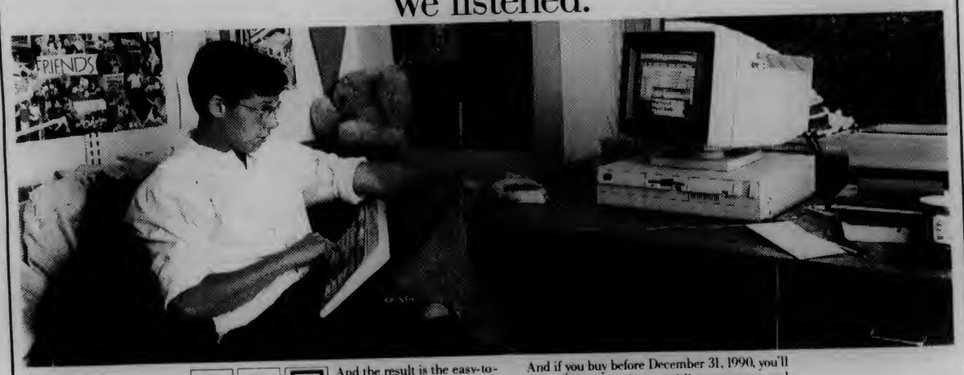
All registered University students—graduate and undergraduate—are eligible to enter the competition.

Time Schedule:
October 15, 1990 Proposals due at office of the Director of Libraries
November 1, 1990 Students to be notified of the decision of the jury
December 15, 1990 Murals to be completed

For further details and registration form, contact:
William Markey, Chair, Library Art Committee, Collection Development, University Library Tel. 5-0058

The Library Mural Competition is made possible by grants from the UMass Arts Council, the University Library, the Art Department, and the Graduate Student Senate.

You told us keep it simple and make it easy. We listened.



And the result is the easy-to-use IBM Personal System/2.® With its preloaded software, including Microsoft® Windows™ 3.0, just turn on the PS/2® and you're ready to go. Watch your ideas quickly come to life in papers, graphics, lab reports and even spreadsheets.

Plus, you can easily work on more than one project at a time. Simply click your mouse to choose from a variety of programs. And our special student price makes it easier to own.*

And if you buy before December 31, 1990, you'll receive a TWA® Certificate entitling you to a round-trip ticket for $149/$249. Plus a free TWA Getaway® Student Discount Card application. You'll also get a great low price on the PRODIGY® service.

It was easy making the IBM PS/2 easy to use. You told us how and we listened.

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 10-3 UNIVERSITY STORE Located in the Campus Center

*This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice. Valid for any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for travel September 16, 1990 through December 19, 1991 in the following round trip fares: $149.00 round trip for travel from September 16, 1990 through June 14, 1991 and September 15, 1991 through December 19, 1991. $249.00 round trip for travel June 15, 1991 through September 15, 1991. Fares are unrestricted, 14-day advance purchase, blackout dates and certain other restrictions apply. Complete details will be shown on certificate. Applicants for TWA's getaway Student Discount Card must be full-time student between the ages of 16–26. IBM, Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. Microsoft is a registered trademark and Windows is a trademark of Microsoft Corporation. TWA is a registered service mark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. ©1990 IBM Corporation

Persian Gulf Crisis

Single-parent soldiers prepping their children for the worst

HOUSTON (AP) — The call to duty because of the crisis in the Middle East means extra anguish for single-parent soldiers, who must prepare themselves and their children for the worst while hoping for the best.

Gary D. Dow, a chief warrant officer with the 94th U.S. Army Reserve in Massachusetts, has been making those preparations ever since Iraqi troops marched into neighboring Kuwait Aug. 2.

Dow, 37, who is divorced and has custody of his 12-year-old son, Jamie, recalls the day last month when his beeper went off, ruining a day at the beach.

It was a call to readiness, not arms, but left Jamie shaken.

"We were in panic, he was very upset," Dow said. "He was very nervous."

Now Jamie watches the television news religiously and peppers Dow with questions. He waits and watches for a signal that his father might be sent overseas.

"He talks about it daily, asks me what's going on," Dow said.

"One night he said, 'Dad, I don't want you to get shot.' I told him that was pretty remote. But he lives with that all the time."

Jamie will stay with Dow's parents if his father is sent away. He will be cared for, clothed, and fed, even if the worst happens.

"I'm not raising my hand and volunteering," Dow said. "I have my son. He's my priority. I have a mission and a duty. I'll go if I'm asked to go. But I'd rather be a last resort."

Major Doug Hart, a Defense Department spokesman, said there are 55,093 "sole parent sponsors" in the U.S. armed forces — 37,257 men and 17,836 women.

Though he did not have figures for past years, Hart said, "It would be a fair assumption that that number has risen. You could parallel the increase in single parents in the civilian population with the military population."

Hart said all single-parent soldiers must designate a legal guardian for their children in the event the parents are called to active duty. Such arrangements are on a base-by-base level. Day care and counseling services are also sometimes available.

But, U.S. Army Captain Barbara Goodan points out, the military isn't a nursery school — or the Boy Scouts.

"The most important thing to remember is single parents along with everyone else in the military volunteered for the service," Goodan said. "They indicated that they would be prepared for worldwide missions."

In at least one case, a soldier is accused of failing to properly provide for his children before reporting for duty.

Faagalo Savaiki, a staff sergeant at Fort Campbell, KY, called up with his unit Aug. 29, is accused in Tennessee of leaving his three children without food, but with a note taped to the wall telling the two boys and a girl how to use an automatic teller card to withdraw money from the nearest bank.

Savaiki, divorced from his wife who now lives in Hawaii, pleaded innocent in Clarkesville Sept. 6 to three misdemeanor child abuse charges. Authorities said the children might be reunited with their mother or other family members.

Iran-Iraq restore relations

TEHRAN (AP) — In a major step toward ending its decade-long conflict with Saddam Hussein, Iran has agreed to establish diplomatic relations with Iraq, the official Iranian news agency said yesterday.

Also yesterday, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein offered to supply oil free of charge to Third World countries in what he said was a gesture of solidarity. However, he said countries would have to supply their own tankers, and his statement appeared to be an attempt to circumvent the United Nations embargo on trade with Iraq.

Saddam addressed his message to Third World governments, but did not specify the countries. He said he was making the offer regardless of the various governments' stands in the Persian Gulf crisis.

"We hereby declare that we are prepared to supply all Third World countries with oil free of charge in accordance with the needs of each country," Saddam said in his last televised message, read by an announcer.

The Islamic Republic News Agency monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said the agreement between Iran and Iraq was reached in a meeting between Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and his Iraqi counterpart, Tariq Aziz, who ended a 24-hour visit to Iran yesterday.

LANGUAGE PACIFICA OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6–9/17
Amherst Creamery Bldg
150 Fearing St. Ste 29
549-5066

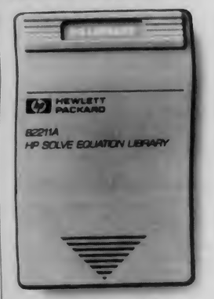
DON'T STAY HOME

London	$398
Nairobi	$1005
San Jose, CR	$338
Hong Kong	$849

*restrictions may apply

Council Travel Amherst 256-1261

Move 10 years ahead of the class.



The new HP 48SX and a free 'library card' can get you there.

With over 2100 built-in functions, our new HP 48SX Scientific Expandable calculator takes a quantum leap into the 21st century. Buy an HP 48SX between August 15 and October 15, 1990, and HP will send you a free HP Solve Equation Library card (a $89.95 retail value).

The plug-in application card alone contains more than 300 science and engineering equations, as well as the periodic table, a constants' library, and a multi-equation solver. It's like having a stack of reference books right at your fingertips.

The HP 48SX calculator is so advanced, it will change the way you solve problems forever. It integrates graphics with calculus, lets you enter equations the way you write them, and does automatic unit management.

Check your campus bookstore or HP retailer for HP's range of calculators and special back-to-school offers. Then check out the calculators that are years ahead of their class.

There is a better way.

HEWLETT PACKARD

MAKE UP YOUR OWN MIND.

AMIGA.

MEET THE FUTURE OF CREATIVE THINKING.

Amiga doesn't just improve your work. It improves your thinking. Just working hard isn't enough anymore. Creative thinking is what sets winners apart.

The Amiga computer was designed precisely with that thought in mind. It starts with the ability to handle routine tasks, then lets you go all the way to innovation and invention.

Whatever you can imagine, Amiga has the power to produce. Easily.
Its built-in technology is a major advancement in a computer of this size and price range.

With a mouse and simple icons, Amiga combines a full color display, full stereo sound, graphics, 3-D animation, video capability and text as no other computer can.

It has the power to run software sophisticated enough to manipulate vast amounts of data, as well as the creative genius to create the complete score for an orchestral composition.

It's like tapping into the brains of Einstein, Bach, Galileo and Cecil B. DeMille all at once.
Thanks to our new AmigaVision," an innovative authoring system, you can put on multimedia presentations that rival Hollywood productions, by calling up software for painting, scanned-in graphics, titling, animation, full-motion video and audio. Then see and hear it all at the same time, on a single monitor. That's real multimedia!

We deliver today, what others promise tomorrow.
Amiga was designed to keep up with you, from schoolwork demands through career needs. You'll find standard what other people make optional. As well as sophisticated technology that doesn't exist on comparably powered and priced computers.

Creative educational discounts make Amiga an easy decision.
The Amiga Education Purchase Program for college and university students, faculty and administrators, offers a wide range of fully loaded, specially bundled hardware systems, with a complete system starting under $700.* All include a one year limited warranty and AmigaVision.

Try Amiga on for size, get a FREE T-shirt.
The best way to make up your own mind about Amiga is to try one. Stop by your Campus Authorized Amiga Dealer and get your hands on the future of computing. And just for putting one to the test, you'll get a Free T-shirt (hurry, supplies are limited).

Sure, some people buy what's standard. But we think you can make up your own mind, and choose your own best course for the future. After all, isn't that what college is all about?

AMIGA
THE COMPUTER FOR THE CREATIVE MIND.
©Commodore

Validata
Mountain Farms Mall
Store 36
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 459-1017

© 1990 Commodore-Business Machines, Inc. Commodore and the Commodore logo are registered trademarks of Commodore Electronics Ltd. Amiga is a registered trademark of Commodore-Amiga, Inc. AmigaVision and The Computer for the Creative Mind are trademarks of Commodore-Amiga, Inc.
*Prices under the Education Purchase Program at 8/15/90. Prices and other terms of this Program are subject to change without notice.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

A tired financial aid tale

Editor's note: This is the second of a two-part series.

In the previous segment, our hero traveled long and hard in search of adequate financial aid. Here is the rest of his tale.

In desperation I turned to the powerful forces of Complaint and mounting my steed, I rode off to the castle of the dangerous and wise Ombudsperson. After being admitted and telling the now- tired tale once again, the jovial and fair Kate Warden said I should seek out the powerful Graduate Dean, in spite of any excessive busy signals.

David Holper

"I take it you know about the evil new phone system?" she asked.

I nodded my weary head.

Upon entering the principality of Deandom, I discovered to my lack of surprise that the Graduate Dean was on vacation and would be back when the Crusades began in September. However, in his place the kindly Acting Associate Dean listened to my lunatic ravings.

"This sounds like fun," he said, clapping his hands together and taking out his rusting sword and thrusting it at invisible nets of red tape. "I always love a good fight. In the meantime sally forth to the Veteran's office and whatever you do, poor knight, find yourself a copy of last year's waiver form and fill it out!"

I tried to explain to him that the Kingdom of Financial Aid would no longer recognize the magic invested in such a document, but he would hear none of it. Instead, he pushed me out the door with a hearty clap on the back and we went our separate ways.

I rode my limping steed to the Veteran's Affairs Office only to find that our lady of perpetual goodness, Diane Delisle, would be out until Wednesday.

With a heavy heart I led my trusty steed back to my rain-soaked camp and tried not to think where the extra $400 in fees would come from when winter sets its icy grip on the land. Surely not from the gas company, no thanks to that swaggering bandit, Saddam Hussein. Not from the landlord, who asketh $15 more of each roommate but wants to disconnect our extra shower. Perhaps I would get lucky and win a Visa sweepstakes and have the $1,000 debt on my credit card cancelled, or perhaps the University would be attacked by a nasty computer virus which would make disappear the note on my Perkins loan into a greasy column of electric smoke.

And from the ignoble Administration? Well, what would one guess after seeing seven tuition or fee hikes in two years with a steady decline in services? I thought back to the sad day last year when the venerable Provost tried to explain to the newly amassed Graduate Employee Organization that the then-present fee hike, which was being asked of all grads and undergrads alike, was going to pay the salaries of the humble and seemingly-ignorant teaching assistants.

"But isn't that like paying our own salaries?" one plucky graduate said from amidst the crowd.

"How can you think such a thing?" the Provost said, wringing his handkerchief, which was soaked with his big, salty tears.

What guilt I had felt then, for strangely enough, the same idea had forced its evil entry into my own head.

Troubled by these thoughts, I arrived at camp and started the fire with a pile of green wood my extra cash had allowed me to purchase. I cooked my meager handful of oats with a little relish. Odd, I thought, the flames yield not a thousand points of light as the woodseller promised.

Win or lose, it was looking to be a long winter.

David Holper is a UMass graduate student

Mapplethorpe: A mixed bag

The signs are all around us. The bustle of people, the lines of students waiting for classes, bronze tans, shorts and sweaters. Cool, brisk mornings signify the end of summer and the dawn of a new semester. Some things have changed, and others have remained the same. But from year to year, the question across every campus at this time of year is, "What did you do this summer?"

Erin Martin

I had a terrific co-op placement. As a marketing assistant, I was exposed to new events happening across the state. But one of my most memorable opportunities came at the end of July.

While sorting through the mail for my editor, I stumbled upon an interesting invitation. It was a black and white postcard with an image that appeared to be real. This photo was of the most beautiful flower I had ever seen.

I flipped the postcard and read, "Robert Mapplethorpe's Perfect Moment Comes to Boston."

Another art exhibit, I thought to myself, as I tossed the invitation aside. I didn't think twice about attending until about a week later when I read the headlines in the Boston Globe.

Suddenly, my curiosity was aroused, and the tossed-aside invitation became my ticket to one of the most controversial events of the summer.

The critics all had mixed reviews. Some called it "riveting," others labeled it "powerful" and many deemed it "obscene and pornographic." The public cried out in outrage, and citizen groups demanded the removal of the exhibit from the Institute of Contemporary Art.

As a nosey student with an invitation, I wanted to see what all the complaining was about.

Entering the exhibit I noticed reporters and critics with pencils and notepads frantically writing their reactions. Women were turning their heads. Men were gasping in horror.

I stood silent, searching for my reaction. And like most fine critics, I myself had mixed reviews.

I am, by no means, an artist. I can't even be creative with a box of Crayolas. And I am certainly no more educated about art than what I learned in my introductory class. But, as I viewed the portraits, my reactions shifted.

At times my stomach felt queasy, at others I could easily see why his exhibit included the word "perfect" in the title.

Robert Mapplethorpe was a famous photographer who died of AIDS. His exhibit gained national attention for a number of portraits that were borderlining pornography.

One of his portraits was of a little girl, seated in a chair, with her legs spread. The little girl was not wearing any underpants, but had a short shirt hanging between her legs.

Now, what makes this photography art? Who decides what is acceptable to be hung on a gallery wall or sold behind the counter at a 7-Eleven? While the government is trying to regulate obscenities, it remains unclear to me who draws the deciding line.

Another portrait contained two men, nude from the waist up. The men were in a tight embrace. This portrait was featured in the Boston Herald, and much of the public expressed outrage.

While some of Mapplethorpe's portraits horrified me, others were the true meaning of beauty. But I found the most interesting portrait to be Mapplethorpe's self-portrait. He was a gaunt man with skin barely covering his rib cage. His hair was short and messy. His cheeks sunk into his face. And as I stared at this sick looking man, I wondered what kind of person Robert Mapplethorpe had been.

But, I formed no real opinion. I searched my reactions to find a word to describe the exhibit. . .but could not come up with only one.

All the negative press the exhibit receives will only make people want to view the portraits. The exhibit should not be removed from the ICA. If you don't agree with his portraits, then don't see the exhibit.

You have a choice.

And after seeing his work, only then will you be able to form a true opinion.

Erin Martin is a Collegian columnist.

Waiting for the Book Police

Betty Smith was drying her dinner dishes when she heard the pounding on her front door.

"Who is it?" she asked, seeing no one through the peephole.

"This is the police, Ms. Smith, open up," a gruff man answered.

With a pang of fear, Betty slightly opened the door, leaving the chain on. "My god, it is the police," she mumbled.

As soon as she removed the chain, two police officers barged in and threw her up against the wall. "Betty Smith, we have a warrant for your arrest for violation of the overdue library book law. You have the right to remain silent. . ." said a redheaded policeman named Bob, while a short, balding policeman handcuffed her.

Meredith O'Brien

As her dish towel fell to the ground, Betty struggled to free herself from the tight grasp of the short policeman named Buck.

"I wouldn't struggle if I were you lady, it'll only make it worse," Buck said.

"Just wait a second, wait a second," Betty yelled. "What the hell are you talking about, 'the overdue library book law'?"

The redheaded officer looked at her sternly. "You have four books out that are over a year overdue: The Thorn Birds, The Great Gatsby, a Harlequin novel and The Joy of Sex."

Betty blushed. "How do you know all of this? What's the big deal? Everyone has overdue books!"

"Don't you read the papers? Dukakis made a new law making it a crime not to return your borrowed library books," Buck said.

"You've got to be joking! This isn't real," Betty said. "This must just be my brother's idea of a prank. What an idiot!"

"This is no prank," Bob said. "Here, read it in black and white," he said, holding the warrant out in front of her.

"'Judge Jonathan P. Wink does hereby issue a warrant for the arrest of Betty Smith on charges of housing overdue library books,'" she read out loud.

Looking at both of the officers and feeling the tight grip of the cuffs and Buck's hands, Betty decided to plead. "If I give you the books right now, can you let me go?"

Bob shook his head, "I'm sorry."

"How about if I pay the fines?"

"Nope," Buck said with a wide grin.

"What's going to happen to me?" she asked.

"Well," Bob began, "you could get up to five years in prison or pay up to $500 in fines. You're just lucky that the books you have out aren't worth more than $250, or you could be facing a fine of $25,000."

"But why are you arresting absent-minded people like me who simply forget to return their books? People that go to libraries and take out books aren't going around shooting into restaurants out of car windows!" she said.

"This is big bucks! Libraries lose thousands of dollars in lost library materials every year, and with the way the budget has been cut, they have no money to replace them," Bob said.

"Police departments statewide have been belly-aching that they have no money and yet you're spending your money on trying to arrest people with overdue books instead of real criminals?

"This is insane! It's not like I'm a thief or a murderer. For God's sake, rapists don't even get sentenced for five years!" she screamed. "Shouldn't you be out there right now protecting people instead of arresting law-abiding citizens?"

"This wasn't our idea, Ms. Smith, it was good old Mikey's doing," Buck said.

"There's not much we can do. We've got our orders," Bob said, leading Betty out the door.

Buck followed close behind. "Where're we goin' next?"

"To 279 Sycamore. Some guy turned in his girlfriend for her 12 books that were due in 1984. Big bucks. I guess they got into a fight and he wanted to get her back."

Meredith O'Brien is a Collegian columnist

Out-of-staters get 'free lunch'

During this recent round of budget cuts, tuition and fee increases, etc., out-of-state students have been among the most vocal proponents of tax increases to solve the fiscal shortfall. This is perhaps the most hypocritical thing I have ever heard of. These students expect Massachusetts citizens to bear the financial burden of their education.

By subsidizing the educational costs of out-of-state students, public higher education becomes a "free lunch" rather than the "investment in the future" that it is so often called.

Out-of-state students take their Massachusetts-subsidized educations and head off to California or New York or wherever with them. This is not an investment in Massachusetts' future.

The difference between Massachusetts residents and out-of-staters is that most instaters, such as myself, are here out of necessity. They are asking the state, to which they and their parents have paid taxes for years, to help educate them. In return, the state's workforce becomes better educated and more productive.

If students from other states want state-subsidized education, they can always go home and get it there. That way, they can avoid the increases they so ardently oppose. It's one thing if out-of-state students speak out against higher tuition. Just as long as they don't expect the taxpayers of this state to pay for their college education.

Kevin Newnan
Northeast

Solar

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

gest advantages is the impact of the project on Massachusetts. With the current economic problems, any strategy to keep money within the state would be extremely helpful, he said.

"While most of the money spent for energy delivered by this type application would be contained within the state, every dollar we spend for gas, oil and coal goes out of the state," he said.

Although systems of this nature can only be used in large applications, Sunderland believes they could become a viable and effective alternate source of heating in areas such as New England.

SNACKSENSE

A Nutrition Education Project

★ Offers Opportunities ★

GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE

Sign Up for an Independent Study with SNACKSENSE and earn from 1 to 6 credits

Schedule No.
557255	Nutrition 396	1-6 credits
557853	Nutrition 496	1-6 credits

Possible Responsibilities:
- Staff Campus Center information table
- Research write information pamphlets
- Supervise student assistants
- Develop nutrient profile printout for vending machines
- Develop educational materials for Campus Center eateries
- Writing scripts for WMUA radio spots and press releases for the Collegian

Looking for students majoring in: Nutrition, Public Health, Marketing, Communications, Journalism, Education; others welcome too!

For More Information Please Call
Sheila Gilroy or Debbie Allen

at University Health Services 549-2674 ext.189

A couple of hours a week could spice up your resume, increase your recommendations, and improve your chances in the job market!

Proposal

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

ly withdrawing and about 150 were left. Bush said he would prefer that they all got out, but didn't regard it as a major problem.

Gorbachev stressed the summit request for a political solution in the Persian Gulf; Bush said that would be best, but did not rule out the use of force if the embargo and other measures did not work.

Bush said that might reflect a difference with Gorbachev. But he also said that one of the keys to their personal diplomacy is that they don't try to hide differences, but discuss them without rancor and concentrate on common ground.

Bush said if this crisis had occurred 20 years ago, cooperation with Moscow would have been impossible.

Indeed, a large scale military move into the area by either side would have prompted the other to war talk.

Now Moscow has accepted the deployment, though it wanted reassurances that it is temporary — that U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia and warships in the Persian Gulf are there for the crisis, not for good. Bush told him the U.S. forces won't stay a day longer than necessary.

On the other side, U.S. policy for more than 40 years has been to keep Soviet forces out of the region. Bush said that if Moscow decided to send in troops at Saudi Arabia's invitation, it would be fine with him. Gorbachev said he had no such plans.

The summit emphasized — perhaps inflated — Gorbachev's role in dealing with the crisis. That could help strengthen him at home, where his government is struggling with severe economic hardship.

Such a development would be fine with the White House. Bush asked Gorbachev to tell him about the economic situation in the Soviet Union and later said that he wants to help improve it.

He said Soviet cooperation on the Middle East "gets me inclined to recommend as close cooperation in the economic field as possible."

That sounded a little like a cash-and-carry deal, and Gorbachev said Soviet support can't be bought for dollars, "although we do look forward to cooperation in this very serious time of far-reaching charges in our economy. . . ."

The summit also serves a domestic purpose for Bush, who addressed a joint session of Congress on the Middle East crisis. The solid front with Gorbachev is both a buttress for administration policy and a prototype for what could be a different way of handling future international emergencies.

Survey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

over the Citizens for Limited Taxation question on the November ballot, seeks to save money by eliminating duplication within the 27-campus system while serving more students.

Bromery said his plan would promote more efficient use of funds by sharing some administrative, admission and financial aid functions.

He did not specify how much money might be saved.

He also said the arrangement would make public higher education more attractive because applicants would be applying to all institutions within a region.

Zoulas said with a semi-centralized system students could be routed to a college or university that would be best for the student.

"What happens to the student who does not get into UMass-Amherst? Where does he go? With this system we could tell him that there is a opening at Westfield [State College] or perhaps the student needs some basic skills he could get at Greenfield," he said.

Holyoke Community College President David Bartley said the proposal was worth looking at but he doubted it would save much money.

"I seriously wonder if a research university culture and a community college culture, with its emphasis on teaching, can really combine," he said.

INFORMATION DATA BANK

Student Affairs Research, Information, and Systems

Do you have questions?

We have answers!

The goal of the Information Data Bank (IDB) is to make a sometimes seemingly complex institution easier to comprehend and negotiate.

IDB is a walk-in and telephone referral service which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; schedules (e.g., bus, library, athletic); listings of campus events (e.g., lectures, seminars, concerts, movies); weather reports; health and public safety issues; housing and food services information; student organizations and activities; and a variety of other topics.

If you don't know how to get there from here call the Information Data Bank.

Last year IDB served more than 8,000 individuals.

IDB is located in Whitmore, in the lobby at the top of the ramp (north side) Hours are 8:30 am-6:00pm Monday-Friday. Telephone 545-1555.

For information on the weekends (10:30am-3:30pm), please call the Visitors Center, 545-0306.

(The Taped Information Phone Service (TIPS) is not in service this semester.)

Police log

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

tower, police said.

The assailants were not identified.

Police are also investigating an assault and robbery of a pizza delivery man outside John Adams early Saturday morning.

The man was confronted outside of the tower by four persons and was struck in the face by one of them. He was then robbed by one of them.

Police said the man was taken to Cooley-Dickinson Hospital for treatment of a laceration above his eye.

In other police business —

LARCENY

Police have received four complaints of thefts at the Textbook Annex.

Two women reported to police Thursday that their knapsacks containing personal property were taken while shopping at the annex. The value of each of the knapsacks was estimated at $35-$40.

Police also received two other reports of knapsack swiping Friday. The estimated value of each was $35-$40.

- A man reported Friday the theft of his $150 bicycle, which was locked to the bike rack at Field.
- A man told police Friday that two wheels were stolen off his mountain bike locked to a handrail at Baker. The estimated value is $180.
- Two individuals reported to police Friday that their wallets and jewelry were stolen while they were in the shower. Police said the door to the room was believed to be locked. The estimated value was $1000.
- A man reported to police Saturday that his locked 1980 Buick Regal was stolen from the Southwest Horseshoe. The value was $1500.
- A woman reported Saturday the theft of her 10-speed bicycle from the outside of Butterfield. The estimated value was $350.

ARRESTS

- Jon M. Kronenbock, 19, of 304 Cance, was arrested Friday on Fearing Street for being a minor in possession of alcohol.
- John C. Lovering, 19, of Chelmsford, was arrested Friday in Lot 50 for being a minor transporting alcohol.
- Shawn Redmond, 20, of Peabody, was arrested Saturday after a foot chase on Fearing Street by police. Police said he allegedly broke a plate glass window in John Adams.
- Hummi Takahashi, 19, of 5 Eames Ave., Amherst, was arrested Saturday on North Pleasant Street for operating under the influence of alcohol and other motor vehicle violations.
- Christian S. Neilson, 24, of 42C Riverglade Apts., Amherst, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue Saturday for operating after suspension of his license and several other motor vehicle violations.
- Timothy E. Christmas, 20, of Acton, was arrested Sunday on Massachusetts Avenue for operating after suspension of his license and several other motor vehicle violations.
- Michael J. Winner, 34, of Chicopee, was stopped early Monday morning on Commonwealth Avenue for a motor vehicle violation and subsequently arrested for possession of firearms on a college campus.
- An 18-year-old male was placed in protective custody after police were called to Kennedy after receiving reports of an intoxicated man harassing people. The man was later taken to Cooley-Dickinson Hospital by the Amherst Fire ambulance. The names of persons placed in protective custody are not released to the media.

Murphy

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Murphy dropping out of the race is her best option.

"She may have had a chance at the start of the race, but now she doesn't stand much of a chance," he said.

Berinato said Francis X. Bellotti, another candidate for governor, should have a better chance of getting elected as a result of Murphy's decision.

Dan Jacobson, a campus organizer for MassPIRG, said his organization stands behind candidates who protect the environment and are concerned with consumer protection as well as educating people on ballot questions. He said, at this point, his organization is not endorsing any candidate.

Angus McQuilken, UMass student trustee, said Murphy's decision to drop out of the race will be helpful in defeating candidate John Silber in the Democratic Primaries.

"[Murphy's decision] makes voting for Bellotti even easier," McQuilken said.

Many students said they supported Murphy, but added her decision to drop out of the race was for the best.

"If she had a chance, it was very slim, if any at all," Michael Pierre, an engineering major said. "Murphy is closest to my own views, or closer than the other candidates."

Kim Rayner, a sophomore general education major, said although she wasn't following the race closely she does not think Murphy was a serious contender in the race.

"I don't really think she had much of a chance," Rayner said, "I don't know who I'll vote for, but I wouldn't have voted for Murphy."

Many students said they did not like any of the candidates running for governor.

"I don't think any of the other candidates are strong enough. I really don't like any of them," Michele Monterio, a freshman sociology major said.

Recycle this newspaper

COUPON

FREE LITER OF SODA WITH ANY LARGE PIZZA

PIZZA LASAGNA

Bruno's

SALADS SUBS

WE DELIVER QUALITY

OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. LIMITED AREA FREE DELIVERY

Call Us at 256-0222 and WE'LL BRING LUNCH to YOUR HOME OR OFFICE!

ONE COUPON PER PIZZA/MAY NOT BE COMBINED WITH OTHER COUPONS

Spectrum Magazine

the art and literary magazine at the University of Massachusetts needs you!

Come to our general meeting at:

ROOM 162 CAMPUS CENTER
ON: SEPTEMBER 11, 1990 7:30 to 8:30

or stop by our office at 406 Student Union Building or call us at 545-2240

Collegian Circulation Drivers needed

$10/hour

Must Have Mornings Free 9-11am

Must be Reliable

Come Apply 113 CC

CELEBRATE SENSATION

CHAMBER MUSIC
The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach
The King's Singers
Turtle Island String Quartet/ Billy Taylor Trio
Emerson String Quartet

THEATRE
The Negro Ensemble Company: WE Plays
A Traveling Jewish Theatre: Heart of the World
The San Francisco Mime Company: Seeing Double

DANCE
Margie Gillis
Desrosiers Dance Theatre
Urban Bush Women
Laura Dean Dancers & Musicians
Oakland Ballet
Bill T. Jones/Arne Zane & Co.

ORCHESTRAS/ CHAMBER ORCHESTRAS
Shanghai Symphony Orchestra
West German Sinfonia/Gary Schocker
English Chamber Orchestra/ Pinchas Zukerman

JAZZ
Count Basie Orchestra
Max Roach & Friends
George Shearing/Joe Williams/ Joe Pass
Sandra Reaves-Phillips

SPECTRUM
Sankai Juku
The Chieftains
Africa Oye!
Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour Revisited

BROADWAY
Lend Me A Tenor
Sarafina
Love Letters
Side By Side By Sondheim

WINNERS CIRCLE
Midori, violin
Leon Bates, piano
Dang Thai Son, piano
Franciscan String Quartet/ Peter Orth

Subscribe Now and Save
Call 545-2511 or 545-2512

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

1990-1991 SEASON

ADD A NEW CHAPTER TO YOUR LIFE!

SORORITY RUSH FALL '90

TUES., SEPTEMBER 11 ORIENTATION
CAMPUS CENTER, ROOM 101, 6:00 P.M.

ARTS & LIVING

Pixies prove their versatility on Bossanova

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Bossanova
Pixies
Elektra/4AD

The cliche goes that if you do not like the weather in New England, just wait a minute. It will change. The same used to be true about any single song on a Pixies album. Much of the band's earlier material, on Doolittle, Surfer Rosa, and Come On Pilgrim was hit or miss stuff. When they were on, the Pixies were brilliant and original. And when Joey Santiago's thrash guitar and Black Francis' obscure lyrics did occasionally cross the line between clever and annoying, it didn't last long. Pixies tunes were always short.

On their new album, Bossanova, released in August, the Pixies stretch out the formula into longer, more dramatic and complicated songs. Bossanova is, in turn, a longer, more dramatic and complicated album, and the result is stunning, even by Pixies' standards.

REVIEW

The band is headed into some more ambitious territory, and they are not humble about it. Several songs on Bossanova, including "Velouria" and the cathartic "Ana/All Over the World" tandem, begin with fanfares, as if they are introducing the Queen of England.

Musical references to U2 and the Who also surface — "Is She Weird" begins with the base guitar/cymbal drone of "God, Part II" off Rattle and Hum — begging attention, if not comparison.

"Ana/All Over the World," (they are listed as separate tracks, but where one song ends and the second begins is impossible to tell) is the most ambitious song the Pixies have recorded, eclipsing "River Euphrates" off Surfer Rosa, and "Wave of Mutilation" off Doolittle.

The slow, churning arrangement builds through three or four different moods and melodies, past a spoken ramble recorded below the range of hearing, to a final chorus of "All my thoughts/ all my thoughts . . ." shouted by Francis and bassist Kim Deal above a far-ranging Santiago guitar solo. Chill material.

"Stormy Weather," and "Havalina," the last track on Bossanova, are similarly long, slow, and dense. Francis' lyrics have always been obscure — the intent is to find words that sound good, whether they mean anything or not, he has said — and on "Havalina," the words evoke a grand scene. "Walking in the greens/ On the plains of Old Sedonda," sings Francis, while bassist Kim Deal echoes "Ar-i-zo-na." Who cares what they're talking about? It sounds heavy.

For Pixies' fans potentially put off by all this ballad stuff, there's plenty of noise on Bossanova too, of course. "Hang Wire," and "Rock Music" match the fury of "Tame," off Doolittle, with Santiago churning at full-tilt and Francis screaming away in classic form.

The Pixies remain tremendously weird throughout, as well. The album has inside photos of a toy cowboy, an anteater, a pile of blond hair, and a length of barbed wire. Francis comes across as enigmatically as ever, too, posturing as a tortured artist-type at times, then abruptly changing tack.

Though he now lives in Los Angeles, Francis, it seems, is still a New England-born (and partly UMass-educated) Pixie. Give him a second — or a couple of minutes, on Bossanova — and he changes his mind.

Read Laura's secrets: figure out why her arms bend back

LOS ANGELES, CA (AP) — The Secret Diary of Laura Palmer is roughly equivalent to Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm on a four-year bender.

If Twin Peaks the television series seemed dark, violent and just plain confusing, don't pick up the musings of its dead homecoming queen.

Released this week by Pocket Books, The Secret Diary of Laura Palmer is one of several marketing spinoffs (including a cassette tape, pie, and coffee) from the mind-boggling ABC series created by eclectic film maker David Lynch and former Hill Street Blues writer Mark Frost.

The diary actually is written by Lynch's 22-year-old daughter, Jennifer, and is living proof that the apple does not fall too far from the tree.

Jennifer Lynch's first novel is a twisted slice of Americana in which nothing is quite what it seems and sex is never quite making love.

It is vaguely reminiscent of her father's chilling depiction of sexual blackmail in Blue Velvet.

But Laura Palmer's diary is not cloned from David Lynch's films. Rather it is 184 pages of ruminations about life in a fictional Northwest lumber town as seen by its homecoming queen.

Peaks freaks, grab a pencil. Though the book is billed as containing definitive clues that identify Laura's killer, it's not easy going. Like the TV series, which ended its first season without disclosing the murderer, the book is crammed with red herrings, confusing twists, oblique references, and everything but a simple, declarative sentence that states "Laura Palmer was killed by (whoever it was who dumped her body in that lake)."

And talking to Jennifer Lynch about how to decipher the book is exactly like talking to her father or Frost about the show's reeling plot lines.

Which means you never get a direct answer.

Yes, says Jennifer Lynch with a smile, smoking cigarettes in her publicist's West Hollywood office, she knows who the killer is. Will readers of the book?

"The careful reader will know the clues and who the killer is," she replies.

On the subject of herself and on the inner workings of Laura Palmer, the author is less enigmatic.

Jennifer Lynch carries herself with a self-possession that belies her age. In conversation, she refers to her father as "David" and in a clear, but in an indefensible way patiently stresses that she alone is responsible for the book.

"I had a job to do and I did it," she says. "It was a tricky situation at first. I wanted to keep my career different from his."

What was the directive from Lynch-Frost Productions when she sat down to write the book?

"Be Laura Palmer," she answers. "I had to basically become her. Laura was a very troubled, very dark girl."

And while the TV series alluded to Laura's darker side, permeated by sex, violence, and drugs, there is nothing equivocal in her diary: If it were made into a movie, The Secret Life of Laura Palmer would carry an X-rating.

Beginning with her 12th birthday and ending days before her death at age 16, the diary chronicles a young girl's descent into cocaine addiction, orgies, prostitution and near insanity. But sex, drugs, and murder clues aside, the book also manages to capture the mindset of a teenage girl caught in the netherworld of puberty.

Laura alternately worships her mother and thinks her uncool, worries about the onset of menstruation and, with a heartfelt conviction available only to teenagers, believes she is the world's sole possessor of such confusing feelings.

"This is about some of the dreams, hopes and fears of any young girl's life," says Jennifer Lynch. "We've all been there. We've all been 12."

But Lynch stresses that the book is not an autobiography, although having David Lynch as a father did make for a somewhat nontraditional childhood.

Her parents were divorced when she was a youngster, but she spent much time with her father, who once had a paper route in between making early films such as Eraserhead.

"I used to have very few people who liked me because my father was strange and we were poor and we lived the art life," Lynch says.

To her, hanging out on movie sets and spending most of her childhood surrounded by adults was a completely normal upbringing.

"It was traditional to me because it was the only one I had," she says.

Lynch makes her directorial debut this year with a feature film titled Boxing Helena.

The story, which she calls "an obsessive modern-day love story," is about a woman whose boyfriend cuts off her arms and legs and keeps her in a box.

Photo courtesy AP

Jennifer Lynch, daughter of Twin Peaks creator David Lynch, has penned a spinoff to the much talked about ABC series, The Secret Diary of Laura Palmer.

Dave saves the day: free tunes to wash the blues away

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Rockin' Dave and the Rent Party to the rescue.

They've been called in to the Iron Horse to cover for a last-minute cancellation tonight. And cover they will.

In what seems a stream of cancellations that Horse owner's assistant Jon Smith attributes to a "litany" of things (including a sluggish economy), the Horse has been able to spring back quite nicely with local songsters Erica Wheeler and Joe Wheelan stepping in for the Cowboy Junkies last Thursday. The two, playing separate sets, tripped the memory of the audience about who they actually came to see.

But tonight . . . the show is free and zydeco/progressive/blues/soul/rock can be yours to enjoy. The Rent Party is: Rockin' Dave Morrish (singer/songwriter/accordian), Brian Harrington (drums), Eric Payne (guitarist who's been with the band since this summer), and Richard Zafft (bass).

As stated by Rockin' Dave: "I'm not into the White-boy-trapped-in-the-blues-syndrome. You have to make it your own. It wouldn't work if we tried to be a zydeco cover band.

"I try to mess with it — take it in another direction where progressive rock meets soul. I don't want us to get pegged as a zydeco band." (Daily Hampshire Gazette 9/7/89)

Rockin' Dave's music may inspire "60s-type" dancing, it may inspire hoots of laughter from the crowd during comical lapses, it may inspire thoughts from a different angle, however, it will inspire.

In a final word on the Rent Party, they qualified as semi-finalists in Pearl Street's Battle of the Bands last weekend and will return there early next week for the weeding out.

They appear with the Cowlicks, students primarily from the University of Connecticut. Seems they're not easily held or pinned down. Concentrating on zydeco and country styles, they play polka, Klezmer, western swing Bulgarian, and New Orleans style funk and hybrid versions unknown.

Cowlicks play anything they can get their hands on with an incomparable vivacity. Their unique sound finds it center in the ethnic twang of the fiddle and accordian, smoothed over by electric guitars, bass and drums.

Straight from Middletown, Conn. the Cowlicks are: Sam Bardfeld (fiddle), Andy Carroll (guitar and vocals), Jeremy Chatzky (bass), Julia Greenberg (vocals, guitar), Will Holhouser (accordian), Scott Kessel (drums).

Iron Horse is offering something great for those almost the middle of the week blues, enjoy a night in Northampton.

Showtime is 8:30 p.m. 'Tis a FREE evening.

Blues master Mose knows how to please

By TEDRIC EISEMAN
Collegian Correspondent

Mose Allison
Iron Horse
Saturday, Sept. 8

The piano grins its wide 88-toothed smile. The bassist, standing like a tree, provides sonorous melody. We simply sit satisfied in awe and reverence of the man who does the rest . . .

Behold Mose Allison who radiates cool. He sings a song that we can all understand though we could never express it like he does.

It's simple to see the pleasure he takes in sharing the sounds of Mississippi roots with us, creating the magic in his music.

The man practically dances as he casts his spell. His head shakes, his shoulders shrug and his leg kicks like a hound getting his belly skritched. His hands fly in a fashion indescribable by the naked eye — it just sounds right.

In a tenor howl, he sings out a note and decides he'll hold this one until time ends. He does. Then he spins heaps of spontaneous creation in all directions, all the while smiling at those gathered indoors and passerbys alike at the window.

REVIEW

It all seems to say: "Though life is blue, it is good."

In one of a stream of songs from Willie Dixon, Mose sings: "I live the life of love and I love the life I live."

Versed in blues masters, Mose offers a rendition of Duke Ellington while he croons his own well-forged tunes — "Ever Since the World Ended" and "You Call It Jogging, I Call It Running Around."

He was conversing with the universe Saturday and it was a pleasure to be in on the smooth talk that encompassed the crowd gathered at the Horse.

Photo courtesy AP

This photo shows actress Alyson Kirk, star of the Broadway show, Annie, hugging the recently deceased dog Sandy. Sandy was a stray dog rescued from an animal shelter the day before he was to be put to sleep and went on to star in Annie during its run from 1977-1983.

$J.E.M.S.$
Job Employment Matching System

FALL '90 WORKSHOPS
Wed., Sept. 12 Rm. 911-15
and Thurs., Sept. 13 Rm. 804-08
at 11:30, 2:30, 4:00, and 6:00
in The Campus Center
Non-Work Study Jobs

$$S.E.O. 243 Whitmore 545-1951 $$

charlie's
1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight

New Game Room with 2 Pool Tables

Tonight 10c Buffalo Wings
9:00p.m. — 12:00 a.m.

Drink of the Week: Pineapple Bomb $1.95
Beer of the Month: Foster's Lager $1.75

Food Giveaways
Mon. 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9-12
Tues. 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9-12
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9-12

We accept MC/Visa/Amex

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, THIS GUY IS IN CLASS.

If you're looking for excitement and adventure, you'll find it when you enroll in Army ROTC. It's not your ordinary college elective.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.
Contact Cpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army ROTC
545-2321 or 545-2322

COUPON
$1.00 OFF MEDIUM PIZZA
PIZZA LASAGNA SALADS SUBS
Bruno's
WE DELIVER QUALITY
OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. LIMITED AREA FREE DELIVERY
Call Us at 256-0222 and WE'LL BRING LUNCH to YOUR HOME OR OFFICE!
ONE COUPON PER PIZZA

UMass Music Theatre Guild

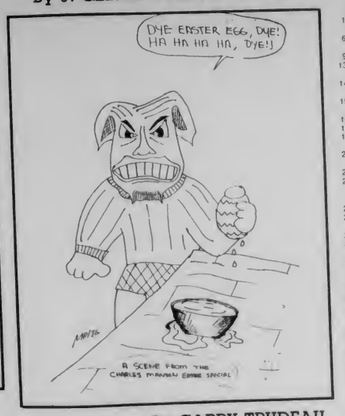
First General Meeting
Wednesday, September 12th
7 p.m. 168c Campus Center

Information available on our upcoming productions of Sweet Charity and School House Rock.

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Laboratory peer pressure.

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

SO WHAT DO YOU DO IN CIVILIAN LIFE, SOLDIER?
I'M A TALENT MANAGER, COLONEL. HOW ABOUT YOURSELF, SIR?
I DON'T KNOW. IT'S BEEN YEARS SINCE ANYONE'S CALLED ME "SIR".
I DON'T KNOW WHY THEY WANT ME. I'M A PRETTY SORRY EXCUSE FOR A SOLDIER. I'M OUT OF SHAPE, I'VE FORGOTTEN ALL THE DRILLS, I CAN'T LOAD AN M-16...
I CAN'T EVEN REMEMBER HOW TO USE THE F-WORD!
EASY. YOU JUST USE IT LIKE A COMMA

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

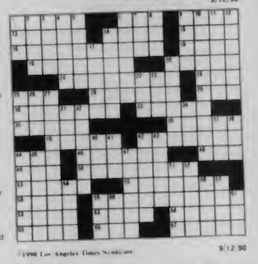
ACROSS
1 Bookkeeping entry
6 Family member for short
9 Make a — try
13 One of the 3 R's
14 San Francisco Bay denizen
15 Czech's neighbor
16 Currant
18 Pianist Gilels
19 Roofing workers
20 Turkish city on the Seyhan
21 — anthem
24 Famous marshal of France
25 Whole amount
28 River of 20 Down
29 Dental deg
30 Screen for sizing ore
33 Founded on
35 Free
36 — Kringle
39 Seraglio
42 Like potatoes and pasta
44 Danish coin
46 Stationery item
48 Novelist Kesey
49 Bogey's better
50 Writer of ridicule
53 Applause
55 Money holders
58 Free-for-all
59 Maureen and Jean
62 Time — half
63 Ponder
64 Household appliance
65 Noticed
66 Sound of displeasure
67 Kind of talk or pitch

DOWN
1 Statesman Hammarskjold
2 God of love
3 Life form study Abbr
4 — old fashioned romance
5 Greek letter
6 Individual
7 Fulcrum piece
8 Layer
9 Hasteners
10 Smothers brothers
11 Adjusted
12 Strips
14 Soap opera, for example
17 Entertainer Midler
20 The Last Frontier
22 Apprehend
23 Santa — Calif
25 P.V. link
26 Coffee container
27 Main vein
31 Farrow of films
32 Most simple
34 Misplay
37 Thar — blows
38 Ant opposite
40 Baseball attbr
41 Welcome item
42 Senor's shawl
43 Vibrato
44 Handel or Haydn works
45 City near Milwaukee
47 Symbolic small college
51 Vehicles with runners
52 Aquarium fish
54 — early date soon
56 Labor
57 Snick's partner
59 Tax campus
60 Commercial boat
61 Next year's grads

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

B	A	E	Z		P	I	E	R	S		A	H	A	B
A	S	T		R	O	D	E	D		N	O	I	S	E
S	T	O	P	P	I	N	G		I	N	S	P	E	E
H	A	N	S	O	M		E	N	O	P	A	P	E	R
			K	E	G		S	H	A	R	I
B	A	D	G	E	R		E	D		E	L	A	N	D	S
A	R	R	A	Y		T	I	P	S		G	E	O
B	O	O	B		S	T	E	A	M		E	M	I	R
A	M	P		S	C	O	T	S		G	R	A	C	E
R	I	A	P		T	O	M		S	I	A	N	D	E	R
		I	D	I	A	S		A	I	L
S	A	N	D	S	P	I	T		P	L	I	E	R	S
O	L	G	A		P	R	O	P		N	U	P
R	U	B	Y		L	E	G	A	L		K	O	L	A
A	M	Y	S		E	N	A	T	E		T	Y	S	E	R

9/12/90



1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 9/12/90

MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Ham and Potato Scallop Chicken Cutlet Sandwich	Veal Cordon Bleu Spaghetti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
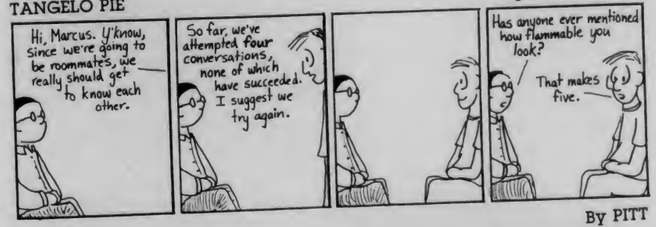
Boursin and Sprout Sandwich Chicken Cutlet Sandwich	Vegetable Shepherds Pie Hi-protein spaghetti

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

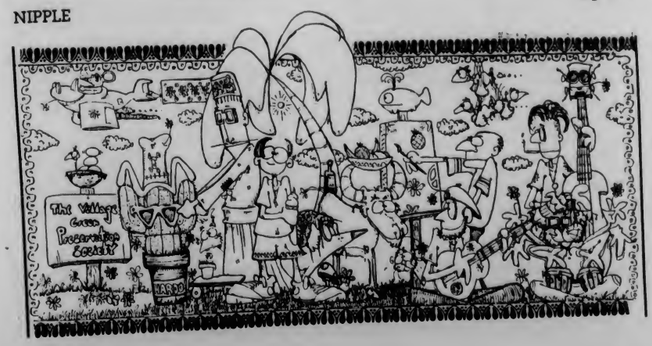
HEY, NO COMIC BOOKS UNTIL YOU FINISH YOUR HOMEWORK.
I DID FINISH.
THAT DIDN'T TAKE VERY LONG. DID YOU DO A GOOD JOB?
I DID A GREAT JOB WHEN YOU'RE AS FAR AHEAD OF THE CLASS AS I AM, IT DOESN'T TAKE MUCH TIME.
WELL WE'LL SEE ABOUT THAT WHEN I GET BACK FROM MY PARENT-TEACHER CONFERENCE WITH MISS WORMWOOD.
YOU'RE GOING TO TALK TO MY TEACHER?
I'M SURE IT WILL BE AN INFORMATIVE MEETING.
GOSH, I FORGOT TO TELL YOU! MISS WORMWOOD SAID I WAS SO GOOD, YOU DIDN'T NEED TO BOTHER COMING REALLY! SHE SAID YOU DON'T HAVE TO GO!

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN



Hi, Marcus. Y'know, since we're going to be roommates, we really should get to know each other.
So far, we've attempted four conversations, none of which have succeeded. I suggest we try again.
Has anyone ever mentioned how flammable you look?
That makes five.

NIPPLE
By PITT



YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Group activities will link you to compatible and helpful people today. Do not expect all promises to be kept however. A distant place may be the setting for a meaningful new relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Promoting teamwork on the career front should win you high marks today. Express your opinions clearly your words will gain wide acceptance and rousing applause. Spend more time with children.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Combine logic with ingenuity to please a friend, advance a group's cause, or negotiate an agreement. Get everything in writing. Private talks and teamwork give you the winning edge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Certain investments look promising, do not put your money down now, however. Group participation is favored. People you meet while traveling brighten your outlook. Put small economies into practice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Learn to ignore people who ask too many personal questions. Practice patience with close ties, trouble may be brewing. Let romance take care of itself. Joy will come if you lighten up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Avoid taking risks today, your expectations could be too high. An impractical financial move could upset a relationship. Get in touch with your relatives, they have important news to share.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Seek experts advice on a legal matter. The offers you receive now have real merit, look into them carefully before making a final decision. A close relationship responds to more pampering.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) People who have been at odds with you can be won over. A stranger or far off acquaintance could breathe new life into a pet project. Pull out all the stops, big profits can be made.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Even if others act stubborn put on a happy face. People with influence are willing to help you do not hesitate to seek their support. Discuss risky ventures with perceptive friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Mutual arrangements could suffer unless you study them closely. Get in touch with experts who possess specialized knowledge. A long distance call proves that your influence is spreading.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You get much closer to the truth when you need your feelings instead of false logic. Avoid saying or doing anything that could get you into legal difficulties. You do not need enemies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A good deed, past or present may help you extricate yourself from a messy situation. A secret adventure takes an unexpected turn. A surprise legacy gives you cause for celebration.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Sarah Demaster
Copy Editor.....Kendra Pratt
Layout Technician.....Nicki Dumas
Photo Technician.....Jeff Holland
Production Supervisor.....Nicole Dumas
Typesetter.....Sue Kent
Production.....Margaret Trudell, Jody Trotman, Bill Connor

Cowboy Junkies cancel schedule until Toronto

Margo Timmins of the Cowboy Junkies came down with a fast case of bronchitis Thursday night and the Junkies were unable to play their sold-out show at the Iron Horse. However, locals Erica Wheeler and Joe Keenan were able to pick up a potentially fatal evening and mesmerize those who chose to stay.

Rapt attention seemed to thread the room as Wheeler stood garbed in black with bright scarves wrapped about her neck, singing oh-so-accurate songs about love, getting your life together and booting what doesn't fit right then.

The Junkies, who were slated to play last night as a rain-date cancelled not only that performance, but the rest of their dates between here and Toronto, including the September 16 date at the Horse.

Jon Smith, publicist for the Iron Horse said it would be "crazy" to try to book them again at this point. "It's a real drag on the audience to have it cancelled once, twice would be too much."

So far, no further information on the Junkies is available at this time. But Wheeler returns to the Iron Horse October 22.

— JULIE LIVINGSTONE

Photo courtesy J. Chatzky

The Cowlicks will be appearing at the Iron Horse along with the Rent Party.

COUPON

$1.50 OFF LARGE PIZZA

PIZZA LASAGNA

Bruno's

SALADS SUBS

WE DELIVER QUALITY

OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. LIMITED AREA FREE DELIVERY

Call Us at 256-0222 and WE'LL BRING LUNCH to YOUR HOME or OFFICE!

ONE COUPON PER PIZZA

Irish-toned play auditions

Auditions for Playboy of the Western World by John Millington Synge as Directed by Edward Golden: September 11 and 12, 7 p.m. - 11 p.m., Room 204, Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts.

Sign-up for an audition time outside 112 FAC, or call 545-3490. Scripts are available on a two-hour, sign-out basis from the department office during regular business hours.

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT PROPOSAL DEADLINE

Deadline for submission of grant proposals for arts-related projects and events

Friday, September 28

Guidelines and application forms are available at the Arts Council office and the Student Activities Office

UMass Arts Council 125 Herter 545-0202

NOTE: Grantwriting workshops will be held Sept. 26 and Oct. 9. Call the Arts Council for further information.

Have you heard about
PUBLIC HEALTH 216?
It's the Peer Health Promotion Program
It's a course
Tues. & Thurs. afternoons, 2:30 to 3:45
register now -
class meets in Room 304
University Health Services
yeah, I took it
it looks great on my resume.
I earned 3 credits by doing instead of just sitting in class
I learned about important health issues like:
AIDS
Cardiovascular Health
Cancer
Stress
Eating Disorders

The TI-68.
The engineering calculator designed to handle tough technical problems.

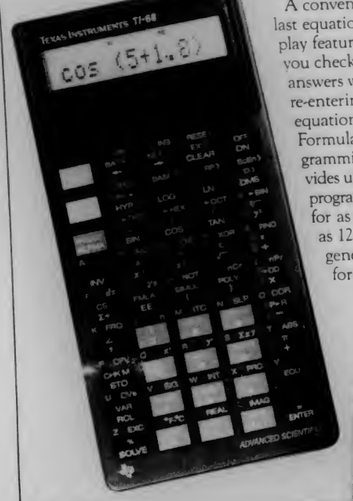
The further you go in engineering, math or other technical courses, the more you need a scientific calculator that speeds you through complex problems. With 254 powerful advanced scientific functions, the TI-68 from Texas Instruments is both a smart choice and an exceptional value.

The TI-68 easily solves up to five simultaneous equations with real or complex coefficients. It evaluates 40 complex number functions. It allows polar and rectangular forms for entries and results.

A convenient last equation replay feature lets you check your answers without re-entering your equations. Formula programming provides up to 440 program steps for as many as 12 user-generated formulas.

You can perform operations in four number bases, one and two-variable statistics, and Boolean logic operations. And, the polynomial root finder calculates real and complex roots of quadratic, cubic, and quartic equations.

Only the TI-68 delivers so much functionality, value and ease in one compact, advanced scientific tool. For more information on what the TI-68 can do, pick up a free copy of the TI-68 technical brochure at your bookstore.



TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

© 1990 TI

Murphy endorses Bellotti

BOSTON (AP) — Democratic candidate for governor Francis Bellotti cheerfully accepted the endorsement Monday of dropped-out rival Evelyn Murphy, but Republicans said it helps him make the candidate for the Dukakis liberals.

Murphy, in a move that surprised many at the Statehouse, dropped out of the three-way race for the Democratic nomination for governor Monday and threw her backing to Bellotti.

"I was very happy to have her endorsement because Evelyn and I have a great a many of the same ideas about what government should be and how it should be helping people," Bellotti said.

Murphy's action came after Bellotti picked up the endorsement earlier Monday of Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn and then a group called 'Progressives for Bellotti' that included advocates for social services, the disabled, minorities and arms control.

"Republicans will be saying Bellotti is Mike Dukakis with tan," said Republican consultant Todd Domke, who is nonaligned in that party's gubernatorial race. Domke said Republicans will use that to exploit Dukakis' extreme unpopularity, even though the outgoing governor isn't on the ballot.

GOP candidate for governor Steven Pierce predicted the Murphy endorsement would help Bellotti in the Sept. 8 primary, but hurt him in the general election.

"The same old Democratic establishment figures are circling the wagons. They are all peas in a pod," Pierce said.

Pierce's primary election rival, William Weld, said he hoped more independents would join the GOP Primary.

"I think this shows the Democratic race is over, and more people will come into the Republican Primary," said Weld, predicting Bellotti would defeat John Silber in the Democratic Primary.

Weld said he expected to pick up support from this influx, not due to any political leanings but because, "I've got a record. The main difference between me and Steve Pierce is he doesn't have any accomplishments in the legislature."

But Pierce said he expected there would be little, if any, effect on the GOP Primary by Murphy's actions.

"Those independents who feel this election is a referendum on change will come into the Republican Party and vote for Steve Pierce," he said.

Dan Payne, a Democratic consultant nonaligned in the governor's race, also predicted little impact on the Republican Primary.

■ Complaints

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

of Friday," he said, adding that as more names and numbers come into his office from Housing Services, which is accepting the money and compiling the lists, the rest of the voice mail requests will be processed.

Quarles attributed many of the complaints to the unfamiliarity with the new, complex system. About 6,700 12-page instruction booklets and an instructional video were distributed to assist resident assistants with training their halls on phone usage was produced by Housing Services.

"When folks don't operate the machine like the way it should be, they think its broken," he said.

The most vocal complaints about the system came before school started in August when members of the University's Tenants Council, composed of students living in the University's Family Housing apartments on campus, protested the switch from New England Telephone to the University's new system. The switch resulted in an increase of their phone bills by nearly $10 a month.

Another problem tenants had was that tenants who had received subsidized telephone rates from New England Telephone were charged the standard $22 rate with no discounts from the University.

The council wants tenants on public assistance to receive bills of $5 a month, while administrators believe that $15 is sufficient.

Quarles said members of the University's administration and the council have agreed to meet regularly at forums where the question of subsidized phone bills and other phone problems will be hashed out.

■ Reaction

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

grams such as the Pell Grants."Bellotti said.

Pierce stated that since student loan default has contributed to the financial funding crisis, he said he felt the federal government should require students to pay back their loans.

"Students must take responsibility for their education and pay back the money they owe on their student loans so that the money will be available for other needy students," he said.

About whether they were in favor of public-supported day care facilities on public campuses, the candidates' responses were at odds.

"I do favor having day care facilities on campus so that young parents can further their education while being confident that their children are located nearby in well-run day care programs," Bellotti said.

Pierce stated that during this time of budget crisis, he could not commit any additional funding to our public colleges and universities "which is not related specifically to the academic agenda."

"The essential mission of our colleges and universities is education, and funding must not be pumped into related programs to the detriment of the academic program," Pierce said.

TOTAL FITNESS

Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

Computerized upper body conditioning

Ultimate low impact aerobic machines

Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1989 1ST PLACE Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"

NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL

Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. South Amherst Karate Health Fitness Center 256-0080

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE, 113 CC TO MON - THURS 9:30-5:30, FRI 9:30-3:30 • DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE 20¢ WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS PROGRAM
Welcome back
First meeting is Tuesday 9-11:90 in CC903 at 6pm
See you there

HILLEL SPONSORED
Ice Cream Study Break tonight
9:30pm - 10:30pm Dukes Rm 310 S.U
Take a break - eat some sweets!

WELCOME BACK!
The first Korean Students Association meeting will be held tonight in the Campus Center Rm 174 at 7:30pm

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CAMPUS DESIGN AND COPY is hiring! Applications available in 401 SUB. Deadline 4:45pm Mon 9/17. Graphic art experience helpful 545-2271

EMTS & FIRST RESPONDERS
Fire & First Aid Unit is recruiting. Paid details. Meeting Sept. 18 7pm N409 Morrill Call 545-5115 S-Th 7-8pm or stop by N416

NUCLEAR WINDS!
Hi Wind Sailboard Club forming now. Call 253-7366 Shred!

SPECTRUM, the Arts and Literature magazine is having a few members meeting tonight in 162 Campus Center at 7:30pm!

STUDENT VALLEY PRODUCTIONS, a student run theatre group, announces its first zany meeting tonite, 5:30 FAC 08 Be there!

VISA OR MATERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. M-1207

AUDIO

TV 20" COLOR, features $225 586-5822

AUTO FOR SALE

79 DATSUN WAGON 107K AM/FM 4 speed Alfred (W)545-4837 (H)549-5423

1980 NISSAN 200SX
Runs good $1000 or B/O
Tel 549-4675

1983 HONDA ACCORD LX Hatchback 4 cylinder auto/ac pwr steering Car alarm and more $3,300.00 256-8022

1984 DODGE ARIES, 4-dr, low miles, 1 owner $2250 00 253-2098

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great. Excellent condition 50 MPG $4500 586-7163

DODGE VAN RV style 1977 ex cond. $995 549-2656

FOR SALE: 1988 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, highway metallic gray, excellent shape. best offer call 413-253-9397

MERCEDES 300D 1975
$3000/BO rebuilt engine
A/C FMicassette
545-2569/256-4926 Diane

SEIZED CARS, trucks, boats, 4 wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext C-1675

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions. Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4057

EDITING/TUTORING

RETIRED TEACHER WITH graduate degree will edit papers for proper grammar, spelling, clarity, good writing and documentary form - any subject. Fast professional Wordstar wordprocessing also available if you are not a typist or are rushing to meet a deadline. Especially interested in working with international students (trained as English speech specialist), but enjoy helping all students, any level. Usually available on short notice. Reasonable rates. D. Reed, 253-3364 (The ad will appear only briefly - clip for future reference.)

FOR RENT

4 BEDROOMS in a beautiful house in Amherst. Two bathrooms, fireplace in the living room, pool and tennis court $325.00 per room, on bus route, call Bruce at 256-1215

AMITY PLACE - looking for a male roommate to share room, fully furnished. For more info call Leanne, Donna, or John at 549-5316

ROOMS FOR RENT 3 doubles $1600 semester 389 N. Pleasant St. Males only 256-8028

SINGLE BEDROOM in house on N. Pleasant St. 5 min walk to UMass. $205 mo. Call now - 549-0961 ask for Marilyn

STILL LOOKING for a place to live? Beautiful house less than 2 miles from UMass. $250 plus utilities 549-6951

FOR SALE

COMPUTER FOR SALE: 1982 Northstar Advantage 64K. Comes with word processor, general ledger program and database program. $450 or best offer. Call 542-5702

GUITARS FOR SALE 2 B.C. Rich 1 w/Kahler $775 1 w/o $225 Ovation Classical Acoustic/Electric $275
Call John 1-786-8618 Leave Message

IBMXT 640K coprocessor 20MBHD TAU compatible $700 549-2656

LOTUS 123 Ver 3.0 unopened $100 549-2656

PRINTER FOR SALE: 1982 Epson MX 100 $120 or best offer Call 542-5702

RED DORM FRIDGE excel cond. a steal at $50 Valerie 549-8418

REFRIGERATOR FOR SALE four foot high. Like new! Check it out! 1-596-8059 Brian

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD HOMES available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent foreclosures Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext H-2009 for repo list your area.

SLEEP WITH US
Full size Futon and Frame $150
We'll beat anyone by 5%
Metawampe Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON !

WATER-BED KING SIZE 12 drawer pedestal will set up $300.00 253-2098

FOUND

GOLD BRACELET found near campus center. Please call 549-8028 to claim it.

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $3000 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

CHILDCARE NEEDED FOR 3 children (ages 4,6,11) and 2 dogs. A few late afternoons per week, some evenings. Must provide own transportation to our home in Leverett. 545-4228 or 548-9120

CHRISTMAS, Spring break, summer travel FREE Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. F-1426

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 228 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 mn walk from UMass) No phone call please

EARN $300 TO $500 per week reading books at home. Call 615-473-7440 Ext. B-281

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK
Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard
Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required Mornings 7:45am. Good pay 7days/week. 253-7009 Evenings

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS
Sept 17 - Oct 29, Mon 7-9pm $50 00
Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE
Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL
Language Pacifica 549-5065

 LEGAL HELP **

QUESTIONS ABOUT YOUR lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services, 922 Campus Center 545-1995.

LOST

GLASSES LOST missing one nosepiece call 6-1937

MOTORCYCLES

1990 KAWASAKI EX500 Blk & Rd, less than 2K miles, mint condition $2950 Call 256-4609 evenings

HONDA NIGHTHAWK 1983 550cc 4cyl fast new tires, radar detector, extras, 9 000 miles mint condition, 1,100 or best offer 549-8083 Jim

MUSICAL

ELEC. GUITAR & AMP. 3 single coil strat copy, Silvertone 35 watt Peavy Bwarg and both for $200 call Josh 6-8456

PERSONALS

ONE DAY - Sorry Sweetie
Happy one year & one day
HOYOO
I love you
Iceman

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
small cheese $1 50
large cheese $5 99
2 Additional Toppings only $1 more
Must mention this ad!
549-6073 549-6098

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 OR 2 GIRLS wanted for condo behind Baybanks Great location! Call 549-9376

2 SINGLES AVAILABLE in house on Lincoln Ave for spring semester across from campus Call 549-5258

AMHERST CENTER female to share room $170/mo. 549-9377

SUNDERLAND. Female to share 2 bdrm apt. 250 + Close to bus line 665-1135

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING!
Basic course start 9/10 - $195
Adv course starts 9/17 - $170
Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 - $380
For further information call 549-8401

TRAVEL FREE!!!
Sun Splash Tours offers the most exciting and affordable Spring Break Packages to Jamaica and Cancun!! Earn free trip and extra $$$ Call 1-800-426-7710

TYPING

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING. $1 50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications 256-6373

WANTED

KEGULATOR OR COLD TAP 19 Phillips 549-8198

NEEDED: 1 or 2 tickets to any MSG GD show No scalpers! Stephanie 6-3088

WHO SAID GARBAGE WASN'T FUN?

TAKE A CLASS IN RECYCLING EDUCATION
3 credits - guest speakers, lectures, field trips and hands-on experience. Call Pei-Jen 549-5291 or Sherill 5-1153 for info

SPORTS

Reds face Catamounts

Women host Vermont on the Hill today

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

This is another opponent the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team would like to forget.

Today the Reds will host the Vermont Catamounts at 3:30 p.m. on Upper Boyden.

Last year's game ended in a 1-0 loss, not a match head coach Jim Rudy would like to duplicate.

"They're difficult to deal with," he said in reference to John Carter's squad. "They have a strange way of coming out of the back."

The Catamounts have seven of their starters returning, 11 letter winners in all. They completed their season as ECAC Division I Champs, with a record of 11-6-1.

The match against UMass was first in a string of wins for the Catamounts. UMass ended the game with 15 shots on goal, UVM had only 6.

However, Vermont finished the season with 233 shots on goal, compared to their opponents' 175. Their number of corner kicks (71) exceeded their opponents' by 10.

They started their regular season off on a positive note by tying Connecticut at one and shutting out Boston College 3-0.

Threats upfront include sophomore Debbie Cook and junior Rachel Bondy, a former teammate of April Kater's.

Bondy, named third-team All-American last year, has led the team in scoring the past two seasons, with 18 goals and three assists in her career.

Goalkeeper Joey Fritz, also a All-New England softball player, recorded her first shutout in last season's game against UMass, ending the game with 15 saves.

As a sophomore she held a goals-against average of 0.46 in 390 minutes of play. Fritz ended the season with 32 saves in five games played. She currently does not have a backup.

Freshman Shelly Addison was redshirted last year, but may see midfield action. She has attended Regional camp and is a veteran of UMass soccer camps, according to Rudy.

Other frosh to watch include forwards Sonja Johnson and Liz Grote and midfielder Kristen Murphy.

"They're a solid-looking freshman squad," Rudy said. "They're a well-recruited group."

Senior co-captains Carolyn McCann and Trudy Potter will marshall the backfield, with junior Lynette Strake and sophomore Kelly Martin. Martin and Potter will be vying for starting sweeper positions.

"They've got a veteran defense," Rudy said. "We had a hard time getting in there last year."

Connecticut head coach Len Tsantiris described Vermont as very physical, even brutal. He said they were very good at restarts and also said they had an unusual way of working out of the back.

Juniors Nicole Colaneri and Kim Winterton are probable midfield stalwarts. Sophomore Cheryl Reed, who notched four goals as a freshman, will see time at both forward and midfield. Freshman Chrissy Riley, Martin and Addison will mobilize the midfield.

"We're healthy and looking good," Rudy said of his squad. "We're emotionally strong enough to pull it off.

"If they're as well-prepared tactically as last year, we'll be in for a good game."

Collegian file photo

Jim Rudy's Reds host the Catamounts of Vermont at their home opener today at 3:30 p.m. on Upper Boyden field.

September			October
	UMASS CLASSIC	4	at	Dartmouth
15	UMASS VS. CAL. BERKELEY	6		New Hampshire at Pepperill
	William & Mary vs. Boston College	13		HARTFORD
16	UMASS VS. WILLIAM & MARY	14	at	Brown
	Cal. Berkeley vs. Boston College	16		HARVARD
22	WISCONSIN	18		RHODE ISLAND
23	GEORGE MASON	21	at	Connecticut
29	at Virginia	27		Florida Int. at Central Florida
30	St. Mary's (Cal.) at Virginia	28	at	Central Florida

Men's soccer freshman named A-10 Rookie of Week

Photo by Toni Sandys

Minuteman Brett Anthony (above) was nominated for A-10 Player-of-the-Week, and teammate Justin Edelman was named A-10 Rookie-of-the-Week.

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts men's soccer has its first award winner of the year.

Freshman Matthew Edgerly was named Rookie-of-the-Week by the Atlantic 10 Conference last night. Edgerly scored the game-winning goal in UMass' 2-0 win over St. Bonaventure this past Friday.

"Right now, he's hard to keep off the field," said coach Jeff Gettler.

Senior tri-captain Peter McEvoy was nominated, but did not receive, Player-of-the-Week honors. McEvoy just this year made the transition from the midfield to the backfield. The Minutemen had graduated their entire defense, and Gettler said he needed an experienced player at sweeper.

McEvoy played well and consistently during UMass' first two games, scoring a goal and picking up every loose ball that came his way. His play was a major reason that St. Bonaventure never mounted much of an attack. He also held his own against Penn State's quick, talented offense.

"We only let up one goal in two games, and Peter's play had a lot to do with that," said Gettler. "He's been the anchor, he's organized a young defense the past two games. That was really key."

The play of goalkeepers Peter Armenti and Jon Gruber has been a bright spot as well. But what about competition between the two? The result of Umass' depth at goal has resulted in "good, healthy competition," according to Gettler.

"They've been outstanding in practice. They go for balls that other keepers we've had couldn't or wouldn't go for, digging shots out of the corners." Gettler added that he wouldn't penalize mistakes in games by changing starters. "Neither of them are going to lose the position. They're only going to be able to win the position."

However, the offensive part of the show has sputtered a bit. While the Minutemen mounted enough serious scoring threats to wipe out both St. Bonaventure and Penn State, they have but two goals to show for their best play.

Their shots hit the post, or the crossbar, or sailed wide, or were foiled by spectacular goalkeeper play. Few sports agonies equal the exasperation felt when a great goal chance turns into a goalie's good luck and your own personal nightmare.

"One of the hardest things to do at the beginning of the season is create on offense," said Gettler after the Penn State overtime loss.

Another problem for UMass has been stringing together consistent play for an entire game. While the Minutemen were dominant in stretches Friday afternoon against the overmatched Bonnies, and held their own against highly-regarded Penn State, their level of play tailed off in the second halves of both games.

"We're not in midseason form," said coach Gettler. "We had a hard preseason -- these guys have had only two days off since mid-August -- and we were stale, mentally and physically."

Gettler was quite optimistic about his team's current outlook.

"We held our own this weekend against two teams that had games under their belt," he said. "St. Bonaventure was playing their sixth game. Penn State was playing their fourth. And we only let up one goal. If we put in the effort, we could have a great team."

Recruit verbally commits

Men's hoop may see student next season

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Scott Drapeau, a six-foot-nine, 235-pound senior at Merrimack Valley High School in Penacook, N.H., has verbally committed to attend the University of Massachusetts on a basketball scholarship next fall.

Though the official signing date for recruits making an early decision is in early November, Drapeau announced at a recent press conference at his high school that he will play for UMass coach John Calipari.

Drapeau was recruited by Connecticut, Arizona State, Florida State and Duquesne, as well as UMass, and said he announced his decision early to relieve the pressure during his senior year.

According to Kevin O'Brien, his coach at Merrimack Valley, Drapeau is an aggressive rebounder with a good shooting touch. Last season, in his junior year, Drapeau averaged 35 points and 18 rebounds per game for Merrimack Valley, which won its second consecutive New Hampshire state title. He is an 89 percent free throw shooter.

Sports Notice/Calendar

FIELD HOCKEY: The women's field hockey team will be holding open tryouts for all who would want to play on Pam Hixon's nationally-ranked team. If interested, tryouts will be held from 3-6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday on Totman Field. Please contact Pam Hixon, Lynn Carlson or Andrea Savage at 545-1942.

SKI TEAM: The varsity ski team is having an introductory meeting at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 12 in Holdsworth Hall's second floor conference room. Those with a racing backround are encouraged to attend.

SOFTBALL: The Atlantic 10 Co-Champion softball team will have open tryouts from 7:45-9:30 p.m. today through Tuesday, Sept. 18 at Totman Field. Those interested please call assistant coach Gina LaMandre at 545-0038.

WEATHER	EDITORIAL	SPORTS
Today partly to mostly sunny skies, hazy and warm, highs ranging from 80-85.	Pam McCarthy examines the mudslinging in Massachusetts politics. Page 5.	Tamir Lipton previews the UMass field hockey team as they prepare for BC. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 6

Students pull old scam in Student Union

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Magazine sellers — perhaps legitimate or not — have returned to the University this year and to apparently profitable fishing grounds, the concourse in the Campus Center and the residence halls.

Philip Cavanaugh, associate director for public safety, said yesterday that the police have received several complaints of magazine sellers in the residence halls. He said some version of "high pressure" sellers appear on campus every year.

"To sell in the residence halls you need to have a permit, which these people don't have," he said. "Some cases these people are legit but in many cases in the past they have not. Students should just remember, "Buyer Beware."

Housing Director Joseph Zannini did not return phone calls from the Collegian.

Perhaps if freshman Laurie Murch was not rooming with a senior she would be $46 poorer today.

Murch was approached one night this week in her Crabtree Residence Hall room by a man selling magazines as part of a contest to win points for a trip to Europe. She bought a subscription to Rolling Stone.

"I just figured that the University monitored these things," she said. "Especially at night with security."

Her roommate, Patty Terenzio, however, had been fooled once before by magazine sellers. Last fall, she bought a magazine from a man on the street in downtown Amherst. She never received any issues.

Terenzio asked the man, who was representing the TICOA CORP of San Antonio, Texas, if he was authorized to sell in the residence halls. Housing Services requires vendors to have a permit.

"He did not like it that I was asking questions," she said. "He left the dorm as soon as he had Laurie's money."

Terenzio called the Better Business Bureau and the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce to validate TICOA's credentials. She said both agencies called the company legitimate but she was unimpressed. Murch called her bank the next day and placed stop payment on the check.

"My mother has yelled at me, my roommate has yelled at me. I've learned my lesson," Murch said.

The Collegian was unable to reached the TICOA CORP for comment.

Amy Bailey, a junior English major from Boston, is a self-described street smart woman. But she was taken by a suave, fast-talking magazine seller also.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

TICOA
CORP
11230 WEST AVE., SUITE 1105
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS 78213
512/524-3030
RECEIPT NO. BK 795566
FEDERAL LAW ONLY APPLIES, IF THIS SALE IS $25.00 OR MORE, YOU THE BUYER, MAY CANCEL THIS TRANSACTION. POSTMARKED AT ANY TIME PRIOR TO MIDNIGHT OF THIRD BUSINESS DAY AFTER THE DATE OF THIS TRANSACTION. SEE THE ATTACHED NOTICE OF CANCELLATION FORM FOR AN EXPLANATION OF THIS RIGHT." IF SALE EXCEEDS ABOVE AMOUNT.
PROCESS & HANDLING
$7.00
TOTAL COST OF ORDER
THIS ORDER IS PAID IN FULL.
CUSTOMER COPY

Collegian file photo

The above is a receipt of a subscription to Rolling Stone magazine through the TICOA CORP. Recently, questions have been raised about the illegal and unlicensed solicitation of magazines toward students.

Student's family trapped in Liberia

UMass senior awaits word after assasination of president

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff
and The Associated Press

A University of Massachusetts senior is waiting anxiously to hear from his family trapped in Liberia, a country that was apart after the assassination of its President, Samuel Doe, earlier this week.

Nhoueh Landford, an Agricultural Economics major, said there has been no communication into Liberia since March. He said his parents are still living in the country, but added one of his brothers has escaped and a sister has become a refugee.

"My family is in danger, many people in Liberia are in danger, and the United States government, Liberia's closest ally has done nothing to help," Landford said.

Landford said many in Liberia think the United States is only willing to get involved with a country in difficulty when they have an economic interest in that country.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

Nhoueh Landford

"The U.S. came to Liberia only for supplies, we helped the U.S. win World War II, we helped them out of the recession and now when we need them, they are not around," he said.

According to Landford, Liberia was founded in 1847 by former slaves from the U.S. in West Africa. He said the first president of the nation was a freed slave from Norfolk, Virginia.

He said Liberia was previously been the most peaceful West African nation on the continent before the recent uprising. He added Liberia uses U.S. currency and their flag closely resembles the U.S. flag.

In December of last year, two groups of rebels, led by Charles Taylor, a former Plymouth House of Correction inmate, crossed the border of Liberia. The rebel group, and another lead by Prince Johnson eventually overtook control of the nation's government.

Troops of the dead President Doe bombarded rebels in Monrovia with shells yesterday in a desperate stand from the roof of the fortified presidential mansion.

An interim government named Aug. 30 in Gambia by a unity conference said it was sending envoys to Monrovia in preparation for taking over the country.

But rival rebel forces control various sectors of the country, and Taylor's mainstream rebel National Patriotic Front pledged Monday to keep fighting until a 3000-strong West African task force sent to end the war withdraws from the capital.

Doe died after being wounded in fighting with a breakaway rebel faction that captured him Sunday. The U.S. State Department confirmed Doe was dead.

"We have been informed by various sources, including representatives of rebel forces that President Doe died...[from wounds] that he suffered in the shootout over the weekend," a State Department spokesman said.

The British Broadcasting Corp. quoted witnesses who visited a rebel camp near Monrovia as saying Doe's mutilated body was on display there.

They did not say how he died but they watched rebel leader Prince Johnson interrogate Doe about the disap-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Union workers could face layoffs

BOSTON (AP) — Facing tight budgets for higher education, the Board of Regents gave university and college presidents more flexibility yesterday to lay off union workers.

The board also heard Chancellor Randolph Bromery introduce a plan to lump schools into regions to pool their resources.

"I think we've reached a point where we have to do things in a different way," Bromery said.

The state's higher education system has already felt the pinch of the state's budget problems. Bromery said four percent cuts ordered by Gov. Dukakis earlier this month will be implemented in the second semester, along with another four percent cut approved in the budget by the Legislature.

Bromery predicted that some course offerings will be eliminated, and the entire system is bracing for higher energy costs this winter due to the Middle East crisis.

Bromery, who said he expects further cuts, also said the decline in funding would have an impact on faculty.

"Our misfortune is the other state's fortune in that they can recruit our faculty and they're beginning to do that," he said.

"We're beginning to see the faculty moving on."

To cope with these financial strains, the board unanimously declared a state of fiscal exigency. This gives administrators more authority to issue layoff notices to union workers to deal with further cuts in state spending.

Bromery also touted his regionalization plan as a way to cut costs. But he said it was too costly to determine how much savings the reorganization would yield.

"We should pursue this regional concept because it's the right thing to do educationally," he said.

Under the plan, which will be reshaped in the coming months, five regions would be created. Each region would include a university, one or more state colleges pearance of millions of dollars of state funds during his 10-year rule.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

■ Liberia

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Shells exploded and gunfire crackled in the ravaged capital today as Johnson's fighters searched the city for Doe loyalists.

Doe's elitist presidential guard, which includes the feared Israeli-trained Special Anti-Terrorist Unit, turned heavy artillery on the roof of the multistory executive mansion on the rebels

West African soldiers sent to end the eight months of fighting were ordered to intervene.

The chairman of the Economic Community of West African States said he told the force to protect loyalists and family members of Doe who remained in the Cliffton Presidential Residence.

"I think it is now urgent to try and do something about protecting these 30 or so Doe supporters from factional or tribal revenge," the chairman, Gambian president Sir Dawda Jawara, said in Harare, Zimbabwe.

Johnson said Monday he would lead Liberia until the transitional government is set up.

But representatives of the government can expect a hostile reception from Taylor, whose 10,000-strong rebel army is the biggest in the country.

He has called the interim government a "muppet' administration of the West African economic group.

A statement issued today in Ranjul, Gambia, by the government's president, Amos Sawyer, said the delegation's first priority would be to distribute relief supplies and food in the capital, where people are dying of starvation.

Sources close to Sawyer said he was urged to send envoys by Johnson and Brig. Gen. Dacid Nimley, whom Doe loyalists named acting president shortly after his capture.

Liberia has been without effective government for months, and Monrovia has been torn by fighting involving the two rebel armies and Doe loyalists since mid-July.

Taylor said Monday his movement would "intensify its efforts to bring this crisis to an end by moving into Monrovia at any expense."

He spoke in a broadcast over the state radio, which is behind his lines.

He has made similar retreats before, but his army of mainly untrained peasant youths, who have overrun most of Liberia, has been bogged down on Monrovia's outskirts for nearly three months.

Some of the heaviest fighting has occurred since the West African task force sailed in Aug. 14 to try to enforce a cease-fire.

Taylor started the war when he invaded from Ivory coast on Dec. 24. Johnson, who was one of Taylor's top commanders, quarreled with him in arch and formed a splinter group.

The three warring actions have slaughtered more than 5,000 of those countries 1.3 million people, often because of their tribal affiliations. Half a million Liberians have fled to neighboring states or are displaced within their country.

Doe was a Krahn, one of 14 small tribes in Liberia. Johnson is the son of a Gin, and Taylor is of mixed America-Liberian and native ancestry.

About 100 U.S. Marines are based on ships off Monrovia and assigned to guard to U.S. Embassy and residential compound. they have evacuated hundreds of foreigners from the city but have orders not to intervene in the war.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003.
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Mark Truskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts

For Your Information

For Your Information this is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and subitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12

Senate Meeting—sponsored by Senate Operations, CC163C, 7pm-1am, Free.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13

Safam concert—sponsored by Hillel, Student Union Ballroom, 7:30pm-9:30pm, Free/Hillel members, $5/students, $7/general public.

Film—sponsored by LBGA, CC03, 7pm-9pm, Free.

Presentation on entrepreneurship—spnsored by Beta Alpha Psi, CC105-09, 7pm-9pm, Free.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 14

Welcome back dance—sponsored by Asian American Student Association, Bluewall, 9pm-1am, $5/person.

Coffee Social—sponsored by LBGA, CC903, 3pm-6p, Free.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15

Party/Dance—sponsored by LBGA, CC1009, 9pm-1am, $3/person.

Community Town Meeting and Rally— from 1-3pm on the Unitarian Society lawn at 220 Main St., Northampton, there will be a Community Town Meeting and Rally for Peace in the Middle East.

There will be invited speakers and an open mike for members of the community wishing to participate.

The event is free and open to all, and is sponsored by a coalition of interested groups and individuals.

Petitions and literature on display. Please come.

For information please call Michael Holroyde at 586-9045.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 17

Workshops to deal with math anxiety— A series of math anxiety reduction workshops will be held Sept. 17 and 24, and on Oct. 1, 1990, in room 1634 of the Lederle Graduate Research Tower. Sessions conducted by math professor Dr. Doris Stockton, and psychologist Dr. Don Banks will focus on overcoming negative feelings toward math and on developing positive approaches to learning math.

The workshops will feature the film, "Math Anxiety: We Beat It, So Can You."

The workshops series is sponsored by the math department and the Center for Counseling and Academic Development.

The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Presents:

PAWSS

The Middle East Crises

A Faculty Panel

Wednesday, September 12th

Eqbal Ahmad

Hampshire College

Mohammed Jiyad

Mount Holyoke College

Michael Klare

Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies

Converse Hall, 8:00 p.m.
Amherst College

These events are free and open to the public. For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

LOCAL

Board of Health trashing right of privacy in Amherst

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

An Amherst Board of Health regulation requiring residents of buildings with four or less units put their trash in clear plastic bags has ignited complaints of invasion of privacy.

The mandatory recycling policy, which went into effect September 1, requires residents to put their trash in clear plastic bags so haulers can determine if recyclable materials are being mixed with non-recyclable materials.

"I understand why people are concerned. It's much more regulation than necessary," said Myrna Hewitt, the solid waste recycling expert for the League of Women Voters in Massachusetts.

"I suspect people throw away things that they don't want pawed through, like financial records or other personal items. It seems to be overkill," Hewitt said.

According to Melinda McCall, Amherst's solid waste coordinator, the use of plastic bags is a means of enforcing the new policy.

"The policy is quite simple. If you use plastic bags, they need to be clear ones. You can still use paper or biodegradable bags or put trash directly into barrels," stated McCall.

Trash haulers are currently responsible for inspecting trash through the clear plastic bags. If any recyclable material is found in a load brought to the town landfill, the hauler will be fined $50 per load by the town's Department of Public Works.

Haulers may either notify their customers of any violations or contact the Department of Public Works and let them inform the resident. Residents whose trash contains recyclables will first receive a warning. Repeat offenders will be fined $50 per violation.

Hewitt claimed that privacy is the issue, not enforcing the recycling policy. "I'm concerned for people's privacy. They [town officials] say that you can put personal items inside something, but the whole idea is to make it seen. Why bother with the clear bag policy at all?," she argued.

Another one of Hewitt's concerns is the lack of uniformity in the new policy and the failure of town officials to clarify exactly what the policy entails.

"I never received a letter explaining the policy and many other residents have complained that they aren't sure what the policy is either," said Hewitt.

"It's clear that you can't put garbage out in green plastic bags, but whether or not you can put out trash in paper sacs has not been made clear," said Hewitt. "You can't blame residents or impose a fine if they don't know what the right thing is," she added.

Hewitt suggests involvement of university students as an alternative to stricter recycling policies.

"Our recycling goal in Amherst is 25 percent, with a future goal of 40 percent. It's impossible to achieve a recycling percentage of 40 percent without the participation of the university students," Hewitt said.

"The problem is that the policy is inconsistent," Hewitt explained. "The general residents are doing well with recycling. We have to get the university population involved to reach 40 percent goal, not set unrealistic expectations for town residents."

Collegian photo by Susan Cornellussen

A burnt bridge in Leverett

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Program releases schedule

Program starts fifth year; exciting programs, services available

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

The Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, located in the lobby of John Adams in Southwest, is starting off its fifth year at the University of Massachusetts with an exciting lineup of programs and services available for fall.

The Program, which was one of the first of its kind, continues to serve as a model to other colleges across the country. Felice Yeskel, the coordinator of the Program, said that the formation of such offices are due to the 'heightening awareness of the need for a multicultural campus environment."

The goal of the Program is two-fold — first, to support the needs of gay, lesbian and bisexual people on campus, and second, to promote awareness of issues surrounding homophobia and heterosexism for the campus.

The Program provides information and referral services with one of the largest data bases of gay, lesbian and bisexual resources in Massachusetts. Articles, books, journals, and listings of gay organizations and service providers are available in the Program's lending library in the hundreds. A monthly newsletter/events calander is sponsored by the Program, as well as a weekly film series which is co-sponsored with the Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance.

The Program works with other offices, such as Hillel, Disabled Student Services, and the Office of Third World Affairs, to promote diversity. It also networks with other groups, such as the Faculty/Staff Support Group, the Gay and Lesbian Alumni Association, the LBGA, and the Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Men's Counseling Collective. Work with faculty and student groups from the Five Colleges has had positive results, as exemplified by the 1989 Five College Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Student Leader Conference.

Educational and cultural programs make up a large part of the Program's mission. A Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Speakers' Bureau, which trains members to speak in front of audiences about gay life, is run by the Program. (Those who would like to become part of the Speakers' Bureau are invited to attend the first training session on Monday, September 17, from 7 to 10 p.m. in Campus Center room 904, and to call the Program Office for more information at 545-4824.)

Training sessions on topics and issues pertinent to the gay community have been held by the Program for various groups, including the LBGA, the Collegian, Health Services, and Legal Services.

This year the Program will be sponsoring a year-long Lesbian and Gay Cultural Festival which will kick off on Thursday, November 1, with BGLADs — Bisexual, Gay and Lesbian Awareness Days — which will include speakers, films, readings, and a coffeehouse.

Some of the featured guests for the festival are: Holly Near, singer/songwriter/activist, November 2, Fine Arts Center; Melanie Kaye-Kantrowitz, writer, will read from her latest book,My Jewish Face and Other Stories, Nov. 3, Campus Center room 163; Tongues Untied, area premiere of just released film about Black gay men in November.

The spring semester will bring The Flirtations, a gay men's acapella group from New York City. Chris Sinque, a lesbian dramatist, and Tom Wilson-Weinberg and Lisa Joy Bernstein.

The Program offers opportunities for volunteers as well as credit internships for work with various programs. To apply contact Felice at 545-4824.

UM trying to stop 911 misuse

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Department of Public Safety is asking for "public assistance" in trying to put an end to the misuse of its 911 emergency line.

The emergency line, installed as part of a new UMass phone system, has been used extensively as a regular business line, according to Mary Dumas, Assistant Director of the Department of Public Safety.

"What we are getting is a lot of people calling the emergency line instead of looking up a telephone number in the information," said Dumas.

People have been calling the 911 number to find out if the parking lot is opened, and some have even called to order pizza, she said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Greek area upset with representation

By KEITH NICHOLSON
Collegian Correspondent

The Greek Area at the University of Massachusetts has been underrepresented in the Student Government Association, according to the Ad Hoc Greek Area Government Committee.

The committee, formed by Panhel Council President Karen Renaud in an attempt to better represent the Greek Area in the SGA, consists of representatives of the Inter fraternity, Pan-Hellenic, and Panhellenic Councils and members of the two local Greek chapters.

The committee said because there was no formal Greek Area Government and the issues Greeks were not represented adequately in. Renaud said because there is no formal government Greeks are lost in the red tape.

According to Renaud, money and representation are being lost because the SGA funds and is only officially represented by the IFC and Panhel and the Pan-Hellenic Council and Local chapters are not represented.

Renaud said last year's vote on the Student Activities Trust Fund Planning Committee's budget recommendation as example of underrepresentation because the Greek Area never officially voted on it.

Phi Mu Delta brother Dave Shafkowitz said the University's policy of outlawing kegs is an example of Greek under- representation because input from the Greek Area was not represented.

The Proposed Greek Area Government will be equal in representation with other area governments with the IFC, Panhel, Pan-Hel and Local chapters falling under its authority.

The power GAG will hold has not been determined yet. Also the form of government of GAG was debated. IFC Representative Lambda Chi Alpha Brother Tim Collins proposal of an elected 15 person committee with a chairman elected by that committee was proposed.

Renaud believed the proposed Greek Area Government will help unify the Greek Area and therefore represent Greeks better.

" The University does not realize what a revolutionary thing we are doing, " remarked Renaud.

Similar reactions were felt throughout the Committee. SAO adviser Judy Gagnon said "the University only hears about the Greek Areas problems and does not know about

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Regents

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

and several community months.

"Each region will define how it will collaborate and how it will cooperate," Bromery said, adding that the schools within each region will share resources and consolidate administrative duties.

"I think we can become more effective, more efficient and better serve the students," he said.

Bromery said the plan not only responds to the state's budget problems, but also a dismal economic outlook and the prospect of a tax rollback petition passing in the November election.

AP photo

JOGGER TRIAL SENTENCING — Sharon Salaam, mother of convicted teen-ager Yusef Salaam, speaks outside court as attorney William Kunstler listened yesterday after a judge sentenced the three juveniles convicted in the Central Park jogger attack.

The UMass Music Theatre Guild

is now accepting applications for:

Director Vocal Coach
Assistant Director Choreographer
Music Director

for our Fall, 1990 production of

Sweet Charity

to be performed November 29 through December 1 in Bowker Auditorium
Contact Kara Jenkins in the Guild Office 423 Student Union or call 253-3863. All applications due by September 17, 1990

HERE'S WHY
THE SMART MONEY AT UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
IS GOING WITH TIAA-CREF
AS IF THE FUTURE DEPENDED ON IT.

Because it does. Smart investors know that your future depends on how well your retirement system performs. TIAA-CREF has been the premier retirement system for people in education and research for over 70 years. We have enabled over 200,000 people like you to enjoy a comfortable retirement. And over 1,000,000 more are now planning for the future with TIAA-CREF.

SMART MONEY LOOKS FOR SECURITY, GROWTH AND DIVERSITY FOR RETIREMENT SAVINGS.

Security—so the resources are there when it is time to retire. Growth—so you'll have enough income for the kind of retirement you want. And diversity—to help protect you against market volatility and to let you benefit from several types of investments.

THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT YOU GET WITH TIAA-CREF.

TIAA offers you the safety of a traditional annuity that guarantees your principal plus a specified rate of interest, and provides for additional growth through dividends. CREF's variable annuity offers opportunities for growth through four different investment accounts, each managed with the long-term perspective essential to sound retirement planning:

The CREF Stock Account
The CREF Money Market Account
The CREF Bond Market Account*
The CREF Social Choice Account*

CALL 1-800-842-2776
TO FIND OUT MORE

Our experienced retirement counselors will be happy to answer your questions and tell you more about retirement annuities from TIAA-CREF.

Experience. Performance. Strength.
Your future is protected by the largest private retirement system in the world. We have done so well, for so many, for so long, that we currently manage some $85 billion in assets.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.℠

* The CREF Bond Market and Social Choice Accounts may not be available under all institutional retirement plans, but are available for all Supplemental Retirement Annuity plans.

For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext 5509 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

COLLEGIAN
Sports Writer's
Workshop
Sean Horgan, Red Sox
reporter for the
Hartford Courant
Thursday
September, 13 4 p.m.

Meet in the newsroom

Counts toward staff status

Kennedy
screen graphics
QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR
AT REASONABLE PRICES
T-SHIRTS SWEATSHIRTS CAPS JACKETS
APRONS GOLF SHIRTS TEAM SHIRTS
COMPUTER GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413) 584-2124 1-800-287-2124

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT PROPOSAL DEADLINE

Deadline for submission of grant proposals for arts-related projects and events

Friday, September 28

Guidelines and application forms are available at the Arts Council office and the Student Activities Office

UMass Arts Council 125 Herter
545-0202

NOTE: Grantwriting workshops will be held Sept. 26 and Oct. 9. Call the Arts Council for further information.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed, double-spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editors' discretion.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length. Any submission that is requested to be left unedited will not be considered for publication.

Submissions become the property of the Collegian. The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material.

Letters should be no longer than 30 typed lines and columns must not exceed 65 typed lines.

Columnist status is granted only to writer's who have five columns printed on the Page within one semester.

Submissions must be addressed to The Editorial Editors, Collegian Offices, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Students interested in becoming columnists or cartoonists should come down to the Collegian newsroom or call 545-0719 and ask to talk to Reggie, Gayle or Jeremy.

"IF YOU WANT TO GO SOMEWHERE THAT ACTUALLY OFFERS FREE SPEECH NOW HOW ABOUT EASTERN EUROPE OR THE SOVIET UNION?"

The Editorial/Opinion page will be running a Point/Counterpoint section Thursday about the Middle East crisis.

Submissions must not exceed 50 typed, double-spaced lines and must contain the writer's name, local address and phone number.

Rollback puts leash on government

The Tax Equity Alliance proposes higher taxes in order to continue funding governmental social programming, and also to have the government stimulate economic growth in the Commonwealth. This idea is absurd. It is not reasonable to try to simulate the Commonwealth's economy by taking money away from consumers and investors. If a consumer or investor does not have money, no money can be spent or invested.

Sean Slattery

Increased taxation leads irrefutably to slowed economic growth for the state. Unfortunately, the Tax Equity Alliance apparently does not have the intellectual capacity to see that the increased taxation that they are advocating will serve to further harm the economy of the Commonwealth.

Continual tax increases administered for this malady will only lead us into a destructive cycle of increased taxation followed by further stagnation of a tax-choked economy. One thing that occurs specifically because of increased regulation and taxation is the departure of business concerns from overtaxed and overregulated areas.

In the Commonwealth we are seeing the slow departure of the Digital Equipment Corporation, among other businesses. California is now witnessing a mass exodus of business concerns because of overtaxation and overregulation. Seattle, Washington is now the place to be if you are looking for a job because the tax rates and regulation are at a minimum.

It seems likely that the Massachusetts General Court does not understand that the taxation that they blindly impose on business and other private concerns are to the detriment of the private concerns, as taxation in Massachusetts is on the rise even in the face of severe economic stagnation.

Perhaps it is perceived that if the government assumes greater responsibility for the welfare of its citizenry, the citizenry will be better able to spend money on industrial concerns. Again, if wealth is stripped from us, then we have no wealth to dispose of. In this light, support of question number three on this year's ballot is rationally imperative.

If you are concerned that the tax rollback will affect this University and your favorite social program, you should consider that the question is not designed to destroy our universities and welfare systems.

One should look to the leaders that are slashing the budgets of these programs. Governor Dukakis, for example, held a position as an assistant professor at Harvard University between his terms as governor. His appointments to the state boards of higher education have consistently included high positioned officials of private universities.

In the years that the Commonwealth's budget was becoming bloated in Dukakis' ideal, the universities and colleges were having their budgets viciously slashed. In the same light, we have seen no concrete evidence of administrative cutbacks or any phaseout of outdated governmental programming.

The people who oppose question number three are incorrect when they say this motion will cripple our universities and colleges. The motion does not necessitate any such action. The universities and colleges are threatened by incompetent and hostile application of the motion.

Governor Dukakis is an excellent example of the kind of incompetent and hostile government official that is destroying our educational opportunities and career futures through governmental fiscal mismanagement. Our government needs to be put on a leash. Question number three is a fine collar to attach that leash to.

Sean Slattery is a UMass student

A hero defended

I was walking up the stairs in the Student Union and I happened to glance over to one side. Hanging behind the glass was a poster with a picture of John Belushi that was taken from Animal House. The poster read, "Rush Lambda Chi — because John would have wanted it that way!" This is not the case at all.

I am a big John Belushi fan. I have seen all his movies, own the videotape, listen to the Blues Brothers and even read his wife's book. However, I do not claim to be an expert.

When most people think of John Belushi, they think probably of one of his most memorable characters, Bluto, from Animal House. Bluto is a wild and insane fraternity brother. This is sad because everyone automatically characterizes Belushi with the man as a loud, rude, sexist, obnoxious jerk because that is the way he acted in the movie.

In the book Samurai Widow, by his wife Judith Jacklyn Belushi, she describes John as none of those things. The fact is this guy was a hippie. He was pretty anti-establishment and he disliked fraternities intensely. In college he thought they were elitist jerks and wanted nothing to do with them.

Belushi was an actor. By playing Bluto he was saying something about what he thought about fraternities.

I am not saying fraternities are bad. I am trying to protect my hero's reputation. If you want to rush Lambda Chi, don't do it because "John would have wanted it that way," because he wouldn't have. Do it because Bluto would have.

Michael Ditson
Orchard Hill

State politicians' mudslinging is truly becoming boring

The arena was smoky and stank of the mud lining the floor of the ring. Lord, was there a lot of mud.

The crowd was bored, bored beyond all belief.

They'd seen this thing so many times that each fight blurred into one. Yet still, they came and watched, because they didn't know what else to do.

A voice boomed into the mike and out of the loudspeakers. "Welcome, ladies and gentlemen, to the fight to end all fights! In the right corner, we have John 'Killer' Silber. In the left corner, we have Frank 'the Skank' Bellotti."

A mixture of cheers and hissing greeted this opening. The audience was in a bad mood.

They were being cheated, and they knew it.

The fight began. Silber and Bellotti whipped mud at each other, splattering themselves and the audience. "Nazi! Despot!" hissed Bellotti.

"Dukakis wanna-be!" growled Silber in retort.

"Oh yeah?!"

"Yeah!"

Gee, people, does this seem familiar at all to you?

Remember the good ol' days, when issues and agendas and public concern were the main concern of politicians who wanted to get in office?

Sure, politicians running for the same office were rivals, and they minced no words in cutting each other down.

Pamela McCarthy

That's a given. But they realized the voters counted the most — we voted these people into office, after all. The candidates would at least try to listen to our concerns during the election.

Not so anymore.

The Massachusetts School of Political Mudslinging holds a belief very dear: The voters are stupid, the voters don't want to know the issues and the only way to win an election is by slamming your opponent.

If they didn't do that, they'd have to think about the issues, and maybe even — gasp! — come up with possible solutions.

Speaking of which, have either of these two jokers actually come up with any solutions to the issues they raised?

Oh, what issues did they raise? That's right. Silber is a despotic, sexist Nazi, and Bellotti is a corrupt Dukakis wanna-be.

I don't know about you, but I'm all fired up for the mudslinging match — oops, I mean election — to begin.

Hey, Frank, I'm sick to death of hearing about how oppressive John Silber is.

And to tell you the truth, John, I don't care how corrupt you think Frank Bellotti is.

You two sound like a couple of idiots.

What are you going to do about our toilet-bowl economy? Abortion? Civil rights? Freedom of speech and the National Endowment of the Arts? Would it really kill you to come up with an alternative to CLT, which we know you are opposed to?

Or better yet, ask us what we think? We are the people who might vote one of you jokers in.

Of course, you better keep in mind that while Ev left the race, there are still the two Republican candidates Weld and Pierce. Some of us may get sick of Wrestlemania Massachussetts-style and cast protest ballots against all Yankee-Democrat instinct.

Evelyn Murphy just left the race for governor, which is sad. Sad, because she was overshadowed by a couple of drooling grunts. I wasn't sure if she'd get my vote, but I liked her style. She was honest and direct. You knew where she stood on the issues, even if her stance wasn't popular.

Politicians of Massachusetts, please realize a couple of things: We are not stupid, and we do care about what's going on in our home state. We have to.

We live with the consequences of your actions. And if you're not careful, the consequences may be early retirement for you.

Pamela McCarthy is a Collegian columnist

■ magazine scam

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Bailey was a transfer student to the University last fall when a man knocked on her door selling magazine subscriptions. He told her that he was in a contest and if he sold "one or two more subscriptions he would win a trip to France."

"He was very clean cut. There's was nothing about him I wouldn't trust," she said. "I assumed he was a UMass student. He did not come up to me as a salesman but as a friend. 'Hey, how you doing?' — that sort of thing.

"I never saw him again."

The sales pitch is remarkably similar in each case. The salesman, usually characterized as "clean-cut" and "handsome" approach women — many of the women contacted by the Collegian said the men exclusively target women — with a high-pressure pitch about selling magazines to win points for a trip to cities in Europe.

In Murch's case, TICOA CORP promises delivery of orders to publishers "with deposit of $100,000 in a federally insured bank." The company also allows customers to cancel subscriptions only if "total sales price is $25.00 or more, subject to state law."

Several women have reported to the Collegian this week that men stating that they are in a contest have approached them selling magazine subscriptions.

Bailey eventually received four issues of Elle after waiting nearly 10 months. She noted, however, that she bought a two-year subscription for $20.

"I paid $20 for 4 issues," she said.

"As soon as he left the room, I immediately knew I was jipped," Bailey said. "By the time I realized it was too late. I never told the police because I had lost the receipt by that time."

"I grew up in Boston [I thought I was street smart], I was a fool," she said. "He tricked me into buying a subscription."

After one week on campus, Murch said she is wiser. "I trust my roommate a lot more than I trust this company."

■ Greek area upset

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

its' issues."

"If the University could hear a unified voice in Greek issues and about their work for charity then they will see the Greek Area as an asset."

Panhel Adviser Sheila Olk said "I would think if there is a Greek Area Government, the University would see the chapters as less of a direct liability to University."

Shafkewitz the CAG needs to be formed immediately because of the upcoming vote in the Citizens for Limitations Taxation proposal which could cut millions from the University.

" If Edward Korza [Acting Greek Affairs Director] does not finish out the semester, where does the Greek Area stand because SAO would be more burdened by another area government, not just another RSO," Schafkewitz said.

Meetings will be held on Fridays at 4 p.m. at the Greek Area Government on the second floor of the Student Union.

Budget cuts hurting battered women's center

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

Necessities/Necesidades, a battered women's center in Northampton faced a budget cut last year of $18,000 and $4,800 this year from the federal and state government, said a spokeswoman for the organization.

"We are having a really hard time because the state budget which is 62 percent of our funding is being questioned," Administrative Coordinator Susan Stinson, said.

Necessities is an organization that provides emergency shelter, a 24-hour crisis hotline, advocacy, peer counselling and support groups for battered women and their children.

Necessities was awarded $ 11,000 from the Family Violence Prevention Act last year which they are just receiving now, Stinson said. A $13,000 grant from the Massachusetts Bar Foundation was also received recently.

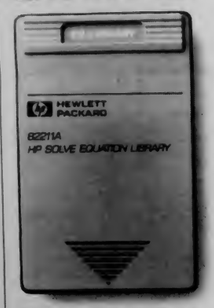
The funds from the Bar Foundation will be used to support the salaries of the Direct Service Coordinators who supervise the training of volunteer legal advocates, coordinate the services provided to battered women, and provide direct legal advocacy to women during peer counseling sessions, court appearances and on the hotline, Stinson said.

Even with these grants Necessities has had to set a fundraising goal of $35,000 which is $10,000 more than usual to maintain existing services, Stinson said.

She added it would be helpful if more people would volunteer to help with fundraising, community education, or working on the hotline.

"The UMass community has been really supportive especially the Progressive Organization for Women's Equal Right's," Stinson said."

Move 10 years ahead of the class.



The new HP 48SX and a free 'library card' can get you there.

With over 2100 built-in functions, our new HP 48SX Scientific Expandable calculator takes a quantum leap into the 21st century. Buy an HP 48SX between August 15 and October 15, 1990, and HP will send you a free HP Solve Equation Library card (a $99.95 retail value).

The plug-in application card alone contains more than 300 science and engineering equations, as well as the periodic table, a constants' library, and a multi-equation solver. It's like having a stack of reference books right at your fingertips.

The HP 48SX calculator is so advanced, it will change the way you solve problems forever. It integrates graphics with calculus, lets you enter equations the way you write them, and does automatic unit management.

Check your campus bookstore or HP retailer for HP's range of calculators and special back-to-school offers. Then check out the calculators that are years ahead of the class.

There is a better way.

HEWLETT PACKARD

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

DON'T STAY HOME

London	$398
Nairobi	$1005
San Jose, CR	$338
Hong Kong	$849

*restrictions may apply

Council Travel
Amherst
256-1261

LANGUAGE PACIFICA
OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve. Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6-9/17
• Amherst Creamery Bldg
150 Fearing St. Ste. 29
549-5065

NATION

Store accused of violating Lebanese employees' civil rights

BOSTON (AP) — Attorney General James Shannon filed a civil rights suit against Christy's Market alleging its security staff engaged in intimating interrogation of Lebanese employees.

The complaint filed Monday seeks an injunction to bar the company's staff from further harassment of employees based on national origin.

According to Shannon, Christy's fired or suspended six employees were accused of backroom interrogations where the Lebanese employees were accused of stealing from Christy's and were pressured to confess.

The suit also names as defendants employees of the National Investigation Bureau, a Stoughton company that provided security services to Christy's.

According to the complaint, Tarek Husseini, an employee at a Jamaica Plain store, was interrogated for two hours in the store's back room.

Two interrogators allegedly blocked the door to prevent Husseini from leaving. George Kayes, a Christy's employee, allegedly accused Husseini of being a thief, told him Lebanese people were crazy and threatened to call the Immigration and Naturalization Service to arrest him, the attorney general's office said.

Shannon also alleges Kayes interrogated Husseini's American wife, Eileen, at another store, telling her she lived with animals.

According to the complaint, another employee, Imad Kassah, the assistant manager of another Christy's in Boston, was allegedly held and interrogated for three hours.

When Kassah attempted to escape, the defendants, Robert Merchant and Timothy Griggin, allegedly threw him to the ground, punched him, kicked him in the back, handcuffed him and put a loaded gun to his head. Kassah was fired by Christy's one week later.

Kassah was charged by Griffin and Merchant with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon — a shelf support. He was acquitted of the criminal complaints issued against Griffin and Merchant for assault and battery.

Shannon's office is seeking an injunction to prevent the defendants from further assault against any employee of Christy's.

"Company-wide discrimination on the basis of national origin has no place in our society," Shannon said. "The actions we allege in this complaint are clearly illegal and violate the fundamental civil rights guaranteed to every citizen of the Commonwealth."

Jim Hayes, an attorney for Christy's, said individual suits by some of the employees have been pending for several months, and the company has sought a motion to dismiss them.

"This comes as a complete and total surprise to me," he said of Shannon's suit.

Al Camann, vice president of National Investigation Bureau, said the charges are false.

"All I could say is that it's going to show in the future what Attorney General Shannon believes to be true is totally untrue," Camann said. "It was just a fabrication from one or more than one individual involved."

Conn. nudist resort opens

NORTH WOODSTOCK, CT (AP) — While it may not be everyone's cup of tea, those who like to be in the sun and enjoy outdoor activities without wearing clothes will enjoy spending time at the Solair Recreation League.

The lakeside nudist resort — Connecticut's only such place — is in the northeastern corner of the state in rural North Woodstock.

According to the American Sunbathing Association based in Florida, Solair is one of 200 nudist clubs throughout North America Ringed by a high fence and blocked by a newly installed mechanical gate, Solair is open year-round.

About 80 of Solair's 300 acres are developed. Members are expected to go naked whenever appropriate. Wearing a bathing suit to swim in the lake in strictly prohibited [although exceptions are made for children] but people dress for evening activities, such as dances.

ABSOLUTE AUCTION

8 GOLF COURSE CONDOS AT FAIRWAY VILLAGE, NORTHAMPTON, MA
REC# 90-409

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1990 AT 10:00 A.M.
UNITS Bx-1, B-2, Bx-3, Bx-4, B-5, B-6, B-7 and Bx-8
FAIRWAY VILLAGE,SPRING ST, NORTHAMPTON, MA

OPEN HOUSES: Friday, Saturday & Sunday, Sept 7th, 8th & 9th -11 AM to 4 PM each day
Viewing only: Mon-Fri, September 10-14, 11 AM to 4 PM

Offering 8 luxury Residential Condo Units situated on 80 acres of land bordering the Mill River. Property is located along the fairways of the Northampton Country Club, a nine hole private golf course. All units have Southern exposure to allow for the greatest view and privacy.

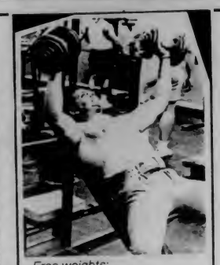
TERMS: THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($3,000.00) deposit per unit in cash, certified or bank cashier's check at the sale. Balance due within forty-five (45) days at closing. (*4 UNITS TO BE SOLD ABSOLUTE - BUYER'S CHOICE) 5% BUYER'S PREMIUM WILL BE ADDED TO THE FINAL HIGH BID

UP TO 95% FINANCING AVAILABLE TO QUALIFIED BUYERS & RATES AS LOW AS 8.65%.

CALL TODAY FOR BROCHURE AND INFO

AMERICA' REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS
JEROME J. MANNING & CO., INC.
AUCTIONEERS
TOLL FREE - 1-800-821-0111

Aerobics Instructors Wanted AFAA or IDEA Certified



Free weights:
Press Ahead!

Students
$185 NOW 'TIL MAY 21 1991
10 percent discount for normal membership

584-4975

NORTHAMPTON NAUTILUS, INC.
216 North King Street
Northampton
Aerobics•Nautilus•Lifecycles
•Tanning•Free Weights

Call for Information

The TI-68.
The engineering calculator designed to handle tough technical problems.

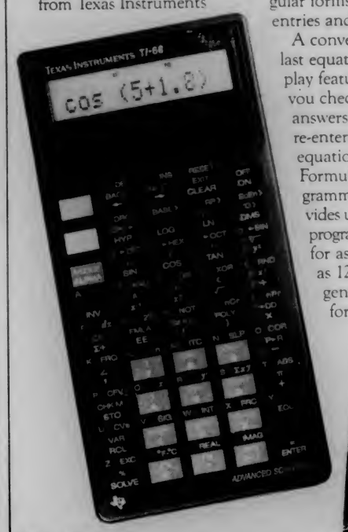
The further you go in engineering, math or other technical courses, the more you need a scientific calculator that speeds you through complex problems. With 254 powerful advanced scientific functions, the TI-68 from Texas Instruments is both a smart choice and an exceptional value.

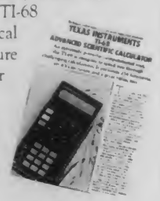
The TI-68 easily solves up to five simultaneous equations with real or complex coefficients. It evaluates 40 complex number functions. It allows polar and rectangular forms for entries and results.

A convenient last equation replay feature lets you check your answers without re-entering your equations. Formula programming provides up to 440 program steps for as many as 12 user-generated formulas.

. You can perform operations in four number bases, one and two-variable statistics, and Boolean logic operations. And, the polynomial root finder calculates real and complex roots of quadratic, cubic, and quartic equations.

Only the TI-68 delivers so much functionality, value and ease in one compact, advanced scientific tool. For more information on what the TI-68 can do, pick up a free copy of the TI-68 technical brochure at your bookstore.





TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

Buy an IBM PS/2 before December 31 and you can really take off.

Anywhere in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for only $149.

The sky's the limit when you purchase an IBM Personal System /2* before the end of the year.* You receive:

- TWA® Certificate good for a round-trip ticket for $149 off-peak and $249 peak season
- Free TWA Getaway® Student Discount Card
- Special offering on PRODIGY®

Use your TWA Certificate to travel to any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico. Head for the beaches. Take off for the slopes. Or visit the folks back home.

Save on future trips, too. Apply for a free TWA Getaway Discount Card to receive a 10% discount on future TWA travel. TWA has waived the annual application fee.

In between trips, tap into a wide world of information whenever you want with the PRODIGY service. For only $99 you receive the PRODIGY Start-up Kit, a 2400 bps Hayes® Personal Modem, a software connection package and three months of service.

So buy an IBM PS/2® before December 31, 1990... It's the right time to get on board with a PS/2.

CAMPUSFEST is coming to the University of Massachusetts on Monday and Tuesday, September 17th and 18th. This is something you won't want to miss. So mark your calendars now and get ready for some fun and excitement!!

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center
Open M-F 9-5 Sat 10-3

IBM®

*This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations from August 1 through December 31, 1990. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice. Valid for any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for travel September 16, 1990, through December 19, 1991, at the following round trip airfares: $149.00 round trip for travel from September 16, 1990, through June 14, 1991, and September 16, 1991, through December 19, 1991. $249.00 round trip for travel June 15, 1991, through September 15, 1991. Seats are limited. Fare is non-refundable. 14 day advance purchase, blackout dates and certain other restrictions apply. Complete details will be shown on certificate. Applicants for the discount card must be full-time students between the ages of 16–26. ®IBM, Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. TWA is a registered service mark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. TWA Getaway is a registered trademark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. PRODIGY is a registered service mark and trademark of Prodigy Services Company, a partnership of IBM and Sears. Hayes is a registered trademark of Hayes Microcomputer Products, Inc.
© IBM Corporation 1990

ARTS & LIVING

Sentimentality overrides all else in Darkman

By GEORGE LENTZ
Collegian Staff

Orson Welles once said that the best toy a boy could have was a movie studio. Sam Raimi obviously didn't grow up in the same neighborhood.

Raimi's first professional film, The Evil Dead, has since become a cult classic in the midnight movie circuit with its grainy photography, bizarre camera technique and buckets of blood and gore. That film had a measly budget of $375,000 and the results, though tacky and shrewd, were highly original and wildly entertaining. You'd think that once Raimi graduated from the independent ranks into the Hollywood studio system he'd take his basic learning skills and expand on them to improve his craft, but such is not the case.

With Darkman, Raimi's first major studio release, Universal dropped $15 million in his lap to have fun with, but it seems as though Raimi is the kind of guy who just doesn't know what having fun means. For all of its pyrotechnical wizardry and gruesome makeup effects, Darkman is the most uninventive, unoriginal work Raimi has ever put on celluloid.

Borrowing from Leroux's Phantom of the Opera and Stevenson's Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Darkman tells the story of Peyton Westlake (Liam Neeson), a gifted biochemist who has developed artificial skin appliances for burn victims. What the good doctor didn't devise was the real estate scam he becomes the unfortunate victim of. When his lawyer girlfriend (Francis McDormand) leaves a document at his lab that could incriminate a real estate tycoon (played with villainous white collar perfection by Colin Friels), a mob of hitmen show up to destroy the evidence.

Dunked in acid and blown through the roof of his exploding lab, Westlake ends up a John Doe in a burn ward where he undergoes experimental surgery. In order to assure him a life free of the excruciating pain of his burns, surgeons cut the nerve that controls the body's flow of adrenaline. The side effects, however, are loneliness, alienation and uncontrollable bouts of rage caused by the surging flow of adrenaline throughout his system. The ultimate irony of the film, and the essential comment that Raimi is making here, is that with these new behavioral modifications, Westlake is now better suited for a life in our society — one devoid of any feeling or emotion.

THE SCREENING ROOM

Still wrapped in bandages, he escapes and reassembles his lab to continue his experiments on artificial skin. Using his invention to create disguises, he takes to the streets as Darkman to get his revenge and to reconstruct his shattered life.

Neeson, an extremely likable actor, is the best thing about the film. The power and effectiveness of his performance lies in his ability to act through the makeup and allow us to see through the scars and bandages of this disfigured scientist and into the soul of this tortured human being. In one scene, as Darkman sits alone in his ruined lab, he clasps his hands to his face and sobs, "I want my life back. Please give me my life back." It's a beautiful moment that owes more to the strength of Neeson's acting rather than Raimi's directing.

Raimi, who co-wrote the screenplay, makes a noble attempt to pay to homage to all of his favorite horror films, and, at times, his tip of the hat is appreciated. But his sentimentality has intruded upon his creativity, which, no doubt, got him the job. Darkman chugs along like a ride through the horror film hall of fame without ever establishing a course of its own. But the film's ultimate downfall is its inability to match the visual artistry of the films it strives to emulate.

The whole film suffers from Raimi's reluctance to cut loose with the budget he's been given: the special effects are low budget and unconvincing, often relying too heavily on tacky blue screen technique. Many of these sequences leave you feeling as though the film is being served half-cooked. As a big budget film, Darkman deflates audience expectations because Raimi's bargain basement tactics no longer carry their campy, satirical appeal. He's out of his league and goes down on called strikes.

Darkman is playing at the Mt. Farms Theater on Route 9

charlie's

1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight

Tonight 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices & 99¢ Nacho & Cheese Platters
9:00p.m. — 12:00 a.m.

Drink of the Week: Pineapple Bomb $1.95
Beer of the Month: Foster's Lager $1.75

Food Giveaways
Mon. 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9-12
Tues. 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9-12
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9-12

We accept MC/Visa/Amex

JOB FAIR

On Campus Employment

September 13th
10AM–4PM

Work Study And Non-Work Study Positions

CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

Talk With The Department Of Your Choice

Sponsored by Student Employment, 243 Whitmore

WELCOME BACK!
FROM THE MATHER CAREER CENTER

We're out to meet you this year with two new programs

CAREER PLANNING AND PLACEMENT
FIELD EXPERIENCE PROGRAMS
(Co-op and Internships)

AND

a SATELLITE OFFICE
on the main campus in Curry Hicks

We're so excited, we're throwing a party!

Come visit us and meet employers like Digital, IBM, Clean Water Action Project, AEtna, Biogen, M&M Mars, Travelers Insurance, United Technologies

Career Services Registration, Workshops, Information

September 12, 13 and 14
9 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Curry Hicks lawn (across from Herter Hall)

(Weather Permitting)

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!

New Kids are gettin' really old, really fast

By SAAD HOPKINS
Collegian Staff

Step By Step
New Kids On The Block
Columbia

Sometime last summer, in a state I'd rather not disclose, a few mates and I, with too much cash in hand, decided to eat certain mind-altering substances and grab the cheap seats at a New Kids On The Block show. The result was so horrifying we didn't think we were going to make it out of there without dying of asphyxiation from laughing so hard. With Bubblelicious taking over the lingering odor of patchouli from the night before, and "Just Say No" being pumped through the air-conditioning system we sat through two hours of the kind of innocent drug free drivel we expected, and it wanted to make us puke!

And now they've released their second punishment to the world, Step By Step. And if you thought Milli Vanilli drove you to suicide this will put you in the morgue faster than new age music ever could.

Starting off the disc (which someone gave me as a sick joke), the title song sounds like a Shannon's "Let the Music Play" rip off as remixed by the senior faculty of Union Carbide Productions (not the band). The lyrics (ha ha ha!) read like an advanced Romper Room kids' sexual rules and regulations handbook. Now it's time for "Tonight" which is so insulting to the concept of soul music that quite frankly I'm surprised the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People hasn't launched an all points bulletin calling for their immediate execution.

But what do you expect from a band who have a track called "Happy Birthday" on their album. A track that tries so hard to be sophisticated, you'd think they'd broken out the thesaurus just to find the ideal metaphors to express such pathetically basic ideas (excuse me while I bang my head on my computer terminal). And as if that wasn't bad, anyone who dares to write a song in the tradition of "Baby I Believe in You" will probably find themselves lacking a social life.

REVIEW

The rest of it is predictable, of course. This is such pea-brained God awful crap that even the rest of the titles seem to suggest that they've somehow managed to masturbate their way to a higher tax bracket: "Let's Try it Again," "Where Do I Go From Here?," "Call it What You Want," and "Games." The later title being exactly what they're doing to your average high school freshman's wallet.

In all honesty this was the most terrible experience I've had listening to music. And I mean that! The thought that these guys won't survive after their next album sends tears of joy to my eyes. They'll end up on the decline, suffering from unsuccessful solo careers, get beat up by old "dedicated" fans on the street, refused entry into bars, and wind up junkies in Amsterdam's Red Light district, not having had sex in aeons! And if I'm wrong, as God as my witness, I'll cut off all of my dreads and never listen to Public Enemy again!.

Photo courtesy AP

Ken Olin portrayed Charles Stuart last night on CBS in Good Night, Sweet Wife: A Murder in Boston. Producer Arnold Shapiro had a head start in shooting the Stuart murder case story as he had a camera crew in the area the night of the incident working for his CBS series Rescue 911.

UMass Music Theatre Guild

First General Meeting
Wednesday, September 12th
7 p.m. 168c Campus Center

Information available on our up-coming productions of Sweet Charity and School House Rock.

$J.E.M.S.$
Job Employment Matching System

FALL '90 WORKSHOPS
Wed., Sept. 12 Rm. 911-15
and Thurs., Sept. 13 Rm. 804-08
at 11:30, 2:30, 4:00, and 6:00
in The Campus Center
Non-Work Study Jobs

$$S.E.O. 243 Whitmore 545-1951 $$

SNACKSENSE
A Nutrition Education Project
★ Offers Opportunities ★
GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE
Sign Up for an Independent Study with SNACKSENSE and earn from 1 to 6 credits

Schedule No.
557255	Nutrition 396	1-6 credits
557853	Nutrition 496	1-6 credits

Possible Responsibilities:
– Staff Campus Center information table
– Research/write information pamphlets
– Supervise Munchi's/shelf labeling project
– Develop nutrient profile project for vending machines
– Develop educational materials for Campus Center eateries
– Writing scripts for WMUA radio spots and press releases for the Collegian

Looking for students majoring in: Nutrition, Public Health, Marketing, Communications, Journalism, Education; others welcome too!

For More Information Please Call
Sheila Gilroy or Debbie Allen

at University Health Services 549-2674 ext.189

A couple of hours a week could spice up your resume, increase your recommendations, and improve your chances in the job market!

GEO exempts graduate students from $350 curriculum fee

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization and the administration of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst agreed yesterday to exempt graduate employees on a financial need basis from paying a $350 curriculum fee imposed this year.

The GEO represents teaching assistants, teaching associates, and research assistants who have been intensely negotiating with the administration since the fall of 1989 to be recognized as a union affiliated with District 65/United Auto Workers.

Jill Havens, a teaching assistant in the sociology department and a spokesperson for the GEO, said all details of the curriculum fee waiver for students who can demonstrate a need will be discussed in another meeting with the administration today.

"The curriculum fee, if we had to pay it, would have been an average of a two-week pay cut," she said.

Susan Pearson, the director of academic administration and the administration's chief negotiator, said graduate employees who seek a fee waiver must apply through the Financial Aid Office.

"The administration has informed GEO that, because of budget cuts, the only fee waiver we can provide is to people with a demonstrated need," Pearson said.

Since the $350 curriculum fee waiver for students who can demonstrate need was granted for the 1990-1991 school year, Havens said the GEO will ask for a similar waiver for any increases before next semester.

The GEO is also holding its first membership meeting of the school year this evening.

AP photo

JAKARIA, Indonesia — Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen, left, and Khmer Rouge leader Khiev Samphan shake hands after a joint press conference ending the two-day informal meeting of Cambodian Peace talks.

Pierce claims Weld of being 'out of touch'

BOSTON (AP) — Republican candidate for governor Steven Pierce accused rival William Weld on Tuesday as a rich man who is out of touch with the middle class and who has wavered on fidelity to GOP principles.

Pierce's attack came as he picked up the endorsement of several former Weld campaign workers, including Gordon Nelson, who was Weld's convention manager.

Ray Howell, a spokesman for Weld, said none of the people endorsing Pierce had been active in the Weld campaign for months.

"Bill Weld is a candidate in search of principles, in search of a plan; I think in search of the party whose nomination he might seek," Pierce said. "It would appear recently, he is looking for the nomination of the independent party."

Howell said Weld welcomed the participation of independents in the race, but he was a Republican.

"Those endorsements today of Pierce will not make one bit of difference in this race," Howell said. "Steve continues to try to shore up his right-wing base."

Pierce's announcement of the endorsements came the same day a Boston Globe-WBZ-TV poll showed the Republican race narrowing.

The poll, conducted by KRC Communications Research over a four-day period that ended Sunday, questioned 600 likely GOP primary voters It has a margin of error of plus or minus four percent.

"The Democratic Contest for all intents and purposes is over. We do well when independents come into the primary," Howell said.

But Pierce said he also wanted to attract independents to the GOP.

> "Bill Weld is a candidate in search of principles, in search of a plan; I think in search of the party whose nomination he might seek. It would appear, recently, he is looking for the nomination of the independent party."
> –Steve Pierce

"I believe we are going to attract a lot of independents into the Republican primary. I want that to happen," Pierce said. "This is Bill Weld's field staff. This is Bill Weld's convention manager. What they are saying is he hasn't been guided by one consistent principle in this race. He has zigged and zagged all over the man."

Pierce added, "What this race is about is Bill Weld becoming governor, period. This campaign is being funded out of his checkbook, Oyster Bay, and Manhattan, period. He does not speak up for the working people of this state. I do."

But Howell said Pierce was reviving the same class warfare arguments he made before the convention. Weld is well-to-do and of Yankee Heritage. Pierce is also from Yankee stock, but comes from a more modest background. Pierce's father is a carpenter.

Howell said Weld, a former federal prosecutor, has a long record of making change, while Pierce had few bills passed during 12 years in the legislature.

Howell pointed to the endorsement of Weld by the Massachusetts Chapter of the Republican National Hispanic Assembly as another example of Weld's ability to reach out to voters.

"What they see is a guy who's had a long record of making change and a guy who hasn't done much of anything in 12 years in the legislature," Howell said.

Board alleges sexual abuse

BOSTON (AP) — A well-known Boston-area psychiatrist, Dr. Edward M. Daniels, is facing charges by the State Board of Registration in Medicine involving the sexual abuse of four women patients.

In a statement of allegations released Monday, the board said Daniels, 70, had sexual contact with four patients in therapy sessions between 1960 and 1985.

The board said one patient was a college sophomore when the alleged sexual contact began in 1962 and that it continued intermittently until 1984.

Daniels denied the allegations previously but could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Daniels was suspended last April from the staff of McLean Hospital and expelled from the Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute pending results of the board's investigation.

He was also placed on leave of absence from his faculty post at Harvard Medical School.

Daniels was one of the best-known analysts in the Boston area. He trained many analysts now in practice and referred patients to other analysts for treatment.

His case will be the first one of sexual misconduct since reorganization of the board, which regulates physicians.

The state legislature last year passed a law transferring responsibility for hearing such cases from the board to the state's Division of Administrative and Law Appeals.

■ 911 misuse

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

"September is the busiest month, and the Department of Public Safety handles thousands of phone calls," said Dumas. "We would be much better off if only emergency lines would be coming in [on the 911 line.]"

The 911 line always receives priority, and other lines get cut off so that the emergency call can come through, Dumas said. The call on a regular line is disrupted unduly if the call on the 911 line is not an emergency one.

Dumas added that only two people pick up the 911 line, and when it is used as a regular line, a legitimate emergency call may not go through.

"The misuse of the emergency line demonstrates the misuse of resources when we can least afford it," Dumas said.

The emergency number, which can be accessed from any room on campus, began last month by the UMass Housing department.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN

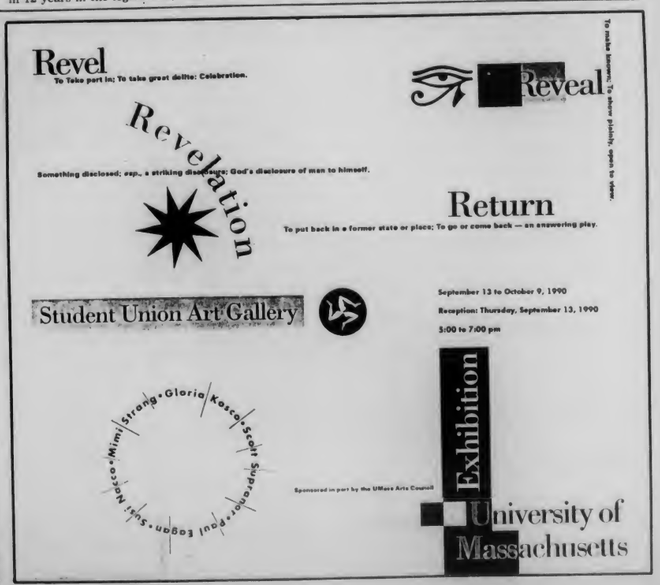
Sports Writer's Workshop

Sean Horgan, Red Sox reporter for the Hartford Courant

Thursday
September, 13 4 p.m.

Meet in the newsroom

Counts toward staff status



Revel
To take part in; To take great delite: Celebration.
Reveal
To make known; To show plainly; open to view.
Revelation
Something disclosed; esp., a striking disclosure; God's disclosure of man to himself.
Return
To put back in a former state or place; To go or come back — an answering play.
Student Union Art Gallery
September 13 to October 9, 1990
Reception: Thursday, September 13, 1990
5:00 to 7:00 pm
Mimi • Strang • Gloria • Kosco • Scott • Supancic • Paul Fogan • Suzi • Nosco
Sponsored in part by the UMass Arts Council
Exhibition
University of Massachusetts

WORLD

Russian Parliament votes radical economic reform

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's parliament voted overwhelmingly yesterday for a radical economic reform program, and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said he favored it over a moderate plan proposed by his prime minister.

Gorbachev's surprise statement undercut the authority of Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and added momentum to calls for Ryzhkov's resignation.

It also increased the chances that the radical plan, drafted largely by economist Stanislav Shatalin, will go into effect throughout the Soviet Union.

Shatalin's plan calls for transferring most economic authority from the national government to the country's 15 constituent privatize government industries, legalize private ownership of land and take other steps toward a market-based economy.

The national Supreme Soviet legislature and the parliament of Russia, the largest of 15 republics, met yesterday to consider the competing proposals.

Ryzhkov addressed the national legislature in a cavernous marble hall at the Kremlin, the centuries-old walled fortress that is the seat of communist power.

He charged that the Shatalin plan would lower living standards by 30 percent, force one out of every four collective farms into bankruptcy, and cause rapid inflation by decontrolling prices on about 75 percent of basic consumer products.

Ryzhkov called for retaining central control over the economy and making a much slower transition to a market-based system. He recommended keeping price controls on most food and household products while raising the cost of some major items, such as televisions, radios and refrigerators.

He also said imports of consumer goods and medicines would have to be cut by one-third because of a shortage of hard currency, and he warned that the government budget would have to be cut to prevent the $96 billion deficit from ballooning.

Ryzhkov's speech caused commotion in the hall as some delegates, led by Anatoly Sohchak, the reformist mayor of Leningrad, demanded copies of the Shatalin plan and the opportunity to adopt it.

"If you ask me, I like the Shatalin plan better," Gorbachev told the delegates in an animated, 15-minute speech about the need to stabilize the Soviet economy, which is plagued by shortages of bread, meat, paper, gasoline, tobacco and other ordinary goods.

"If there is a real plan to stabilize finances, money circulation, the ruble and the market, then we should adopt the Shatalin idea," Gorbachev said.

Pounding the back of his hand on the lectern, the 59-year-old Soviet leader defended the concept of a free market, which is little understood and much feared by ordinary Soviet citizens.

When price controls are gradually lifted, he said, "we'll have real prices that will estimate who is worth what. Then powerful stimuli will be released for structural changes.

"Of course these will be painful changes. But so be it," he said.

In an auditorium 1.5 miles away, the Russian parliament voted 213-1 with four abstentions to adopt the Shatalin plan and warned that if the national legislature did not follow suit, Russia would proceed on its own.

"These are two programs that cannot be combined and cannot even supplement each other. They proceed from completely different political and economic assumptions," said Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic.

"And if the [Soviet] Union does not follow this program, we, Russia, as a sovereign state, will take this route ourselves," he said.

Russia is one of 13 Soviet republics that have declared independence or sovereignty, defined as the right to overrule national laws.

The debates in both the Russian parliament and the national legislature were punctuated by calls for the resignation of Ryzhkov, 60, and his entire Cabinet.

There appeared to be strong support for such a motion in the Russian parliament, especially after Yeltsin alleged that "the current government will not implement this [radical reform] plan. They will sabotage it." However, Yeltsin persuaded the delegates to wait to see whether the Supreme Soviet adopts the Shatalin plan.

AP photo

PLEAS FOR MORE FOOD — A refugee of the International Fair Center in Amman, Jordan argues for more food for her children Monday. The area has over 18,000 refugees house.

Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
- 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
- 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts (2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
- 4 Racquetball Courts
- Nautilus & Cardiovascular Fitness Center
- Aerobics

CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte 116 Sunderland
(Opposite Bub's BBQ on Bus Route)
Open 7 Days • 7:00am-11:00pm
Call and present coupon before Sept. 30 and pay only $225 for a Semester Club membership (8 months) Nautilus, unlimited Raquetball and free aerobics!

Semester-Club Membership for $225
Nautilus, Unlimited Raquetball, Free Aerobics
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA 01059 (413) 549-4545
CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC C

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM Tel: 549-2692
6 University Drive at Newmarket Cntr. Amherst, MA
diagonally across from UMass stadium

For Great Variety and Great Prices! SHOP SCOTT'S!

Budweiser Suitcase Cans
$11.49 + dep.

Miller Genuine Draft 12 12oz. bottles
$5.99 + dep.

Miller Lite 12 12oz. cans
$5.99 + dep.

Smirnoff Vodka 750 ml
$6.49

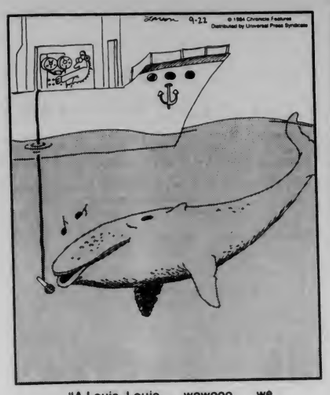
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 1.75 L
$13.99

Cuervo Gold 750 ml
$8.99

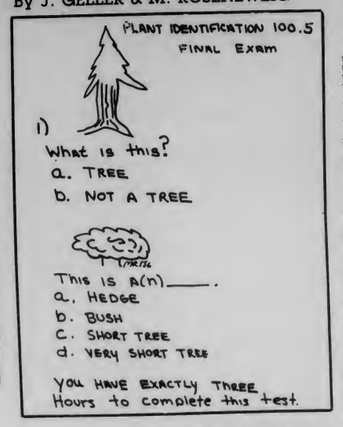
Visa/MC accepted and local personal checks

We Want To Be Your Favorite Liqour Store

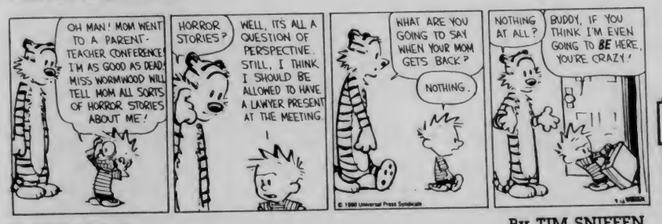
BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



"A Louie, Louie . . . wowooo . . . we gotta go now . . ."



CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

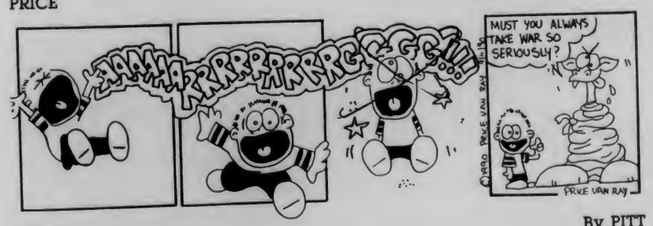


OH MAN! MOM WENT TO A PARENT-TEACHER CONFERENCE! I'M AS GOOD AS DEAD! MISS WORMWOOD WILL TELL MOM ALL SORTS OF HORROR STORIES ABOUT ME!
HORROR STORIES?
WELL, IT'S ALL A QUESTION OF PERSPECTIVE. STILL, I THINK I SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO HAVE A LAWYER PRESENT AT THE MEETING.
WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO SAY WHEN YOUR MOM GETS BACK?
NOTHING.
NOTHING AT ALL?
BUDDY, IF YOU THINK I'M EVEN GOING TO BE HERE, YOU'RE CRAZY!
© 1990 Universal Press Syndicate

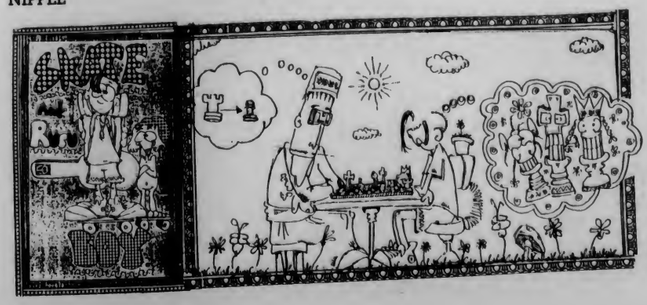
TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

And now, a message from The Tower Library
Hello, young people. I'm one of the Library's friendly staff. As you may know, I can now arrest you if you have an overdue book.
And we're not stopping there. By Spring, we'll be able to take "first offense initiative" against people acting snotty at the Circulation Desk.
Next Fall, we'll have the right to 'eliminate' anyone eating too loudly in the study areas.
The Tower Library: DON'T MAKE US HURT YOU.
And remember, September is reading month

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY



NIPPLE
By PITT



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

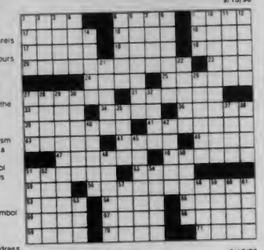
ACROSS
1 Understands
5 Hazard, to Trevino
9 Temptation site
13 Burdened
15 — avis
16 Dream, in Paris
17 Accepted practice
18 Television ending
19 Ballad singer Ed
20 Protest, in a way
23 Fare for Fido
24 Strawberry's field
25 Votes in
27 Middle East waters
31 Visitor
33 Virginia willow
34 Lacher's look
36 Greek muse
39 Placed a bet
41 Civil War warship
43 Roman garb
44 Look for fingerprints
45 Innstad
47 — one's laurels
49 Services for canonical hours
51 Dilemma
53 Sense
55 Canary Isls location
58 Relating to the populace
62 American naturalist
64 — chauvinism
65 Relative of a crown
66 Shaping tool
67 — and ends
68 Praise
69 Orchestra member
70 Musical symbol
71 Urges

DOWN
1 Item for a dress shirt
2 Moiety
3 Med. checkup
4 Lily type
5 Commonplace
6 Daily grind
7 Handel highlight
8 Kind of crayon
9 Notable period
10 — Party
11 Tennis name of fame
12 Hotbeds
14 Thickly populated
21 Oil source
22 Burstyn
26 More strange
27 Tampers with
28 French state
29 Discourage
30 Fine furs
32 Branches
35 Taro root
37 Raced
38 Raw materials
40 Emitted a coherent light
42 Playful mammal
45 Becomes apparent
48 Quake's warning
50 Uplift
51 English Channel feeder
52 Chopin composition
54 Expel
57 Concocted
58 Sprite
59 Misogynist's emotion
60 Press
61 Mr. Coolidge et al
63 Roulette color

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

D	E	B	I	T		P	O	P	S	T	A	B
A	R	I	T	H		S	E	A	L		P	O	I	L
G	O	O	S	E	B	E	R	R	Y		E	M	I	L
		S	L	A	T	E	R	S		A	D	A	N	A
			N	A	T	I	O	N	A	L		N	E	Y
S	U	M		T	A	N	A		A	D	D	S
T	R	O	M	M	E	L		B	A	S	E	D
U	N	T	I	L				K	R	I	S	I	S
			N	A	R	E	M		S	T	A	N	C	H
O	R	E		E	R	A	S	E	R		K	E	N
P	A	R		S	A	T	I	R	I	S	T
F	E	L	A	T			W	A	L	L	E	T	S
R	I	O	T		S	T	A	P	L	E	T	O	N	S
A	N	D	A		M	U	S	E		D	R	I	E	R
S	E	E	N		U	G	H		S	A	L	E	S

9/13/90



©1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

8/13/90

MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Tri-County Fair Sandwich Fishburger on Roll	Cheese Lasagna Chicken Fajitas
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Swiss Muffin Sandwich Fishburger on Roll	Greek Style Skillet Chicken Fajitas

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Even if an unexpected development turns out to be a blessing in disguise, you could emerge from the experience a new person. Budget your time wisely. Ignore minor annoyances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Communicating with others where you work is vital to your cause. For some people, sensitive moments demand care and tact. Take time to ascertain your values and priorities before rendering a judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An unusual business alliance looks promising. Marriage is a distinct possibility for some singles. Already-marrieds must adjust to new conditions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) More harmonious conditions prevail at home and at work. New doors open to you, bringing opportunities for social acclaim and financial gain. Wise decisions are made through meditation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Despite temporary tensions, the future looks bright. Partnerships on the brink face new trials. Existing ties will be strengthened by a crisis. Look for a favorable decision involving a loan or contract.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.2) Avoiding going to extremes today. Issuing ultimatums would be a mistake. Explore all your options before striking out in a new direction. Adopt healthy new habits and attitudes.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22) Your ideas are wonderful. Creative projects can be advanced by talking to the right people. Aligning yourself with unconventional people and projects could prove highly beneficial.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 24) A conflict of interest occupies your thoughts. Be objective. A new career goal or domestic decision revives your enthusiasm for a special project. Romance continues to pull stars in your eyes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.22-Dec.21) Watch your reaction to stormy moments today. They could foreshadow similar occurrences later on. A potential partner could offer an unusual idea. Keep an open mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan.19) Be willing to try something different. An authority figure admires your spunk! Exciting new clients or teammates are a source of inspiration. Heed your intuition. Romance looks fantastic.

AQUARIUS (Jan.20-Feb.18) Working alone in quiet surroundings enhances your creativity. Do not let worry or exhilaration run away with you. Be patient with someone who is disorganized or "out of it" today. Reserve judgment.

PISCES (Feb.19-March 20) Keep private matters from becoming public issues. Financial backing or a special loan becomes available. Good work habits help ou juggle a busy schedule. You have a happy choice to make!

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Rick Seto
Copy Editor.....Tamir Lipton
Layout Technician.....Rory Evans
Photo Technician.....Dondi Ahearn
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Typesetter.....Beth Clark
Production.....Steve Paris, Keri Gutz, Jen Fatkin, Mark Sturm, Danielle Dowling, Nicole Dumas

■ women's soccer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

Reflecting on a game of mediocre play, Rudy said, "Our theme in preseason has been group defense . . . we need to work on our one-on-one's, we had poor finishes today."

Free Kicks: Sophomore keeper Skye Eddy was not suited up for the game because of a virus, but will split time with Scurry this weekend in the UMass Classic, which features Cal. Berkeley, William & Mary and Boston College.

Photo by Toni Sandys

Senior Sue Gaudette and freshman Kathy Woodside put a move on UVM's Trudy Potter during Tuesday's 2-0 shutout win for UMass. The Reds are currently ranked fifth in the nation.

Sox lose to Brewers, 4-2

BOSTON (AP) — Robin Yount broke a tie with a two-run homer in the eighth inning and Ron Robinson posted his 10th victory as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated Boston 4-2 Tuesday night, handing the Red Sox their third loss in four games.

Robinson (10-3) gave up just four hits and two runs, one unearned, in seven innings and is 6-0 in his last eight starts. Dan Plesac gave up three hits in two innings for his 23rd save.

With one out in the eighth, Dave Parker singled off reliever Wes Gardner (3-7). Yount hit the next pitch into the left-field screen for his 15th homer, extending his hitting streak to eight games.

The Red Sox began play four games ahead of second-place Toronto in the American League East.

Veteran reliever Dennis Lamp, making his first start since 1987 because of Roger Clemens' shoulder injury, blanked the Brewers on two singles for five innings before tiring.

The Red Sox game Lamp a 2-0 lead in the fourth.

Wade Boggs led off with his 41st double and took third as Ellis Burks reached first on second baseman Jim Gantner's fielding error. Mike Greenwell singled, scoring Boggs and sending Burks to third. He scored as Tom Brunansky forced Greenwell at second.

Gantner began the Brewer's sixth with a single and stole second. After Gary Sheffield walked, Wes Gardner replaced Lamp, who threw 88 pitches. Dave Parker singled, scoring Gantner. After Yount sacrificed, B.J. Surhoff tied the score with a sacrifice fly.

Boston manager Joe Morgan was ejected by umpire Larry McCoy in the seventh. Morgan argued that Bill Spiers was hit by a bunt attempt outside the batter's box and should have been called out.

moo!

B'nai B'rith Hillel at UMass in Amherst presents a

CONCERT WITH

Safam

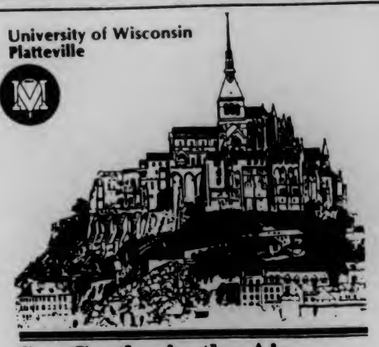
North America's leading Jewish-American band

...a little pop, a little rock,
a little jazz, a little folk,
a little chassidic,
a little latin...

Thursday, September 13, 7:30pm
Student Union Ballroom/UMass
$7-General Admission $5-Student

Sponsored by Hillel with the generous support of Harold Grinspoon and Diane Troderman

University of Wisconsin
Platteville



See Castles in the Air

And learn your way around the world

"If you have built castles in the air, now put the foundations under them." Henry David Thoreau

Study in London for $4325 per semester. Includes air fare, resident tuition, field trips, home stay with meals.

Study in Seville, Spain, for $3625 per semester. Includes resident tuition, field trips, home stay with meals. No foreign language proficiency required.

Summer program also available in London.

For further information, write or call:

Institute for Study Abroad Programs
308 Warner Hall
University of Wisconsin-Platteville
1 University Plaza
Platteville, Wisconsin 53818-3099
608-342-1726

Good Advice — Honest Price.

NEW!

Boston Acoustics HD5 and HD7 Speakers

HD5 $143/pair
HD7 $189/pair

ONKYO TX-811 Receiver
$185

ONKYO DX-1400 18-bit CD Player
$187

ONKYO TA-W200 Dual Cassette Deck Fully Calibrated!
$235

Five College delivery available.

Sound & Music

Multiple Locations • All Products • Warranties • 584-9547 • SA & MasterCard accepted

Rust sleeps following ill-advised field goal

FOXBORO (AP)— Rod Rust won't show up in designer shades, neon-pink shorts or black T-shirts promoting the latest and loudest heavy-metal hand.

At 6 p.m., with gray hair, glasses and an even speaking voice, he is conservative in appearance. The New England Patriots coach takes the same approach to football strategy.

So why would he try a fake field goal when it seemed so foolish and doomed to failure?

He said Monday he thought it would work. After the play backfired, possibly costing the New England Patriots their first game of the season, he admitted he was wrong.

"I simply made a mistake," he said. "It wasn't a good idea."

In his head coaching debut, Rust ordered the fake field goal with the Patriots ahead 24-20 and 10:47 left. The Miami Dolphins went on to a 27-24 victory Sunday.

Rust, who spent 14 seasons in the relative anonymity of assistant coach's jobs, admitted the gamble was out of character.

"I think I'm a conservative coach. I don't think there's any question about that," he said. The botched fake is "as good an example of why you shouldn't go out of character" as there is.

At the time, he felt the move made sense. With Dan Marino at quarterback for Miami, he knew the Dolphins could score quickly and repeatedly in the final 10 minutes. The bigger his lead, he felt, the better.

Even though Jason Staurovsky had kicked a 42-yard field goal to make the score 24-20 in the third quarter, Rust decided to fake the 41-yard attempt that would have forced Miami to score twice to win had Staurovsky made it.

Holder Marc Wilson looked over the defense and felt he had a chance at the 13 yards he needed for a first down. He was wrong and gained just one yard.

"The way the game was going, I thought that [a lead of] 10 points would be a big, big boost, particularly with Marino at quarterback," Rust said.

The Dolphins didn't score on their next two possessions, but neither did the Patriots. Then Miami got the ball on the New England 48-yard line after a punt. There was 4:15 left.

With 1:46 remaining, Marino capped the drive with a game-winning 7-yard scoring pass to Tony Paige.

Rust insisted the fake field goal decision was his.

"Any atypical decisions, such as not kicking a field goal on the one-yard line, any fourth-down decisions, have to be the head coach's decision," he said.

The decision was reminiscent of one by another conservative Patriot coach, Raymond Berry. The Patriots trailed Miami 7-0 in the first quarter of the second game last season and had a fourth-and-16 at their 20.

Jeff Feagles faked a punt and threw an incomplete pass. Miami took over on the New England 20. Three plays later Marino threw a 6-yard scoring pass to Jim Jensen. The Patriots lost 24-10.

"You make too many wrong decisions, you don't coach long," Rust said.

Asked if he felt any different in his first game as a head coach, Rust said, "It was a football game. . .I suppose it was different. I didn't really think about it at all that much."

The Patriots have lost eight consecutive games, starting with the last three last season and continuing with all four preseaon games. They play next Sunday at Indianapolis, which lost to Buffalo Sunday.

Winning last Sunday "would have had a big impact. That's a hurdle we have to overcome," Rust said.

The Patriots couldn't stop Miami's running game or start its own. Big defensive plays, including Ronnie Lippett's two interceptions, and big gainers on offense, such as Steve Grogan's touchdown passes to Marv cook and Irving Fryar, were among the bright spots on a team that couldn't mount a sustained drive.

"We had lots of mistakes," Rust said.

Asked if he tends to have trouble sleeping after a loss, he laughed and said, "Yeah, unless you find solace in a loving wife, she makes a nice dinner and you have a pleasant evening. There are other things in life.

"I really try to put the game to rest until the next day," he added. "I wouldn't be very happy if the players were giggling and laughing in the dressing room after a loss but I don't put any particular credence in a bunch of guys sitting around sobbing.

"It's over and we have to address our problems."

Rugby club hosts Dubliners

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts rugby club will host the Royal College of Surgeons, a touring club from Dublin, Ireland, today on the playing fields west of Boyden.

The match is scheduled to begin at 4:00 p.m.

The UMass rugby club competes in the first division of the New England Rugby Football Conference. Teams scheduled to play UMass in upcoming matches include Dartmouth, Vermont, and Holy Cross.

UMass will host the New England Rugby Football Championships on November 3.

Collegian file photo

The University of Massachusetts Rugby Club will host a team from the Royal College of Surgeons today on the playing fields west of Boyden. The match will begin a 4 p.m.

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE • 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THERE'S A MAP ON PAGE 3 • DEADLINE IS 6:00 PM PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • $4.00 IN ADVANCE 30¢/WORD DAY OF/STUDENT

ACTIVITIES

ATTENTION: Off-Road enthusiasts ... do you go 4 wheeling or would you like to? We're forming a club to cover all types of 4WD adventures mild to wild, novice & expert welcome, call Greg 256-1544 or Domnin 546-2726 This is 4 you!

THE VALLEY WOMEN'S VOICE needs new women! orientation session tonight, 7pm, Campus Center room 917. Wheelchair accessible. Call 545-2436 FMI

TRAIN WITH US!!
Learn self-defence and teamwork
Tae Kwon Do meets Mon. & Wed. 6:30-8:30
call Marty 8-7003, Marie 8-1622

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION RECYCLERS-Housing Services Recycling Program need students- Do an internship, practicum or an independent study with us- We're proof that garbage can be fun- 545-1153

AUDITIONS for UMass Music Theatre Guild's Production of "School House Rock" 9/16 S.U.B.
9am-2pm, 5pm-11pm; 9/17 5pm-11pm. 9/18
Callbacks

EMTS & FIRST RESPONDERS
Fire & First Aid Unit is recruiting. Paid details. Meeting Sept. 18 7pm N409 Morrill. Call 545-5115 S-Th 7-8pm or stop by N416

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM
$1000 IN JUST ONE WEEK
Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 50

NUCLEAR WINDS!
Hi Wind Sailboard Club forming now. Call 253-7366 Shred!

AUDIO

TV 20" COLOR, features $225 584-0224

AUTO FOR SALE

MERCEDES 300D 1975 $3000/BO rebuilt engine A/C FM/CASSETTE 545-2569/256-4928 Diane

79 DATSUN WAGON 107K AM/FM 4 speed Altred (W)546-4637 (H)549-5423

1990 NISSAN 200SX Runs good, $1000 or B/O Tel 549-4675

1984 DODGE ARIES, 4-dr, low miles, 1 owner $2250.00 253-3098

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great. Excellent condition. 50 MPG $4500 586-7163

FOR SALE: 1986 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, high-tech metallic gray, excellent shape, best offer call 413-253-9397

MERCEDES 300D 1975
$3000/BO rebuilt engine
A/C FM/cassette
545-2569/256-4928 Diane

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions. Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4057

EDITING/TUTORING

RETIRED TEACHER WITH graduate degree will edit papers for proper grammar, spelling, clarity, good writing and documentary form - any subject. Fast professional Wordstar wordprocessing also available if you are not a typist or are rushing to meet a deadline. Especially interested in working with international students (trained as English speech specialist), but enjoy helping all students, any level. Usually available on short notice. Reasonable rates. D. Reed, 253-3354. (This ad will appear only briefly - clip for future reference.)

FOR RENT

4 BEDROOMS in a beautiful house in Amherst. Two bathrooms, fireplace in the living room, pool and tennis court $325.00 per room, on bus route, call Bruce at 256-1216

AMITY PLACE - looking for a male roommate to share room, fully furnished. For more info call Leanne, Donna, or John at 549-5316.

HELP!!Beautiful, spacious apartment for rent. A must see with new rug and appliances. A steal at $625/month, includes heat and hot water. Call anytime 549-1397

ROOM FOR RENT!!Located on campus! Stop by 209 Sunset or call 549-2947.

ROOMS FOR RENT 3 doubles - $1800 semester 389 N Pleasant St. Males only 256-8028

STILL LOOKING for a place to live? Beautiful house less than 2 miles from UMass. $250 plus utilities 549-8951

FOR SALE

COMPUTER DISKS-cheap
3½ DD HD guaranteed
call Ashley at 546-1612

COMPUTER FOR SALE: 1982 Northstar Advantage 64K. Comes with word processor, general ledger program and database program $450 or best offer. Call 542-5702

LEAVING TOWN, MUST SELL SOON-Almost new double-bed, desk, bicycle and other items. Call 584-1663 Leave message

PRINTER FOR SALE: 1982 Epson MX-100 $120 or best offer. Call 542-5702

RED MYATA BIKE Ten Speed. Excellent condition
Call Leaf at 253-9783

REFRIGERATOR FOR SALE four foot high Like new! Check it out! 1-596-6059 Brian

SLEEP WITH US

Full size Futon and Frame $150
We'll beat anyone by 5%
Metawampe Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON-1

WATER-BED KING SIZE 12 drawer pedestal will set up $300 00 253-2098

FOUND

EYEGLASSES in a brown case in lot 44. If you lost them please call Kim at 545-3500

GOLD BRACELET found near campus center. Please call 549-8028 to claim it.

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $3000 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

BABYSITTER WANTED Mondays 11 to 2 near UMass & Amherst College 18 mo baby 549-7743

CHILDCARE NEEDED FOR 3 children (ages 4,8,11) and 2 dogs. A few late afternoons per week, some evenings. Must provide own transportation to our home in Leverett. 545-4228 or 548-9120

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 208 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 min walk from UMass) No phone call please

EARN $200 FUNDRAISING opportunity for your group or quick cash for your self. Distribute popular student magazine on campus in 1-2 days. Call Mr. Wilkinson 800-342-5118

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK
Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard
Send for free information: American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

LOVING, ENERGETIC, EXPERIENCED person to care for 3 yr old and toddler in our Amherst home. MWF AM. Own transportation required. Non-smoker 549-6318

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required. Mornings 7-8am. Good pay. 7days/week. 253-7009 Evenings

STUDENTS Work at home mailing sales literature. For details call 1-800-755-2334 Capital Services.

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS
Sept. 17 - Oct. 29, Mon 7-9pm $50 00
Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE
Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL
Language Pacifica 549-5065

LOST

GREY POUCH lost in CC. Reward for return of contents. 1-536-3719

LOST ON 3RD FLOOR MOORE
One Left eyetooth.
If found contact Nad 1-800-loan-a-brow

MOTORCYCLES

1990 KAWASAKI EX500 Blk & Rd, less than 2K miles, mint condition $2950 Call 256-4609 evenings

HONDA NIGHTHAWK 1983 550cc 4cyl fast new tires, radar detector, extras, 9,000 miles mint condition, 1,100 or best offer 549-8063 Jim

PERSONALS

CONGRATULATIONS NEW SISTERS OF AXO!!!
It was a long summer, but your dedication was awesome!
Welcome-Love your sisters of A-Chi-O!!!

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
small cheese $3 50
large cheese $5 99
2 Additional Toppings only $1 more
Must mention this ad!
549-8073 549-6098

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 OR 2 GIRLS wanted for condo behind Baybanks Great location! Call 549-9378

AMHERST CENTER female to share room $170/mo. 549-9377

SUNDERLAND. Female to share 2 bdrm apt. 250+ Close to bus line 665-1135

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING!
Basic course start 9/10 - $195
Adv course starts 9/17 - $170
Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 - $380
For further information call 549-8401

TYPING

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1 50/pg Free pickup and delivery Laser printing and copying available KCommunications, 256-6373

WANTED

KEGULATOR OR COLD TAP 19 Phillips 549-8198

NEEDED: 1 or 2 tickets to any MSG GD show No scalpers! Stephanie 6-3086

WHO SAID GARBAGE WASN'T FUN?

TAKE A CLASS IN RECYCLING EDUCATION
3 credits - guest speakers, lectures, field trips and hands-on experience Call Pe-Jen 549-5291 or Sherill 5-1153 for info

SPORTS

Reds shutout Catamounts at Boyden, 2-0

Kater scores twice; UMass remains undefeated

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

This was not a Rutgers shutout, but it will do. Especially for senior April Kater, who netted her first goals of the season against Vermont Tuesday on the Hill.

Kater scored both goals in the 2-0 shutout for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team against 19th-ranked UVM.

UMass is currently ranked fifth nationally, while holding top notch in New England. Vermont went into the game ranked fourth in New England.

The first half was characterized by slow play and wide shots. Vermont players were ineffective headers, they failed to square up with the ball and direct it. UMass looked lethargic, almost flat.

Vermont goalie Joey Fritz did not perform as well as she sounded on paper. Her punts rarely met the half field mark.

Freshman keeper Briana Scurry, however, paced the goal box as if it were a cage and pounced on balls when challenged.

The first half was scoreless. UMass had five shots on goal, UVM had four. Cornerkicks were not given the chance to be a factor as UMass had only one, UVM had four.

The tempo changed a bit in the second half, as both head coaches made some play changes with substitutions and the like.

UMass junior Michele Woodside was moved up front and senior Margi Jeade was moved to take on Vermont's sweeper. It made enough of a difference to get on the boards.

"The first half our penetration was centrally oriented and getting us nowhere." UMass head coach Jim Rudy said of the changes he made in the second half. "Penetration at the flanks opened up the game."

The game also became more physical in the second half, as UMass captured more ball time. Offensively, the Reds were much more explosive as they got off 11 shots on goal, compared to Vermont's four. UMass tried to capitalize on their corner kicks (3), but were unable to stick any in the net.

"We tried to hold them off at midfield so they wouldn't have as much room," said Vermont head coach Jeff Carter. "They went high-pressure on us, which can get pretty dangerous because it leaves people open."

In the middle of the second half, Vermont's Liz Grote dribbled down the side and lost the UMass defender on a fast break. One-on-one with goalkeeper Scurry, she made the mistake of tapping the ball before shooting. Scurry calmly enveloped the ground ball for a save.

After Scurry's cool and collected save, senior Becky Bonzano combined with Kater for the game's first goal with 17 minutes left in the game.

Vermont's few breakaway chances proved to be weak or nil opportunities.

"They did the better job of controlling the midfield," Carter said. "We just couldn't get where we needed to be."

"We didn't allow them to get man to man in the backfield," said Rudy. "Their whole system is a gamble."

UMass remained offensively persistent to the end of the game. Vermont, while beginning the game hungrily, failed to get a bite, tired and faded in the last eight minutes of play.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

Photo by Toni Sandys

Sophomore defender Holly Hellmuth (left) battles Vermont forward Rachel Bondy for a loose ball in yesterday's game. The Reds defeated the Catamounts, 2-0.

Field hockey, 1-1 after Iowa trip, heads to Boston College

Eagles to host Minutewomen in 7 p.m. game

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

After a 1-1 weekend in Iowa, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team returns to action tonight when they take on the Boston College Eagles at Chestnut Hill (Alumni Stadium, 7 p.m.).

The Minutewomen were impressive against Ball State, and overwhelmed by Iowa.

"After watching the videotapes, we decided that we were competitive, but that our forwards and midfielders were not dangerous," said UMass coach Pam Hixon.

Tonight, expect to see a more aggressive UMass team. Hixon has stressed to her players that they need to take chances, and beat opponents to the ball.

"By beating opponents to the ball, we can change our competitiveness," Hixon said.

Philippa Scott starts her third straight game in net tonight. Scott was a standout over the weekend, shutting out Ball State and holding Iowa to one goal.

"I'm pleased with part of the defense," Hixon said. "Kathy Phelan is going to be great at left back. She did a great job on Kris Fillat [of Iowa] who is probably the best right winger in the country. Lisa Berardinelli also had her moments."

Boston College is coming off of a 7-0 loss to Northwestern.

"We need a legitimate win, we'll take them where they come," Hixon said. "We can't look past Boston College. We're going to look to get to the ball first and create positive scoring opportunities for ourself. We want to look to capitalize and play more settled field hockey."

Tonight should be a test more to see if UMass can take some of the pressure off of Scott, and put more pressure on the Eagles' goalie.

"Scotty has save ability, we need to get to the ball first, so that opponents do not get as many chances on her," Hixon said.

FIELD HOCKEY NOTES: Apologies to UMass goalie Tina Rusiecki. In a recent story, it was reported that Lisa Charron was the backup goalie. In fact Charron is no longer on the team, and Rusiecki is the backup. . .Chelle Frates of Penn State was named the Atlantic 10 Player of the Week for the week of September 4. Frates helped the Lady Lions to a 7-0 victory over Michigan State by scoring three goals. .

.Frates tops the A-10 in goals, while Kristie Miller and Kelly Ryan, both of Rutgers University, have one goal and two assists.

Sports Notice

FIELD HOCKEY: The women's field hockey team will be holding open tryouts from 3-6 p.m. Thursday and Friday on Totman Field. If interested, contact Pam Hixon, Lynn Carlson or Andrea Savage at 545-1942.

SKI TEAM: The varsity ski team is having an introductory meeting at 7 p.m. today in the Holdsworth Hall second floor conference room. Those with a background in racing are encouraged to attend.

SOFTBALL: The softball team will be holding open tryouts from 7:45-9:30 a.m. today through Friday, Sept. 18 at Totman Field. If interested, please call assistant coach Gina LaMandre at 545-0038.

INTRAMURALS: Entries for football (men's, women's and co-ed), soccer (men's, women's), and softball (co-ed) are still being accepted at Boyden 215. Play begins Monday, Sept. 17.

Photo by Toni Sandys

Darren Stone looks for the open man during last weekend's game against Penn State. The Minutemen will host UNH today at the hill at 3:00 p.m.

UNH Wildcats next for Minutemen

Game today vs. regional rivals

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

Last fall, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team went 0-4-1 against its fellow New England state universities.

Today the Minutemen have their first chance at improving their record against the neighbors. They face New Hampshire at Upper Boyden Field at 3 p.m.

"They're a real blue-collar team," UMass coach Jeff Gettler said of the Wildcats. "They're just going to come in here and work hard, and fly around the field. And if we don't play smartly and quickly, we'll get caught up in their game, and it'll be abysmal."

What do the Minutemen hope to do tomorrow? Gettler said this of the UMass game plan: "We want to play them in their side of the field, not in ours. We have to come out and establish control, and play our game, not theirs."

He added, "We have to take control early on. They are a dangerous team, and we can't afford to have them in our side of the field the whole game."

UMass has some injuries to players to worry about as well. Freshman defender Todd Kylish has a pulled hamstring. Aaron Zandy, a freshman midfielder, has a pulled quadricep. And junior defender Matt Bearce, in the words of Gettler, is ". . . just banged-up." All three players are questionable for today's match.

Steve Armenti will start in goal for the Minutemen this afternoon, as fellow keeper Jon Gruber will face Temple on Saturday. Armenti played in his first match against New Hampshire last year, and wants another chance at the Wildcats.

New Hampshire comes into today's match on the Hill at 1-2. They defeated Holy Cross before losing to regionally-ranked Central Connecticut State and to West Virginia Wesleyan.

Gettler's main concern, though, is not what New Hampshire will do today. He is worried about how his team will preform.

"We've got to worry about ourselves, and how we play," said Gettler.

Meanwhile, Back at the A-10: Massachusetts is all alone in second place in the Atlantic 10 men's soccer standings, as of Sunday. (The A-10 powers-that-be had not updated the standings as of Tuesday.) The Minutemen check in at 1-1, with 3 points.

Ahead of the Minutemen in the standings is a three-way logjam for first place. Penn State, Rutgers, and Rhode Island are all at 1-0, with three points as well.

On the flip side, St. Bonaventure ended the weekend at 0-3 in conference play. No other teams had played conference games when these standings were compiled by the A-10. . . . UMass' next conference opponent, Temple, is currently 0-2 overall. The Owls visit the Hill on Saturday at 3:15 p.m. Gettler stressed the importance of this upcoming game after the Penn St. loss, saying "now we've got to beat Temple." . . .

George Washington forward Mario Lone and Rutgers forward Lino DiCuollo were named Atlantic 10 Co-Players-of-the-Week. They join UMass' own Matt Edgerly on the A-10 honor board for the first week of conference play.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 13, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 7

WEATHER	THIS WEEKEND	SPORTS
A day of hazy sunshine with highs reaching up to the 80s. Chance of an afternoon shower.	Bim Skala,Bim and This Weekend return to the area for first show of the season.	Men's soccer beats UNH 3-0; field hockey downs Eagles at Chestnut Hill, Page 20.

Reactions to cash cuts discussed

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

As the University of Massachusetts draws close in nervous anticipation of the impact of spending cuts, campus administrators yesterday outlined how the University will deal with the first of two spending cuts sent by Boston.

Three non-academic programs will be shut down, possibly by mid-October, but officials said no layoffs are planned. Employees in the affected offices – the Student Affairs Research and Evaluation Office, the Office of Greek Affairs and the Information Services Office – will be reassigned to other jobs

William Weitzer, assistant vice-chancellor for student affairs, told the Daily Hampshire Gazette that employees in these offices will be deployed to various vacant positions including critical ones in the Financial Aid Office and Admissions.

But layoffs are still a possibility facing union employees. The Board of Regents of Higher Education announced Monday a state of emergency granting campuses the ability to lay off union workers.

The cuts announced yesterday by the Provost's Office were in response to the $6 million spending cut, mandated in July by the Legislature. The office said no decisions have been made on the second wave of spending cuts made public last week.

The 4 percent across-the-board cuts ordered last week by Gov. Dukakis because of declining tax revenues was the most recent round of financial trouble to strike the University.

The state higher education system has lost nearly $50 million since the fiscal year began in July. Nearly $27.3 million was trimmed from higher education system last week.

The Provost's Office said the budget problem was anticipated last spring and the office began a program of reducing costs. The office said $3.3 million was set aside before the University receive word of the $6 million cut.

The office said money for "potential faculty replacements" was impounded, saving $750,000; a .33 percent reduction in the budgets of schools and colleges, saving $321,000 and $2.19 million saved in administrative costs.

The rest of the $6 million was to be met by "short term economics," delayed recycling programs and reductions

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

Collegian photo by Toni Sandys

BREAKING THE CYCLE – History major Mary Beth Kerr and her bike take a study break yesterday afternoon on Massachusetts Avenue

DOD anti-gay policy shaky

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

A new twist in the ongoing controversy over gay people within the armed forces is due to a memo sent by Vice Admiral Joseph S. Donnell, commander of the Navy's surface Atlantic fleet, to officers of nearly 200 ships and 40 shore installations. Although describing lesbian sailors as "among the command's top performers," Donnell instructed officers to vigorously root out homosexual women.

The Department of Defense policy on homosexuality states that "homosexuality is incompatible with military service," "seriously impairs the accomplishment of the military mission," and "interferes with discipline, good order, and morale." Therefore, in order to "insure the integrity of the system of rank and command," "recruit and retain members of the armed forces," "foster mutual trust and confidence among service members," "maintain the public acceptabilty of military service," and "prevent breaches in security," homosexual people are banned from entering into military service.

A person's sexual orientation is deemed a security risk by the DOD because "homosexuality is considered intimate information concerning sexual behavior" that an individual would not ordinarily disclose, said Lt. Col. Joseph Allred, a Department of the Army spokesperson. Such information could make a service person vulnerable to being blackmailed into disclosing classified information, in the same way a married person could be threatened with evidence of an extra-marital affair.

A December 1988 study commissioned by the Pentagon on homosexuality and military suitability concluded that the number of cases of blackmail as a result of investiga-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

5-College Middle East experts: war is imminent

By PRATIP DASTIDAR
Collegian Staff

The Five-College Peace and World Security Studies Program sponsored a panel discussion on the Gulf crisis last night where prominent faculty members addressed a capacity audience at Amherst College.

Mohammed Jiyad, a professor of Arabic and a native of Iraq, pointed out that the crisis was precipitated when Iraq complained about repayment of Kuwaiti loans, illegal drilling in Iraqi oilfields, the Kuwaiti use of Bubiyan island to block Iraq's access to the sea and its role in undercutting OPEC oil quotas.

He pointed out that Hussein was a flexible negotiator as shown in his peace treaty with Iran, as well as his desire to end the Iran-Iraq war within two weeks of its start. He also dispelled the notion that Hussein would indiscriminately use poison gas, reminding the audience that it was only used against Iran after repeated warnings and at a time when Iraqi defeat seemed imminent.

Eqbal Ahmad, a Hampshire College Political Science professor and an internationally renowned expert on the Middle East, delivered an emotional and insightful lecture.

"Anything is possible in this Dark Age of perestroika," he said, referring to the spectre of superpower collaboration in imperial ventures. "I am driven to support the acquisition of nuclear weapons by Third World countries."

"I am angry because I have been put in the awful position of having to defend Saddam Hussein though I have been banned from entering Iraq since 1973."

He lamented the failure of democratic dissent in the U.S. today. "The constitutional right and the democratic practice of dissent as well as the role of the media in spawning critical debate has died."

"The experience of watching the media has been painful. Four weeks ago, I stop-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 13

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Eabal Ahmad, a social sciences teacher at Hampshire College

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003.
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dasbidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Marc Pruskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lon Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Forum

THURS, SEPT. 13 — Film — co-sponsored by the LBGA and the Program for GLB Concerns, "The AIDS Memorial Quilt," 7 p.m. Campus Center 803.

FRI, SEPT. 14 — Coffee Social — sponsored by the LBGA, 3 p.m. - 6 p.m., C.C. 803

SAT, SEPT. 15 — Dance — sponsored by the LBGA, 9 p.m. - 1 a.m., C.C. 10th. floor, $3.00

MON, SEPT. 16 — Open House — Faculty/ Staff Group, 4 p.m., Faculty Club.

— Training Session — Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Speaker's Bureau, 7 p.m. - 10 p.m., c.c 904-908, call 545-4824 for more info.

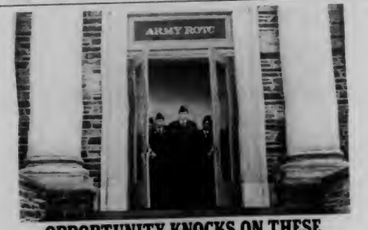
TUES, SEPT 17 — Info Session — Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Men's Counseling Collective, 4 p.m. - 5 p.m., C.C. 911-915.

— Meeting — find out about the LBGA's committees: Political Issues, Social, Diversity Outreach, Awareness Week Planning. Find out how you can get involved: a gay issues show for WMUA, a group for grad students, applications for Speaker's Bureau, more! 6 p.m., Student Union Office 413 B.

— Meeting — Lesbian, Bisexual Womyn's Union, a social and support group for women. 8 p.m., S.U. 413B.

COLLEGIAN
The best for pests.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS



OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS ON THESE DOORS FIRST.
Why? Because Army ROTC teaches you the leadership and management skills you need for success — in college and in life.
ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.
Contact Cpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army ROTC
5-2321 or 5-2322

"Style and Substance ..."
TOWER Theaters

Come together perfectly in a space devoted to the avid filmgoer. Creative snacks and unique beverages offered in our pleasant deco surroundings are only the start of movie magic at the Tower Theaters.
The Village Commons • South Hadley • 533-2663

A Nutrition Education Project
★ Offers Opportunities ★
GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE
Sign Up for an Independent Study with SNACKSENSE and earn from 1 to 6 credits
Schedule No.
557255 Nutrition 396 1-6 credits
557853 Nutrition 496 1-6 credits
Possible Responsibilities:
– Staff Campus Center information table
– Research/write information pamphlets
– Supervise Munchy's shelf-labelling project
– Develop nutrient profile project for vending machines
– Develop educational materials for Campus Center eateries
– Writing scripts for WMUA radio spots and press releases for the Collegian.
Looking for students majoring in: Nutrition, Public Health, Marketing, Communications, Journalism, Education; others welcome too!
For More Information Please Call
Sheila Gilroy or Debbie Allen
at University Health Services 549-2674 ext.189
A couple of hours a week could spice up your resume, increase your recommendations, and improve your chances in the job market!

COUPON
$1.00 OFF MEDIUM PIZZA
PIZZA LASAGNA
Bruno's
SALADS SUBS
WE DELIVER QUALITY
OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. LIMITED AREA FREE DELIVERY
Call Us at 256-0222 and WE'LL BRING LUNCH to YOUR HOME OR OFFICE!
ONE COUPON PER PIZZA

LOCAL

Graduate Employees Organization plan ok'd

BY JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

The graduate student employees agreed yesterday to accept the Graduate Employment Organization Coordinating Committee proposal which would maximize the number of graduate students eligible for a $350 annual curriculum support fee waiver.

The GEO and the administration of University of Massachusetts agreed Tuesday to waive the fee for graduate students based on financial need.

The fee, originally implemented in spring of 1990, was aimed at combatting revenue decreases in the university budget.

At the first GEO meeting held yesterday, the coordinating committee member Gerald McClausand outlined the proposal that the committee will present to the administration within the next several days.

The proposal is designed to increase the number of students who are eligible for the fee waiver by creating an appeal process for students who are denied the waiver "for technical reasons," McClausand said.

A provisional proposal called for the securing of a new deadline for fee payment for students who would be waiting on the appeal decision. The GEO, an affiliate of District 65/United Auto Workers, will assist the students by negotiating on their behalf.

The proposal also called for the development of "a fair and consistent" procedure for foreign graduate students who are seeking a fee waiver based on their financial need. A proposed procedure would "mimic" the procedure which U.S. students follow, McClausand said.

"Although we can't give blankets to everyone," he said, "we have taken care of the majority [of the students].

Now that the proposal has been accepted by the Graduate Student Association, the Coordinating Committee will engage in negotiations with administrators.

Following the negotiations, the ballot will be sent to all members of the GEO who will vote on whether or not to approve this proposal.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon, several students voiced their opposition to the proposal because it contains the clause that the students will not hold strikes until April 15 if GEO accepts the $350 a year fee waiver.

One of the students who opposed the proposal said that the administration "is asking us to be good graduate students" and found that prospect "humiliating."

McClausand had previously expressed his satisfaction with the outcome of the negotiations with the administration. "In the context of the budget cuts we have made a significant gain," he said.

"The fact that the administration didn't blow us off is a testimony to the success we had last spring," he said.

McClausand was referring to the strife last spring between the administration and the GEO over the unionization bid. Administrators in mid-May authorized an election for graduate student employees.

Collegian staff member Christopher Muther contributed to this report.

Collegian photo by Rich DuCree
A member of the GEO speaking yesterday

UMass denied delay request for recycle prog.

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts was denied a requested waiver which would have given an extension to a required recycling program in a meeting last night of the Amherst Board of Health.

The University had requested a waiver from the mandatory recycling regulations until July of 1992. Under current guidelines set by the Board of Health last night, UMass has until December 1, 1990 to present a recycling plan and April 1, 1991 to put the plan in operation.

Two members of the Board of Health who are affiliated with UMass left for discussion and voting of the waiver.

Physical Plant Director Peter Wozniak said the denial would mean a cut in other Physical Plant projects, such as asbestos removal.

"This decision can not be made lightly, service cuts will have to be made in other areas to compensate for the loss revenues," he said.

Board of Health member Diana Stein said with the amount of waste the campus was producing, it is imperitive the University begin recycling as soon as possible.

"I think this is important, if the University is producing 5000 tons of trash a year and only recycling 2 percent of that trash there is a lot of waste," Stein said.

Board of Health regulations require businesses, apartment owners, and institutions in Amherst to develop a recycling plan by December 1, 1990. The regulations require implementation by April 1, 1991. The University requested the 18 month waiver in August.

Under the plan, the University would be required to recycle 20 - 25 percent of the recyclcable waste materials produced. If the University fails to meet this goal, a penalty will be imposed that has not yet been determined by the Board of Health. UMass may also be forced to pay tipping fees, fees to dump the waste, if they do not meet the proposed deadline.

Wozniak said it was not realistic for the University to meet these goals because of a reduction of over $750,000 in the Physical Plant's budget over the past year.

Board members cited the recent cuts as more incentive to begin the plan soon before more cuts are inflicted on the University.

According to Wozniak, the Physical Plant would need at least $400,000 to implement a recycling plan on campus.

RA's and student security uncut!

By ERICK R. OLSEN
Collegian Correspondent

Amid the chaos of cancelled courses, long add-drop lines, and tuition increases, one department has stayed on its feet.

Despite the loss of all their state monies, Housing Services will not reduce the number of Resident Assistants or student security personnel or staff, according to the Director of Housing, Dr Joseph Zannini.

"The RA program plays a critical role in housing," said Zannini, and their big concern is that we have the same number of student security homes (as in previous years) in all residence halls."

Totally reliant on a housing trust fund for their budget, Zannini said his support staff was forced to devise three different action plans to buffer the impact of the cuts for this year.

The first of these plans involves redoing the student support staff, including clerical assistants, students in maintenance, custodial services, and various summer jobs.

The next plan, which Zannini refers to as "deferred maintenance," includes increasing the efficiency of mechanical and maintenance operations already in effect.

The plan also involves considerations of immediate versus long-term effectiveness, in terms of what needs to be done now and what can wait.

The final plan revolves around money saved from last year and over the summer in anticipation of budget cuts.

Zannini's support staff is made up of Resident Director, Area Coordinators, Assistant Directors, and budget staff members.

Zannini said he plans to meet with the Residential Committee, which is made up of area governmental presidents, later this year.

Collegian photo by Susan Cornellusam
South West Resident Hall, and sculpture

UMass wakes up to CLT effects

Students work to rouse 'sleeping giant' against financial doom

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts campus, deemed by many as "the sleeping giant" in the upcoming Nov. state election, has woken up to what impact the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition will have on the University budget if passed.

"People are talking about CLT everywhere," said Natasha Diephius, Student Government Association president. "A lot of teachers and students are learning what could happen if CLT passes."

The Citizens for Limited Taxation petition will, if passed in the Nov. election, roll back tax levels to 1988 levels in this fiscal budget year. The CLT petition will appear on the election ballot as question number three.

Supporters of the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition hope the tax rollback will stop legislators from overspending state funds to reduce a deficit which they estimate will be $500 billion if CLT does not pass.

The petition has been criticized by many as cutting too much state revenue at once. State Rep. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst) said if the CLT petition passes, "it will be the undoing of Massachusetts."

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst stands to lose between $25-35 million in state allocated funds if CLT passes. President-Chancellor Duffey figuratively has said that the passage of the CLT petition would mean the closing of the university.

Although many students have become angered by the series of budget cuts in the last three years which has totalled $62 million for UMass alone, the threat of the CLT petition passing has caused some students to become depressed over their futures here at the university, she said. "Students are depressed," Diephius said. "You have to turn from getting depressed to getting involved."

The SGA held a mobilization rally on the first day of classes, Sept. 5th, to inform the student body about the University's budget crisis due to state funding cuts and

CONTINUED ON PAGE 13

You asked for a computer that's real college material.

We heard you.

The ideal computer for college needs certain things. Like a mouse, to make it easy to use. Preloaded software, that'll let you create impressive papers with graphics and spreadsheets. And great tools, like a notepad, calendar and cardfile. It should also be expandable, so it can grow with your needs.

The IBM Personal System/2® has all this at a special student price.* And if you buy before December 31, 1990, you'll receive a TWA* Certificate entitling you to a round-trip ticket for $149/$249. Plus a free TWA Getaway® Student Discount Card application. You'll also get a great low price on the PRODIGY® service.

The PS/2® is perfect for college because you told us just what you needed. And no one knows what it takes to be real college material better than you.

Open M-F 9-5
Sat. 10-3

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center

Students, bring your parents to the University Store on Saturday, September 15 to check out the great deals from IBM. A representative from IBM will be present from 10-5 to answer any questions.

*This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice. Valid for any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for travel September 16, 1990, through December 19, 1991 at the following round trip fares: $149.00 round trip for travel from September 16, 1990, through June 14, 1991 and September 16, 1991 through December 19, 1991. $249.00 round trip for travel June 15, 1991 through September 15, 1991. Seats are limited. Fare is non-refundable. 14 day advance purchase. Blackout dates and certain other restrictions apply. Complete details will be shown on certificate. Applicants for TWA's Getaway Student Discount Card must be full time students between the ages of 16 - 25. 1990 Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. TWA is a registered service mark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. TWA Getaway is a registered trademark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. PRODIGY is a registered service mark and trademark of Prodigy Services Company, a partnership of IBM and Sears.
©IBM Corporation 1990

IBM

HELP WANTED

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE IS OPERATED BY OVER 150 STUDENTS, BOTH GRADUATE AND UNDERGRADUATE. WE OFFER PART-TIME EMPLOYMENT OF 10 TO 40 HOURS PER WEEK TO UMASS STUDENTS WITH ANY MAJOR.
U.M.T.S. IS AN AA/EO EMPLOYER.

 GREAT PAY, SEMESTERLY RAISES **
 PAID TRAINING: NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED **
 SCHEDULE ARRANGED AROUND CLASSES **
 A JOB DESIGNED FOR STUDENTS **

FOR FURTHER INFO. CALL 545-0056

FOR INFORMATION AND AN APPLICATION COME TO THE FALL APPLICATIONS MEETING THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13th,
at 7pm. 01 CAMPUS CENTER.
NOTE: SPACE TO THE MEETIN WILL BE ADMI A CLASS CONF MEETING TO SIG
THE FIRST 100-PEOPLE WILL BE ADMITTED PLICATIONS. ABSOLUTELY NO LATECOMERS UNABLE TO ATTEND THIS MEETING DUE TO COME TO THE TRANSIT OFFICE BEFORE THE ROSTER AND PICK-UP AN APPLICATION SHEET.

STARTING PAY $5.50/hr.

JOIN THE TEAM THAT MOVES UMASS.

THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

The uncompromising and inevitable destruction of Iraq

Hussein Ibish

What is at stake in the Persian Gulf?

Invasion and the use of military force to accomplish strategic goals is hardly new or unusual in international relations. Yet, judging by the reaction of the western alliance led by the U.S., there is something particularly unacceptable and threatening about the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq. Why?

Are they fighting for freedom? There was no real degree of political freedom in Kuwait, and the U.S. itself is highly notorious for its disinterest in upholding the principle of self-determination.

Are they fighting to preserve the rule of international law? The U.S. has, firstly, displayed scant regard for international law, as evinced by direct aggression in Nicaragua, Panama, Grenada and Libya, as well as continued refusal to submit to the jurisdiction of the international court in the Hague. The U.S. views international law as a convenient tool of foreign policy when useful, and a minor inconvenience otherwise. Secondly, U.S. opposition to the acquisition of territory by force seems very selectively expressed (as is evident in the financing of Israel's occupation of Arab lands).

Are they fighting to preserve access to the strategically vital oil reserves of the Persian Gulf? Yes, this is definitely more satisfactory than pious platitudes about international law and freedom. But there are more and broader strategic interests at work here - maintenance of U.S. hegemony in the Gulf, and preservation of the stability of the entire international system constructed by the West.

Since the end of World War II, the West in general and the U.S. in particular has defined the Persian Gulf region as one of 'vital national interest.' Control of the region and its natural resources was placed near the top of U.S. policy goals. The Carter doctrine made explicit the fact that the U.S. regarded itself as the pre-eminent hegemonic force in the region, and was willing to use force in order to preserve that position.

Historical American dominance in the Gulf region was accomplished primarily by the traditional method of divide and rule. The system of shifting alliances was based on allying appropriate regional forces against any possible dominant local power. To that end, the U.S. sided with the Arabs against the Ottomans (World War I), with the Imperialist forces and the Zionist movement against the Arabs (1919-1948), with the Al-Sauds against the other local clans, with the Pahlavis against Iranian democracy (1953), with the Israelis against the Egyptians (Aswan), with the Egyptians against the Tripartite alliance (Britain, France and Israel) (Suez), with the Turks, Iranians and Iraqis against Egypt (Baghdad Pact), with the Israelis against Syria, Egypt, and Iraq (1967/1973), with Iran against Iraq(1975), with Iraq against Iran (1980-88), and now, at the moment, with Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Syria against Iraq. In addition to blocking Soviet intrusion in this region, these movements were meant, more importantly, to avoid the emergence of a strong regional power capable and willing to assert itself and challenge U.S. hegemony in the area. However, by the time the Iran-Iraq war drew to a close, Iraq reached, due to its military strength, a level of autonomy and regional dominance rarely seen in the Third World.

By invading Kuwait, Iraq achieved several objectives. It restored a part of its national territory (created by British imperialism), it stopped the alleged Kuwaiti sabotaging of Iraq's economy (by driving the price of oil down), and it dealt with its massive debt to Kuwait.

More importantly, Iraq announced itself as a new dominant force in the region, a power capable of righting old wrongs, dealing forcefully to assure its national interest, and to rearrange borders and power balances when it felt compelled. Iraq was not behaving like an unusual outlaw state of madmen, but like a very strong regional power.

This is also a threat to the North-South power relationships, between the industrialised nations and the exporters of raw materials. The emergence of a new power in the South with control over vital raw materials would lead to the eventual collapse of the current system. This is what defines the commonality of interest in most of the members of the anti-Iraq alliance.

This is what distinguishes Iraq's invasion of Kuwait from the Israeli occupation of the West Bank, Gaza, Golan, and southern Lebanon, Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia, or any other such aggressions. They did not challenge the current world order the way the Gulf crisis does.

It is these elements, far more than others, that make the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait an appalling and unacceptable event for the West. It appears unlikely that this challenge to U.S. hegemony and the international system created by the West will be met without going to war.

From this point of view, dealing with Iraq demands far more than a withdrawal from Kuwait or even a change of government in Baghdad. Iraq would still have its military and industrial strength and the same fundamental national interest. What is involved therefore is nothing less than the complete crippling of Iraq.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass student

Pawns in The Game

Pratip Dastidar

In the early '70s the oil sheikhs and emirs of the Persian Gulf were awash in petro-dollars. The monarchs ruled over countries that were geographical absurdities, created in collusion with Anglo-American oil interests. The emirs seemed to have it all - big bucks, luxury cars, ski trips in the Alps, waterfront property in Cannes, and Uncle Sam as a bodyguard.

Alas, these fairy tale castles in the sand lacked an element essential to the trappings of monarchical power - grand buildings and wonderful monuments worthy of a king.

There was one catch - the British, French and Americans did not provide the emirs with enough people when they played God in the Gulf. To create huge and wonderous buildings one must have managers, architects, engineers, and construction workers. Needless to say, the managers were European or American.

The British, French, Americans and the rest may not have provided the emirs with slaves, but they did the next best thing. Their colonial misrule effectively annhilated the economies of ancient societies in South and South East Asia, as well as neighboring Arab republics, providing the monarchs with vast pools of potential labor.

The emirs used petrodollars to lure skilled workers, laborers and engineers from these nations to the Gulf kingdoms in hordes. Pride was swallowed so that money could be raised to feed families at home. Highly competent Indian, Pakistani, Bangladeshi, Filipino and Egyptian workers, to name a few, bowed their heads and served the Emirs faithfully. They were subject to incredible abuse.

Across the gulf, from Kuwait to Muscat, Indian engineers purchased groceries for the wives of Kuwaiti bosses, Filipino maids were routinely harassed, Bangladeshi workers were packed like sardines in miserable tent camps. But they toiled and slaved to build the grand buildings that the emirs thirsted for.

And grand they were. Palatial and utterly tasteless. Bizarre structures mushroomed out of the sand - Medieval Bavarian castles, palaces with gold bathtubs, desalinization towers with rotating restaurants and concrete slabs with BMW's sticking out of them. European tourists gawked at these sights from their five star hotel rooms. Alice had found wonderland.

The Asian guest workers found hell with a high salary.

On August 2, 1990, Saddam Hussein proved that the emir had no clothes on. The people of the North shed tears and bit lips at the sight of their citizens being restricted to their luxury apartments and hotel rooms. Kurt Waldheim and Jesse Jackson triumphantly escorted Austrians and Americans out of the region in jet planes, with camera flashes popping.

Meanwhile, the wretched of the earth fled across hundreds of miles of scorching desert to Jordan. My fellow South Asians died in the desert, shivered in miserable refugee camps and were reduced to paupers. The media of the North dripped with racist neglect of their plight. Images of distraught American women and children whipped the populace into an indignant frenzy.

Every day almost 10,000 Asians stagger across the desert into Jordan. The populace of the North has now substituted sugary platitudes for crass indifference.

The Asian people did not leave Kuwait for fear of Saddam. They have seen political turmoil before. They did not leave to fight for the emirs. They know bloated sharks when they see them.

No, they left because economic sanctions have deprived them of food, and cut their salaries to nil. They left because the rumors of war hang heavy, and they don't want to perish in crossfire or under precision bombs dropped by Stealth aircraft.

Iraq deprived the Northern citizens of the right to leave. The North is depriving Asians of the right to live. Over 300,000 Asians remain in Kuwait, prime targets for U.S. bombs.

As always, our people are pawns in a grand power play. India's ambassador to Iraq, K.N. Bakshi, was recently on T.V.

He spoke of travelling across the desert to Jordan, seeing sick Asian women collapsing on the way, witnessing the appalling conditions. Then he went to Amman airport to see the first batch of freed Northern hostages walk out of a jet on the tarmac.

The first hostage was a women carrying a poodle. At this point, Bakshi could not stand the hypocrisy any longer.

"I went into the bathroom and cried. Isn't that strange? A 50 year old career diplomat crying..."

We don't think so, Mr. Bakshi.

Pratip Dastidar is Collegian staff.

AP Photo

Saddam Hussein enters the Presidential residence in Baghdad escorted by top army officers — AP Photo

Northampton Bowl
584-4830 Pleasant St.
Thursday Nights 8:45pm-close
College Special
with College I.D.
3 Games & Shoes all for $5.00

COUPON
$1.50 OFF LARGE PIZZA
PIZZA LASAGNA
Bruno's
SALADS SUBS
WE DELIVER QUALITY
OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. LIMITED AREA FREE DELIVERY
Call Us at 256-0222 and WE'LL BRING LUNCH to YOUR HOME OR OFFICE!
ONE COUPON PER PIZZA

military and gays

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

tions of homosexuals was negligible, and the Pentagon should therefore rethink its policy. According to a recent article in the New York Times, a 1989 study "found no evidence that homosexuals disrupted the armed forces, praised their performance and urged their retention." Both reports were supressed and later dismissed by the DOD.

The DODs policy applies to all branches of the armed services, and therefore applies to college Reserve Officer Training Corps programs. According to Capt. Rodney Millet, head of the University of Massachusetts Air Force ROTC program, all students may take academic courses offered through the ROTC's Military Science program, but gay people cannot enter into military training or receive scholarships through ROTC enrollment.

The Pentagon's policy also applies to gay students in the "unlikely" event of a draft in light of the current Persian Gulf Crisis. If the precident set by the draft board during the Vietnam War is upheld, gay people would be exempt from military service.

SALUTE THE BEEF PRODUCERS

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan Mandarin or Cantonese style—especially for you!
• Ample Free Parking • Major Credit Cards Accepted • Full Liquor License
• Open 7 Days A Week • Take-Out Service Available • No MSG
585-0202 261 King St., Northampton, MA

$J.E.M.S.$
Job Employment Matching System
FALL '90 WORKSHOPS
Wed., Sept. 12 Rm. 911-15
and Thurs., Sept. 13 Rm. 804-08
at 11:30, 2:30, 4:00, and 6:00
in The Campus Center
Non-Work Study Jobs
$$S.E.O. 243 Whitmore 545-1951 $$

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
The outlook is good,
and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Fall 1990
Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.
For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.
We're predicting your success.
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

CELEBRATE SENSATION
CHAMBER MUSIC
The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach
The King's Singers
Turtle Island String Quartet/ Billy Taylor Trio
Emerson String Quartet
THEATRE
The Negro Ensemble Company: WE Plays
A Traveling Jewish Theatre: Heart of the World
The San Francisco Mime Company: Seeing Double
DANCE
Margie Gillis
Desrosiers Dance Theatre
Urban Bush Women
Laura Dean Dancers & Musicians
Oakland Ballet
Bill T. Jones/Arne Zane & Co.
ORCHESTRAS/ CHAMBER ORCHESTRAS
Shanghai Symphony Orchestra
West German Sinfonia/Gary Schocker
English Chamber Orchestra/ Pinchas Zukerman
JAZZ
Count Basie Orchestra
Max Roach & Friends
George Shearing/Joe Williams/ Joe Pass
Sandra Reaves-Phillips
SPECTRUM
Sankai Juku
The Chieftains
Africa Oye!
Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour Revisited

BROADWAY
Lend Me A Tenor
Sarafina!
Love Letters
Side By Side By Sondheim
WINNERS CIRCLE
Midori, violin
Leon Bates, piano
Dang Thai Son, piano
Franciscan String Quartet/Peter Orth
Subscribe Now and Save
Call 545-2511
or 545-2512
THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
1990-1991 SEASON

spending cuts

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

in support for the University Computing Center and Public Safety.

The University has been seeking to delay for two years a Town of Amherst-mandated recycling program because of the cost. The University now operates a newsprint recycling program.

The University was denied a waiver by the Board of Health to delay the start of a recycling program that must be implemented by April 1, 1991. The University had asked to be exempt from the program until July 1992.

University spokeswomen Karin Sherbin said administrators made selective cuts throughout the non-academic University in an effort to prevent class disruptions.

"The University is carefully trying to cut in accordance with orders handed down by elected officials while at the same time trying to preserve the quality of education as best they can under the circumstances."

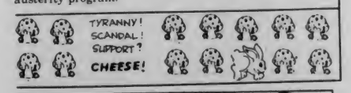
Sherbin said University administrators still do not have the figures on last week's additional 4 percent spending cut ordered by the governor.

She said when the campus receives the figure — projected by the Regents to be a repeat of the July $6 million cut — administrators going back to the cutting block will again focus on preserving academic quality.

Provost Richard O'Brien did not return phone calls from the Collegian.

A breakdown of the $1.7 million in administrative costs released by administrators yesterday:

- Administration and Finance will take a 2 percent hit or $375,000 of its budget by eliminating a four-person tree crew and by reducing shops for rugs, signs, welding, machine shop and grounds crews.
  The office will also postpone hiring an associate vice-chancellor for administration and finance and a professional in the Staff Training and Development office.
- University Relations and Development plans to save $150,000 by eliminating equipment purchases and decreasing activity in the new alumni magazine, Massachusetts. The office also plans to reduce parents' programs, alumni programs and inter-university service.
- Chancellor's Office will save $175,000 by consolidating the President's Office in Boston and reducing the clerical staff.
- The Graduate School will save $60,000 by reducing regents fellowships, graduate school fellowships, faculty research grants and travel and program development budgets.
- The Provost's Office will save $350,000 or 5 percent by reducing support to continuing education, WFCR, the Massachusetts Institute for Social and Economic Research, Counseling Center, Fine Arts Center, the Office of Institutional Research and Planning and the Professional Association of University of Massachusetts at Amherst.
- Common Services will save $140,000 by not filling positions in the Data Processing Center, Internal Auditing and the University Controller's Office.
- The University also plans to save $500,000 in an austerity program.



TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

Computerized upper body conditioning

Ultimate low impact aerobic machines

Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified
ADVOCATE BEST IN VALLEY READERS POLL 1989 1ST PLACE Five Times!
"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"
NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL
Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. South Amherst Karate Health Fitness Center 256-0080

Colombo FROZEN YOGURT
BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Northampton 186 Main St Damon Rd. Amherst Bollwood Walk

How to get something delivered besides pizza.

Gooey, sticky, fattening.....delicious, but once it's gone, there's nothing left but an empty box and a guilty conscience.
Now you can get something more substantial delivered to your dormitory or apartment: The Boston Globe. With The Globe's special college rate, you can get a semester subscription for up to 50% OFF the regular subscription price.
For a deal you can really sink your teeth into, call 1-800-262-6669 x2708 and start enjoying The Boston Globe all semester long!
For a Globe subscription on campus, check off amount, fill out form, and make check payable to: RON HUBERDEAU
P.O. Box 959 Amherst MA 01004
 Phone Number: 253-7009*
 Fall Term: No delivery during Thanksgiving Recess Spring Term: No delivery during Spring Break

UMASS/Amherst Rates	Fall Term	Spring Term	Full Year
7 Days MON-SUN	( ) $24.95	( ) $25.30	( ) $50.25
6 Days MON-SAT ONLY	( ) $12.95	( ) $13.30	( ) $26.25
SUNDAY ONLY	( ) $12.00	( ) $12.00	( ) $24.00

Name _____ Campus Phone _____
Campus Address _____
If paying by CREDIT CARD please complete the following also: ( ) VISA ( ) MC
Card # _____ EXP DATE _____
Signature _____
Cardholder Name _____
All subscriptions payable in advance. No delivery during School Holidays or Exam Weeks. Students with varying start dates may have subscriptions pro-rated. Fall delivery starts SEP 16.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Military should keep building up strength

The U.S. military deployment to Saudi Arabia, along with other multinational forces, is a necessary action. Failure to do so could lead to a worldwide economic disaster.

While the U.S. only imports three percent of its oil from the Middle East, western Europe and Japan are almost completely dependent on oil from that region.

In today's world almost all nations are interdependent economically. This is especially true for the nations of the Western world — E.E.C., U.S. and Japan. What affects one affects all.

If Iraq is left capable of bullying OPEC into submission (and oil prices rise to Saddam's preferred $30 per barrel), Japan and western Europe will be knocked into a severe recession, possibly even a depression.

If they fall, the U.S. is sure to follow. For nations of the Third World this means higher costs of importing goods, heavier taxation and ultimately greater political instability as vital aid from industrialized nations dries up.

Without Western aid in modernization and democratization, reforms in the former East bloc nations and the Soviet Union will be severely jeapordized.

In today's world, even the actions of a small rogue dictator can cause political repercussions throughout the global economy.

What can be done? Continue the U.N. embargo while steadily building up military pressure. If necessary, attack and destroy Iraq's war-making capability — quickly!

Within two to five years Iraq will be able to produce nuclear weapons, according to CIA and other Western intelligence services. Saddam has already shown a ruthless ability to use chemical weapons. Do we really want to find out if he will use nuclear ones?

T.C. Plakias
Sylvan

Citizens responsible for war casualties

"America and the world must defend common interests, and we will."

"America must support the word of law, and we will."

"America must stand up to aggression, and we will."

—Excerpt from President Bush's address to the Joint Session of Congress on Tuesday, September 11, 1990.

President Bush was basically preparing Americans for war. It was in his eyes, his demeanor and his words. War is coming.

Minu Sebastian

Never have I felt so helpless and so disgusted. As an American, I have the unfortunate burden of carrying the responsibility for this country's actions.

I do recognize the deficiencies of the system that I was raised in. The education system, the media and the economic system create values, beliefs and identities that are formed without critical or objective analysis.

To recognize who we are we should begin with history. History is vital. You cannot ignore the past; what your country has done and what your people continue to do. Every country, culture and people have a past which explains who we are, what our values are and why we have been taught to think a certain way.

Identity is also necessary to keep our sense of self, self-respect and personal stability. If we do not have an identity, we will assimilate into the mainstream without any secure concept of who we are or who we might want to become.

These concepts might sound abstract, but they are necessary in order to be able to comprehend the events around you.

Many Americans are not thinking about what is happening. But there are plenty of reactions: "Those damn Arabs," "Nuke those suckers," "Muslims are crazy."

It's easier to defend your country's actions through racism, rather than putting any responsibility on yourself. The events escalating in the Middle East is the responsibility of each citizen of this country. Do you believe that we should go to war?

If you do, then what are you fighting for and do you believe in those values? U.S. soldiers are in Saudi Arabia doing their job. In order to survive, they have to keep a tough mental attitude.

They can no longer debate whether they should be there or not. President Bush and his associates are fighting for the interests of a few, not the general public. So that leaves the majority of Americans to take a stand.

Taking a stand means thinking about what is happening, not just reacting and responding to emotions. Maybe you have a brother, a friend or a relative who is already in Saudi Arabia. Maybe because they are there you feel like you should back them up. But when thousands of people die, are you going to look back and think, well, maybe we should not have been in Saudi Arabia?

And then who are you going to blame? The soldiers, the Arab people or President Bush?

Is it going to take people to die before anyone's consciousness awakens?

Right now it looks like most Americans are silently awaiting the frightening consequences.

Our generation (college-aged) has never seen war. We don't know what it's about. We are too weak and self-centered to even dare to think about it. Because questioning the war means questioning ourselves.

The world is not a place to take for granted. There are too many issues, too much suffering and too much injustice. People are living, dying and fighting as we sit in our safe classrooms, homes and cars.

So if you choose to remain in your own sheltered, unquestioning and bigoted world, go ahead. Just remember for every casualty of this war you will have no one but yourself to blame.

Minu Sebastian is a Collegian columnist

Kenne'bush'port cop-out

I spent the summer working at a fancy, oceanside resort in Kennebunkport, ME. During this time, President Bush had a great influence on our lives.

Kennebunkport is a small tourist town and the president's actions were the heartbeat of the neighborhood. The resort, which was a mile from his sprawling summer home, made us aware of when he golfed and sailed. We knew what days he flew in on his private jet and what days he left. The strip of road that sported a view of his home was always a traffic concern — that is, when the road was open to traffic at all.

Kathleen O'Neill

All these simple inconveniences to the non-tourists got me thinking. What is Bush doing here? He spent almost the entire month in Kennebunkport, the same month he sent 60,000 troops to Saudi Arabia.

If I were a young soldier, sweating and toiling in the desert, I would not like to think of the man who sent me there sailing around Kennebunkport in his boat. I'd at least like him in an air-conditioned office making important decisions.

His men say he is perfectly able to handle the world's problems while in Kennebunkport. I don't see how that is true, unless he has all his advisors hidden away in that enormous house. I assume his vice president and his cabinet members are in Washington, not out golfing with him at the Cape Arundel Country Club.

They say that Bush can return to Washington in a phenomenal short period of time, in his jet. Well, that's great. If he's not out diminishing our own gas supply in his boat, he'll waste even more in his super-turbo jet.

It's said that he has a stressful job and needs a vacation. Does he really need an entire month? I bet it's pretty stressful in the desert, too. Are we going to give all the soldiers a month in Kennebunkport when they return?

I guess it all really got to me when King Hussein of Jordan came to the U.S. to discuss the Middle East crisis with President Bush.

Did the president go to meet him in Washington, the nation's capital? No, he had the king flown into Kennebunkport. The president couldn't even take time off of his vacation to treat the king in the proper diplomatic fashion.

Also, I didn't feel Kennebunkport was able to handle an incident of world security, if one had arisen. I found the situation more than slightly ludicrous.

Maybe I'm old-fashioned, or just paranoid. Whatever my reasons, I'd just like to see one of the most powerful men in the world where he belongs, in the capital doing his job.

Let him take a few long weekends for his vacation. I think we pay him enough to ask that.

Kathleen O'Neill is a UMass student

"I THINK HE SAID 'CHILL OUT, DUDES—DON'T HAVE A COW!'"

This semester's first Point/Counterpoint section contains columns and letters from UMass students about the Middle East crisis. The opinions expressed in these pages are those of the individual writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the Editorial staff. We will, however, print any written reaction. Letters responding to this section must not exceed 45 typed, double-spaced lines and must contain the writer's name, address and phone number.

Absence of air traffic reminds citizens of United States' many options

This August the quiet skies were an eerie reminder of the crisis in the Middle East. The C5-A cargo planes had left Westover Air Force Base to fly troops and supplies to Saudi Arabia.

President Bush told the public that we were fighting for "our way of life" and protecting democracy. A more careful analysis of the situation shows that the U.S. had several options to exercise.

Early on, Saddam Hussein offered to pull out of Kuwait if an international conference were held to discuss Middle East border disputes. The U.S. never took this offer seriously because it would bring Israel's illegal occupations of the West Bank, Golan Heights, the Gaza Strip and Jerusalem (formerly parts of Egypt, Syria and Jordan) into the international limelight.

Another option open to the U.S. was to join in the economic embargo of Iraq and/or send a limited number of troops as part of a U. N. peacekeeping force. These diplomatic solutions to the crisis were foregone in order to mobilize the largest military action this country has seen since the Vietnam war.

Not only are the actions of President Bush illegal, but they are morally reprehensible. He has mobilized the military, called in reservists and National Guardspeople all in defiance of the War Powers Act. Bush supporters point out that we have not declared war on Iraq, therefore Bush has sent the men and women of the armed forces to Saudi Arabia to work on their tans.

The naval blockade of Iraq is an act of war, it is also morally despicable. The U.N. resolution called for economic sanctions, not a blockade including food and medical supplies.

Claiming we are protecting democracy is embarrassing. Of the 1.9 million people in Kuwait, only 535,000 are citizens. Before the invasion, only 60,000 rich adult males were able to vote. Kuwait is run like a feudal sheikdom, not a friend of democracy.

If our dependence on foreign oil is that crucial, we should be seeking alternative sources of energy instead of spending billions fighting a costly and unnecessary war.

The outcome of Bush's little war is certain to bring with it recession, a crushing national debt, unnecessary loss of life, continued global warming and political instability to the most unstable area in the world.

If we are lucky, Americans will wake from their stupor and tell their president they won't let their sons and daughters die for some oil in the ground.

Albert F. Calzini
Amherst

Iraqi crisis not easily compared to Nazi Germany, Vietnam

It is hazardous to oversimplify history. Many "experts" on the Middle East crisis have been both ardent and rapid to draw historic comparisons between the crisis and World War II. Such as: Iraq and Nazi Germany, Kuwait and Poland, Saudi Arabia and France, Bush and Chamberlain (perhaps in contrast), and, most amazingly, Hussein and Hitler. Last week a radio news commentator referred to Adolf Hitler as "the Saddam Hussein of his day." Whoa.

Mark B. Adler

As soon as we generalize about any crisis, we have openly admitted that we don't know enough about this specific situation to understand it. While many events can seem similar to others, this is due to similar motivating factors, but we must remember that every action in history is unique to itself.

I will not downplay the severity of the crisis. Some of the similarities between Hussein and Hitler are quite legitimate:

Like Hitler, Hussein has dreams of becoming a world power and the military might. Like Hitler, Hussein believes that an enormous, overnight lightning attack can conquer both a country and its people. Eventually he will learn, like Hitler, that territorial expansion is not the stepping stone to greatness.

We must remember that there are many critical contradistinctions. Among them are these two: Unlike Germany, Iraq is a devoutly religious country. Unlike the occupied European countries of 1940, Kuwait and the Middle East can directly affect the world economy.

One thing that is ominous is that for the first time since the defeat of Nazi Germany, we are allied with the Soviet Union.

Many protesters of U.S. involvement in leading the United Nations forces in Saudi Arabia against Iraq have claimed that it will lead to "another Vietnam." This is yet another erroneous comparison.

Every president since Vietnam has had to be very careful about getting involved in a military conflict. Vietnam is still a taint on modern American history, and the legacy of the 12-year conflict is still vivid in our memories. However, there are very few accurate similarities between Iraq and Vietnam.

Many protesters against the President's actions have been quick to use other parallels: our invasion of Panama, Grenada and even the early American expansion from the 13 colonies west to the Pacific. Is Hussein's annexation of Kuwait his "Manifest Destiny?"

Hardly.

It was a deliberate act of aggression carried out with the sole purpose of taking over the land, the people and, yes, the oil of a smaller neighboring sovereignty. But the unanimous response of the world (through the United Nations) is not a war over five cents a gallon. Any more than World War II was a war about the survival of kielbasa.

President Bush acted quickly by leading the world in condemning the invasion and moving the military to Saudi Arabia. Such a hostile takeover of a small country by a military giant must not be appeased.

It is irresponsible for us not to see each situation in its own context. Hopefully, the crisis will end with failure for Iraq and minimal fighting for the allies. Perhaps we may still see peace in our time.

Mark B. Adler is a UMass student

Mid-East analysis 'distressing'

As an ignorant, imperialistic United States citizen, my opinion is obviously meaningless to my intellectual and moral superior, Minu Sebastian. However, I do feel compelled to respond to her column ("Ignorant citizens blindly follow greedy U.S. government," Sept. 6).

I find Ms. Sebastian's naive analysis of the Middle East crisis most distressing. She hints that she has a clearer insight into the situation because she was not educated in the American school system and that she has experience in the Third World. Yet, if this is the best material that our "Policy Savior" can produce, this crisis is much worse than anyone realized.

I do not have the time, energy or the desire to respond to all the accusations she flings at the Western world and the superpowers in general. Some are true, some are half true, and some are half baked. But rather let us stick to the issue of the Middle East crisis.

At the very least, Saddam Hussein has violated the sovereignty of a nation he was negotiating with immediately before the invasion. The negotiations concerned Kuwait's violation of its OPEC quotas.

In negotiating with Kuwait, Hussein tacitly recognized the authority of the Kuwaiti government over its own land. This would seem to indicate that Hussein is simply using the Iraqi claim to Kuwait (albeit historical) as hindsight justification for his own greed and lust for power. (Is he American? Why wasn't he playing golf at Kennebunkport?)

I would further argue that the reaction to Hussein's aggression has not been the racist, imperialist war cry that Ms. Sebastian attempts to portray.

Most of the world's oil is controlled by Arabs — the word is OPEC and it stands for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Moreover, the U.S. is one of 26 countries that have sent troops "into harm's way," some of which are even Arab. By the way, what race are the Kuwaitis and the Saudis?

And before we go too far in defending Saddam Hussein as the savior of the Arab people, let us keep in mind that his response to ethnic minorities and dissenters in his country is nerve gas.

Steven Carson
Amherst

TELL THEM I AM SENATOR AL D'AMATO FROM THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA..
HE IS SENATOR AL D'AMATO FROM THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA...
INTERPRETER
TELL THEM I AM HERE TO PLEDGE MY SUPPORT AND SOLIDARITY WITH THE DEMOCRATIC ASPIRATIONS OF THE LITHUANIAN PEOPLE IN YOUR STRUGGLE WITH SOVIET TYRANNY!
HE IS HERE TO GRANDSTAND SHAMELESSLY IN AN EFFORT TO DISTRACT FROM HIS ROLE IN THE HUD SCANDALS AND ETHICS INVESTIGATION!
MARLETTE

The people of Iraq are not the danger or the enemy

What would the current situation be like if Saddam Hussein had nuclear weapons? If so, no one would attempt to back him into a corner. That would be crazy.

Saddam Hussein has used chemical weapons on thousands of his own countrymen, the kurds of northern Iraq. He has fought in futility with Iran for six years, using unethical means to gain territory along the Persian Gulf.

He has killed all in his country who oppose him, witnessed his entire cabinet (21 members) murdered on his order. If you back a dog into a corner, it will attack without concern. People do, too.

Historically, leaders bent on domination either are or are not stopped. Cold.

Saddam Hussein is a smart and driven man.

Like Hitler before World War II, everyone wants to believe him and his statements of peaceful coexistence. Yet his drive to dominate, a sincere inner drive for himself and his kind, is what prevails.

To think this man is not feverishly developing nuclear capability is the same folly the allies made before World War II. With nuclear capabilities, where would he stop? Hitler was driven, and he felt he was doing great things for the world.

When asking yourself what should be done about Saddam Hussein, understand that you cannot understand what drives him, but that his drive is very strong, and to him very righteous.

Eric Nielsen

Vietnam? No. It's more than a different terrain and fighting style, the politics are very different. Normally letting the U.S. base and deploy military on Saudi or other Arab turf would be enough cause to overthrow the current government (as in Iran).

Much of the Middle East is scared. The Saudi government is not being bought by the Iraqi government, either.

Oil? This will obviously make a difference in oil prices, availability and use. The business people behind the politics obviously want to return to the previous control, flow and price of oil.

They may hope for better and support this effort for the wrong reasons. I hope that we will use less oil instead.

Macho? Politically, this takes the heat off the $500 billion banking problem, and much of the country seems interested in flexing its muscles. However, I believe that President Bush and the U.N. have moved aggressively for the right reasons, but these actions may enhance Bush's popularity for other reasons.

My wish for the Middle East is that Saddam Hussein is "ousted" quickly. Doing this is difficult. Creating an internal conflict in Iraq is hard because all of the opposition is dead.

The world is waiting to morally play its military card, and is worried about the politics if (when) Westerners in Iraq are killed.

Once the deed is done, the U.S. and other Westerners must leave, and put restoration of Kuwait and Iraq and military control of the Middle East in Arab hands.

This is the most promising path to stability in the region. And the world.

Eric Nielsen is a UMass graduate student

U.S. involvement need not be military

Should American troops be in Saudi Arabia? Absolutely not! Should the U.S. be involved in the crisis in the Middle East? Indeed, yes!

I don't support the use of this nation's military or the government's support of what's going on in the Middle East. This conflict is nothing more than an oil war.

A war where American and foreign countries' interests lie in the brink of someone's cause, Saddam Hussein's quest for whatever the hell he is after.

James Fydenkevez

Let's face it, as it now stands, American troops are in this all by themselves.

If a war were to break out, America would have in its hands another major war that will shed American blood on foreign turf, all for the sake of our dependence on foreign oil.

I don't think American lives are worth it. Cheap oil in exchange for America's young and respected soldiers.

This is a conflict that involves an American interest, oil. This country is at its peak of foreign oil dependence.

We need to use this country's alternative fuel technology and market it in the immediate future. Though this is not a short-term solution, this could prevent oil war conflicts in the future on a long-term basis.

We would not have to send American brothers and sisters to foreign lands.

The U.S. government did not learn its lesson in the 1970s gas crunch. If the government had researched alternative fuel technology and introduced these fuels in the economy, perhaps by now we and other foreign oil-dependent nations would be utilizing them. If the government had taken this approach, maybe American troops would not be in the Persian Gulf today.

I am not saying that the U.S. should not condemn Hussein's invasion of Kuwait. However, the U.N. peacekeeping force would be more appropriate under the present circumstances.

Why should we fight a war for other countries dependent on Middle East oil? Let them put their fair share into the crisis. President Bush, reluctantly, has been patient with the slow efforts of the U.N. We can wait, but Hussein might not.

We have Hussein isolated from the rest of the world. Most of the world had condemned Iraq for its invasion. The U.S. has a great deal of support from other countries. We ought to urge the U.N. for faster resolutions to the Middle East crisis. Let's take the appropriate action now, before Hussein does.

While our government pushes the U.N. for a multinational effort, we as citizens, and yes, registered voters, should write or call, whatever, to make it clear to Congress that we need to market alternative fuels for this country's future and to save unnecessary bloodshed.

James Fydenkevez is a UMass student

Military might works

As a member of this academic community, I feel a responsibility to answer Jay Allain's column ("America forgets Vietnam as military in Middle East grows," Sept.6), where he intimates that the U.S. mobilization and deployment in the Middle East is an example of our national failure learn the lessons of history.

Consider that, contrary to Mr. Allain's contention, that the U.S. has learned the lessons of Vietnam. War is not merely a military act; it is a political one and has also the dimensions of economics, diplomacy and psychology.

Mr. Allain condemns Hussein's "naked aggression" and says it "should not be accepted blandly." I couldn't agree more. This is why President Bush has diplomatically engineered an effective economic response to the illegal assault on and seizure of Kuwait. Further, virtually the whole world lined up to support the U.S.-sponsered response. However, to ensure the response was not "bland," Bush moved quickly to invigorate his diplomacy with a strength that Hussein would understand: militarily might.

The bottom line is that, due to U.S. sanctions and wholly endorsed by the world community, Iraqi advances were halted in Kuwait; Saudi Arabia is still sovereign... Saddam Hussein, a man absolutely disinclined to negotiate, is making diplomatic overtures. It certainly looks as though Bush did, in fact, learn from history. And it worked.

David G. Cotter
Pelham

ARTS & LIVING

Summer jazz releases: local artists stand out

By BILL ROSENBLATT
Collegian Staff

The summer went by with its traditional spate of album releases, a large portion of which were by young prodigies in the Wynton Marsalis mold. The popularity of these musicians grew, though so did the controversy surrounding the whole movement.

Wynton himself released a soporific album of ballads along with his father, Ellis, while brother Branford had two concurrent releases: his own Crazy People Music (complete with excellent, hip-hop-style cover art) and the soundtrack to Spike Lee's Mo' Better Blues.

Meanwhile, now that Wynton is becoming the eminence grise of the neo-traditionalist scene, CBS has hired a replacement for him: the 17-year-old trumpeter Marlon Jordan, who (surprise!) hails from New Orleans and attended some of the same schools as Wynton did. The other major labels were not to be outdone, releasing albums by such whiz kids as alto saxophonist Christopher Hollyday and pianist/vocalist Harry Connick Jr. The latter's piano-trio album, Lofty Roach Soufflé, was perhaps the most over-hyped album of the summer, consisting of pallid Thelonious Monk imitations.

The jazz-critic world has been toeing the "gee aren't these kids wonderful" line all along. This trend was apotheosized recently by Tom Piazza, who wrote a fawning piece on the youngsters for the Sunday New York Times Magazine. However, Philadelphia Inquirer critic Tom Moon countered a couple of weeks later with a brilliant, gutsy article that said: that most of these young musicians may be technically adept, but that there is very little substance or feeling within their music.

On a more positive note, there were two excellent releases by local artists on small labels that came out this summer. The first, mentioned in last week's Disk Junkie column, is The Return of the Neanderthal Man by the Boston-based trio The Fringe. Those who saw any of their recent Iron Horse appearances can attest to the fact that these three musicians (tenor saxophonist George Garzone, bassist John Lockwood and drummer Bob Gulotti) are capable of some of the most sensitive and exciting music in the jazz world today.

The Fringe are the latest entry in the sax/bass/drums trio tradition that dates back to Sonny Rollins in the late 1950s and includes the remarkable cooperative trio Air. As with Air, The Fringe does not have a "front man;" their music is mostly collectively improvised and explores the various sound textures that can be created with their minimal instrumentation.

Yet The Fringe's music is not chaos; it develops a spontaneous sense of structure. Garzone incorporates the 'squeaks and squawks' common in the free-jazz idiom, but his overall tone is smoother, more reminiscent of Lester Young or Stan Getz, than of power saxophonists like John Coltrane or Albert Ayler.

The Fringe have released several albums, all from live performances, but all have suffered from poor sound quality. In contrast, the excellent quality of The Return of the Neanderthal Man finally begins to give the home listener an indication of the firestorm these guys brew up every time they play. The album's centerpiece track, Neanderthal Suite, is absolutely stunning.

The other noteworthy release is Dynasty by the legendary alto saxophonist Jackie McLean, who is now chairman of the African-American Music department at the University of Hartford. The most noteworthy thing about the release is that it is McLean's first in several years.

Jackie McLean began as a seventeen-year-old prodigy in the 1950s, under such established leaders as Miles Davis, Charles Mingus and Art Blakey. Like most alto players of the day, he idolized Charlie Parker, and tried to emulate him not only through his playing but also by shooting heroin. However, he managed to kick the habit, go solo, and produce a series of classic albums for Blue Note in the mid-60s. Determined to pass the musical tradition and the hard lessons he has learned to the next generation, he has spent most of his career since the 60s in education.

However, McLean sounds like he has spent every night on the bandstand. His piercing tone, fluid technique and truly exciting approach to soloing have solidified, not deteriorated, through the years. The album Dynasty, recorded for an audience in the studio, features a band consisting of his son Rene on tenor sax and flute, South African pianist Hotep Idris Galeta, bassist Nat Reeves, and drummer Carl Allen (whose regular gig is with the Terence Blanchard/Donald Harrison Quintet). Jackie's exuberant live sound, last heard in this area at the 1989 Black Musicians' Conference, is well represented on this disc.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Entering its 5th and FINAL WEEK
Ends Sep. 20, Curtain 7:00 and 9:00

A Lovely, Lyrical comedy about a family of eccentrics gathering in the Bordeaux wine country for the funeral & reading of the will of the family Matriarch. A Civilized film, without violence. Indeed a special summer treat.

"A DELICIOUS FILM. In its wit, in its pastoral beauty, MAY FOOLS has the tang of a Renoir for our time."
—Jack Kroll, NEWSWEEK

In a summer awash with overpriced fluff, Malle has blended the lyric, the comic and the tragic into a film of resonant complexity."
—Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE

CAMPUS PIZZA RESTAURANT
• Grinders & Dinners
• Full Liquor License
M-Th 11am-midnight
F-Sat. 11am-1:30am
Sun 11am-11pm
Delivery After 5 everyday
Call 586-3880

Check out the new Hadley Pub
SOMETHING IS ALWAYS HAPPENING AT THE HADLEY PUB
Thursday 9/13
Minibus Sandwitch
Friday 9/14
Who's Kiddin Who
Saturday 9/15
Electroglide
$1.25 Bud Bottles all week

10 PEARL ST. NORTHAMPTON, MA

Independent ranks swell

BOSTON (AP) — Independent voters outnumber Democrats for the first time since 1962 in Massachusetts, but predictions have been inflated on how many independents will cast ballots in next week's primary, Secretary of State Michael Connolly said Tuesday.

The surge in independent, or unenrolled, voters was coupled with a decline among Democrats and Republicans. Overall, the total number of registered voters declined, but Connolly attributed that to residents who were mistakenly dropped from voting rolls.

According to figures released Tuesday, the total number of registered voters is 3,088,848 compared with a February tally of 3,144,448.

Since the last tally, independents have increased form 1,328,863 to 1,351,965.

At the same time, registered Democrats have declined by 66,184, to 1,324,601. Republican ranks have declined by 12,518 to 412,282.

Connolly, a Democrat, insisted the drop among both parties was relatively "about the same." However, Democrats declined by 4.7 percent while the Republican drop was slightly smaller, at 2.9 percent.

"There's an obvious disaffection with both parties," Connolly said. He said voter anger toward the fiscal mess in the legislature was hurting both Democrats and Republicans, contributing to the surge of independent voters. There was a significant trend of people registering as independent prior to the deadline last month.

Independents can vote in either primary.

Connolly predicted overall voter turnout would exceed 1 million for next Tuesday's democratic primary, and would reach 400,000 in the Republican contest.

Some Republican strategists have predicted 500,000 people could vote in the GOP primary, but Connolly suggested those numbers are inflated.

Iran calls for holy war

Concedes to help evade the U.N.'s embargo

TEHRAN (AP) — Iran's spiritual leader offered more support to Tehran's former archenemy Wednesday, calling for a holy war against Western forces gathered in the gulf since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Ayatollah Ali Khamenei declared that Moslems who die fighting to throw Americans out of the region would be martyrs bound for heaven. His speech in Tehran came amid reports Iran had agreed to help break the U.N. embargo of Iran by allowing in food and medical supplies in return for free Iraqi oil.

A U.N. sanctions committee broke up Wednesday after becoming deadlocked over what kind of food aid to allow into Iran and occupied Kuwait. Most of the delegates want to allow shipments of food only to foreigners and children. Cuba and Yemen were calling for a broader resolution allowing in food to all civilians.

More than 400 Americans and Britons — women and children who had been stranded in Kuwait since the Iraqi invasion — left Baghdad on Wednesday. Their Boeing 747 was chartered jointly by the United States and Britain. Another flight carrying 10 ailing and elderly Italian men flew to Rome.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had said he will allow foreign women and children to leave Iraq and Kuwait but is holding most Western men as human shields to deter an invasion.

President Bush, in an address Tuesday night to a joint session of Congress, said his heart went out to the families of the American hostages, but he declared, "America and the world will not be blackmailed."

Bush also prepared a videotaped message to Iraq's citizens Wednesday in which he said "we have no quarrel with the Iraqi people," and that Iraqis should blame hardships created by the embargo on their own government.

Bush made the eight-minute tape after the Iraq government offered to send a TV crew to interview him and broadcast the interview on Iraqi television.

Bush opted to make his own tape instead. White House officials said they doubted the entire message would be broadcast in Baghdad.

Iran's Khamenei, meanwhile, reiterated his opposition of Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait. but the condemnation was muffled by his bitter denunciation of the U.S. forces deployed to protect Saudi Arabia.

"What has the security of this region got to do with you?" he asked. "The security of this region is the business of the nations of this region."

Speaking amid chants of "Death to America" and "Death to Israel" by an audience of hundreds, Khamenei warned: "Moslem nations will not allow America to set up its security and defense system in the region."

"The struggle against American aggression, greed, plans and policies in the Persian gulf will be counted as a Jihad (holy war), and anybody who is killed on that path is a martyr," he said in the speech carried by Tehran radio and monitored in Nicosia.

Iran's spiritual leaders often referred to their 8-year conflict with Saddam's secular regime as a crusade, but Saddam last month withdrew troops that have occupied Iranian territory since a 1988 truce, and it agreed to share sovereignty over the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, the southern border between the two countries.

Treaty grants German sovereignty, unity

MOSCOW (AP) —The four World War II powers that defeated and carved up Nazi Germany signed a treaty today with the two Germanys, sanctioning their unification and heralding the return of full sovereignty to a people.

Foreign ministers from the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Britain signed the historic document along with representatives from the two German states in the Soviet communist Party's plush Oktyabrskaya Hotel.

The so-called two-plus-four agreement is the last major document needed to clear the way for unification and eventually will end the World War II Allies' special rights on German soil.

It marks the crowning of months of sometimes worried talks over Germany's future strategic role. Other nations, voicing reservations because of Germany's Nazi past, had expressed concern over what some perceived as the potential threat of a nation of 80 million Germans in the heart of Europe.

The treaty incorporates built-in limits — demanded by the Soviets — on the German's military might. It also contains the Germans' acknowledgment that they cannot regain lands forfeited to Poland after the Nazis' defeat in 1945.

The end of the special powers for the World War II Allies above all concerns Berlin, which is now technically under the administration of the four nations and not part of West Germany. After unification, Berlin becomes one city within a united Germany.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev watched as West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher affixed the first signature, followed by East German Prime Minister Lothar Demaizere.

The four Allies were next; French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Secretary of State James A Baker III and British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd.

After the signing, Shevardnadze shook hands with Genscher and de Maiziere. The six ministers, plus Gorbachev, drank a champagne toast.

Milwaukee's Best
Milwaukee's Best $7.99 case
Keystone $4.99 12 pack
Specials
Michelob and Michelob Light $11.99 case
Harley Davidson Heavy Beer $4.99 6 pack
Miller Genuine Draft $5.99 12 pack

Miscellaneous Specials

Tanqueray Sterling Vodka	750ml	$9.99
Kahlua	750ml	$10.99
Seagrams Coolers	4 pack	$2.99
Four Seasons Vodka and Gin		$8.99

FOUR SEASONS
Wines/Liquors
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 584-8174
Between Burger King and Dunkin' Donuts

WoNDeriNg AbOUt All tHE NoIse at tHe tOp of CLaRk HiLl RoAd?

OPEN FORUM Sept. 17 Campus Center Rm. 903 7-8 pm

The noise atop the hill is the

WILLIAM SMITH CLARK MEMORIAL
a new public space, with sculpture, that resulted from a design competition and project conducted in cooperation with our sister university in JAPAN! Hokkaido University

Clark was the first sitting president of UMass in the 1800s, then Ma. Agricultural College, and a leader in launching Hokkaido University, then Sapporo Agricultural College, in Japan.

The Memorial was designed by a recent UMass alumnus (while a student) Todd Richardson (MLA '87) in consultation with UMass Professor Emeritus of Landscape Architecture Barrie Greenbie and two landscape architects from Japan

It is slated to be completed in the late fall - join us at the dedication and reception in the spring.

• This is a sign for BOYS BE, a cafe in Japan named in honor of William Smith Clark. Now UMass will pay tribute to this outstanding leader.

Silber retracts comments about addicts

BOSTON (AP) — Democratic candidate for governor John R. Silber faced some of the anger yesterday as he held a news conference in the Roxbury district, in which he said he "deeply regretted the confusion" over remarks he made Tuesday night about drug addicts in the area.

But Silber cut the news conference short after a woman identified as Priscilla Flint stood up and angrily yelled "I am not a drug addict — you get the hell out of here."

Silber refused to respond to her, saying, "I have no time for that kind of fanaticism."

Speaking at a separate news conference held by Roxbury community leaders, State Rep. Gloria Fox (D-Roxbury) said, "no wicked, racist individual. . .should slander our community."

Fox also said Silber's comments perpetuate the atmosphere of the Charles Stuart murder case. In that case, Stuart's hoax last October that a Black man had shot his wife, Carol, triggered a massive manhunt through minority communities.

Silber's controversial remarks came during his final formal debate with rival Francis X. Bellotti Tuesday night.

In the debate, coming a week before the Sept. 18 primary, Silber tried to link Bellotti with outgoing Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who is disliked by a large majority of voters. Bellotti attempted to show he was different from the incumbent governor without disowning him.

Silber ran into post-debate controversy over his answer to a question of why he had not given a speech on crime in Area B, a police district in Boston with a high homicide rate.

Silber said he chosen to give an anti-crime speech on the Statehouse steps last week when he picked up the endorsement of a major police union.

Asked by a reporter on the debate panel why he didn't speak on crime in Area B, Silber said, "I will tell you something about that area. There is no point in my making a speech on crime control to a group of drug addicts. I think it is far better for me to stand on the steps of the Statehouse and make my address there backed by the police officers of 43 different unions that decided to endorse my campaign and to speak to the Legislature, the governor and Mr. Bellotti on what needs to be done to reform crime."

During the debate, Bellotti, a former attorney general, said he had visited that section of the city about 20 times during the campaign to talk about problems there.

After the debate, Bellotti campaign manager Mark Roosevelt said, "John Silber did what he always does. He ran off at the mouth. He can't help it. Frank tried to do what Frank always does. That is to present a positive agenda. But John Silber gave his abusive comments."

Silber said after the debate he did not mean to imply that everyone living in Area B was addicted to drugs, but added, "If you make a speech in that area, the only people who are going to hear it are the people hanging out in the street."

Black leaders were outraged by the remarks. Boston City Councilors Charles Yancey and Bruce Bolling demanded an apology from Silber after the debate; Silber brushed by them.

"Mr. Silber just demonstrated total insensitivity and in fact managed to insult more than 150,000 law-abiding citizens in a matter of seconds," said Yancey, who called on Silber to either apologize or resign from the race.

"It was a totally inaccurate statement. It was a total misrepresentation of that community," Bolling said.

George Bachrach, a former state senator who now practices law and is a political analyst, said the debate was fairly even, except for Silber's comments on Area B.

"He wanted this debate to be a referendum on the failed policies of Beacon Hill, but instead it turned out to be another Silber shocker," Bachrach said. "Tomorrow morning, John Silber will be on the defensive again. That's not what John Silber wants to be doing Wednesday morning."

The hour-long debate was shortened from its original 90-minute format because of the unexpected withdrawal from the Democratic race a day earlier by Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy.

Asked during the debate to describe the race, Silber said, "This is a contest for change. The people want to know are we going to have more politicians who won't change anything. . .or are we going to have radical change."

"Now we are in a situation where the people are fed up. This is a real test of whether we are going to have self-government in Massachusetts. The people want a discipline and they are not going to get it from the old-style politicians," said Silber, on leave as president of Boston University.

Bellotti pointed to his record as attorney general, where he said he hired lawyers because of their ability, not their political ties, as an example of how he can bring change.

"I've been through tough times before. I can change this state," said Bellotti. "I'll cut the bureaucracy to maintain services instead of cutting services to maintain the bureaucracy."

CONCERNED ABOUT AN EATING PROBLEM

Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia, Compulsive Eating

Help Yourself or Someone You Care About

Presenting: How to Recognize an Eating Disorder In Yourself or Someone Else and How to Help.

When: Wednesday, September 26, 1990

Where: UMASS, Campus Center, Room 917

Time: 3:30-5:00 p.m.

OPEN TO THE FIVE COLLEGE COMMUNITY
No Registration Necessary

For more info: 549-2671 ext.181

Sponsored by:
UMASS EATING DISORDER NETWORK

LIBRARY MURAL COMPETITION

The University Library announces a competition for murals to be installed in the stairways and in the elevator lobby of the 26th floor of the Library.

To be chosen by jury:

Five proposals for stairway landings

Scheme for elevator lobby–by individual or a group

Honoraria:

$250 for each stairway mural
$1500 for elevator lobby scheme

All registered University students—graduate and undergraduate—are eligible to enter the competition.

Time Schedule:

October 15, 1990 Proposals due at office of the Director of Libraries

November 1, 1990 Students to be notified of the decision of the jury

December 15, 1990 Murals to be completed

For further details and registration form, contact:
William Markey, Chair, Library Art Committee, Collection Development, University Library Tel. 5-0058

The Library Mural Competition is made possible by grants from the UMass Arts Council, the University Library, the Art Department, and the Graduate Student Senate.

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL!

from AMERICA'S NUMBER ONE Automobile Fluid Maintenance Service!

The Full Service Jiffy Lube®

Mon.-Fri. 8 am-6 pm
Sat. 8 am-5 pm
Sun. 10 am-3 pm

- Change oil
- Install a new oil filter
- Lube chassis
- Check and add transmission fluid
- Check and add Brake fluid
- Check the Differential fluid
- Check and add Power steering fluid
- Check and add Battery fluid
- Check the air filter
- Check wiper blades
- Vacuum interior
- Properly inflate tires
- Fill windshield washer fluid
- Wash your car, too!

All in Just Ten Minutes!
No Appointment Ever Needed!

HADLEY 347 Russell St., Rt. 9 586-6795
NORTHAMPTON Hamp. Plaza, North King St. 586-6142
SPRINGFIELD 1130 Boston Rd.
CHICOPEE 2017 Memorial Dr.
WEST SPRINGFIELD 788 Memorial Ave.
EAST LONGMEADOW 475 North Main St.

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL!

$4 OFF!
1 FULL SERVICE JIFFY LUBE®
Just $19.99 Complete (with this coupon)
Valid at: Western Massachusetts locations only.
EXPIRES: 10/14/90
May not be used with any other offer.

Middle East

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

ped reading newspapers and watching T.V. This is because I am a heart-patient, and my blood pressure went up. Racism in the media is at its worst. "

Ahmad said that in 1982 the U.N. security council attempted to pass a resolution condemning the invasion of Lebanon by Israel using virtually identical language to that used in the recent resolution against Iraq. The U.S. vetoed this resolution, he reminded the audience.

Referring to the publicity over past Iraqi human rights violations, Ahmad asked why the U.S. press was silent when they were happening. "Why aren't they telling the truth about the human rights situation in Saudi Arabia, Egypt or Syria? The biggest ally of the U.S. in the region, which has received 65 billion dollars of aid over the last 25 years, namely Israel, has murdered 10,000 teenagers in cold blood last year. Why the silence?"

Michael Klare, a Hampshire College expert on U.S. military planning, believed that the forces assembled in the area by Bush were purely offensive in nature and designed for a "no holds barred" high-intensity conflict. He drew attention to the huge build-up of offensive forces like heavy armor, B-52 and Stealth bombers, and amphibious marine divisions.

"The U.S. is not seeking a negotiated way out of the crisis, because this will jeopardize efforts to destroy Iraq's military-industrial complex and maintain a permanent U.S. presence. There is no solution short of war."

recycle

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

"We would need funding for a manager, a clerk, drivers, student help, gasoline, operational supplies and a contract to remove the waste," he said.

A proposed $400,000 recycling program, which was scheduled to begin this fall, was canceled in August as a result of a 4 percent cut in the University's budget which resulted in a $5.9 million loss.

Currently, the University is recycling only through a volunteer program through Housing Services and a pilot program in the Physical Plant.

Albert Potter of the Physical Plant said the cost to the volunteer program through housing is "astronomical."

The Board suggested UMass enlist more of a volunteer effort through students and faculty to defer the costs of recycling.

The Amherst Solid Waste Committee voted 3 to 1 last Wednesday to recommend that the board allow UMass to postpone only the recycling of mixed paper, or chemically treated paper, and only until July, 1992.

CLT

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

about the threat CLT poses to public higher education.

Out of some 300 people who attended the rally, some 70 students marched from Sylvan to Southwest Residential Areas with SGA leaders to spread the word about CLT around campus, she said.

From sign-up sheets passed around during the rally, some 300 names were taken of people who were interested in these issues. "Those people were so interested in these issues," she said. "I hope they stay involved. If we turn the tide on CLT, we can turn the tide for the state and people will start realizing what the importance of higher education is in Massachusetts."

According to Student Trustee Angus McQuilken, a meeting about the CLT petition will be held next Tuesday. This meeting will set strategies to educate the UMass community about how the petition could impact the campus. Two demonstrations are being planned at the meeting as well. The first will be a UMass demonstration on the Calvin Coolidge Bridge in Northampton. The second information protest is being planned with other students from public schools to picket the CLT headquarters in Boston.

TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

GRAVITRON — Computerized upper body conditioning
STAIRMASTERS — Ultimate low impact aerobic machines
AEROBICS DAILY — Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY READERS POLL 1989 1st Place Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"

NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL

Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. South Amherst Karate Health Fitness Center 256-0080

WALK IN GENTLE STRETCH WITH
SHOTOKAN KARATE
and Learn the Art of Self Defense

Develop Confidence
Learn Self Control
Develop Self Discipline
Lose Weight
Keep Fit

Instructed by registered black belts of the North American Karate Federation

MEETS:
Mon and Wed 8-10
Friday 7-9
Totman 101

ROLL NOW!
For Information Contact:
Jeff or Kevin 549-2954
SELF DEFENSE CLINIC AND BREAKING DEMONSTRATION

Good Stuff for Back to School

LAMPS
Swing Arm Lamp $10.95
- Table Lamps
- Desk Lamps
- Floor Lamps
- Ceiling Lamps
- Extension Cords
- Bulbs, etc.

INEXPENSIVE STORAGE ITEMS
- Crates
- Stacking Bins
- Jumbo Bins
- Utility Trollies
- Desk Carts
- Shower Caddies
- Under Shelf Baskets
- Hampers
- Trunks

POSTERS PRINTS 'N FRAMES

BEDSPREADS PILLOWS RUGS
- All Natural Fibers
- 100's to choose from
- Sheets
- Bed Pillows
- Comforters
- Throws
- Blankets

DORM FURNITURE
- Bookcases
- Desks
- Butterfly Chairs
- Folding Chairs
- Beanbag Chairs
- Directors Chairs

Folding Bookcases $44.95 natural $54.95 black

- CLOCKS
- CORK BOARDS
- CD & CASSETTE STORAGE
- TELEPHONES
- SHADES
- MIRRORS
- MUGS
- BOOK BAGS

NECESSARY EXTRAS
Hardware, Trash Bins, Mops 'N Brooms, Coffee Makers, Laundry Bags, Glassware, Dinnerware, Flatware, Candles, And On, And On

n. pleasant st., amherst • main st., northampton • open 7 days

Find it at Faces

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

Hiring Now For The School Year

Interesting, part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm, and Saturday, 11am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $5.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to maximum $6.00/hr.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, 586-8635.

Abt Associates Inc.

Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Bush gives TV address about Middle East crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is finding himself drawn by the Persian Gulf crisis into a role he once shunned as much as Ronald Reagan relished: television commentator

Bush's address to a joint session of Congress on Tuesday evening — his third in 20 months of office — was the latest installment in a battle of the airwaves that Bush, the reluctant communicator, is waging with Saddam Hussein.

Unable so far to budge the Iraqi leader from Kuwait with a massive U.S. military presence or international sanctions, Bush has been engaging in a series of high-profile events choreographed to showcase world unity.

After all, Saddam himself has been making extensive use of television to attempt to influence public opinion in broadcasts aired by the Cable News Network.

Last weekend's orchestrated superpower summit in Helsinki, arranged by Bush, had a high symbolic content — the image beamed around the world of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Bush standing, as Bush put it, "shoulder to shoulder" against Saddam.

And in his speech to Congress and the nation, the president sought to deliver the same message, declaring, "It is Iraq against the world."

He also used the occasion to steel the nation to a possible long engagement. He said he did not know how long U.S. troops would have to enforce international economic sanctions. But, he declared, "Let no one doubt our staying power. We will stand by our friends."

Yesterday, Bush was to videotape a message to the Iraqi people. The administration really doesn't have high expectations that Saddam will allow the tape to be televised in his country, so the message is being made with an eye toward domestic consumption and for viewing in other Arab nations. It is being accompanied by Arabic subtitles and voice dubbing.

Saddam had offered to send an Iraqi film crew to interview the president. Bush rejected that offer but said he would send his own tape.

Televised addresses — including speeches to joint session of Congress — were Reagan's forte, but bush has tended to avoid them. He favors less formal events, and behind-the-scenes diplomacy.

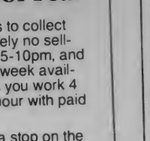
Regardless, the president's address was warmly received from both sides of the congressional aisle.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin (D-Wis) said Bush "essentially laid out in one document a very comprehensive argument for our position in the gulf."

And Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said, "If there are any fence-sitters on the president's decisions in the Middle East, this speech ought to push them off the fence."

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2, Bush has given four speeches on the crisis and 10 news conferences, all or parts of which were carried live by the major T.V. networks

Wesley United Methodist Church
365 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002
10:45 a.m. Worship
Free UMass bus leaves GRC and FAC at 10:35, stops at our door
549-1550



AMPLEXUS

Dance Stuff
Shoes for Tap, Jazz, Acro, Lyrical
Bloch's soft leather and canvas Ballet
for women, men, and children
Freed, Chacott,& Capezio pointe shoes
Exercisewear, Accessories
220 N. Pleasant St. (rear)•Amherst•253-5201

Have you heard? The nicest selection and savings are at Liquors 44!
BEER WINE LIQUORS
BECK'S BEER 2 12 pk 12 oz bottles $15.99 + DEP
BOAGS LAGER & BOAGS LIGHT FROM TASMANIA $4.99 + DEP 6 pack 12 oz. bottles
ROLLING ROCK $10.49 + DEP case of 24 12 oz bar bottles
Miller HIGH LIFE $9.99 + DEP 2 12 pack 12 oz bottles
BALLANTINE BEER $7.29 + DEP 2 12 pack 12 oz cans
COKE & DIET COKE 2 liter 99¢ + DEP
WINE-OF-THE-MONTH
August Sebastiani COUNTRY WINES CHARDONNAY CABERNET SAUVIGNON SAUVIGNON BLANC $3.79 750 ml
BLUE NUN $3.49 750 ml
INGLENOOK CHENIN BLANC FRENCH COLOMBARD WHITE BURGUNDY CHABLIS BLUSH BLANC DE BLANC ROSE WHITE GRENACHE $3.49 3.0 L SALE $5.49 MAIL IN REBATE $2.00 AFTER REBATE
MARCUS JAMES WHITE ZINFANDEL $2.49 750 ml
COLUMBIA CREST SEMILLON/ CHARONNAY $3.99 750 ml
COOKS CHAMPAGNE BRUT & EXTRA DRY $3.29 750 ml
STOLICHNAYA VODKA $18.49 1.75 L
JIM BEAM $12.49 1.75 L
J&B RareScotch. $19.99 1.75 L
GORDON'S VODKA SALE $9.99 MAIL IN REBATE $1.00 $8.49 1.75 L AFTER REBATE
FLEISCHMANN'S SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE $3.00 $8.49 1.75 L AFTER REBATE
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN SALE $10.99 MAIL IN REBATE $3.00 $7.99 1.75 L AFTER REBATE not responsible for typographical errors
LIQUORS 44
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-8344
TWO LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
SALE PRICES THURS 9/13/90 THRU WED 9/19/90
TeleCheck

BLUES NIGHT AT ALLEY-OOPS!
Friday, September 14th, 8:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m.
A TRIBUTE TO STEVIE RAY VAUGHN
Alley Oops
An over-all good time!

N.O.W. opposes Souter

BOSTON (AP) — The National Organization for Women made its opposition to Supreme Judicial Court nominee David Souter official, highlighting writings the group says show he would oppose abortion rights.

"We feel that we know enough about where he stands to know he is a man clearly we don't want on the Supreme Court," said NOW President Molly Yard, who came to Boston to offer support to Rep. Marjorie Clapprodd, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

Yard described the New Hampshire judge as a strict constructionist, who believes that the Constitution and the Bill of Rights should be interpreted as they were written two centuries ago. At that time, women were considered the property of men and blacks were slaves, she said.

"We find that a totally unacceptable attitude in this day and age," Yard said.

Souter has written little about abortion. But Yard said Souter's views indicate he would vote to overturn the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision that made abortion legal.

NOW pointed out that Souter, as attorney general for New Hampshire, argued in 1976 that Medicaid funding for abortion was "morally offensive" to many New Hampshire citizens opposed to abortion. NOW also said Souter opposed unlimited abortion and the suspension of pre Roe vs. Wade anti-abortion laws.

"If they confirm David Souter and put him in the court, that will be the end of Roe vs. Wade," Yard said.

"The women of this country are not going to accept that," Yard said.

Yard also criticized Souter's record on homosexual rights and affirmative action.

Her remarks in Boston came after Senate Judiciary committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. said in Washington, D.C., that Souter should answer specific questions on abortion and other political issues during his confirmation hearing.

"I think that they must ask him questions," Yard said.

Although events in Iraq threw questions about Souter's background onto the back pages of newspapers, and took away the spotlight from his nomination, Yard said she believes his views will be carefully scrutinized once the nomination hearings begin Thursday.

■ football notebook

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19

Around the Yankee Conference: Connecticut, picked by some in the preseason to win the Yankee Conference, was upset on its home field by New Hampshire 21-16. For UNH, Quarterback Matt Griffin was 22 for 32, for 203 yards, and tailback Harry Bourassa, the Yankee Conference Player-of-the-Week, rushed for 244 all-purpose yards. . . Villanova breezed by Saturday's UMass opponent, Maine, 31-7. . . Delaware outgunned Boston University, 34-20. . . Richmond lost to Navy 28-17 in a non-conference game.

Some last thoughts on the Holy Cross game: Senior Aljen Williams, making his first start at cornerback for UMass since making the move from tailback, had 13 tackles and a jarring sack on a crucial third-down play late in the game. Williams also stripped receiver Mark Gallagher of the ball late in the third quarter, interrupting what appeared to be a game-breaking drive by the Crusaders. . . Gallagher, billed as "Mr. Excitement," did not have too thrilling an afternoon, catching 3 passes for 24 yards before spraing an ankle in the fourth quarter and leaving the game. . .

Marco Gabrielli's 47-yard field goal, which tied the game at 10-10, was a personal record. The UMass record is 52 yards, reached by Denis Gagnon in 1972 and Sandro Vitiello, 1978. . .

The UMass band, it has to be said, blew the Holy Cross fans through the back of the bleachers during a raucous halftime show. A platoon of band members also raided the Crusader mascot — a purple and aluminum knight that looks like a cross between King Arthur and the carnivorous plant from "Little Shop of Horrors," — coming away with its sword.

TACO VILLA
Selections from our menu
SAMPLER PLATTER
Slightly smaller portions of some of our most popular entrees for you to try including a Chicken Enchilada, a Mild Quesadilla, a Beef and Bean Burrito Supremo, a Beef Taco and rice and refritos...a real feast
$6.50
And remember, it's not all hot & spicy. It is fresh, wholesome and inexpensive.
Downtown Northampton • Downtown Amherst
Sumner Avenue, Springfield

B'nai B'rith Hillel at UMass in Amherst presents a CONCERT WITH
Safam

North America's leading Jewish-American band
...a little pop, a little rock, a little jazz, a little folk, a little chassidic, a little latin...
Thursday, September 13, 7:30pm
Student Union Ballroom/UMass
$7-General Admission $5-Student
Sponsored by Hillel with the generous support of Harold Grinspoon and Diane Troderman

Carbur's
Welcome Back
STUDENT SPECIALS
4-11pm every day

Buffalo Wings	~~$1.99~~	$1.25
Nachos	~~1.99~~	1.25
Soft Shell Tacos	~~1.99~~	1.25
Potato Skins	~~1.99~~	1.25

Bud Lite draft	99c
Woo Woos	$2.00
Gin and Tonics	$1.50

****
Carbur's Comedy Club presents this Thursday:
Peter London
Frank O'Donald
Barbra Jurglis
Showtime 8:30 p.m.
at the Elmwood Shops, Route 9, Hadley
586-1978 584-4310
The BUS stops Here!

DON'T STAY HOME

London	$398
Nairobi	$1005
San Jose, CR	$338
Hong Kong	$849

*restrictions may apply

Council Travel
Amherst
256-1261

A HEALTHY COMPLEXION AND BODY

begins with a deep pore cleansing treatment and a full body massage. Improves how you look and feel relaxing • refreshing revitalizing also lash and brow tinting and hair waxing.

AESTHETICS

THERAPEUTIC SKIN CARE AND MASSAGE
AMHERST • 253-9879

湘園
PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT

We bring Chinatown to you

Open Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 11:30am-10:00pm
Fri. & Sat. 11:30am-11:00pm
Sunday 2:00pm-10:00pm
LUNCH HOURS: Mon.-Sat. 11:30am-3:00pm
103 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 (413)256-8924

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

Student checking free for a year!

Open a BayBank checking account today, and you'll pay no normal monthly service charges for one full year. Plus, you'll enjoy the unmatched convenience of the BayBank Card—chosen by more Massachusetts students than any other. Only the BayBank Card lets you—

- Bank 24 hours a day at over 1,000 X-Press 24® banking machines on campus and around the state.
- Access up-to-the-minute account information with unique Card features like Account Update™ and Check Update™
- Get cash where you shop, with over 200 BayBank X-Press 24 CASH® machines at convenience stores and supermarkets in Massachusetts.
- Get cash when you travel at over 30,000 NYCE® and CIRRUS® automated teller machines nationwide

So look for us on campus—or stop by the nearest BayBank office today to open your free checking account. And get the Card that's number one in its class!

NOBODY DOES IT BETTER.™

24 HOUR CUSTOMER SERVICE CENTERS AND BAYBANK TELEPHONE BANKING: BayBank Boston (617) 648-8330, BayBank First Easthampton (413) 586-8600, BayBank Harvard Trust Company (617) 648-8330, BayBank Middlesex (617) 387-1808, BayBank Norfolk (617) 461-1740, BayBank Southeast (508) 823-2212, BayBank Valley Trust Company (413) 732-5510

Members DIF

EMPTIES?
We'll gladly take 'em!

WE NOW HAVE MEGABUCKS

Super selection of Beer and Wine

We stock over 100 brands of beer

R+P LIQUOR STORE
"the friendly store..."

Come check out our new location at:
West St, Rte 116,
S. Amherst 253-9742

Freshen Up!
Your dorm room or apartment with Potpourri... Scented Candles... Lamp Bulb Rings... Drawer Liners & Scented Hearts

Compliments
Gifts, Gift Baskets, Decorative Accessories
71 N. Pleasant St. (Above Cafe DiCarlo)
Amherst 254-1551 • Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30

LANGUAGE PATH OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve. Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6-9/17
Amherst Creamery Bldg
150 Fearing St. Ste. 29
549-5065

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

The elephant's nightmare

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Creator of "Li'l Abner
5 Freeway features
10 Young horse
14 Kirgiz range
15 Perfect
16 Existence
17 Corrida star
18 Sound, to a TV repairman
19 Speed
20 Contented employee?
23 Chair
24 Certain pipes
25 Puts on, as a play
28 Celebes oxen
30 Venetian traveler
31 Golf shoe feature
32 Time period
35 Guys not confused or upset?
39 In the manner of 40 Bagger-like creature
41 — -- old cowhand
42 Buenos —
43 Cash register key
45 Talisman
48 Attention-getting sound
49 Assembled mechanism?
54 Eight: Comb form
55 Baseball Hall-of-Famer
56 Young, daft person
58 Den
59 Occurrence
60 City of W Colombia
61 Lambs' mamas
62 Simple song
63 Very, in Paris

DOWN
1 Furry purrer
2 "I slept like —
3 Young salmon
4 Church-going sailor?
5 Lariats
6 Grown-up
7 Ancient Persian
8 Compensated
9 Poky vessel
10 Carnival wheel
11 Honshu port
12 Michaelmas daisy
13 Lascivious looks
21 Once known as
22 Speechify
25 Org. to protect animals
26 House or room lead-in 27 — -- mater
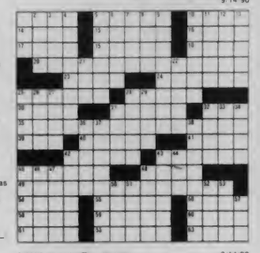
28 Everything: in Darmstadt
29 Hollywood's Patricia
31 Adorable
32 Madame Bovary
33 Kind of estate
34 Boleyn or Hathaway
36 Bay window
37 Smetana's "The — Bride"
38 Crystal gaze
42 Places to say I do
43 Punctilio
44 S Kirgiz USSR town
45 Soap plant
46 Long-tailed parrot
47 Loosen
48 — -- a chance
50 Hindu goddess
51 A good place for dashes?
52 Close by
53 Author Gardner
57 Syllable missing from 20, 35, 49 Across

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	E	E	S		T	R	A	P		E	D	E	N
T	A	X	E	D		R	A	R	A		R	E	V	E
U	S	A	G	E		I	T	I	S		A	M	E	S
D	E	M	O	N	S	T	R	A	T	E		O	R	T
			S	H	E	A		E	L	E	C	T	S
R	E	D	S		A		C	A	L	L	E	R
I	T	E	A			E	E	R		E	R	A	T	O
G	A	M	B	L	E	D		M	O	N	I	T	O	R
S	T	O	L	A		D	U	S	T		E	I	R	E
		R	E	S	T	O	N		T	E	R	C	E	S
T	E	A	S	E	R		F	E	E	L
A	T	L		D	E	M	O	G	R	A	P	H	I	C
M	U	I	R		M	A	L	L		T	I	A	R	A
A	D	Z	E		O	D	O	S		E	X	T	O	L
R	E	E	D		R	E	S	T		E	Y	E	N	S

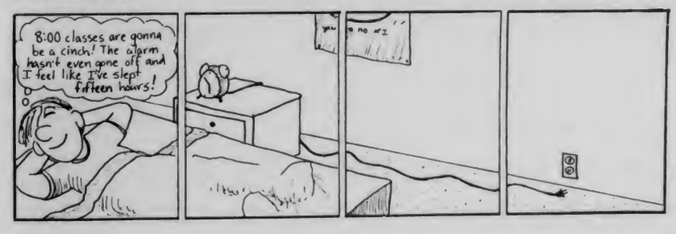
9/14/90



©1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 9/14/90

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

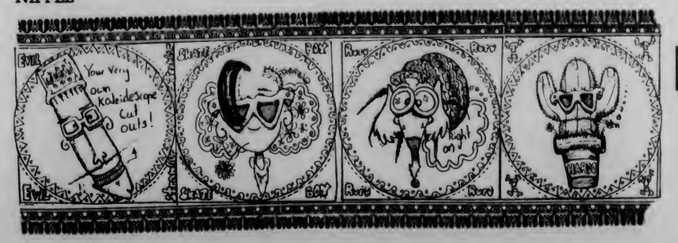
TANGELO PIE
By Tim Sniffen



PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

GRENDLE, LOOK IN THIS MAGAZINE. IF I SELL 2000 MOTH BALLS I WIN A CAR.
I CAN'T PICTURE YOU SELLING MOTH BALLS.
NEITHER CAN WE.
DON'T LET THOSE MOTH BALLS FLY AWAY!!

NIPPLE
By PITT



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Cheese Pizza Barbecued Pork on a Bun	Bacon Burger Cajun Style Scrod
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Flat Bread Sandwich Cheese Pizza	Cheese Nut Loaf Cajun Style Scrod

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Resolve any work conflicts that come to a head now. New harmony in the office will boost productivity. A domestic issue should be settled by early afternoon. A great evening for romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The ways of fate and happenstance are inscrutable but favorable. Although a new development at work is controversial, the change seems positive. Heed warnings from emaciated house pets.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Joint negotiations deserve close scrutiny now. Higher profits are possible. Delay important money decisions. Romance is serious business. Someone from your past reappears. Go slow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Differences of opinion could spark arguments at work. Envy may play a role. Do not expect others to instantly accept new ideas. At home, everyone is willing to pitch in and help.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22) Your optimism and eagerness return. Those who are good with their hands can reap big profits today. Hidden motives come to light, leading you to question someone's reliability. Play a waiting game.

VIRGO (Aug.23-Sept.22) Financial papers and discussions can add to your peace of mind. Beef up your bank account with regular deposits. Evening could find you in an excitable mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Domestic happiness and financial progress are closely linked. Watch out for power-drunk housing staff. Family contacts continue to play a positive role in your life. Quiet talks reduce parent-child conflicts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Discussions with an agent or partner could lead to new financial negotiations. Travel plans could be in the making. It pays to communicate your hopes to others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Writing, publishing and contract negotiations enjoy highly favorable influences. Romance figures in your evening plans. However, exercise caution when using tools and machines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Impulsive promises may not be kept. See things as they really are. A creative disagreement could lead to better understanding. Remain polite. Avoid a tendency to overindulge in food or drink.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Concentrate on your work and any chores you have been postponing. Exercise caution in emotional involvements. A sudden, compelling attraction could be a bit dangerous.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Speculative enterprises gather steam. It will take two-or more- to make a business venture a success. Become a comparison shopper and save big bucks. This is a good day to get work done.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Will Georgiades
Copy Editor.....Mike Webber
Layout Technician.....Pumpkin Starmer
Photo Technician.....Rich Ducree
Production Supervisor..Boisenberry Starmer
Typesetter.....Kumquat Dowling
Production.....Seth Kaye, Jenna Dye, Mike Carvalho

Sports Calendar

Today
Women's tennis hosts Connecticut at 3 p.m., Boyden courts

Friday
Men's tennis hosts New Hampshire at 3 p.m., Boyden courts
Volleyball travels to Brown for first day of two-day tournament

Saturday
Men's cross country hosts both Boston College and Lowell at noon
Women's cross country hosts both Boston College and Lowell at 12:30 p.m.
Field hockey hosts James Madison at 1 p.m., Totman Field
Football hosts Maine at 1:30 p.m., McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Men's soccer hosts Temple at 3:15 p.m., Upper Boyden
Women's soccer hosts the UMass Classic, vs. Cal. Berkeley at 11 a.m., William & Mary vs. Boston College at 1 p.m., Upper Boyden
Women's tennis hosts Rhode Island at 1 p.m., Boyden courts
Volleyball competes in second day of Brown tournament
Water polo travels to Navy for first day of the Eastern Varsity Tournament

Sunday
Water polo competes in second day of Eastern Varsity Tournament

Clemens eyes return; Pappas prescribes rest

BOSTON (AP) - Roger Clemens' progress was described Wednesday as "very encouraging," but the team doctor for the Boston Red Sox refused to speculate on the pitcher's return from a shoulder injury.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, an orthopedic specialist, said in a press conference that Clemens would accompany the Red Sox on a road swing beginning in Chicago Thursday.

Barring any unexpected complications, Pappas said, Clemens will begin playing catch "within the next two or three days."

Then, the doctor said, the two-time Cy Young Award winner with a 20-6 record this season will begin throwing harder on the sidelines.

Pappas said Clemens would be monitored carefully and would return to Boston for further examination before being permitted to pitch.

Pappas said he would "only be guessing" if he tried to pinpoint when Clemens would be able to return.

Asked if the start of the American League playoffs Oct. 6 was a possibility, the doctor said: "That would be wonderful, but I can't predict anything on how his shoulder will progress."

Clemens suffered severe pain and swelling in his right shoulder after he pitched 5 1-3 innings against Oakland on Sept. 4. The inflammation and swelling was diagnosed as tendinitis.

Pappas said that Clemens had another MRI exam, a sophisticated X-ray, on Wednesday and the sensitivity and swelling, along with fluid, have "diminished significantly."

The doctor said that on a scale of one to 10 most people have fluid measuring one to two in the shoulder, while Clemens still is three 1-2 to four. He was nine to 10 last week when tested.

"The medication is being decreased and his activity is being increased," Pappas said.

Clemens has been running and working out in the weight room. He had hoped to return by this weekend, but Pappas ruled that out.

"Right now he's bored," Pappas said. "He feels left out and he wants to get back."

Pappas also reported that designated hitter Dwight Evans is progressing from the effects of a myelogram last Friday for a lower back injury. The doctor said he expected Evans to join the team this weekend in Chicago.

The UMass Music Theatre Guild

is now accepting applications for:

Director Vocal Coach
Assistant Director Choreographer
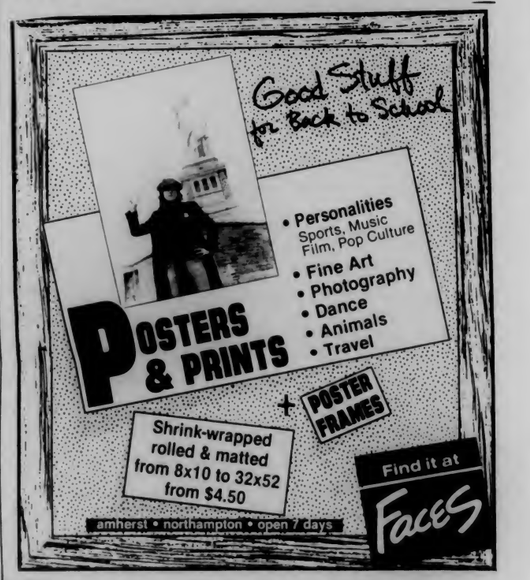
Music Director

for our Fall, 1990 production of

Sweet Charity

to be performed November 29 through December 1 in Bowker Auditorium
Contact Kara Jenkins in the Guild Office 423 Student Union or call 253-3863. All applications due by September 17, 1990



Good Stuff for Back to School
POSTERS & PRINTS
• Personalities Sports, Music Film, Pop Culture
• Fine Art
• Photography
• Dance
• Animals
• Travel
+ POSTER FRAMES
Shrink-wrapped rolled & matted from 8x10 to 32x52 from $4.50
amherst • northampton • open 7 days
Find it at Faces

Photo by Carrie Wyeth

Freshman Todd Kylish and junior Dan Lawrence head the ball in Wednesday's 3-0 shutout of New Hampshire. Kylish was one of three freshmen who scored against UNH.

VAN NOSTRUM
WK. 1
THE HAPLESS FOREIGN EXCHANGE STUDENT IS READY FOR HIS FIRST TASTE OF AMERICAN COLLEGIATE CULTURE
ON THE ADVICE OF HIS NEW "FRIENDS" VAN NOSTRUM THROWS HIS DRINK INTO THE BARTENDERS FACE AS AN AMERICAN GOODWILL GESTURE...
NOW WE SHALL BE LIFE FRIENDS!
WAIT A MINUTE
...AND SOON DEFIES GRAVITY! UP WAS DOWN AND DOWN WAS UP——OUCH!
DISORIENTED OUR FRIEND HAPPENS UPON BUFFALO BILLS AND CONTEMPLATES HIS NEW FRIENDSHIP.
AS A SALUTE TO SUFFERING EXCHANGE STUDENTS EVERYWHERE... VAN NOSTRUM SPECIAL 50¢ OFF* SUPER BEEF
*WITH THIS CARTOON
ANY SIMILARITIES WITH REAL PLACES/PEOPLE IS PURELY COINCIDENTAL

Football notebook

Bledsoe out

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Jerome Bledsoe's ankle, injured just before halftime in Saturday's game at Holy Cross, is broken. He will miss the rest of the season.

Bledsoe, last season's leading rusher for the University of Massachusetts with 594 yards, started at tailback on Saturday. He is expected to receive a medical redshirt from the NCAA, and will return for his senior year of elegibility next fall, according to coach Jim Reid.

"We'll redshirt him and then Holy Cross will have to play against him again," said Reid. "I wouldn't want to be those guys next year."

Bledsoe was injured on the second-to-last play of the first half, when he took a pitch from quarterback Gary Wilkos headed around the right side of the line and was tackled by a host of Crusaders. Bledsoe was carried off the field, but stuck around to see the rest of the game, which ended in a 10-10 tie.

X-rays revealed the fracture, and Reid received the news on Sunday evening.

"If you've been following UMass football, then nobody has to tell you what the loss means," said Reid. "[Bledsoe] is a leader, he worked brutally hard in the spring. . . what else can you say?"

Before leaving the game, Bledsoe scored UMass' lone touchdown of the day on a rambling, 37-yard run along the right sideline, in which he broke several tackles and then dove across the goal line, just inside the orange out-of-bounds marker.

In total, he ran for 77 yards in nine carries.

Freshman John Johnson, who replaced Bledsoe in the second half and rushed for 38 yards on 10 carries, will start Saturday against Maine. Freshman Eric Thimas moves up on the depth chart as well.

Other injuries: UMass, besides the loss of Bledsoe, is healthy. Tackle John Creamer hurt his elbow early in Saturday's game, but returned to finish the game. Creamer's elbow has since swollen, however, and he is "iffy" for Maine, said Reid.

Gaurd Paul Mayberry sprained an ankle, but will start Saturday.

Linebacker Matt Tulley, who missed the Holy Cross game with a bruised shoulder, will return this weekend.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 18

A SHOT OF MEMPHIS HOT WAX IN CHROME FINS AND NEW SNEAKERS. available at Main St. Records RADIO human
"HUMAN RADIO"
their debut album
featuring ME & ELVIS
and MY FIRST MILLION.
TUNE IN, HANG OUT AND GET TURNED ON BY HUMAN RADIO ON COLUMBIA.

COMEDY ZONE
PEKING GARDEN RESTAURANT
Route 9 Hadley
COME EARLY FOR DINNER... It's hard to laugh with a mouthful of food!
Fridays are back... Every Week
FRI - SAT SEPT. 14 - 15 8:30 p.m.
From NYC
Clean but demented material in a Steven Wright vein
RANDY EPLEY
Anyone working in the field of mental health Psychology should particularly enjoy this show. Plus 3 Guest Comics $6
Monday - Thursday 5 - 8 p.m.
All you can eat
BUFFET $5.99
COMEDY RESERVATIONS
586-1202 585-8615
11:30 - 3 p.m.
All You Can Eat
SUNDAY BRUNCH $6.99
STARTING SEPT. 20
EVERY THURSDAY 8:30
All Women Comics
FOR WOMEN ONLY
COMEDY & CONVERSATION
90 Minute Show followed by panel discussion with audience. It started in San Francisco. Then in Providence RI... now in the Happy Valley!
Maryellen DePetrillo
All Comedy Into
585-8615
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS
All Ages - All shows

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE - 50¢ 1-3 MON - THREE & 30-3 - 2 DAYS 4-5 - 3 DAYS 6-10 - DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE - 20¢ WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

ARMENIAN CLUB MEETING on 9/15 at noon in the Armenian club office contact Melking for info 546-4923 New members welcome!!!

ASIAN AMERICAN STUDENTS ASSOCIATION'S 1st general meeting Campus Center Rm 165-169 September 13 Thursday 6:30PM All are welcome!

ATTENTION ENGINEERING WOMEN: Society of Women Engineers is sponsoring a big/little sister pizza party Sept 13 5:30PM Mary Lyon Lounge

MASSPIRG Voter registration, recycling, elementary education. Find out what you can do. Today 4PM 423B Student Union MASSPIRG**

SCHOOL SPIRIT!!! If you have it, use it! Join Project Pride! Call Michael at 6-1331 for more info!

THE 1991 INDEX YEARBOOK'S first meeting is tonight in room 103 Campus Center. Many positions open 545-0848 7:00PM

WE ARE LOOKING for someone to direct our fall play Talk Radio. Contact Kristie at 585-0390 by 9/18

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ALIVE WITH DANCE presents student dance concert auditions Saturday September 15th 9:30AM Totman Gym room 204. All students welcome

ATTENTION RECYCLERS-Housing Services Recycling Program need students- Do an internship, practicum or an independent study with us- We're proof that garbage can be fun- 545-1153

AUDITIONS FOR UMASS MUSIC THEATRE GUILD'S production of School House Rock S.U.B. 9/16 9AM-2PM, 5PM-11PM, 9/17 5PM-11PM Callbacks 9/18

EMTS & FIRST RESPONDERS Fire & First Aid Unit is recruiting. Paid details. Meeting Sept. 16 7pm N409 Morrill. Call 545-5115 S-Th 7-8pm or stop by N418

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM $1000 IN JUST ONE WEEK Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization. Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 50

LOOKING FOR friends, companionship, love? Tune into the Dating Game on WMUA 91.1 FM Friday evenings from 6-7

NUCLEAR WINDS! Hi Wind Sailboard Club forming now. Call 253-7368 Shred!

PARTY!

Where: Blueeas
When: Sept. 14 9PM-1AM
DJ by Perfect Mix Production
Sponsered by: AASA

VISA OR MASTERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back. Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. M-1207

AUDIO

TECHNICS 40W RECEIVER for sale, repaired at factory, now like new! $100 or bo call 6-6831

TV 20" COLOR, features $225 584-0224

AUTO FOR SALE

IS IT TRUE, Gov't seized vehicles from $100? Call for immediate information. 504-649-5745 Ext. 104-c

IS IT TRUE... Jeeps for $44 through the U.S. Gov't? Call for facts! 504-649-5745 Ext. S-598

SEIZED CARS, TRUCKS, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, Deal. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. c-1875

79 DATSUN WAGON 107K AM/FM 4 speed Alfred (W)545-4637 (H)549-5423

1980 NISSAN 200SX Runs good $1000 or B/O Tel 549-4675

1982 DODGE 400 CONVERTIBLE, white with red interior 841,000 miles. Very clean $2,800 546-3142

1984 DODGE ARIES, 4-dr, low miles, 1 owner $2250.00 253-2096

1984 MITSUBISHI TREDIA LS speed A/C P/S P/B AM/FM Radio very good condition $2500 or best offer

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great. Excellent condition. 50 MPG $4500 586-7183

FOR SALE: 1988 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, highway metallic grey, excellent shape, best offer call 413-253-9397

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions. Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4057

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

4 BEDROOMS in a beautiful house in Amherst. Two bathrooms, fireplace in the living room, pool and tennis court $325.00 per room, on bus route, call Bruce at 256-1215

FRIDGE RENTALS call R & P 253-9742

HELP! Beautiful spacious apartment for rent. A must see with new rug and appliances. A steal at $625.00/month, includes heat and hot water. Call anytime 549-1397

LARGE 2 BEDROOM APARTMENT at 177 N. Pleasant St., 1 mile from UMass $435 per month includes heat! Leave message for Mike H. at 545-5615.

ROOM FOR RENT! Located on campus! Stop by 209 Sunset or call 549-2947

ROOMS FOR RENT 3 doubles - $1800 semester 399 N. Pleasant St. Males only 256-8028

FOR SALE

COMPUTER DISKS - cheap 3½ DD HD guaranteed Call Ashley at 546-1812

COMPUTER FOR SALE: 1982 Northstar Advantage 64K. Comes with word processor, general ledger program and database program $450 or best offer. Call 542-5702

LEAVING TOWN, MUST SELL SOON: Almost new double bed, desk, bicycle and other items. Call 584-1983 Leave message

PRINTER FOR SALE: 1982 Epson MX-100 $120 or best offer. Call 542-5702

RCA 18"' COLOR, 13" B/W TV's, Typewriter w/printer interface. Moving sale. Raymond 549-0480

RED MYATA BIKE Ten speed. Excellent condition. Call Leaf at 253-9763.

REFRIGERATOR FOR SALE four feet high. Like new! Check it out! 1-696-8059 Brian

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD HOMES. Available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent foreclosures. Call 1-805-682-7555. Ext. H-2009 for repo list in your area.

SLEEP WITH US
Full size Futon and Frame $150
We'll beat anyone by 5%
Metawampe Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON-1

STEREO, complete component system. 500 Watt output. Jerry 253-5734

WATER-BED KING SIZE 12 drawer pedestal with set up $300.00 253-2096

YARD SALE - everything must go. Lamps, desks, dressers. For every dorm or apt. Sat. & Sun. 15th and 16th Ball Ln. Amherst. Follow signs

FOUND

EYEGLASSES in a brown case in lot 44. If you lost them please call Kim at 548-3500

KEYS IN FRONT OF JQA - dorm/car/house keys on a silver ring. Call Michelle at 6-0035

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield! Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist! Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

BABYSITTER WANTED Mondays 11 to 2 near UMass & Amherst College 18 mo baby 549-7743

CHRISTMAS, spring break, summer travel FREE. Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs. Call 1-800-682-7555 ext. F-1426

CLEANING PERSON needed 7-10 hrs/wk Pay based on experience 549-4541

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 228 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 min walk from UMass) No phone call please

EARN $200 FUNDRAISING opportunity for your group or quick cash for yourself. Distribute popular student magazine on campus in 1-2 days. Call Mr. Wilkinson 800-342-5118

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard. Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

IBM CAMPUS CO-OP: 15-20 hr/wk commitment. Interested sophomores or juniors may inquire at the Co-op office or call Andy at 549-9357

LOVING, ENERGETIC, EXPERIENCED person to care for 3 yr old and toddler in our Amherst home. M-F, AM. Own transportation required. Non-smoker 549-6318

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required. Mornings 7-8am. Good pay. 7days/week. 253-7009 Evenings.

STUDENTS, work at home mailing sales literature. For details call 1-800-755-2334 Capital Services

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS Sept. 17 - Oct. 29, Mon. 7-9pm $50.00 Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL Language Pacifica 549-5065

LEARN HUNGARIAN from native teacher! Call Raymund at 549-0480

WANT TO BE A MATH TUTOR? Enroll in a 3-cr practicum course. Pay available after successful completion of course. Come to RAP office, B-35 Bret, for more info and to enroll

INTERNSHIP

RECEIVE CREDITS LEARNING the music/entertainment industry. Rack-A-Disc needs interns for fall/spring 20 hrs/wk. 6 credits, 586-9900

LOST

GREY POUCH lost in CC. Reward for return of contents. 1-536-3719

LOST ON 3RD FLOOR MOORE 1 left eyebrow If found contact Nad 1-800-loan-a-brow.

SILVER ID BRACELET Jesse Newman It's incredibly special. Please call me at 546-5397 or leave message at 549-4768 ASAP. Reward$ Please help!

MOTORCYCLES

HONDA NIGHTHAWK 1983 550cc 4cyl fast new tires, radar detector, extras, 9,000 miles mint condition, 1,100 or best offer 549-8083 Jim

MUSICIANS

EXPERIENCED ROCK & ROLL/BLUES/ Rhythm & Blues/Reggae drummer seeks to play with gigging band Call Al at 665-7455

PERSONALS

ANGLE! Happy, Happy Birthday! Have a great night in Frichburg - see you later! Peace and punch-buggies smile - I love you!

HEY CRAIG

KAREN F.
Have a Happy Birthday!
Love, Gary

HEY BABE! 3000 miles, and my love for you is, well, fairly strong. Was that your bolt on the postcard you sent me? I thought so. Love, Pete

SUNSHINE- who loves you? I do and don't forget it. Thanks for a great weekend!

TO THE RUNNING WOMEN: It hit me as you two left the E.Hamp 701 Bus last Friday that I could give you a tour of my home town! There are some places around here you've just got to see and there's this one spot... If still interested, show up at the Academy of Music this Friday between 2 and 5pm
-The Running Man

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
small cheese $3.50
large cheese $5.99
2 Additional Toppings only $1 more
Must mention this ad!
549-6073 549-8096

RIDE WANTED

I NEED A RIDE to Long Island, Fri. Sept 14. Have $ for gas. Call Erin ASAP 546-1618

ROOMMATE WANTED

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1224

SUNDERLAND. Female to share 2 bdrm apt. 250 + Close to bus line 665-1130

RUSH ALPHA EPSILON PI

RACK-A-DISC AND AEPI PRESENTS: Large screen outdoor movie "Back to School" Tonight 9:00 549-1037

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course starts 9/10 - $195 Adv course starts 9/17 - $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 - $380 For further information call 549-8401

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S. Deerfield 10 mins from Amherst Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg. Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications, 256-6373

WANTED

KEGULATOR OR COLD TAP 19 Philips 549-8198

MAIL-ORDER BRIDE needed for the green house. Eight men with no domestic abilities. Cook and clean for room and board. No experience necessary. We will train 549-8198

WHO SAID GARBAGE WASN'T FUN?

TAKE A CLASS IN RECYCLING EDUCATION
3 credits - guest speakers, lectures, field trips and hands-on experience. Call Pei-Jen 549-5291 or Sherill 5-1153 for info

SPORTS

Freshmen pace UMass past New Hampshire

Edgerly, Kylish, Bird score in 3-0 win

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

Last week, before the season had begun, University of Massachusetts men's soccer coach Jeff Gettler was concerned about how his team's freshmen would perform.

Yesterday at Upper Boyden Field, freshmen accounted for two of three goals as UMass shut out New Hampshire, 3-0.

Matt Edgerly connected on his team-leading second goal of the year, while Todd Kylish and Andrew Bird both notched their first career scores. The win brings UMass' record to 2-1 overall.

"We wanted to do three things today: score three goals, shut them out, and establish control in their end," said Gettler.

The Minutemen covered the first two items on the game plan. The defense ate up nearly everthing the Wildcats could throw at it, as UNH mustered only 11 shots, and only four of those on goal. Gettler singled out Kylish in particular, noting that "He won every ball in back."

Yet, while the Minutemen did control both tempo and posession in stretches, they also fell into lapses in which the Wildcats imposed their undisciplined style of play. Gettler went so far as to say that UMass was "struggling with that aspect of our game for major parts of the match.

"We were drawn into their style of play for stretches," Gettler said further. "We're a young team, a learning team, and we're still a little immature."

When Massachusetts did control posession and flow, the offense capitalized on the opportunities.

"They put the ball away when they had the chance," said UNH coach Scott True. "We had a few lapses. We lost our composure, we didn't cover the weak side, and they cashed in when they had the chance."

Kylish was the first to strike for the Minutemen. On a Peter McEvoy corner, an attempted header was deflected and fell in front of the goal mouth. Kylish gained posession of the ball in the ensuing scramble and chipped it high into the net unassisted at 25:45.

Edgerly notched his second career goal at 47:03, two minutes into the second half. Off a pass from midfielder Brett Anthony, Edgerly started down the left sideline, blew by a UNH defender on a hesitation move, and got off a low-bounding shot. Wildcat goalie Eric Stinson dove to save the shot, but the rebound headed into the right corner. Anthony was credited for the assist, his first.

Bird, a junior from Manchester, England, came off the bench to score while playing in his first varsity minutes of the year. McEvoy sent a high cross screaming in front of the goal from the right side. Bird, attacking the goal from the left, leapt up and headed the ball into the back left corner at 85:57. It was the Minutemen's best goal of the young season. McEvoy got credit for the assist.

Keeper Steve Armenti took away a sure goal from New Hampshire's Joe Calder in the 55th minute of play. Calder took a cross from the right side and headed it goalward. But Armenti was right there to grab the ball at close range and preserve his second shutout in two starts, and the ninth of his career.

The team's attention now turns to Temple, whom the Minutemen will host Saturday at Upper Boyden field. Game time is at 3:15 p.m.

"It's our last conference game for a month. And we'd rather be 2-1 in the conference than 1-2."

Photo by Carrie Wyeth

Freshman Matt Edgerly was denied on this shot, but scored on a later attempt against UNH Wednesday. Edgerly is the leading scorer on the Minutemen with two goals.

Experience pays off as field hockey beats BC, 3-0

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

CHESTNUT HILL - Alumni stadium was not as crowded yesterday as it will be on Saturday afternoon, when the Boston College Eagles play their first home football game against Ohio State.

In fact, the stands were close to barren.

Those who were in attendance saw a pretty good field hockey game, as UMass won 3-0.

The win raised UMass' record to 2-1, and dropped the Eagles to 1-2

The Eagles came into yesterday's game as decided underdogs. After all, UMass has been ranked in the top 12 for the past several years, while BC has not, and is not, quite ready to break into the top ranks.

It was a perfect night for field hockey, crisp and cool. There was an eerie breeze, a kind that you sometimes feel when something strange is going to happen. And something strange did happen for about 50 minutes. The Eagles stayed right with the Minutewomen, shot for shot, no-goals for no-goals.

But on this typical New England fall night, there would be no Flutie-like magic for the Eagles. Instead, what BC received was as much UMass offense as they could handle, and then they got UMass forward Mara Frattasio.

Frattasio undid any BC hopes of and upset with a pair of goals in the final 20 minutes. Add to that a goal by Lisa Berardinelli, and the Minutewomen ended the night with their second win of the season.

"I think that BC had a lot of chances, they just didn't capitalize in the first half," said UMass coach Pam Hixon. "We played outstanding, to the top of our game, for 55 minutes," said Eagle coach Sherren Granese. "They have more experience, when it came to working under pressure, we just panicked."

Experience played a major role in yesterday's game. The Minutewomen were patient, but at the same time, they were aggressive. UMass attacked the ball as Hixon had instructed all week, and at the end of the game, all their hard work paid off.

"Once we let down once, we let down two more times," Granese said. "We made a couple of mental mistakes that cost us."

Mental mistakes are characteristic of a young team, and BC is certainly young, with four freshmen and a bunch of sophomores. While the Eagles were faltering in the end, the Minutewomen remained poised. UMass played close to flawless mental field hockey. They took advantage of three BC errors, converting them into three goals.

"Once we started to cook, we went," Hixon said. "Their inexperience certainly helped us in one respect, and our experience, on the other hand, scored the goals for us."

The most positive thing that resulted from this game was UMass' persistent play. Midfielder Sherlan Cabralis constantly thwarted the BC attack, while creating scoring opportunities for her own team.

"We want to take risks to make things happen, and I think they did that," Hixon said of her team.

Better luck Saturday BC, you're going to need it.

Rugby falls in opener

Match with Irish turns ugly

By DAVE SZPILA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts Rugby Club opened its season with a 32-0 loss to the Royal College of Surgeons from Ireland yesterday. The defeat, however, will not be a part of their 1990 win/loss record.

In an incredibly rough outing, the boys from UMass showed that they could hold their own against a more experienced team by allowing only eight second half points, a half characterized by insults to nationality and a roundhouse punch from one of the Irish that met its unsuspecting target dead on. The blow almost connected with a fan as well.

Although there were no offensive standouts, coach Doc Laurence said he was impressed by players Timmy Joyce and Bob Doyle and also noted that one of his backs, Stan Gajda, was absent because of a hip injury.

The game yesterday was by no means a preview for the upcoming season. The team has only been training together for a short time and it has not yet gained the experience their coach knows it needs.

The club's next match will be this Saturday in Boston against Boston College.

Sox skid ends; Boddicker wins

BOSTON (AP)- Mike Boddicker stopped Boston's skid with a seven-hitter as the Red Sox ended a long homestand Wednesday night with a 6-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ellis Burks and Carlos Quintana led a 13-hit attack with three singles each as the Red Sox, who began to play three games ahead of second-place Toronto in the American League East, won for just the fourth time in 10 games, and completed a 7-6 homestand.

Boddicker (15-8) struck out three and didn't walk a batter as he reached the 15-victory mark for the second year in a row, a personal high since he won 20 for Baltimore in 1984.

Milwaukee's Teddy Higuera (10-7) gave up all the Boston runs and 12 hits in six innings.

The Red Sox took a 1-0 lead in the first on Wade Boggs' two-out double and Burks' single. In the second, Tom Brunansky singled and went to third on a single by Tony Pena, who took second on right fielder Rob Deer's throwing error. Louis Rivera scored both runners by grounding a single through a drawn-in infield.

The Red Sox made it 4-0 in the fifth on a single by Quintana, a wild pickoff throw by Higuera and a single by Burks.

The Brewers, who won the season series with Boston 8-5, spoiled Boddicker's shutout bid in the sixth. Paul Molitor broke a 0-16 slump with a leadoff triple and scored on Jim Gantner's grounder to first, which Quintana fumbled for an error.

Boston added two insurance runs in the sixth on RBI singles by Quintana and Boggs, who raised his league-leading hit total to 173.

In other Sox news, relief ace Jeff Reardon, who underwent surgery for a ruptured disc in his lower back Aug. 4, was activated Wednesday.

Reardon, who ranks fourth all-time with 284 career saves, pronounced himself fit after throwing all his pitches in the bullpen.

His unexpected early return gives the Boston bullpen a big boost in the club's stretch run for the AL East title.

In 39 appearances this year, Reardon had a 3-3 record with a 3.30 earned run average. He has 18 saves in 25 opportunities.

Sports Notice

FIELD HOCKEY: The women's field hockey team will be holding open tryouts from 3-6 p.m. today and Friday on Totman Field. If interested, contact Pam Hixon, Lynn Carlson or Andrea Savage at 545-1942.

SOFTBALL: The softball team will be holding open tryouts from 7:45-9:30 a.m. today through Friday, Sept. 18 at Totman Field. If interested, please call assistant coach Gina LaMandre at 545-0038.

INTRAMURALS: Entries for football (men's, women's and co-ed), soccer (men's, women's), and softball (co-ed) are still being accepted at Boyden 215. Play begins Monday, Sept. 17.

By JODY GABIN
Collegian Staff

BIM SKALA BIM

Bim Skala Bim do everything in a big way. The energetic octet's music is a versatile mesh of rock n' roll, Jamaican/Latino polyrhythms and mid-'70s English pub-style ska. Through exhaustive touring (they average approximately 20 shows a month), they've garnered a strong cult following, selling out shows stateside, as well as in Canada, Mexico and Britain. They were one of the first Boston bands to successfully complete a totally self-produced transcontinental tour, which gave them the coveted opportunity of being able to quit their day jobs.

"Most of us don't work day jobs anymore," says lead singer Dan Vitale. "The most important thing is to get out of town and play. You've got to break yourself in other areas."

They've managed to spread the word with just two full-length releases: 1986's Bim Skala Bim (Fonograph) and 1989's Tuba City (Oi Ska/Celluloid), and two compilations: Mash It Up, a showcase of Boston's best ska and Mashin' Up the Nation, Volume I, which features bands from eight different states.

The secret to Bim's success? The band operates as an absolute democracy, with each member having equal influence over affairs. The members share all chores and responsibilties: bookkeeping, driving, maintaining mailing lists, etc. They've logged in an incredible amount of road hours without constant attention from a record company or road-manager, amazingly steering clear of major personality conflicts.

Bim Skala Bim are more than just a "good time" ska band. Their obvious affection and respect for their music and each other places them a grade above the rest, and at the forefront of a surprisingly active ska revival.

"There's a lot of bands playing ska," says Vitale. "More people are starting to get in touch with it."

Bim's lyrics and ideology are as energetic and powerful as their stage presence. They've organized and performed at innumerable benefits, with causes ranging from Jamaican Hurricane Relief, Art for Nicaragua, AIDS, the homeless and animal rights. They're "socially aware" without being preachy, making a boisterous racket while testifying to troubles global, national and personal.

Bim Skala Bim and Great Train Robbery will be appearing at Pearl Street in Northampton tonight. The show is 18-and-over, doors open at 8:30 p.m.

Cover by Doug Johnston

Alternatives to Academics

THURSDAY

Arts in the Park will be presented by the Northampton Center for the Arts in Pulaski Park on Main Street in downtown Northampton. The event will include live music, art exhibits, performing arts and a barbeque dinner. Some performers who are expected to attend are jazz musician Michael Gregory, folksinger Judy Polan and mime artist Mark Morrison. Free. 4:30 p.m.- 8 p.m.

Bananas, an outrageously funny film by Woody Allen about how Allen's character becomes embroiled in a revolution south of the Rio Grande, will be shown at Hampshire College in the Adele Simmons Lecture Hall. The show starts at 7 p.m. Admission is free.

Who's Kiddin Who will play their far out and funky kind of music for the patrons of Twister's in Amherst.

SAFAM Concert will crank with Jewish/American rock-n-roll at UMass in the Student Union Ballroom. 7:30 p.m. Admission is $5 for students and $7 for the general public.

Miracle Legion will swirl and stun the patrons of the Iron Horse with their brand of well-crafted guitar pop. 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 in advance.

Farmhouse will play at Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton. 10 p.m.

Isreali Democracy:

Achievements and Challenges is a lecture to be given by Shlomo Avineri, a political science professor at the Hebrew University. The lecture will be given at Amherst College in the Converse Assembly Room. 8 p.m. Free.

Not Necessarily the Blues will perform a free outdoor concert at the Forbes Library in Northampton showcasing their unique blend of ragtime, folk, jazz and blues. 8 p.m.

Bim Skala Bim/Great Train Robbery will bring their hard edge blend of ska, funk, reggae and calypso to Pearl Street. 8:30 p.m. $6. 18-and-over

FRIDAY

The Princess Bride, Rob Reiner's hysterical fairy tale romp, will be shown at Smith College in Wright Hall at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Free.

The Mouse That Roared, a satirical film starring Peter Sellers and Jean Seberg, will be shown at Smith College in Wright Hall once at 2 p.m. and again at 4 p.m. Free.

Knife in the Water, a tension-filled drama directed by Roman Polanski, will be shown at Hampshire College in Franklin Patterson Main Lecture Hall. 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Admission is $1.

Rockin' Dave and the Rent Party will entertain the patrons of Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton with their zydeco soul sound. 10 p.m. $4

Dog Day Afternoon, a film with Al Pacino starring as a down-and-out guy having a terrible day in New York City, will be shown at Amherst College in the Campus Center Theater at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Free. Also Saturday.

SATURDAY

Rude Girls will have their record release party at the Iron Horse. The party will start at 7 p.m. Tickets are $8 in advance.

The Breakdown will play at Pearl Street in Northampton. Show starts at 8:30 p.m.

Cyclone Scotty will jam their southern fried rock-n-roll at Twister's Tavern in Amherst.

Big Bang Theory will play at Sheehan's Cafe. Show starts at 10 p.m.

SUNDAY

Evening of the Jesters, a film by Swedish director Ingmar Bergman which is also known as The Naked Night, will be shown at Hampshire College at the Adele Simmons Lecture Hall. The film will be shown at 2 p.m. Free.

Little Women/Shockra/The Tribulations will play at Pearl Street in Northampton. 8:30 p.m.

Buddy Guy will play his smouldering Chicago-style blues that has influenced guitar greats such as Clapton and Hendrix at the Iron Horse. one at 7 p.m. and the next at 10 p.m. Tickets are $16 in advance.

Tony Richards and the K-Man Band will bring their smoking mix of R-n-B, pop and blues to Katina's in Hadley. Doors open at 8 p.m. $5 for those 21-and-over and $7 for those 18-20.

Ambassa will bring their brand of traditional reggae to Twister's Tavern in Amherst.

Anne Hills, a folk, ballad and country singer, will perform at Amherst College in the Campus Center Frontroom. Show starts at 8 p.m. $1 with Amherst College I.D. and $7 for the general public.

The Tenant, a cult horror film directed by Roman Polanski about a timid clerk who rents an apartment in which the previous inhabitant committed suicide, will be shown at Hampshire College in Franklin Patterson Lecture Hall. The film will be shown at 8 p.m. $1.

Slottershack/Doom Patrol will whip the crowd at Katina's in Hadley into a mega-moshing mass. Doors open at 8 p.m. $3 for those 21 and over and $5 for those 18-20.

Open For Lunch 7 Days a week

BUY ONE GET ONE for 99¢

7 DAYS ONLY!

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Hours:
Sun-Thurs.
11am to 2am
Fri. and Sat.
11am to 3am

256-8911

CARRY OUT ONLY COUPON

99¢ Pizza

Buy any large pizza or 12" pan style pizza get one of equal or lesser toppings

99¢

Expires 9/20/90
One coupon per order
Not good in Northampton

CARRY OUT ONLY

DELIVERY COUPON

$1.99 Pizza

Buy any large or 12" pan style pizza get of equal or lesser toppings FOR ONLY $1.99

DELIVERED in 30 Mins. or less

Expires 9/20/90
One coupon per order
Not good in Northampton

Little Women potential giants

By NOA C. BEN-YEHUDA
Collegian Correspondent

I first saw the band Little Women perform with Burning Spear as their opening band, and later as they rocked with David Lindlay in Boulder, Colorado where they were local favorites.

Friday night at Pearl Street Little Women will be able to prove themselves as potential local favorites in rock, R³B and (Glenn Campbell-inspired) zydeco.

Little Women is actually a group of men. Their Northampton date is one in a string of 200 stops that the group is scheduled for to promote their latest album Pretty Wiped Out (Outerspace Records).

In our phone convesation, they told me they were checking out of a Pennsylvania hotel that had "too much dirt in the pool." Jerry Joseph, lead singer said he was "thrilled to death" at the prospect of leaving the muggy weather behind in Penn.

In his rough, jibbing voice he told of the band's decision to locate in Portland, Oregon.

"The heavy metal and African rhythm scenes are pretty strong there," Joseph said. "We've been picking up some of that into our own music." Little Women play all original tunes, however their sound draws from everything: zydeco to Zulu, once heavily influenced by reggae they're now developing a more hard-edged sound.

Joseph's lyrics tend toward the darker side of life. "God, Guts and Guns" was inspired by a bumper sticker he spotted during the week of a schoolyard shooting that proclaimed: "God, Guts and Glory made America, let's keep it that way."

Joseph said these past few years have been "incredible" politically. Of recent headlines, he said the one that could translate best into a great song is that of the resignation of Chief Justice William Brennan, that is if he had time.

Joseph said that being on the road for so long is gruelling. When he does chance to escape, his vacation spot of choice is Costa Rica — where he relaxes with a beer in hand on the beach.

A show with Little Women should prove to be an excellent night with plenty of chances for dancing out your blues. One reviewer said of this band: "Louisa May Alcott would be proud."

Little Women, Shockra, and the Tribulations will be at Pearl Street Friday night. Doors open are at 8:30 p.m. 21-and-over.

PARAMOUNT
SPRINGFIELD

MIDNIGHT OIL ORIGIN
Sept. 25, 7:30 pm

MICHAEL FRANKS
ANGELA BOFILL
Oct. 7, 7:30 pm

WPKX

KATHY MATTEA
Oct. 28, 7:30 pm

ROBERT CRAY BAND
with The Memphis Horns
LOS LOBOS
DIRTY DOZEN BRASS BAND
Nov. 1, 7:30 pm

1700 Main St., Springfield, MA
Paramount Box Office (413) 734-5874, M-F 10-5, Sat. 12-5
TICKETRON and TICKETRON PHONE CHARGE (800) 382-8080
Presented by LIVE Productions

Still looking for

OFF-CAMPUS Housing . . .

Chi Rho House
may be the place for you

- Christian
- quiet
- small and personal - up to 50 residents: Grads & Undergrads
- open during semester breaks
- only $1,350 per semester (which includes 12 meals per week)
- on the Orchard Hill Bus line (next to Mather Career Center)
- LOTS OF FUN: dances, hiking, day-trips, etc.

FOR INFO CALL: 549-9973

Rock 102 WAQY and Pearl Street present

Battle of the Bands Semi-Finals

Mon., Sept. 17
Who's Kiddin' Who
The Equalites
The Mess

Tues., Sept. 18
Rockin' Dave and the Rent Party
Dertonz
Farmhouse

Finals

Saturday Sept. 22
Showtime 8:30 pm

Rock 102 Announcers will be on hand to judge each night

Pearl Street Battle of the Bands winner receives:

- Hand-Built Graphic Guitar By Dean Courtesy of East Coast Music Mall of Newington CT
- 10 Hour Free Studio Time Courtesy of Longview Farms, N. Brookfield, MA
- $200 Gift Certificate from Downtown Sounds, Northampton, MA
- Dinner for Band Courtesy of Spoletto's of Northampton, MA
- 75 Assorted Cassettes Courtesy of CBS records

SPOLETO

Columbia

DOWNTOWN SOUNDS

RCA

Richards and K-Men kickin' into the 90s

By DANIELLE DOWLING
Collegian Staff

Charlie Watts, drummer for the Rolling Stones, once said of Tony Richards and the K-Man Band, "This band is really, really good."

One could be impressed by such a remark if one highly regards Charlie Watts' musical taste. However, this is not the only impressive aspect of the Connecticut-based sextet. Their energetic live performances have scored them opening gigs with such acts as Taylor Dayne, Cheap Trick, John Entwhistle of the Who and Meatloaf.

Even with all of this under their belts, their sound, which has been described as a blend of soul, funk, ska and R³B, seems to remain Connecticut's best kept secret.

Tony Richards said in an interview with the New Fairfield Citzen News, "Well, we would like to get a major label deal but we're not exactly depending on it. After all of these years in the business, I tend to get a little cynical about the business."

Inspired by the Beatles, Richards began his musical career as a teenager back in 1964 when he picked up the guitar for the very first time. Like so many of his peers at that time, his ambition was to get girls. But when guitarist like Eric Clapton and Jimi Hendrix crafted the rock n' roll guitar sound into a fine work of art, Richards' interest intensified.

In 1973, he made camp in Danbury, Connecticut where he began to work with bluesrock legends such as Boz Scaggs, Johnny Winter, James Cotton and Steve Miller. Around the same time, he formed his first band, New York Chalk. The line-up of New York Chalk transformed into a local legend known as Brother Jump, which recorded one LP, Anthem of the Eighties before its demise.

Three years ago, after some rest, Richards formed the K-Man Band to relieve him of the financial debt with which the Brother Jump project had left him. Former Brother Jump bandmate, Bo Ognan, who plays the tenor sax, joined Richards in this new venture and remains in the band today. Besides Richards and Ognan, the present line-up includes Paul Riley on trombone, Greg Turek on bass, Dale Adams on keyboards and Tim Engle on drums.

The group is now looking forward to their upcoming fall release, Live Sweat, which will be released on L³B Records. This is their fourth album and it was recorded live at a club in Connecticut. At the production helm for this recording was Thom Panunzio who is well-known for his work on U2's Rattle and Hum and Bruce Springsteen's live five-record set.

The first single to be released off this album will be "United States of Love," a screaming R³B tune which deals with the inability of people to get along with each other.

But, the album will not only be filled with political and social rhetoric. They approach the topic of S³M on "Lisa, Lisa" which segue-ways into "I Come To You," a song that recounts one lover's needs for the other in times of crises.

The group is also scheduled to release 18 tracks on cassette and video which will be titled Hometapes and sold only in clubs.

As for the future of Tony Richards and the K-Man band, Richards seems to be very optimistic. "This band is definitely going into the 90s."

Tony Richards and the K-Man Band will play Katina's on Friday. Doors open at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 for anyone 21-and-over and $7 for those 18-20.

WELCOME BACK

Surprise someone you care about

Always in Bloom
Full Service Flower Shop
220 No. Pleasant Street, Amherst
253-5545

MICHAEL'S
Billiard Room & Sports Bar
The Area's Best Football Action
- Five 9 ft. Championship Tables
- Your favorite sporting events on large screen TVs
- $1.00 Drafts in ice cold mugs
- 25 cent hot dogs
- Appetizer menu
- This Week: $1 Rolling Rock Bottles
- Thursday is Ladies' Night—Ladies play pool for half price on Thurs. Night

Amherst's Newest & Most Exciting Billiard Room & Sports Bar

Formerly Changes Nightclub
256-8284
Hours: 11am-1am everyday but Sun.
Sun. 12 noon to 1am
21 and older
MICHAEL'S
Rt. 9, Amherst
(Next to Hunan Garden Rest.)
Proper ID required

COUPON
FREE LITER OF SODA WITH ANY LARGE PIZZA
PIZZA LASAGNA SALADS SUBS
Bruno's
WE DELIVER QUALITY
OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. LIMITED AREA FREE DELIVERY
Call Us at 256-0222 and WE'LL BRING LUNCH to YOUR HOME OR OFFICE!
ONE COUPON PER PIZZA/MAY NOT BE COMBINED WITH OTHER COUPONS

Spirit Haus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS

ROLLING ROCK Rolling Rock 12oz bar bottles $10.49 case
Miller Genuine Draft 2/12 packs 12oz bottle $10.79 case
Lite Suitcase $11.79 case
Michelob Michelob Light Michelob Dry 2/12 pack 12oz. cans $11.99
Carling Black Label 12oz bar bottles $6.99 case
Beck's Beer 2/12 packs 12oz bottles $15.99 case

1/2 Kegs starting at $27.00
Many more in-store specials on domestic and imported beer

Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 750ml $6.99
Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whisky 750ml $9.99
JOSE CUERVO Tequila Gold 750ml $8.99
Gilbey's Gin 750ml with Schweppe's 1L Tonic Water $6.99
Bacardi Breezers Spirit Coolers All flavors $3.99 4 pack
Popov Vodka 1.75L $9.99

338 College St., Rt.9, Amherst MA 253-5384 MC/VISA
Hours: M-F:10:00am-11:00pm Sat.:9:00am-11:00pm

WEATHER	EDITORIAL	SPORTS
Today could be partly sunny, with perhaps a chance of rain. Highs around 75.	Jeremy Levinson enlightens us with his views about state politics. Page 7.	Football begins tomorrow at home when the Minutemen face Maine. Preview page 20.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 8

Academic reductions proposed by O'Brien

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Provost Richard O'Brien yesterday outlined a new proposal which calls for a reduction rather than termination of selected departments and academic programs at the University of Massachusetts.

The plan, presented to the Senate Faculty meeting yesterday, is aimed at ameliorating the $6 million budgetary cut for the 1990-1991 academic year.

The proposed program, which would save the University $3.5 million dollars, O'Brien said. It calls for a general freeze in hiring faculty and the drawing up of a list of departments targeted for reductions.

Under the proposal, the departments selected for reductions would not renew contracts of their untenured faculty and will not replace the tenured faculty members who will leave the University.

The new plan is different from the original proposal made by President-Chancellor Joseph Duffey and Provost O'Brien in August.

That proposal called for "using selective academic program terminations, in addition to other means, to help meet necessary budget reductions."

The move to reduce rather than terminate selected departments came about because of O'Brien's intention not to dismantle the university and determination "to protect the tenured faculty," said Frank Hugus, Secretary of the Faculty Senate.

O'Brien said, however, that if the Citizens for Limited Taxation proposal passes, an option for termination would be reconsidered.

The Citizens for Limited Taxation proposal, if passed, will roll back tax levels in Massachusetts to 1988 levels. This would

CONTINUED ON PAGE 16

Counselors relocated

Everywoman's Center programs hurt by cuts

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

The Everywoman's Center was notified by administrators last week that two positions would be cut and relocated to another part of the University, said a spokeswoman for the Center.

"The Coordinator of Public Relations and Outreach, Nieve Santana, was reassigned to Financial Aid and the Coordinator of the Counseling Services, Susan Mahler, was reassigned to Mental Health Services," Carol Wallace, the head of the EWC, said.

With the addition of Mahler to the Mental Health Services they will be at full staff while the EWC counseling services will be eliminated.

She said the only counseling which will be available is for survivors of sexual assault and women who have already started counseling. Other women will have to be referred somewhere else, she added.

These two positions that were cut make a total of six in the past four years, Wallace said.

"I feel that women's services have been targeted. There is a definite pattern," Wallace said. "We have lost six positions out of nine. These are critical services."

Wallace said it is harder to make referrals because the state budget cuts have reduced the number of services available to women in the valley.

"Last year the counseling program had seven support groups ranging from "eating disorders" to "adult daughters of alcoholics. Now the program cannot offer any groups," she said. "However, the Against Violence Against Women Program of the EWC will offer support groups for

CONTINUED ON PAGE 16

Collegian photo by Donell Ahern

ALL IN A ROW – Trendy mountain bikes lined up in the racks outside the Student Union.

Indians rally for their land

Editor's note – This is the first of a multi-part series on the situation of the Mohawk Indians in Quebec, Canada. Ric Oliveira is a Collegian correspondent who is currently in Kahnawake, Quebec.

By RIC OLIVEIRA
Collegian Correspondent

KAHNAWAKE, Quebec – Inside and outside of the Mohawk reserve known as Kahnawake, 10 minutes from the city of Montreal, heavily armed Canadian troops patrol the Highway just outside of the village. Every 300 yards, armored personnel carried with 50 caliber machine guns and short range rocket launchers sit overlooking the populace.

Like the Gods of Transportation, heavily armed soldiers sit atop and about the 30 APC's overlooking the Reserve traffic. 100 yards from the middle school—high school (Kahnawake survival school) entrance, army vehicles monitor Mohawk actions.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 16

Seeing eye dog barred from restaurant

Blind man files complaint against local establishment

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

An Amherst man was asked to leave his "eyes" at the door when he went to a restaurant in town early this week.

Arthur Warren, a technician at the University of Massachusetts who is blind, was asked to leave his seeing eye dog, Venus, tied up outside when he went out to dinner at Panda East restaurant in Amherst.

"Venus is my eyes, I can't get around without her," Warren said.

Warren said he was asked to tie Venus outside when he entered the restaurant, even after presenting photo identification that he is legally blind and Venus is his seeing eye dog. He added that he has filed a complaint against the restaurant to the Amherst Police.

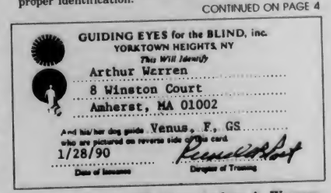
In Massachusetts, the law states that seeing eye dogs are allowed in public places, including restaurants.

Warren said he has had no problems in the past bringing Venus in restaurants and other public places, except for a a few startled looks. Venus is a long-haired German Shepard.

"I went on vacation last week and had no problems," he said. "I stayed at the Marriott, I flew first class, no one had a problem with Venus."

The management at Panda East said they were not properly informed of the law and that Warren did not show proper identification.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4



GUIDING EYES for the BLIND, Inc.
YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, NY
This Will Identify
Arthur Warren
8 Winston Court
Amherst, MA 01002
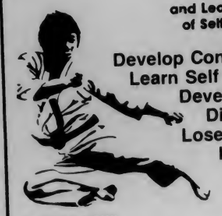
And his/her dog guide Venus, F, GS who are pictured on reverse side of this card.
1/28/90 Ronald Root
Date of Issuance Director of Training

This is the identification Arthur A. Warren carries to keep his seeing eye dog, Venus, by his side.

Aerobics Instructors Wanted AFAA or IDEA Certified

Aerobics
Tone Up!
Students
$185 Now Till May 21 1991
10percent discount for normal membership
584-4975
Northampton Nautilus, Inc.
216 North King Street
Northampton
Aerobics•Nautilus•Lifecycles •Tanning•Free Weights
Call for information

WALK IN GENTLE STRENGTH
WITH
SHOTOKAN KARATE
and Learn the Art of Self Defense



Develop Confidence
Learn Self Control
Develop Self Discipline
Lose Weight
Keep Fit
ENROLL NOW!
MEETS:
Mon and Wed 8-10
Friday 7-9
Totman 101
For Information Contact:
Jeff or Kevin 549-2954
SELF DEFENSE CLINIC AND BREAKING DEMONSTRATION
TONIGHT 7:00PM

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA, 01003.
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor ..... Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors ..... Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor ..... Chris Mulher
Sports Editors ..... Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors ..... Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor ..... Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor ..... Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor ..... Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Ali Woolwich
Business Manager ..... Susan George
Advertising Manager ..... David Melnick
Finance Manager ..... Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager ..... Susan Kent
Promotions Manager ..... Marc Pruskin
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager ..... Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

charlie's
1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight
SUNDAY 10¢ POTATO SKINS
9:00PM - 12:00AM
Drink of the Week
Pineapple Bomb
$1.95
Beer of the Month
Foster's Lager $1.75
Food Giveaways
Mon 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9-12
Tues 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9-12
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9-12
We accept MC/Visa/Amex

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
Entering its 5th and FINAL WEEK
Ends Sep. 20, Curtain 7:00 and 9:00
A Lovely, Lyrical comedy about a family of eccentrics gathering in the Bordeaux wine country for the funeral & reading of the will of the family Matriarch. A Civilized film, without violence. Indeed a special summer treat.
"A DELICIOUS FILM.
In its wit, in its pastoral beauty, MAY FOOLS has the tang of a Renoir for our time."
—Jack Kroll, NEWSWEEK
In a summer awash with overpriced fluff, Malle has blended the lyric, the comic and the tragic into a film of resonant complexity."
—Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE

MAY FOOLS
A NEW COMEDY BY LOUIS MALLE
R
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM
Tel: 549-2692
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Cntr.
Amherst, MA
diagonally across from UMass stadium
For Great Variety and Great Prices! SHOP SCOTT'S!

Budweiser Suitcase Cans
$11.49 + dep.

Miller Genuine Draft 12 12oz. bottles
$5.99 + dep.

Miller Lite 12 12oz. cans
$5.99 + dep.

Smirnoff Vodka 750 ml
$6.49

Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 1.75 L
$13.99

Cuervo Gold 750 ml
$8.39

Visa/MC accepted and local personal checks
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liqour Store

ARMY ROTC
DESERVE OFFICERS TRAINING CORPS

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS ON THESE DOORS FIRST.
OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS ON OUR DOORS FIRST.
ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.
(PMS: Localize Here)
Contact: Lpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army R.O.T.C.
5-2321 or 5-2322

Your Invitation
Missing Home?
Need a Break?
CORNERSTONE CHAPEL
580 Bridge Road
Northampton, MA 01060
Sunday
9:45 a.m. Bible Study Classes
11:00 a.m. Praise and Worship
6:30 p.m. Evening Assembly
Wednesday
6:30 p.m. Bible Study
call for a ride: 584-5168

LOCAL

Students join forces to block petition passage

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Student efforts against the passage of the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition became a statewide campaign last night as student leaders joined forces at Fitchburg State College.

Members of the Student Advisory Committee to the Board of Regents of Higher Education met to combine their efforts to disperse information on the impact of the CLT petition on public higher education in Massachusetts to the college communities.

The CLT petition calls for a tax rollback to 1988 revenue levels which will cut $120 million dollars from the already slender public higher education budget. The petition will appear as ballot question number three on the Nov. ballot.

The Board of Regents created the committee, which is composed of student trustees and Student Government Association presidents, to advise the regents and Higher Education Chancellor Bromery.

During the meeting, the committee agreed to have a statewide informational picket of the CLT headquarters on Oct. 12 and a second informational picket of WRKO, an AM Boston station. The advertisers on WRKO will also be boycotted.

WRKO is being targeted by the committee because they believe the station gives free advertising in the form of daytime talk shows to CLT.

The show most heavily criticized by the committee was Jerry William's 'The Three Governors'. In this show from 4-6 p.m., Jerry Williams, Barbara Anderson, the executive director of CLT, and Howie Carr, a conservative columnist, discuss state politics. All three support the CLT petition.

"Essentially it's 12 hours of free advertising a day for CLT," said Nick Ramos, SGA president of Mass. College of Art.

Despite how CLT may be allegedly asserting their caused, student government campaigns against CLT cannot legally use any state or student monies to campaign against ballot question number, three, according to Janet Robinson from the regents' student affairs office.

"Although we can do whatever we want to defeat CLT, we cannot spend any student trust fund money for the cause,"said Patrick Demers, Student Trustee for UMass-Lowell and chair of the committee. "That puts us in a different position."

Robinson advised student leaders to not take a stand on CLT, but to inform people of the serious impact the passage of the petition will be on state colleges and universities.

"The opposition has said they will monitor campuses real closely to make sure taxpayers' money doesn't go towards fighting against CLT," she said.

"You are protecting and leaving a legacy to your collegiate heirs, that's why it's so important for you to be careful," she said.

Fitchburg State has already their faculty association donate the funds to begin a mass mailing campaign with alumni members directed towards parents and other alumni. The SGA is also working with Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group on student voter registration.

Roxbury Community College leaders are planning to invite political candidates into their college community to discuss CLT impacts. Since Roxbury has had such a surge in enrollment this semester, student leader Lorna Greene fears that further budget cuts will undermine the college's recent growth.

Another colleges and universities in attendance were: Holyoke, Bristol, Mt. Wachusett, and Mt. Harmon Community colleges; Mass. Maritime, Framingham State, Worcester State, and North Adams State Colleges; and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Jack Polidori, a representative for Mass. Teachers Association, was also present.

"Other schools are looking to (UMass) Amherst right now for ideas and programs because it's such a big school,"said Dan Harrington, SGA president of Worcester State College. "We can apply the ideas in a smaller degree to our own school."

Collegian photo by Dondi Ahearn

IN HEAT — Symmetrical sunbathers enjoy another fine day on the flagstones of the Campus Center.

New DEP plan

BY MARK HENSLEY
Collegian Correspondent

The Department of Environmental Protection presented plans yesterday designed to increase speed and effectiveness in issuing permits and enforcing current environmental regulations.

The proposal, developed by the DEP in cooperation with an Advisory Committee made up of representatives from small business, industry, environmental groups, municipalities, and utilities was presented yesterday at a public hearing in the Campus Center at the University of Massachusetts.

The proposal calls for a program of fees which would be payed by applicants and would be directly linked to a guarantee of timely service by the DEP.

The DEP, which not only enforces environmental regulations, but also issues operating and building permits for facilities based on an environmental impact assessment, projects it could generate between $8 million and $16 million by collecting permit fees.

The money generated would be at no cost to the taxpayer andy would be used to upgrade its permitting and compliance programs as well as its air quality, hazardous waste, and water pollution control.

The DEP proposal comes in response to decreasing state and federal money, complaints from environmentalists concerning the lack of enforcement of DEP regulations, as well as a need to alleviate the long and unpredictable waiting periods for permits.

The package, which DEP officials say is threatened by the possible passage of the Citizens for Limited Taxation's Question Three, was developed on the DEP prin-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

Tackling Holyoke's dropout rate

Innovative school created for urban youths

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

The city of Holyoke has taken an innovative approach to solving urban youth problems by creating a new public middle school which will be a model of urban educational reform, according to school officials.

The Holyoke Magnet Middle School is a pioneering educational effort aimed at curbing alarmingly high dropout and teenage pregnancy rates in the city of Holyoke. The city had a 20 to 25 percent dropout rate last year and the highest teenage pregnancy rate in the state.

In addition to alleviating the immediate problem of overcrowding, administrators hope that the new school will allow students to take an educational initiative in the formative years of intellectual growth.

"The new school affords the opportunity to set high expectations for pre-adolescents at a crucial point in their educational development," said George Counter, Superintendent of Schools in Holyoke. "We hope the new school will give students confidence and self-esteem along with a higher success rate than ordinary circumstances would allow."

The magnet school will implement innovative teaching methods and experimental curricula developed at Mount Holyoke to find new solutions to problems of bilingual urban students. Mount Holyoke College will serve as a resource to the magnet school, providing teacher training and classroom aids.

At least 60 percent of the magnet school's students will speak Spanish as a first language, reflecting the composition of the city's school population, the majority of which is Puerto Rican. The curriculum mandates that students take a significant portion of their academic classes in a second language.

In addition to the bilingual curriculum, students are required to participate in a math program geared to teach students higher-order reasoning and inquiry-oriented science courses. Physical education courses are non-competitive and focus on life-long activity and nutrition. Fine arts also will be used to enhance academic subjects.

According to Madelaine Marquez, the Special Assistant for Educational Affairs at Mount Holyoke College, it is the educational approach which differentiates the magnet school from the other public middle schools in Holyoke.

"The subjects being taught are the same as any other school, it's the philosophy that's different," she said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Collegian photo by Dondi Ahearn

INDIAN SUMMER DREAM — Desmond O'Connor of Brattleboro, VT swims at Silver Bridge.

BOG allows sale of pornography

By LAVINIA GAMMON
Collegian Staff

After 11 months of debate, the Board of Governors passed a motion allowing the continued sale of pornography in the University Store last night.

This motion states that Playboy, Playgirl and Penthouse be sold only at the University Store, and all issues be kept behind the candy and film counter.

This motion will allow customers wishing to purchase these magazines, to do so while keeping the number of browsers and underage consumers down.

Governor Bill Hewitt first introduced this motion in November of last year, following an Undergraduate Student Senate vote to ban the sale of pornographic magazines in the Campus Center/ Student Union complex.

Since the Campus Center falls under the BOG's jurisdiction, the Undergraduate Student Senate vote could be overridden by the BOG.

The BOG tabled this motion several times while the committee to investigate this issue was created. The committee's findings which came on June 28 of this year said that the sale of pornograghic magazines should be allowed to continue in the Campus Center, but if the sales were low the magazines should stop being sold.

In other BOG developments last night:

- An amendment to the BOG's constitution concerning membership policies was passed. The number of undergraduate representatives was changed from 19 to 17 and the graduates from eight to five. The area breakdown of these members will go as follows: six undergraduates will be elected through the SGA, four from Southwest, four from the commuter area, and one from Central, Orchard Hill, Northeast, Sylvan and the Greek Area.

CARBUR'S

CARBUR'S
Parents' Weekend
Sunday Brunch
another best seller!
The Valley's Best!
Vol I

★★★★ "Watch.....
Carbur's chef prepare eggs, waffles & omelettes to order!"
The Saturday Evening Roast

★★★★ "See.....Carbur's 30 foot brunch table with everything from pina colada mousse to eggplant parmegian, roast pork loin with sauce dijonaise & other items too numerous to mention!"
The New York Review of Cooks

★★★★ "Experience.....
Carbur's array of home-made desserts for a sweet & happy ending.
The Springfield Sundae Supplement

$9.95
All you can eat!!

CARBUR'S RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
Reservations Welcomed
Rt. 9 Russell St./Hadley/586 1918
(North Rt. 91 - Exit 19)

For Your Information

For Your Information is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

Saturday, September 15

Benefit Tag Sale — sponsored by Amnesty International, Amherst Common, 9am-2pm

Sunday, September 16

Auditions — sponsored by Music Theater Guild, Student Union Ballroom 8am-11pm, Free. Auditions run until Tuesday, Sept. 18.

Monday, September 17

Accounting Fair — sponsored by Beta Alpha Psi, Campus Center Auditorium, 11am-4pm, Free.

Tuesday, September 18

Lecture: Dr. Alan Keyes — sponsored by Hillel, Campus Center Auditorium, 7:30pm-10pm, Free/Students, $3 Gen. Public Lecture: Mary Nelis, Sinn Fein member and human activist — sponsored by UMass for Solidarity and the Graduate Student Senate, Campus Center room 162, 7:30pm, Free.

General Meeting — sponsored by MassPirg, Campus Center 163C, 7pm-10pm, Free.

Wednesday, September 19

Movie: The Hunt for Red October — sponsored by SCUM, Campus Center Auditorium, 5:30pm, 8pm, 10:30pm, $2.50/person.

Senate Meeting — sponsored by Senate Operations, Campus Center 163C, 7pm-12am, Free.

Friday, September 21

Coffee Social — sponsored by LBGA, Campus Center 903, 3pm-6pm, Free.

Saturday, September 22

Movie Marathon — sponsored by Science Fiction Club, Campus Center Auditorium, 1pm-11pm, Free.

Benefit concert: Phish — sponsored by the Radical Student Union, Student Union Ballroom, 8pm-1am, $10.00/person.

■ seeing eye dog

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"He came in and demanded we serve him and his dog," said Kiang, a manager at Panda East. "He never showed us any identification or told us about the law."

He said he only knew of the law after a customer informed him of it.

Kiang claims his restaurant is guilty of nothing and said they have contacted a lawyer to defend them. Warren said the complaint will go to a hearing, but said it may take at least a year because of a backlog of cases in the courts.

Venus was trained in many stages, according to Warren, including a socialization stage with a family, and training with blind students. She was also tested for her reactions to loud noises, like a gun shot.

"I don't think she knows how to bark or bite," he said.

Venus is also groomed on a daily basis, which includes brushing her teeth every night.

Warren also teaches educational programs with Venus at schools to help increase understanding of the blind and seeing eye dogs. He said he used this background to try and educate the personnel at Panda East.

"I've been educating on the blind since June, the kids are really great and usually like Venus," he said.

RUSH
LAMBDA CHI!

N. PLEASANT
ΛΧΑ
FRATERNITY

274 NORTH PLEASANT ST.
phone 253-9032

RUSH DATES: SEPT. 17, 18, 24, & 25 9pm - 11pm

BECAUSE JOHN WOULD HAVE WANTED IT THAT WAY!

LSO litigation rights meeting planned

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The fight to restore limited litigation rights to the Legal Services Center is gaining momentum as the first organizational meeting has been scheduled for Monday, Sept. 17.

The Legal Services Center is a student-funded campus agency that provides free legal counsel for University of Massachusetts students. Litigation rights, the right for students to have direct legal representation, was rescinded by the Board of Trustees in August 1986.

The Monday meeting will brief interested students on the detailed history of the Legal Services Center and will explain why limited litigation rights are a campus necessity, according to Rich Sugarman, Student Government Association senator.

Limited litigation rights, compared to full litigation rights, would restrict Legal Services from representing students against the University, the Commonwealth, and the town of Amherst.

"The limited litigation rights issue is uniting all facets of the UMass community," Sugarman said. "We all want a lawyer with full credentials who can go into court to represent students."

Members of the Legal Services Governing Board, the board created by students to set the case policy for Legal Services, surveyed local lawyers to determine what the range of costs for legal representation for students would be.

LSGB's survey determined that it would cost students between $75-400 per hour to have private legal representation. The Legal Services staff compiled financial aid records to determine that the majority of UMass students are low income or near low income. In the 1987-1988 academic year, 22,238 students out of a 26,686 total applied for financial aid.

Since the center is totally funded by student monies collected through mandatory fees, SGA leaders argue the fees collected for Legal Services should be used as how the students determine the role of Legal Services within the University.

"We believe LSO should have restored limited litigation rights because this is student money," Sugarman said. "Students have basically come together and bought lawyers for when we need them."

Dennis Madson, the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, rejected the limited litigation proposal last May, stating the proposal was "not in the best interests of this campus."

"The administration thinks if we get limited litigation today, we will have full litigation tomorrow and that it is 'not in our best interests.' " Sugarman said. "It's our right to decide what our best interests are."

■ environment

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

ciple that the condition of the State economy, the environment, and the public health, depends on prompt and effective service by the DEP.

In a press release dated September 11, DEP Commissioner Daniel S. Greenbaum said, "We are changing the way this agency operates from the ground up. We want to deliver prompt, consistent service to regulated businesses and more environmental protection for every dollar." Greenbaum added that a new source of funding is crucial to improving DEP service.

Greenbaum said if the regulations were not passed, the DEP would be forced to lay off more than 80 of its 175 member permitting staff which would force the DEP to halt the issuance of permits for new businesses and development.

The proposal has been open to public comment and testimony in public hearings across the state. Three more hearings are scheduled for today at 1 p.m. at the following locations: the City Hall in Worcester, the McCormak Building in Boston, and the Lakeville Hospital Auditorium in Lakeville. Written testimony can be sent to the DEP until September 21.

COUNT ON FUJI

Stop in, count and win!
At the Camera Shop, 98 Pleasant St. Amherst.

1st Place - The person who guesses the closest number of film canisters will win a Fuji DL-400.

2nd Place - 6 rolls of Fuji CA-135-24 exposure color negative.

3rd Place - 1 Fuji Quick Snap plus 1 Fuji Quick Snap with flash onetime use cameras.

- Winner will selected Monday, October 22nd
- In the event of a tie, a drawing will be held
- No purchase necessary

Specials good only with coupon
Coupon expires 10/31/90
YOUR COLOR DEVELOP AND PRINT PRICES*

12 EXPOSURES	DISC 15 EXPOSURES
1.99 per roll	2.99 per roll
(COUPON)
24 EXPOSURES	36 EXPOSURES
3.99 per roll	5.99 per roll

*STANDARD PRINTS *1 EACH GLOSSY FINISH
Offer good on Ecnoprint™ size 110—3½ x 4½, 126—3½ x 3½, 135—3½ x 5, & Disc 3½ x 4½ Kodacolor, Fuji and other C-41 process films.

the CameraShops
AMHERST 98 Pleasant St

METROPOLITAN BOOKSELLERS'
BOOK FAIR
W·A·R·E·H·O·U·S·E S·A·L·E
Marches on as
1,000'S OF NEW BOOKS ARRIVE!
TEXTBOOKS $2.50 to $5.00
Extraordinary Selection of Books From Major Publishers at Unbelievably Low Prices!

Publishers
Random House
Simon & Schuster
Harper & Row
MacMillan
Viking
Prentice Hall
Bantam Doubleday
Scribner
Putnam
Morrow

Fiction
Romance
Mysteries
Novels
Fantasy
Suspense
Science Fiction
Westerns
Sports
Gothics
Historical

Non-Fiction
History
Film
Nature
Medical Health
Philosophy
Hobbies Literature

Children's Stories
Fairy Tales
General Interest
Educational

Authors
Stephen King
Isaac Asimov
Barbara Michaels
G B Trudeau
Colleen McCullough
Richard Condon
Louis Grizzard
John D McDonald
Charles Schultz
William Buckley
Helen H. Santmyer
Alfred Hitchcock
Ruth Rendell
Bill Cosby

Thousands of Books 70% Off! Original Publisher's List Price
Ton of Children's Books 50% Off! Original Publisher's List Price
ALL OTHER BOOKS AT EXCEPTIONAL VALUES!

This Ad is worth $5.00 towards any purchase over $25.00!
(limit one per customer)

The Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley, MA
(In the old Almy's Store at The Mountain Farms Mall.)

Hours: Mon-Sat. 10-9, Sunday 12-6
This extraordinary selection is available from publishers' overstocks, returns, special printings and liquidations.

■ everywoman's center

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

survivors of sexual assault."

Wallace said, students, faculty and staff can show their support of the EWC in a variety of ways.

"We are asking people to send letters of support to Dennis Madson, Vice Chancellor, Jo-Anne Vanine, the dean of students and a copy to the EWC."

"I think the administration will be more concerned about the EWC's cuts if they hear from the students," she said. "It is particularly helpful if it is a woman who has used the counselling services or a person who has made referrals to the EWC."

"People can contact Natasha Diephus, president, Student Government Association or the Graduate Student Senate to find out how they can get involved with supporting the EWC,"she said.

More than usual women are calling the EWC which is common in a time of fiscal crisis, Wallace said.

"Unprecedented numbers of women students needing shelter, food stamps, and in any kind of crisis are calling the EWC," she said.

Wallace expressed concern about the kind of message about accessibility the University is sending as an institution of public higher education to oppressed groups.

"We should not be cutting direct services to students Particularly to, women, the disabled, lesbians, and people of color. There are other places that should be cut first," she said.

Wallace said the need for counseling has increased on this campus since last semester.

"There are students who will fall threw the cracks by the lose at the EWC. Mental Health Services was booked for all of September by the end of the first week of school," she said.

Dennis Madson, vice chancellor of Student Affairs, who informed the EWC of the cuts, was unavailable for comment.

■ magnet school

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Administered by a lead teacher and an elected board of parents and students, the magnet school strides to "facilitate and support rather than govern," Marquez said want to offer meaningful roles for parents and students in the school."

"We've changed the way the children look at school by creating an environment children would like to be a part of," Efrain Martinez, head of the magnet schools in Holyoke said. "We're actually fostering a healthy self-concept by emphasizing choice," he said.

"Much of what happens in middle school determines the students' academic persistence. The idea that education is a way out of poverty should be ingrained at the ages between 10 and 14," he concluded.

The school admitted 126 sixth graders this fall. Enrollment will gradually reach 400 students by 1993.

3 FEET ▸ OLD NEWS PAPERS → → SAVES → ONE TREE »»»»» Recycle This Paper!☺

Top of the Campus
RESTAURANT and LOUNGE
The Top of the Campus has great food, fantastic service, weekly drink specials, an extensive lounge munchie menu and a spectacular view of the campus, all yours to enjoy in a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere.
Eleventh Floor, Lincoln Campus Center
549-6000 ext. 7636
Lunch: Mon.-Fri. 11:30 am-2:00 pm; Dinner: Tues.-Sat. 5:00-9:00 pm
Cocktails: Mon.-Fri. 11:30 am-12:30 am; Sat.-Sun. 5 pm-12:30 am
VALIDATED PARKING IN ATTACHED GARAGE

For Older Undergraduates
25+ CLUB
Did you know that there are more than 1500 undergraduates at UMass age 25 and over? Let's get together at an..
Introductory Meeting
Wednesday, Sept. 19
8:00 pm
Campus Center 174-176
Discussion of Activities
Socializing
Refreshments

ACCOUNTING FAIR
Monday
September 17th
Campus Center
Auditorium
1:00-5:00 p.m.
Over 35 major employers representing public accounting firms (both large and small), private (corporate) accounting and government accounting.
ALL MAJORS WELCOME!
Great chance to learn about different firms and career options in the accounting profession!
SENIORS - Bring copies of your resume if you like.
Sponsored by Beta Alpha Psi & The Accounting Association.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Governor for, not against, people

"There is no point in my making a speech on crime control to a group of drug addicts."
— John Silber

Is this the kind of stereotypical generalization we need from someone who wants to hold the highest office in the state? I think not.

What happens if John Silber is elected governor? Will he cut much-needed programs in areas because there is no sense in funding a "group of addicts?"

I spent this past summer working in Dudley Square, a section of Roxbury, building a new postal distribution center, and at first I was a bit apprehensive about working in that area because of all the media hype.

I envisioned myself suiting up in the morning in a bullet-proof vest and dodging bullets. But that was hardly the case. As the summer wore on, I came to the conclusion that there were just as many good, law-abiding citizens, if not more, as there were "drug addicts."

Silber's comment could not be further from the truth.

True, Roxbury and the rest of Area B is plagued by a higher than normal crime rate. But there are, according to William Celester, Boston Police deputy superintendent, over 120 local crime watch groups helping to make Area B safer.

Silber's comments just reinforce his lack of fair judgment. We need a governor who will work with the people of Area B and other troubled areas instead of condemning them.

Peter C. King
Amherst

The tax debate that wasn't

The past two years have sure been an exciting time in Massachusetts politics. After our "Miracle" crashed in flames, everything went to hell. The Citizens for Limited Taxation initiative and the upcoming statewide elections are shaping up to be quite a finale. Whatever happens, it is clear Massachusetts is, at least for the time being, politically bankrupt.

To a state that was teetering on bankruptcy, the CLT initiative and the anti-tax rage of late are the club that could break the camel's back.

Jeremy Levinson

The Reagan "Revolution's" rape of an already meager federal system of public and social services left the individual states to try and compensate. Massachusetts, relative to most states, made a good effort. This was a large burden on our state's backward tax structure.

How is it that things got so bad so fast? Why do polls show the public poised to thrust the fiscal knife into our long tradition of liberalism and governmental compassion? In a nutshell, the Liberals have screwed the people of Massachusetts.

CLT's Barbara Anderson and ultra right-winger Steve Pierce stir up working and middle class rage at the state tax structure. Why now? Pro-business conservatives always use rabid anti-tax demagoguery. Why here, in the spawning ground of the Kennedys.

When the anti-tax charlatans use "Over-taxation!" as their battlecry, they tap anger cultivated by cowardly politicians who have refused to bring innovation and fairness to a back-ass tax system. Ours, one of the wealthiest states in the nation, has always overtaxed the working and middle class and undertaxed those who can afford it — those who make the most off of what Massachusetts has to offer.

For the insurgent anti-tax right, there is but one solution: less taxes, less public and human service, less environmental protection, less public education, less firefighters, etc.

It is quite clear that CLT is not really concerned about the working and middle class folks whose frustration they exploit. Rather, the drastic state spending cuts that would almost inevitably follow the passage of question number three will debilitate services now valued by millions in the Commonwealth. Sort of like spitting into the wind, huh?

Have the Democrats had the courage and political sense to broaden this debate? Their only response has been tax packages that end up proving CLT's point. The tax debate has been no debate at all, with the Democratic leadership out in twinkie-land.

It was their job to start talking about who should be taxed. Two years ago, the Democrats could have paved the way for genuine tax reform. This state could have begun to build a structure under which the rich and big business pay their fair share. They should have begun working towards a much-needed graduated income tax structure, under which our wealthy neighbors would have the opportunity to pay their fair share. So-called state leaders have instead rolled over and played dead. Some aren't even playing.

The Democrats have helped the anti-tax forces train public to think that all taxes will fall on the wrong people. All they had to do was start with one new idea: Tax the rich, too, dammit!

State leaders have, been comfortable for too long. State politics have been too stable. The result has been that our leadership doesn't recognize a challenge from other political forces or from its own constituents. Sadly, the current challenge has come from and corporate terror groups and their allies.

I wish I could take morbid consolation in the Democrats' troubles. However, the threats posed to working and middle class people by the latest trends are a far larger concern. When the Democrats sank their own ship, they seemed to forget that millions of us were aboard.

Jeremy Levinson is a Collegian columnist

John Silber column denies 'plain truth'

I cannot believe the Collegian editorial on John Silber ("Silber 'Factbook' shocking" by Kendra Pratt, Sept.6). It was filled with half-truths and outright lies. The editorial was based on a tabloid book endorsed by 90 present and former faculty and students who have gone through the Boston University system.

However, the editorial failed to mention that over 150,000 people have gone through the B.U. system since Dr. Silber became president. Silber even said, "I'll take those numbers any day."

Even Republican hopeful William Weld discredited the book by saying, "Those people have an axe to grind with Silber." I hope the Collegian will not use the National Inquirer as a source for its editorials concerning world affairs.

The editorial also mentioned the debt that B.U. has under John Silber. But there was no mention of how much net worth of B.U. has grown since Silber became president, let alone the School's reputation. Under Silber, B.U. has gone from an average school in 1971 to a "world class" school today. The English department at B.U. is considered by many as one of the best in the world.

As for Silber making $225,000 a year, the editorial left readers believing Silber can set his own salary. Silber answers to the Board of Trustees at B.U. who approves Silber's salary.

The editorial said Silber discriminates against women when it comes to hiring faculty or giving tenure. The plain truth is there is more women faculty at B.U. than there are at Harvard and Yale combined!

About making derogatory comments about women, rape and pregannCy, I believe the editorial was quoting Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy. Silber does not believe a woman has the right to kill an unborn child during the ninth month of pregnancy unless the woman's life is in danger. Anything else would be murder.

John Silber is the only candidate for governor who talks about welfare reforms, and in essence, reforming state government. Politicians like Francis Bellotti or Murphy will promise you the moon and do nothing while in office, but Silber will tell you what is wrong, what needs to be done, and how to do it.

Dan Donovan
Amherst

Construction of $44M arena proposed while the University crumbles around us

Isn't it amazing . . . the state and UMass seem to have gone bonkers with their priorities. Yes, a cool $44 million will be dropped on a multi-purpose sports and convocation center to enhance our reputation on the state and national levels.

Meanwhile, we students stand in long lines, see professors laid off, get a fraction of our chosen classes if lucky, walk a campus falling apart, see the prospect of 500 to 1,200 employee layoffs, and maybe even a shortened academic year.

Isn't it amazing . . . we took a 4 percent cut at the end of July and now another 4 percent? The state must be extremely aware that cutting education gets right to the source of a strong and healthy economy and will ultimately undermine the quality of life here in Massachusetts.

Isn't it amazing . . . that about 40 percent of the general population of this state and country even bothers to vote? And hold onto your ears when the howling starts following massive state cuts in social programs, among them higher education. I admit that politicians are not the most attractive lot. But, if you don't like them, vote them out!

Isn't it amazing . . . that people want to further enhance the reputation of this University by building an arena and charging the student body for half its $44 million cost?

How can it be both ways? A glorious arena on one hand and cut classes, laid-off professors, threatened workers (who can't even get raises), and crumbling facilities on the other.

This story is probably old hat to many in our community, but as a new transfer student, I can't see the logic of spending $44 million on an arena and turning around to millions in cuts to more important programs.

Maybe I'll go and stand in front of the bulldozers when they come to raze the animal barns.

Carl K. Borchert
Amherst

Sharing education: Out-of-state students do enrich state and University community

Being an out-of-state student, I take great exception to the letter by Kevin Newnan ("Out-of-staters get free lunch," Spet. 11). If paying an extra $4,000 a year entitles me to a free lunch, it's the most expensive free lunch I've ever heard of.

When out-of-state students argue for higher taxes, it's because we are concerned about the affordability of an education. If taxes aren't raised, it will become much more difficult for both in-state and out-of-state students to attend the University.

We do not expect Massachusetts citizens to bear the burden of our educations. In fact, Massachusetts citizens bear much more of a burden to support in-state students than out-of-state. The state pays no extra money to get out-of-staters here, but the University makes extra money on each out-of-stater.

The amount of money that the University and the state get on our extra tuition is far more than they would get if my family members were residents paying state taxes here. Combined with a university that prides itself on the diversity of its student body, an out-of-state student brings a double benefit.

Another problem I have with Mr. Newnan's letter is the inference that only people who were born in and plan to work in Massachusetts deserve to go here.

What about a person born in Massachusetts, but goes to work somewhere else? What if a person is born somewhere else, but decides to work in Massachusetts? Would either of these people be undeserving of an education here? It's time to stop thinking about education in Massachusetts as a commodity that should be hoarded for the good of the state only, and to see it as a resource that should be shared for the good of everyone.

Steven Feldgus
Orchard Hill

To excel in any major, make a minor investment.

fx-300A $16.95*

fx-115N $24.95*

fx-4200P $49.95*

Let Casio make your most complex courses look easy. With simple-to-use scientific calculators that offer high-powered features. Without the high price.

Our 8-digit Solar Plus™ fx-300A is easy to read and operates even in the dimmest light. Its 128 functions make it a valuable addition to virtually any math or science course. The fx-300A performs statistical and fractional calculations. And it stores six computations in memory.

For more power, tap into our Solar Plus fx-115N. This 10-digit scientific calculator gives you 154 functions. It offers computer math for everything from binary to hexadecimal calculations. Linear regression analysis. And an applications workbook that makes the fx-115N simple to use.

Our 12-digit fx-4200P data calculator is in a class by itself. The dot matrix LCD lets you see alpha-numeric formulas, names and technical data exactly as written. The replay feature prompts you to solve for different values of a variable without inputting the formula each time. Plus, there's a powerful 279-step memory and 150 advanced functions.

No matter what courses you're taking, Casio has a scientific calculator that's of major importance. At a price that's a minor subject.

CASIO
Where Miracles Never Cease

Ask for Casio Scientific Calculators at your bookstore.

Casio, Inc. Calculator Products Division,
570 Mt. Pleasant Avenue, Dover, NJ 07801 (201) 361-5400
Solar Plus is a trademark of Casio Computer Co., Ltd.

*Suggested retail price

ARTS & LIVING

Jane bites your bum, Queensryche doesn't

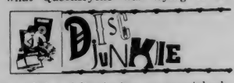
By DANIELLE DOWLING
Collegian Staff

Emotion is an integral part of art.

Without emotion, a work of art comes across as trite and affected. With emotion, a work of art is granted the power to captivate its audience even if the devices it utilizes to get its message across have been used before.

The message that the work of art tries to convey, no matter how much heart the artist or artists put into it, never quite reaches everyone. As we are all unique, we all have our own preconceptions of what art should be and how it should touch us.

And so it is with the latest Queensryche album, Empire. Either people are going to relate to the messages in the album and love it, or people will fail to understand what Queensryche was trying to accomplish and dismiss it as commercial rubbish. The latter would be truly unfortunate since Empire is Queenryche's most mature work to date.



It is not the dramatic powerhouse that their previous album, Operation: Mindcrime, was, as it does not seethe with angry, aggressive emotion. In fact, while Mindcrime was an entire concept built around social and political rhetoric, Empire has only three songs that are socially conscious, "Della Brown," "Empire" and "Resistance."

Queensryche's approach this time, both musically and lyrically, is calmer and more introspective. The sound is reminiscent of Yes and Rush, especially on songs like "The Thin Line" and "Empire." "Silent Lucidity" is a fine tribute to one of their major influences, Pink Floyd. But overall, it's still the same Queensryche that I have come to know and love. The emotion and effort are still there, it's just that on this album it doesn't come right out and bite you on the bum.

On the other hand, Janes Addiction's latest album, Ritual de lo Habitual, will sink its jaws so deeply into your glutious maximus that you won't be able to sit down for weeks.

The album takes you on an enthralling roller coaster ride of emotion, thought and feeling. The energy level seems to follow some kind of order on the album with the most energetic songs going first. It's kind of like sex with a grinding preclimax mov-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

ACI
AMERICAN COMPUTER INNOVATORS

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO CHECK OUT ACI'S BIG SAVINGS, QUALITY SERVICE AND MERCHANDISE BEFORE YOU BUY.

ACI CARRIES A FULL SUPPLY OF COMPUTER ACCESORIES TO MEET YOUR NEEDS.

*PRICES UPDATED BIWEEKLY CALL 549-6701 FOR LATEST SYSTEM PRICES.

*ALL SYSTEMS MAINFRAME READY.

*TAU NETWORK CABLES AVAILABLE FOR IBM COMPATIBLES.

ACI is located on 259 Triangle Street in downtown Amherst.

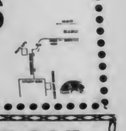
FREE BOXER SHORTS

WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY FUTON & FRAME

GOOD NIGHT BEDDING OUTLET STORES

320 RIVERSIDE DRIVE
NORTHAMPTON
585-0660

9 E. PLEASANT STREET
AMHERST (next to the Mercantile)
549-3507



DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

INDOOR MINIATURE GOLF
Thursday and Friday-Student Night

BIRDIES & BOGEYS

Holyoke Mall-Lower Level
536-3765

May Fools: may appeal to lovers of French

By WILLIAM GEORGIADES
Collegian Staff

May Fools
Directed by Louis Malle
Academy of Music

Critics are clamoring in a highly unsubtle way about the daring sensitivity of Malle's latest film, the general point being that this movie is special by token of its quietness in the face of the general dredge of loud summer flicks. But "quiet" is just one of many operative words here.

An impartial synopsis: an elderly woman dies amid her dolls as her middle-aged son races home on his bike so as not to be late for dinner. A series of radio reports inform us that away from the pastoral setting of the French countryside, it is May of 1968, and the students in Paris are revolting. The mother is laid out and a motley family crew descends to create domestic chaos and personal upheaval for the aforementioned middle-aged, now orphaned son. As the reports from Paris become increasingly insane, so do the family members. It culminates with everybody lounging under a tree smoking pot and talking about sex and love, then climaxes with a run for the rainy woods in fear of the approaching rebel students, and a subsequent reversal of the momentary hippy ideology.

Imagine watching a family come together to divy up a dead matriarch's posessions. They begin with greetings and grief, give way to greed, turn, by their standards, momentarily weird, propelled by fear of a revolution, and then leave and we're left wondering why.

A day in the life: eat a lot, talk a lot, with constant contradictions, occasional confrontations that lead nowhere, talk about sex and occasionally have it, train camera lovingly on pre-pubescent girl.

Perhaps the French really are this dreary, but examining this and referring to it as gentle satire, as Malle has constantly been doing in his subtle blaze of media storming, is ridiculous. Satire is only gentle for the old and impotent, the useless that this film concentrates on. That the French have twiddled their thumbs, eaten to obesity and come up with a number of interesting variations of coitus over several hundreds of years does not a great nation make.

In one scene a 12-year-old girl walks in to wake up her aunt and sees her ballerina companion tied to the bed, sleeping in what one is supposed to feel is a post bondage joy, as evinced from the smile on her lips. The audience, at least the one at the Academy, laughs knowingly at this scene, as they do at many others. And as the audience laughs, the camera moves in on the girl tied to the bed and her smile is broken into a near grimace and then the camera hovers over the little girl who looks scared, rooted to the spot.

There's another film by Malle called Murmur of the Heart, a film that romanticizes incestuous rape. And with this film in your head, it's hard not to see the same leering old man behind the camera here, being quietly amusing to justify the greatest love of the French: little children.

Malle's capability as a film maker is about as good as anybody's who'd keep at the occupation for decades. And if his ideas were merely vacuous, or inspired by something other than disease, we'd be fine. But his insidious viciousness leaves nausea in the stomachs of anyone unimpressed by the French language.

Phantom Cities will haunt you

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9

ing into the climax and ending up in a soothing postclimax.

"Stop" starts everything off with a sound that leaves you with a feeling that is comparable to the effects of drinking a case of Mountain Dew in one sitting — you just want to bounce off the walls and stomp around until you work out your high. Then there's the ultimate climax in "Three Days," which begins in a subdued fashion and explodes mid-way with an aggressive rage.

The ethereal, psychedelic quality of "Then She Did . . ." smooths things out, followed by the intriguing Middle Eastern melody of "Of Course."

The lyrics contain warped slices of Americana as seen through the eyes of lead singer Perry Farrel. As the beginning of "Ain't No Right" tells, "My sex and my drugs and my rock n' roll are the only things that keep me here . . ."

The Allure of the Concentric (1985), In the Drowning Pool (1990), Dancing In The Land Where Children Are The Light (1981) and Phantom Cities (1990)

Artist Rita Meyers draws upon two diverse regions of the world for her latest meditation, Phantom Cities via video installation. This time, Guatemalan and Mexican Maya sites and contemporary New York City pose as the landscapes, architecture, water, air and mere being that form the basis of the city. Meyers delves into this in terms of the erosive powers of history over such forms and the regenerative forces at work through myth.

Physical components of Phantom Cities will be arranged like an abandoned archaeological site with black sand and vague outlines of descending staircases. The city's individual elements reflect Mayan and New York architecture with pyramids, suspension bridges, skyscrapers, temples and refineries. It is said to "exist as a place outside of time, a decayed and empty fact whose meaning arises only from conjecture."

Further, the jungle scenes of the Mayan sites are recretaed through the artist's interpretation while video monitors form an enclosed circle of electronic images around the miniature city.

"Rita Meyers: Phantom Cities," The University Gallery, University of Massachusetts, September 15 to December 16.

— JULIE LIVINGSTONE

LANGUAGE PACIFICA OF MASSACHUSETTS
English as a Second Language
Intensive Day Classes
Part Time Eve. Classes
TOEFL Preparation
Classes begin 9/17/90
Registration 9/6–9/17
Amherst Creamery Bldg
150 Fearing St Ste 29
549-5065

Open For Lunch 7 Days a week
BUY ONE GET ONE for 99¢
7 DAYS ONLY!
DOMINO'S PIZZA
Hours;
Sun-Thurs.
11am to 2am
Fri. and Sat.
11am to 3am
256-8911

CARRY OUT ONLY COUPON
99¢ Pizza
Buy any large pizza or 12" pan style pizza get one of equal or lesser toppings
99¢
Expires 9/20/90
One coupon per order
Not good in Northampton
CARRY OUT ONLY

DELIVERY COUPON
$1.99 Pizza
Buy any large or 12" pan style pizza get of equal or lesser toppings FOR ONLY $1.99
DELIVERED in 30 Mins. or less
Expires 9/20/90
One coupon per order
Not good in Northampton

Good Advice — Honest Price.
NEW!

BostonAcoustics HD5 and HD7 Speakers
HD5 $143/pair
HD7 $189/pair
ONKYO TX-811 Receiver
$185

ONKYO DX-1400 18-bit CD Player
$187

ONKYO TA-W200 Dual Cassette Deck Fully Calibrated!
$235

Five College delivery available.
Sound & Music

DEANS LIST
SPRING SEMESTER 1990

Congratulations to those who qualified for the Deans List. Your academic performance is noteworthy and a source of pride to the faculty, staff, your student colleagues and, of course, to your parents. Such outstanding academic achievement (3.5 average or higher semester average with twelve or more graded credits) is attained by fewer than 15 percent of our undergraduates. Providing opportunities for academic growth remains one of the University's highest priorities. It is especially pleasing, therefore, to note and call attention to such accomplishment. Thank you for the credit you bring to the University.

Joseph Duffey, Chancellor

Press Releases

To publicize your achievement, the University News Office will be issuing a press release to your hometown newspaper if you are a Massachusetts resident. Out of state students are requested to pick up a press release form at 200 Munson Hall (second floor). For additional questions, please call 545-0444.

Additions

The Deans List was based on grades received and posted by the Registrar's Office by August 15, 1990. If you have a grade change after that date (including marking up an "Incomplete" or had a missing or late grade recorded after August 15), and believe you now qualify for Deans List status, please fill out a form available at the Information Data Bank, 2nd floor lobby counter, Whitmore and attach a verification. Reminder: graded credits only are calculated, not pass/fail credits.

Paid for by Student Affairs Research, Information, and Systems (SARIS) as a service to the campus community.

Arts and Sciences—Humanities and Fine Arts

Arts and Sciences—Humanities and Fine Arts

CONTINUED

HOBAN,J. ROBIN
HODGDON,LAURIE A.
HOLLANDER,ANDREW B.
HOLLMEYER,LOUIS R.
HOPKINSON,SEAN B.
HORN,DONNA W.
HOSFORD,GEOFFREY W.
HOUSE,SHERYL D.
HOUSE,BRYAN C.
HOUSE,CHRISTOPHER L.
HOWARD,GREGORY E.
HUDSON,GINA M.
HUDSON,SHELLY L.
HUGUS,JENNIFER E.
HUMPHRIES,JOSEPH W.
HUTCHINS,LAURA E.
HYND,TERRI.
IBARRA,ROSA R.
INGERSOLL,DAVID S.
INOUYE,LAE RENEE K.
JACOBS,JOHN J.
JANUBASZ,JEFFREY W.
JARRATT,DAVID R.
JESSER,MARK P.
JOHNSON,JENNIFER A.
JOHNSTON,LAUREN E.
JOKELSON,DANIEL A.
JONES,CHRISTOPHER B.
JONES,DWIGHT A.
JONES,ERIN L.
JONES,MARGARET R.
JONES,SHANNON L.
JOYCE,CHRISTINE F.
KALASHIAN,MARK J.
KAMPE,MARA E.
KARLE,ANNE E.
KEANE,ANNE C.
KEANE,KELLY E.
KEARNS,CALEDONIA E.
KEATING,CHRISTIAN MARY
KEITH,LIZBRE T.
KELLER,KELLY A.
KELLY,REBECCA R.
KEMPER,CHRISTINE M.
KERR,MARYBETH.
KERSTETTER,TIMOTHY R.
KIM,JONATHAN.
KING,CHRISTOPHER P.
KING,SANDRAH L.
KINSEY,KAREN E.
KNOBLOCK,STACEY L.
KNOPE,LEIGH ANN.
KNOWLES,AMY E.
KOLMAN,SUSAN W.
KONRAD,MOIRA R.
KOPELMAN,MARGARET BOWDEN.
KOSCIUSKO,KRISTIN C.
KOTSIFAS,JULIE E.
LACROIX,BRANDT A.
LAMBOURNE,KATHRYN M.
LAM,GUY S.
LAMBERT,MARK S.
LANDRIGAN,CHRISTOPHER.
LANDRYJN,ROCHELLE A.
LAPIERRE,DIANE P.

LAZIVIERE,CRISTIE A.
LANDBEE,JEAN PAUL.
LAVALLEE,LAURA M.
LAVOIE,ALISHE A.
LAVOIE,BRIGITTE J.
LAWTON,HOLLIE B.
LEBLANC,CHARLOTTE R.
LEBLANC,JULIE A.
LECOMTE,CAROL A.
LEE,JAMES J.
LEIBOWITZ,SUSAN B.
LENHARDT,JOHN R.
LEPAGE,DANIEL P.
LEVINE,ANDREA J.
LEVINE,LAUREN W.
LEVINE,MICHAEL E.
LEW,HAROLD F.
LEWIS,HEATHER M.
LILES,DAYLE T.
LINDSAY,CAROLYN R.
LINDSAY,MICHAEL R.
LOPEZ,ANDREA M.
LOWENTISH,WENDY A.
LYYTTEN,DYLAN R.
LYUS,DAVID A.
MACDONALD,MATTHEW.
MACDONALD,MATT S.
MADIGAN,PAMELA A.
MAGUIRE,JENNIFER A.
MAHONEY,CHRISTINE T.
MAHONEY,SEAN P.
MAINE,DEBRA A.
MANGINI,JOHN D.
MANGINO,CAECENIA S.
MARCH,LINDA M.
MARGULIES,MICHAEL L.
MARQUEZ,PATRICIA E.
MARTIN,LAURA W.
MARTIN,MICHELLE L.
MASSA,NEIL A.
MATULENICE,STEVEN W.
MATUSKO,LAUREN W.
MAURAIS,MARTIN D.
MCALLISTER,ELLEN M.
MCATEER,MARGARET A.
MCCABE,KEVIN F.
MCCANN,HEIDI M.
MCCOURT,MATTHEW J.
MCCOY,CARRIE S.
MCCOY,MARTHA A.
MCCURDY,HEATHER K.
MCDONOUGH,JOANNE M.
MCGILL,CYNTHIA L.
MCGRATH,BRANDI R.
MCGUIRE,ORIANNA E.
MCHALLAM,CHRISTOPHER W
MCHUGH,SUSAN B.
MCINTOSH,IAN P.
MCKENNA,JULIE A.
MCLAUGHLIN,SAMARA R.
MCNURTRIE,CAROLINE S.
MCNAMARA,DAVID W.
MCQUAIDE,JOHN E.
MEEHAN,CLAIRE A.
MELDON,TINA M.

MENDONCA,ROSE R.
MERCHANT,THOMAS W.
MERRILL,SHONDRA L.
METER,PAIGE J.
MICHAUD,JENNIFER F.
MILLEN,JENNIFER L.
MILLER,DANIEL T.
MILLER,DOUGLAS J.
MILLER,MATTHEW J.
MILLETT,AMANDA I.
MINSKOFF,SUSAN M.
MITCHELL,SHIRLEY NATANIA.
MITCHELL,SMITH.
MITCHELL,MELISSA W.
MOGEL,MELINDA R.
MOLINE,JENNIFER A.
MOLLER,MATTHEW D.
MONAGHAN,CAROLYN J.
MOORE,CHRISTOPHER W.
MORRIS,KIMBERLY S.
MORRISON,CATHERINE E.
MORRISON,FAITH E.
MORSE,LAURA A.
MORTELL,SEAN P.
MORTON,MICHAEL R.
MOSELEY,LAURA M.
MOSKOW,LISA B.
MOTT,ELIZABETH E.
MULLIGAN,PAUL J.
MUNDI,MITRA.
MUNSON,TODD S.
MURPHY,CHRISTINE A.
MURPHY,DAMNA M.
MURPHY,KATHRYN E.
MURPHY,KEVIN W.
MURRAY,SHELAGH D.
NAGY,TIM.
NIMESKOW,RONNI B.
NAPIERKOWSKI,MARK P.
NELSON,ELIZABETH A.
NELSON,SEAN P.
NG,JIMMY.
NOEL,DEBORAH A.
NOMURA,AIKO.
NORDAHL,AMY D.
NOPPLEET,HEATHER.
OBRIEN,MARY C.
OBRIEN,MEREDITH E.
ODDO,SAMANTHA L.
ODONNELL,DAVID P.
OHLSON,ANNASTINA.
OLBERDING,ERIC W.
OLBRIS,DANIEL J.
OLEARY,KERRY A.
OLEARY,NATHAN S.
OLIVER,DIANE.
OLIVER,JONATHAN J.
OLSEN,STEPHEN R.
OLSON,ROBIN C.
PAIK,PHIL S.
PAQUIN,JOHN C.
PARK,SHARON H.
PARKER,JULIE M.
PARKER,PAULINE A.

PARTENHEIMER,ANN M.
PASCETTA,STEPHANY.
PASQUALE,DANIEL F.
PASTOR,ELIZABETH A.
PATTERSON,JEREMIAH G.
PEARCE,CHRISTIANNA M.
PEARSALL,MARK R.
PERCIVAL,KARI A.
PERCIVAL,KRIS.
PEREZ,JORDI A.
PERGOLA,SHERRI E.
PERRY,KENNETH J.
PERSONS,LAURA L.

PETO,JONATHAN L.
PIERCE,MATTHEW F.
PITMENTELL,LISA J.
PINARD,ALISSA J.
PINTO,ANGELA M.
PISCITELLI,STEVEN R.
PLAYER,JASON C.
POESSL,ANGIE W.
POLLARD,BENJAMIN D.
POREMBO,PETER B.
PORNELLI,AMY T.
POST,ALISON R.
POTVIN,RONALD W.
POTTS,MEERA J.
PRATT,KENDRA A.
PRESTIPINO,ROSEMARY
PREWITT,HEATHER D.
PRITCHOULIS,LEE S.
PUTNAM,PAUL C.
RADOSEVICH,ANA S.
RALEIGH,CONNIE.
RAMOS,BARBARA.
RAMSAY,ELIZABETH.
REICH,CARRIE C.
REKO,THOMAS J.
REYNOLDS,JENNIFER L.
REYNOLDS,JOSHUA T.
RIDDELL,DEBORAH E.
RIEMER,GRETCHEN.
RIVERA DE AGUSTA,NORMA
ROBBLEE,PATRICK P.
ROBERTSON,MARK A.
ROBINSON,PHILIP.
ROBINSON,VICTORIA A.
ROLLINS,ANDREA I.
ROLLINS,JAMES M.
ROSA,TODD A.
ROSENBERG,SHERI G.
ROSSI,LISA J.
ROSSLEY,SCOTT R.
ROY,DEBORAH A.
RUBIN,RACHEL G.
RUDNICK,JULIE A.
RUDOLPH,JENNIFER W.
RUSS,ANNE W.
RYAN,JOHN F.IV
RYBACKI,SUZANNE R.
SAALFIELD,CAITLIN E.
SAARINEN,JENNIFER L.
SABEAN,PAIGE M.
SABOL,JULIA E.
SALVADORE,JOSEPH M.

SALVO,CHRISTOPHER A.
SALWEN,MARC J.
SALZMAN,GABRIEL S.
SANDORFI,CSILLA C.
SANFORD,JASON S.
SANTALA,MELISSA K.
SANTIAGO,ANNA B.
SARAGE,CHRISTOPHER C.
SAVICEIS,JENNIFER A.
SCATURRO,JULIE A.
SCHECHTER,JULIE L.
SCHINELLI,MICHAEL R.
SCHLOSSBERG,ERIC B.
SCHMAKENBERG,JEFFREY D.
SCHOR,PAUL.
SCHREIVER,ANDREW P.
SCHWAB,REBECCA R.
SCHWEITZER,MARINA R.
SCOTT,ERIC.
SEARS,COLIN D.
SEARS,DAVID D.
SEIDEN,FERN R.
SEWETT,WENDY A.
SERDBRINSKY,JULIA.
SHADDIAN,CHRIS M.
SHEA,JOHN T.JR
SHEETER,MEREDITH M.
SHUBERT,SARAH K.
SIERRA,SARAH P.
SIGIS,KRISTIN J.
SIGLE,COLLEEN F.
SILVER,LAURA M.
SILVESTRI,MARC.
SIMM,KRISTA M.
SIN,YUNG.
SINGER,HEATHER C.
SKOLNICK,DAVID N.
SLEZZER,LARA A.
SLOANE,JASON E.
SMITH,HEATHER W.
SMITH,KRISTA D.
SMITH,ROBERT W.JR
SOLOMON,DANIEL.
SPERLING,TRICIA L.
ST PIERRE,PAULA C.
STADLER,KATHRYN D.
STANLEY,KRISTINA L.
STEER,KELLI A.
STEHN,MATTHEW M.
STEVENS,PAMELA B.
STEVENSON,BENJAMIN D.
STOKES,GEOFFREY M.
STOLTE,JACQUELINE H.
STOUT,MARJORIE C.
STROLLO,JENNIFER L.
STRONG,TERESA A.
STRYCHARZ,SUSAN A.
SULLIVAN,JAMES.
SULLIVAN,NOREEN A.
SUNARIAN,ROBERT P.
SUSSMAN,DAVID J.
SUTTON,JOHN D.
SWAN,KAREN D.
SWANSEN,KATHERINE L.
SWANSON,KRISTINE A.
TATRO,CHRISTOPHER D.
TAYLOR,SOPHIA A.
THELWAN,ALEC.

THERIAULT,KYLE W.
THIBODEAU,CHRISTY M.
THOMAS,SCOTT G.
TISCHLER,DAVID S.
TITLE,REBECCA F.
TOMARELLO,SARAH R.
TONSHO,DEBORAH E.
TOWN-LABUNIERE,LORIAN A.
TOROK,JOANNA B.
TOZESKI,DAVID P.
TRACY,HILARY L.
TRAINQUE,KELLY A.
TRAUB,PAULA L.
TREITLER,ANYA F.
TREMOUTH,SARAH M.
TRUDELL,MARY MARGARET.
TYLER,KIMBERLY C.
UCCI,RACHEL B.
UCICH,CHRISTINE T.
ULTMAN,SHARI E.
VAN CURA,MARJORIE C.
VARGHESE,ROBIN.
VARNET,LAURA T.
VIGNEAU,THOMAS A.
VOUROS,MARIA K.
WADA,WENDY C.
WAITE,JANINE W.
WALDEN,ELISABETH E.
WARDWELL,LAURIE J.
WARNER,SARAH P.
WARREN,THOMAS L.
WASHINGTON,ROBERT A.
WEBBER,MICHAEL J.
WEBER,SCOTT B.
WEINSTEIN,LISA M.
WEN,YUNG S.
WENGER,HEATHER C.
WESTERMAN,DAVID N.
WHEELER,JANINE A.
WHEELER,SUSAN V.
WILDER,ESTHER I.
WILKINS,PAMELA K.
WILL,CAROL.
WILLIS,JESSICA L.
WILSON,KAREN R.
WILSON,TIMOTHY C.
WINOUMAS,JASON M.
WITZER,DIANE G.
WOLF,CHRISTOPHER.
YALOURIS,SOFIA M.
YEGERLEHNER,DEBORAH S.
YUN,SUNGKYU.
YUNIS,DAVID E.
ZABLEMBO,ANN L.
ZEMSER,AMY B.
ZICCONI,JOHN R.
ZISSAN,AMY S.
ZITO,ANN MARGARET.
ZITO,ANTONY E.
ZUCHOWSKI,EDWARD S.JR

Arts and Sciences—Natural Sciences and Mathematics

AMICONE,LISA A.
AMIN HANJANI,BEROIDEH.
ANDREWS,MONICA B.
ARMSTRONG,JUSTIN W.
ASLAM,AHMAD W.
ATKINS,MICHAEL B.
AXEL,RALPH W.
BACH,ERICA A.
BEAL,KERRI L.
BEATTY,IAN D.
BECKER,LANCE J.
BELANGER,JEREMY Y.
BERGERON,MICHAEL A.
BERSANI,MARIE.
BEJUA,BRENDA E.
BOEHNEMANN,SANDRA A.
BOUCHER,JENNIFER L.
BRADFORD,MICHAEL P.
BRADY,SAMANTHA C.
BRAMLAGE,ANNE E.
BRICCETTI,CHRISTINE E
BRODIE,JONATHAN H.
BROWN,LEE H.
BUMB,MARY A.
BURUD,VIDAR.
BUTERA,JAMES H.
CHAIT,DAVID M.
CHANDER,VIVEK.
CHO,LINDA.
CLARK,DOROTHY S.
CODE,ERIN L.
COHEN,MICHELLE S.
COLEMAN,KARI R.
COLICA,ANTHONY J.
COLLABORE,BETH A.
CONDON,GARY R.

CONLEE,KATHLEEN M.
CONNORS,ROBERT L.
CORBETT,MAE.
CRANE,JESSEN,SUSAN A.
CRAWFORD,DAVID F.
CURDO,MARK.
DAILEY,CHRISTOPHER J.
DAUKANTAS,PATRICIA L.
DAUKSZ,CATHERINE D.
DELANEY,SEAN.
DESEMS,ROBERT M.
DONATO,CINDY M.
DONATO,GINA M.
DOYLE,CHRISTOPHER R.
DRISCOLL,GLENN C.
EDWARDS,BRUCE L.
EGAN,ELIZABETH A.
EVANS,LEE-ANN D.
FABBRI,DANA M.
FAIRFIELD,STEPHEN M.
FANCHER,CHARLES A.
FARRAR,TIMOTHY D.
FAWCETT,GLENN S.
FELDMAN,NEIL J.
FEY,L. DAVID.
FITZWEBBER,GREGORY S
FIHLAYSON,DONNA L.
FLAVIN,FRANCIS E.III
FLESCHER,CHRISTOPHER
FOWLER,STEVEN F.
FRANK,HOWARD J.
GARTEN,JAMES F.
GEDACHT,COURTNEY P.
GERSO,GARY.
GEORGE,HITA J.

GEORGE,THOMAS L.
GLENN,ERIC.
GOMEZ,FLORENCE A.
GOMERSALL,SARAH.
GORDON,RONALD L.
GRAY,MICHAEL A.
GREEN,JOHN E.
GRISWOLD,NATALIE B.
GROSSER,BRUCE J.
GROVER,GEORGE W.
GUGLIELMI,JULIE A
GUNDEL,HEIL E.
GUPTA,SANJAY.
HAEHNEL,LEDA C.
HAMILTON,MATTHEW.
HAMILTON,CHRISTOPHES
HAST,JONATHAN E.
HATCH,ERIC C.
HECHAVARRIA,BOBBIJO.
HICKEY,KAREN A.
HILTON,HOLLY C.
HO,HOI HUNG.
HOFFBERG,KENNETH E.
HOLMES,JEFFREY A.
HOLOYDAY,DANIELA A.
HOUSEMAN,LESLEY E.
HUI,JOHN.
HURLEY,JAMES W.
IWATANI,HIDEKO.
IWE,WANN,CLAUDIA.
JAHNSEN,STEVEN F.
JOHNSON,PAUL D.
JOHNSON,REBECCA A.
KASPER,JOHN D.
KEANE,ELLEN P.
KECK,JAMES L.

KENNEDY,CHRISTOPHER A
KESTENBAUM,ANDREW R.
KETELAAR,HEATHER.
KHEISSL,MICHELE L.
KOPBRAN,LARA E.
KOSSOY,JONATHAN S.
KUJAWSKI,JENNIFER L.
LEARY,BETH A.
LECH,JAMES M.
LEWITH,MICHAEL S.
LEVINE,CAROLYN H.
LI,JODI.
LINCOLN,HAMILTON,III
LIPMAN,JOHN E.
LISS,ANDREW.
LIVERMORE,CAROL.
LOCKE,BENJAMIN W.
LOUNSBURY,RICHARD A.
LUX,ALISON.
LYDETTE,CHRISTOPHER A
LYNG,THOMAS J.
MACPHEE,KEELEE J.
MALAVEYA,AYINDRA.
MALONEY,LAURA L.
MAMONTOV,MIKHAIL A.
MANDULAK,ANNE.
MARTELL,CHRISTINE R.
MASTROBATTISTO,LORI.
MATO,SEAN M.
MCKAY,AMY E.
MEGHAL,LISA A.
METWARIS,JONATHAN C.
MIKULIS,JONATHAN G.
MILA,RON.JR.
MITCHELL,KIMBERLY P.
MOORHEAD,PAMELA E.
MUCKENTHALER,MARY E.

MULLALY,BENEDICT J.
NAJJAR,TOBEY A.
NALEWIK,JEFFREY G.
NATHANS,ROBIN S.
NELSON,JOSEPH E.
NEWMAN,BARBARA J.
NEWSTADT,KEITH B.
NOBREGA,EDWARD A.
NYLANDER,BAYLE L.
OBRIEN,DAVID A.
OBRIEN,THOMAS P.JR
OCONNOR,JAMES E.
OMELIA,DEBORAH E.
ONEILL,LAURIE A.
OSHRY,MATTHEW D.
PAWLAK,SONIA K.
PERKEL,JEFFREY M.
POLAGRUTO,JOHN A.
POLLACK,WENDY J.
POPP,NANCY E.
POUSONT,RONALD R.
PRESTON,LINDA J.
RACINE,PAULA J.
RAPP,LISA M.
RAUSCHER,SARA A.
REIO,TAYLOR C.
REVETT,TRACY L.
ROBINSON,RICHARD S.
ROOTES,JACQUELINE P.
RONDEAU,TIMOTHY S.
ROVINELLI,BECKY L.
SAATHAN,DONNA A.
SASTRY,SARITA K.
SCHLESSINGER,LISA G.
SCHWARZ,JOHN.
SCOTT,PETER G.
SCOTT,SARAH P.

SEARS,ROBIN S.
SEKARD,ROBERT J.
SHARIFI,AFSHIN A.
SHEEHAN,MARY BETH.
SILVERMAN,JOHN D.
SIMONELLI,MICHAELA L.
SMITH,KIMBERLY A.
SMITH,WILLIAM A.
SNOOHIAN,JOHN R.
SOHLE,DAVID I.
SOLOMON,MICHAEL E.
SPITZAK,SHARON.
ST AMAND,RONALD P.
STANGE,REBECCA E.
STEVENS,JASON R.
SU,JEFFREY.
SWINBARIN,TARA L.
TAI,CHIH-HUA.
TENG,EDNA I.
THISSEN,PETER E.
TORLA,JASON M.
TORRIQUEZ,EDWARDO J.
VENTURA,JAMES S.
VERMEULEN,ADAM J.
WAGNER,KATHLEEN M.
WALSH,CHRISTINA T.
WALTERS,TIMOTHY W.
WALTHER,NATALIE K.
WANG,ERIN.
WHITTAKER,ALLYSON J.
WILLUMD,JEFFREY G.
WINDLOSKI,FRANK T.
WISNER,TOM.
WOMSEY,DIANE R.
WOOD,JENNIFER E.
WROMA,MEREDITH.
YUNIS,JORGE J.
ZERVAS,JAMES J.
ZERVAS,NICOLETTE J.

Arts and Sciences—Social and Behavioral Sciences

ABBOTT,EMILY.
ABDULLAH,KARLENA I.
ADAMS,GREGORY A.
ADAMS,THOMAS J.
ADLER,CHRISTOPHER K.
AINSWORTH,DONNA T.
ALEXANDER,BRIDGETTE A.
ALVES,MARK O.
AMELL,JOSEPH C.
ANDERSON,CHERYL L.
ANDERSON,DANIELLE T.
ANDREWS,CHRISTOPHER S.
ANHEAR,JOYCE B.
APONTE,LEILA.
ARMSTRONG,ROBERT J.JR
ARNOLD,DANIEL R.
ARONSON,CHRISTOPHER S.
ARRUDA,ANA PAULA W.
ARTHUR,MICHELLE M.
ASPIN,MATTHEW N.
AUBEE,CAROLYN J.
AVERY,JOSEPHINE V.
AVERYAIS,SHELLEY A.
BACNAR,JOEL R.
BACON,CARLA MARY.
BAR-ILAN,TALI.
BARBOSA,LUCIO W.
BARLOW,MELISSA A.
BARNETT,JASON E.
BARSTOW,MATTHEW G.
BARTLEY,SARA D.
BASSETT,JESSICA.
BATES,ROBIN D.
BAUER,DONNA J.
BEAMER,JOAN A.
BEAVERS,LAURA A.
BECKER,DIANA L.
BELL,CARLENE D.
BELSHAW,JUSTIN R.
BELTRAN-ANA MARIA.
BENIS,GREGORY M.
BENNETT,DAVID L.
BENTLEY,JASON M.
BERARD,KAREN A.
BERGSTEIN,ALYSE.
BERNSTEIN,SANDRA J.
BERTHEJANE,KENNETH P.
BERTOLINI,MARYELLEN.
BICKFORD,BRENDA.
BIERMERT,DAVID L.
BIONDA,DANIELLE F.
BLACK,JAMES L.JR
BLAKE,PAMELA E.
BLAKE,WILLIAM W.
BLANCHARD,KERRI L.
BOCCHINO,MARIE A.
BOISVERT,ELIZABETH A.
BOLIO,CORRINE C.
BOND,DAWN R.
BOUCIAS,BRANDON J.
BOYCE,KELLY L.
BOWDEN,KATHERINE R.
BOYD,HEATHER E.
BRANCO,DAVID J.
BRANDWEIN,HOWARD R.
BRENNAN,PATRICK W.

BRIDGE,RUSSELL E.
BRIGGS,VANESSA D.
BRILLON,LISA.
BRISTOL,MARY F.
BROADHEAD,EMILY A.
BRONISZEWSKI,WILLIAM T.
BROWN,DEBORAH L.
BROWN,JODY.
BROWN,PHILLIP J.
BRUST,ALAN R.
BURKE,RANDY S.
BURNS,BONNIE A.
CAILLE,LAURA J.
CALLAHAN,DEBORAH A.
CAMACHO,SHEILA.
CANAVAN,KELLY J.
CANAVAN,KATHLEEN M.
CANDIDO,KRISTINA M.
CANFIELD,JENNIFER E.
CARIELLO,CHRISTINA A.
CARLOS,NANCY W.
CARNES,WELINDA P.
CARON,MARY D.
CARP,JOANNA.
CARTWRIGHT,CARIN J.
CASSIDY,KEITH E.
CATELLIER,DIANE W.
CAULEY,GEORGE.
CAVEN,ELIZABETH S.
CELENTANO,DIANE.C
CHAITIN,JOSEPH M.
CHAMBERLAIN,LAWRENCE W.
CHAPLIN,ALEX D.
CHARLTON,ERIC S.
CHARNEY,JONATHAN A.
CHARPENTIER,JOEL J.
CHEN,JUANITA N.
CHEN,VINCENT K.
CHENARD,SHEILA L.
CHESLOFF,PETER.
CHESLOFF,VIVIAN L.
CHILDS,MARGARET W.
CHRISTIE,CAROLINE S.
CHRISIFELLO,DANA A.
CLIFTON,CATHERINE E.
COCHRANE,JENNIFER A.
COFFIN,JOEL.
COFSKY,EMILY L.
COHEN,LORA B.
COLEMAN,THOMAS A.
COLLINS,JENIFER E.
COLMAN,WILLIAM D.
COMPANION,MICHELE L.
CONRADE,CAROLYN.
CONRAD,CAROLYN B.
CONRAD,JENNIFER L.
COPELAND,MARNIE M.
CORSO,JONATHAN.
COURTNEY,JOHN.
COURTNEY,NORA E.
COUTTS,CHERYL L.
CRABB,MARY K.
CRAVEN,ERICA L.
CRESTA,LAURA J.
CRESTIN,LIANNE Z.

CRONIN,FREDERICK A.
CRONIN,JEFFREY B.
CROWLEY,SEAN P.
CURTIS,MARY F.
CURTIS,HOLLY D.
CUSHMAN,JOSEPH P.
CUTHBERT,CHARLOTTE C
CZMARIEL,CHARLOTTE A.
DACEY,TIM.
DAGGETT,BETH A.
DALCERRO,CHERYL B.
DALEY,TRACEY B.
DAMORA,DEBRA M.
DAMANAB,DEIRDRE M.
DANIELS,MELISSA F.
DANSBY,JOHN.
DANZIGER,JASON A.
DAVIDSON,JULIE.
DAVIDSON,ROBERT B.
DEBLOK,MARGARET.
DEMARTINO,NICOLE R.
DENILLE,KRISTEN.
DENNEHY,LAURA J.
DENNIS,JULIEANN.
DENNIS,MARGARET M.
DERTOUZOS,ANTHONY A.
DEVINE,CHRISTINE E.
DIEHL,JAMES.
DIMARTINO,CARLA B.
DILUISI,ANDREA J.
DILUISIO,WILLIAM E.
DINOZZI,ROBERT A.
DIONNE,JENNIFER L.
DISTEFANO,ANNE M.
DOLAN,SUSAN.
DOMINGOS,CATHERINE E.
DOOLEY,RENEE M.
DORE,JUSTIN J.
DOUCET,DEREK A.
DOYLE,THERESA M.
DRAKE,DEBRA J.
DREUSSI,JENNIFER L.
DRUMMOND,PAULA C.
DURIN,RANDI J.
DUSA,MARISSA.
DUDDY,CHERYL A.
DULLEA,PAUL D.
DUMAS,CHRISTINE M.
DUM,AP.JOHN.
DUVAL,JENNIFER J.
DYMEK,MAUREEN P.
EGMANN,TERESA L.
ELLERTSON,TORREY F.
ELIA,KRISTIN W.
ELWINSON,SANDY T.
ELLIS,JODI L.
ELLIS,SETH B.
EMERSON,ROBERT.
ERICKSON,ERIC R.
ERRICO,LAURA J.
ESHELMAN,TIMOTHY H.
EWALD,JOHN C.
FADDEN,STEVEN P.
FALARELLA,LAURA J.
FANTASKNE,JENNIFER B.

FANTASIA,RENE A.
FAVREAU,KAREN E.
FERRARA,DIANE J.
FIDUKKO,WILLIAM J.
FIELD,AUDREY M.
FIELD,LAURIE A.
FINNEGAN,ELLEN F.
FISHER,DAVID EDWARD.
FITZGERALD,LISA A.
FLEISHMAN,WILLIAM J.
FLEMING,MATTHEW J.
FORD,JANE A.
FOREST,SABRINA T.
FORMAN,BETSY P.
FORMAN,GABRIELE A.
FORRESTER,DANA E.
FOSTER,KEVIN P.
FOUCART,PAUL M.
FOUTES,MICHAEL A.
FOWLER,TODD.
FOX,CHRISTINE A.
FRANCIS,KARIN M.
FRASCA,SUSAN.
FREEBERG,NICOLE M.
FRIEDMAN,KEVIN M.
FULCINITI,LISA M.
GAGNE,MELISSA A.
GAINEY,GEORGE W.
GAMST,NICOLE C.
GARAVANIAN,GREGORY J.
GARCIA,MICHELLE C.
GARDINER,GWENDOLYN R.
GARRETT,KELLY A.
GARSTKA,MARY E.
GARVEY,KERRY A.
GAUDET,LISA.
GAUTHIER,TAMMI A.
GEARY,JAMES T.
GELLER,AIMEE E.
GENTRY,KIMBERLY.
GERBER,KRISTIN J.
GERMAIN,PAUL R.
GERVASI,STEPHANIE E.
GERYK,LAURA A.
GIACHETTI,STEFANO M.
GLEESON,BRIAN C.
GLOVER,JAMES W.
GOLDSTEIN,JULIE B.
GOLN,HEATHER D.
GOMEZ,JOSE.
GOWEI,TROY P.
GOODMAN,KIMBERLY D.
GOODMAN,LAUREN E.
GOODMAN,PAUL.
GORDON,LILLIAN B.
GORDON,ROBIN C.
GORMAN,DEBORAH A.
GOSSELIN,KRISTEN C.
GRANCELL,DANNAH I.
GRANT,ANDREW F.
GRANT,EDWARD F.JR
GRANT,HEATHER E.
GREENBERG,DANIEL W.
GREENBERG,RACHEL J.
GREENE,ELIZABETH.
GREENSTEIN,COLETTE R
GREENSTEIN,JANE M.
GRILLO,KATHERINE M.

GROTHE,HILARY J.
GUEDES,MARGARITA R.
GUIDERA,MATTHEW M.
GULLA,LISA.
GULLEY,KEVIN J.
GURSKI,CHRISTINE M.
HADLEY,CHRISTOPHER D.
HALLOCK,KEVIN F.
HANLEY,JOHN C.
HARNON,LORRAINE C.
HARRIS,TODD C.
HARVEY,GEORGE.
HARKINS,STEPHANIE L.
HAUTAHIEWI,MARY T.
HAZZARD,MICHAEL E.
HEMPSTEAD,BENJAMIN B.
HEPINSTALL,TODD E.
HERLANDS,JULIE.
HERNANDEZ,DARMEN M.
HEWITT,WILLIAM S.JR
HEYCK,CHRISTINE D.
HILL,HOLLY L.
HIRSH,SALLY B.
HIRST,CANDICE L.
HOBAN,BARRETT J.
HOCHMAN,NAMNI E.
HODNE,AMY.
HOIBERG,LESTER L.
HOLMES,JONATHAN.
HOOPER,GEOFFREY D.
HOSLEY,CHRISTOPHER.
HOULE,RENE P.
HUBERS,ELLEN D.
HUGHES,KATHLEEN A.
HUGHES,SUSAN J.
HUGO,JOHN T.
HUNTER,RUSSELL A.
IAMPIETRO,JAN B.
IANELLI,DAVID P.
IDE,JAMES C.
IMPASTATO,ELENA L.
IMGLEKE,BRIAN J.
ISSENBERG,LORI J.
JACOBS,HEIDI A.
JAEGER,INGRID C.
JAMES,HOELLE R.
JANIS,BRADY A.
JARMON,JESSICA M.
JARNAGIN,ALEC R.
JIHAD,MARY C.
JOHNS,JACQUE D.
JOHNSON,GRETCHEN J.
JOHNSON,KIMBERLY.
JOHNSON,KIMBERLY R.
JOHNSON,SUSAN E.
JOHNSTON,THOMAS P.
JONES,KRISTIN F.
KAHN,AMY B.
KANN,JULIE S.
KANASKIE,DONNA M.
KAPLAN,ALLISON E.
KARDONYAVANICH,PALIR/
KATSOULIS,KRISTA D.
KEATING,MICHELLE R.
KEELER,KELLY A.

KEIMACH,DAVID B.
KELLEY,ROBERT.
KENIGS,VELGA A.
KENNEDY,LISA M.
KESSINGER,HEIDI I.
KHOMENKO,ANDREW.
KIRSCH,STEFANIE L.
KLAINER,KAREN E.
KLATTE,CYNTHIA R.
KLEIN,DAVID.
KLEINBERGER,SCOTT.
KLEKOTKA,JESSIE A.
KONACK,PETER D.
KOFLER,MICHELLE L.
KOHN,JENNIFER L.
KOKERNAK,JAMES J.
KOWSZKA,JEAN M.
KOZTOFF,SUSAN D.
KOLLER,DIONNE L.
KOWALCZYK,ANNE C.
KOWALCZYK,KEITH A.
KREISEL,PATRICIA E
KREIGER,AMY T.
KROHAN,CELESTE.
KROP,LAIMIE S.
KUMS,RAN,KIMBERLY A.
KYROS,KONSTANTINE.
LAMAIR,DEBRA E.
LANDRY,SCOTT J.
LANDSTROM,SARA.
LANE,KELLY B.
LARIVIERE,JULIANNE M.
LAPP,IVANN AN *
LARKIN,JEFFREY S.
LASHWAY,AMY A.
LAUGHLIN,JAMES C.
LAURICELLA,JOHN J.
LAVIN,KELLY.
LAWRENCE,ANNE.
LEART,BRENDA.
LEBLANC,CELESTE J.
LEE,BRENDAN.
LEE,CHRISTOPHER.
LEMMER,LAURA T.
LETHBRIDGE,JACQUES D.
LEMMO,NICHOLE W.
LEVITT,GEORGE V.
LEVITT,STEPHANIE L.
LEVY,CHRISTINE.
LEVINE,AMY L.
LEVY,JONATHAN D.
LEVY,SHARYN I.
LEWIS,CELESTE A.
LIEBER,MATTHEW S.
LITTLEFIELD,WILSON A.
LITTLEFIELD,KERI J.
LLOYD,AURLUSTO E.
LLOYD,SILVIA L.
LOCKER,GARY V.
LOISELLE,LINDA L.
LOLOS,NINA.
LOMBARDO,SHERRI L.
LONGLEY,DIANA J.
LOPES,CARLOS A.
LORD,ELIZABETH A.
LOUBRIEL,ROBERT F.
LOVEJOY,DAVID M.
LUCEY,PATRICIA M.

LUND,STEPHEN M.
LURTIA,LYNN K.
LURTSO,KIMBERLY A.
LYONS,RICHARD D.
MACDONALD,NATHAN B.
MACDONALD,STACY B.
MACDONALD,TRACY B.
MACEDO,MARIA M.
MACKEWICZ,JENNIFER S.
MACKEY,MICHAEL J.
MACKLIN-MELANIE S.
MAHONEY,AILEEN A.
MAINE,TIMMIE A.
MAIONE,RACHEL A.
MALINOWSKI,LISA B.
MANDEL,MELANIE K.
MANN,MAUREEN C.
MANNING,JUDY A.
MARBURY,ROGER B.
MARCEAU,CARRIE A.
MARCOBAL,STACEY A.
MARINO,CHRIS A.
MARRINER,DOREEN L.
MARTIN,JOSEPH A.
MARTIN,MARY J.
MARVIN,PETER J.
MATHIS,ELLEN.C
MATSON,RUSSELL J.
MAYNARD,ANNE S.
MAZZEI,MARY.
MCALL,DANIEL D.
MCCARTHY,JOSEPH.
MCCLELLAND,ANNE.
MCELHINNEY,KRISTEN A.
MCGEE,CHRISTINE B.
MCGEE,KAREN A.
MCGINN,LISA A.
MCGUIRE,MARY-VICTOR *
MCINTIRE,JENNIFER L.
MCNATT,MARY E.
MCPHEE,DEBORAH J.
MEDEIROS,DAVID N.
MENDIZABAL,E HUDUETTE
MERRILL,TIMOTHY W.
MESA,PATRICIA.
MICHAUD,JENNIFER L.
MICHAELIAN,KELLY A.
MIKOLEIT,ERIC.
MIDDLETON,JESSICA A.
MILKOT,JOHN J.
MILLER,CHARLES W.
MILLER,ROBIN M.
MILTZ,RENEE L.
MINKIN,ELIZABETH S.
MIRKAY,ELENA S.

MITCHELL,ELIZABETH B
MONTY,JOSEE P.
MOORE,STEPHEN L.
MOREL AND,PATRICIA M.
MORGAN,MELISSA A.
MORIOKECHO,THADDEUS J.
MORRIS,KATHRYN A.
MORRISSEY,BRENDAN M.
MOSER,BRIGITTE A.
MOYLAN,ADAM S.
MUNDY,ELIZABETH A.
MUNROE,JONATHAN P.
MURPHY,EDWARD C.
MURPHY,RICHARD J.
MURPHY,TIMOTHY B.
MURPHY,TINA W.
NALEN,JAMES E.
NAMBIAR,SUMITHA M.
NANO,ERIN.
NARKEWICZ,DAVID J.
NASON,BARBARA L.
NATALE,FRANCIS J.
NAVARRO,JESSICA M.
NEARY,MELISSA C.
NEITLICH,LISA S.
NELSON,KATHLEEN J.
NELSON,SUSAN V.
NESSEL,DANNY A.
NEWBURY,ANNE S.
NOWRIS,HEIDI R.
NUNAN,SUZANNE.
NYMAN,AMY L.
OATMAN,CHRISTOPHER D
OBRIEN,TARA A.
OCONNELL,JOHN P.JR
OCONNOR,MAUREEN J.
ODONNELL,HEATHER M.
OHALLORAN,JEFFREY M.
OHERN,SHANNON E.
OKEEFFE,JENNIFER J.
OLEARY,COURTNEY A.
OLIVEIRA,DAVID J.
ONEIL,WILLIAM D.
ORourke,JODI L.
OSBORNE,TIMOTHY W.
OSULLIVAN,JAMES P.
OUELLET

Food and Natural Resources

(Including Stockbridge with 3.25)

ADAMS, LESLIE A.
ADAMS, RICHARD T.
ADCOCK, SHEVAUN L.
ARBOYD, ROBERT T.
ANDAH, YAA D.
AMITIAN, STELLA A.
ANASOULIS, ROBERT J.
ARNESON, STEPHEN J.
ARNOLD, JENNIFER,
BAKER, CHARLES P.
BAKER, TIMOTHY J.
BAKER, VANESSA L.
BARDEN, LORAINE J.
BARTH, ELANA B.
BARTSCH, KEVIN P.
BASOLI, DAWN C.
BEARMAN, NATHAN S.
BEATTY, KAREN J.
BEAULIEU, DANIEL P.
BERCHICK, YERI A.
BECKER, WIRON J.
BEER, JULIE L.
BENJAMIN, JEFFREY A.
BENNETT, DEBORAH J.
BERGERON, HANETTE F.
BLAKE, CHRISTINE C.
BLUESTEIN, SCOTT W.
BOFFA, ANNE E.
BONDVICH, KAREN L.
BOLDUC, STEVEN R.
BRADLEY, CHRISTINE,
BRAIN, AGE WILLIAM B.
BRAUN, MARIA
BRAY, RANDOLPH C.
BRIGHTMAN, HEATH J.
BRIGHTSTEIN, DEBRA
BROWN, CHERYL L.
BROWNFIELD, DAVID H.
BURGESS, RALPH C.
BURNHAM, ROBERT S.
BURRILL, JOYCE A.
BUTMAN, WILLIAM S.-III
BYRNES, CATHERINE B.
CALICEO, WENDY M.
CANAWAY, KENNETH B.
CANAWAY, SUSAN E.
CANNON, BRIDGET L.
CANTI, ANDREA M.
CAPPADONA, VICTOR J.
CAPRIOLO, MICHAEL J.
CAPUA, RALPH,
CARBOTTE, ALFRED,
CASSELMAN, AMY L.
CHAIKEN, JULIE B.
CHAMBLESS, S ROCHELLE.
CHARPIN, THEODORE S.
CHARRON, SUZANNE M.
CHASEY, DOUGLAS J.
CHERNOFF, LISA M.
CHEVERETTE, SHARON M.
CHIN, CAROLYN F.
CLARK, ALEXANDER,
CLARK, DANIEL E.
CLOSSWELL, DOUGLAS J.
COLE, CINDY A.
COLE, ERIC K.
CONDON, RICHARD P
CONWAY, TERESA A.
CORDETTE, ROBYN M.
DADDARIO, TERRY A.
DALEY, MORA J.
DANTOWITZ, JUDITH E.
DAVIS, SEAN G.
DEGROOT, DEBRA J.
DEMPSEY, SANDRA J.
DENOUTER, INGRID L.
DESILVA, TREVOR N.
DICORPO, MARIANNE,
DIFINI-VINCENT, JO
DILLON, MAUREEN C.
DIODONNE, CLAURA E.
DOESCHER, BETHANY M.
DOHERTY, JEFFREY J.
DONOVAN, HANNAH M.
DORISS, ASHLEY P.
DOTOLI, ANGELO
DOWNER, LINDA J.
DRISCOLL, KARA M.
DUDGEON, DENA A.
DUFREE, KEVIN T.
DUVAL, PAUL J.
EDER, LISA J.
EDINGTON, DIANE C.
EFRANOVA, JULIE A.
EMERY, KRISTYNA J.
EMMANUELLI, FRANCELYTH
ESTRELLA, MARY B.
EVANS, DANIEL P.
FAIRCLOTH, MICHELLE M.
FASCIANO, CLAUDIA J.
FAVA, JENNIFER ELISON J.
FEINSTEIN, KEVIN T.
FERRONI, JENNIFER L.
FINGLE, ROBERT J.
FITZGERALD, DAVID E.
FLAHERTY, WAYA S.
FLYNN, CAROLINE M.
FOLEY, JENNIFER A.
FOSTER, MICHAEL L.
FOWLER, TRACY P.
FRAGALA, ANGELA C.
FREEDMAN, MARCI B.
FRIEL, MICHAEL P.
GARDTNER, JOHN F.
GLOTTMANN, DEBORAH,
GOLDMAN, MARK S.
GOLLER, JEFFREY L.
GOYETTE, LESLEY B.
GRANAK, PATRICIA M.
GRANDE, BRADLEY A.
GRANT, ELYSSA S.
GREENBOUM, EDWARD P.
GRIFFIN, PATRICIA M.
GRIN, KELLY A.
GUSTOWSKI, CAROL J.
GUTMANN, LISA J.
HAASPER, SONJA
HALSTEAD, LACEY
HAMILTON, CHRISTOPHER I
HAMLIN, SUZANNE M.
HAMMOND, SHANE P.
HARDY, MICHELLE W.
HARFORD, ELIZABETH M.
HARPER, DANIEL C.
HARPIN, SUSAN B.
HARRINGTON, MARIA S.
HARRIS, MAUREEN H.
HARSFIELD, BETH W.
HASEY, HARRY E.
HEALEY, VERONICA M.
HEMINGER, BRIAN T.
HIEBERT, STEPHANIE R.
HILL, ROBERT D.
HILL, ROBERT S.
HILL, SCOTT A.
HING, AMY A.
HOGENAUER, HEATHER J.
HOPKINS, CYNTHIA W.
HURLEY, BRIAN C.
HURST, THOMAS P.
HYDE, DUANE J.
IACONETA, ELIZABETH M.
IORIO, ADRIENNE M,
ISLES, GREGORY F.
ITURREGUI, JORGE N.
JAMMEL, ROBERT J.
JEKANOWSKI, MARK D.
JENNER, MARGARET E.
JOHNSON, LISA K.
JOSEPH, ANTHONY A.
JOSLIN, TAMMY L.
JOYCE, BRIAN A.
JUSTUS, MAURICIO,
KALKERT, ROBERT E.
KARRIS, RICHELIME,
KEEVAN, BRIAN J.
KELLY, CANDICE A.
KERCHER, JASON RY.
KING, JOHN D.
KING, KENNETH W.
KIRSCHNER, ROBERT C.
KNOX, HEATHER A.
KOMETANI, SYDNEY M.
KRUCHER, JENNIFER N.
KULAGA, KAREN A.
KURIAN, RAVEE V.
LACHANCE, MICHELLE M.
LAFONTAINE, SHERYL A.
LAFONTAINE, SHERTL A.
LANE, JULIE C.
LANG, KRISTINA J.
LARZELERE, JEFFERY P.
LASDON, DANIEL M.
LASKA, MELISSA J.
LATTANZIO, LESLIE A.
LEISMAN, HEATHER M.
LESEN, AMY C.
LEVESQUE, JULIE A.
LEVY, MICHELLE T.
LEWIS, TORA L.
LEWIS, JENNIFER B,
LEWIS, ROBIN W.
LIEBERMAN, JUDITH A.
LILLEY, VANESSA W.
LINEHAN, RACHAEL L.
LISCHE, BACH, CHARITY A.
LOMBARD, JEFFREY D.
LOMBARDO, JOHN J.
LOUISE, JENNIFER M.
LOVITZ, JOANNE J.
LOWELL, DAVID E.
LUCIA, MARIANNE,
LYNCH, ERIN E.
MACDONALD, JAMES KENNET
MACHNEE, JONATHAN S.
MAID, LYN MARIE,
MAMGISSIS, ANTONY S.
MANGAN, GREGORY A.
MANGOR, JODIE,
MANJFOLD, SHELLEY,
MARBOLIS, JENNIFER L.
MARISSEAU, SIMONE M.
MARIOTTA, JOANNE M.
MARREN, DAVID G.
MARSHALL, MICHAEL T.
MARVEL, SHARON A.
MARTIN, CRAIG A.
MARTINEI, KIM A.
MASHAKEVICH, MARYAN.
MCAFEE, STEPHEN J.
MCBRIDE, BRIDGETTE L.
MCCALLION, GERALD B.
MCCLELLAND, GREGG W.
MCCONVILLE, HEATHER A.
MCCREA, NANCY A.
MCILWRATH, WELDDIE W.
MCKNIGHT, THOMAS S.
MCLEAN, KARAN A.
MCNAMARA, KELLIE A.
MCNEFF, TAMRY K.
MEADS, RICHARD W.
MELANSON, DENISE W.
MERCIER, KAREN J.
MITCHELL, ROBERT D.
MITSICAVITCH, JOANNE M.
MOAK, PETER C.
MOCHIZUKI, TOSHIE.
MOORE, BENJAMIN P.
MOORE, KATHLEEN H.
MORAN, DAVID J.
MORELLI, KRISTEN E.
MORRISSEY, ANN F.
MORTTO, ANDREA,
MORS, CHARLES W.
MOUSER, LA MELSA,
MUELLER, ANDREW E.
MULLIGAN, MARY K.
MULLMAN, TRACEE L.
NEAL, DAVID B.
NELLES, MICHAEL S.
NEWMAN, ANDREA L.
NORCROSS, JAMES S.
NORTON, JOANNE,
NOSEK, HOWARD B.
NUBOER, C ELISABETH,
NUMES, DONALD T.
OBRIEN, CAROL A.
OCONNELL, LIAM P.
OEHME, WILLIAM J, JR
OHARA, LOUISE A.
OROZCO, ALAN E.
OSELLO, SANDRA J.
PAGE, MARY E.
PAPITTO, LISA A.
PAQUETTE, JACQUELINE M.
PARDOE, SUSAN A.
PAUL, BRICE C.
PEARSON, KRISTINE W.
PEASE, DONALD R.
PELLECCHIA, KIMBERLY A.
PEREZ, VIVIAN P.
PETERS, WENDY M.
PIERI, ANDREA D.
PIROG, JOSEPH A, JR
POLLACK, DAVID S.
POMEROY, KARL F, JR
PUDLO, CRAIG A.
PUROY, ALLEGRA B.
QUINTON, TRACY A.
RADISH, CYNTHIA M.
RAMOS, JUAN R.
RANDELL, DEBORAH J.
REICHSTEIN, SUZANNE J.
REIMEL, JESSICA K.
RICHARDS, MARK C.
RICCIOPPO, CAROLINE, I
RIEDEL, LORI A.
RIVERA, DEBRA L.
RIVERS, BRUCE A.
RIVET, STACEY L.
ROBAR, STEVEN R.
ROBINSON, ALEXANDRA.
ROSINSKI, LORI A.
ROSS, MICHAEL S.
ROTHBARD, STEVEN W.
ROY, JENNIFER L.
RUDICK, KELLY A.
RUNJANIC, PITA R.
SALVATORE, LEANNE C.
SANTIAGO, MIRIAM,
SAWICKE, CHERYL L.
SCHAUBER, ERIC W.
SCHEIDT, MICHAEL F.
SCHNEIDER, GREGORY S.
SCHWAB, MELISSA V.
SCOLLINS, LESLIE A.
SEGHETTI, MARCI E.
SEDA TORO, KRISTIN A.
SEPECK, WILLIAM T, JR
SHEA, MARGARET V.
SHELDON, SARAH J.
SHERWOOD, ELAINE L.
SHIAD, DIETER,
SIART, KAREN A.
SIDDELEAU, ALICE M.
SIDMAN, CYNTHIA B.
SIGALOW, RONNIT B.
SIGURDSSON, FINNUR,
SMALL, JENNIFER L.
SMITH, KIMBERLY N.
SMITH, PATRICIA A.
SPIELMAN, LORI N.
STEIDING, JASON E.
STELWORAS, JOHN W.
STORER, JAMES C.
STRAND, TIMOTHY J.
SWARGER, TIMOTHY W.
THORNTON, KAREN B.
TOOLAS, PETER B.
TOSCA, DAWN R.
TOWNSEND, CRAIG B.
TOWNSEND, ELIZABETH L
TRAHAN, KIMBERLEE J.
TREMBLAY, JENNIFER A.
TRIANA, JOHN A.
TRUE, SCOTT P.
TURMAIL, KRISTIN M.
TWAROG, ALAN J.
URBANO, TARA C.
VAGOY, KRISTEN,
VEIT, KRISTINE F.
VELEZ, EDWIN,
VERMEULEN, KRISTIN,
VITUKEVICH, VICKI L.
VOGEL, KATHLEEN M.
VOOYS, ELIZABETH G.
WACHA, RACHEL TINA M.
WALSH, BRIDGET J.
WARD, KATHLEEN A.
WEINHAUCH, DOUGLAS W.
WEILL, GREGORY S.
WENDLER, CAROLE L.
WENTWORTH, LISA J.
WHELAN, GREGORY J.
WHITE, PETER J.
WITTEHOUSE, MARK J.
WILKER, WENDY E.
WILKER, BERNARD F, III
WILLIAMS, CAROL A.
WILLIAMS, STACEY Y.
WIRTANEN, RACHAEL M.
WOLFF, SUSAN S.
XIFARAS, NICOLE D.
YANEMBRI, TARA S.
YERKE, JASON T.
YOUNG, DANIEL B.
ZIMMER, DAVID M.

Management

ABBATE, MICHAEL A.
ABRAMS, MICHAEL S.
AHLQUIST, DAVID A.
ALIA, SCOTT J.
ALLARD, ANDREA L.
ALVARHAZ, THERESA L.
AMES, JANICE L.
ANNOTTE, CAROLE A.
ANDERSON, MARC A.
ANDERSON, ROBERT D, J
ANGELINI, STEPHEN,
ARMSTRONG, TRACY A.
ARTZ, SUZANNE D.
ASSA, JENNIFER S.
AVERY, JAMES.
BABINSKI, JOAN E.
BAINBRIDGE, MICHELE L
BAITZ, DEBORAH J.
BEAUDOIN, JAMES T
BELLING, CHRISTINA R
BELLOWS, MARY C.
BENNETT, KAREN W.
BENNETT, DOROTHY L.
BERGER, RACHEL,
BERGER, WENDY J.
BERWIND, CHRISTOPHES
BEUSCHEL, HANOI G.
BI, MAYESH, SHUSHA,
BOBOLA, TIMOTHY J.
BORDEN, ROBIN L.
BOYS, KENNETH A.
BOVARNICK, LISA A.
BRENNAN, JOHN M.
BRESHEHAN, PAUL F.
BROAD, MANUEL B.
BRODY, SCOTT D.
BROWN, BETH M.
BROWN, SARAH L.
BUCHANAN, BAILEY M.
BUCKLEY, CHRISTINE
BUCKLEY, KEVIN J.
BUCKLEY, MATTHEW D.
BURNETT, SHERI J.
BURNS, ANTHONY J.
BYERS, JON L.
CADY, ERIC B.
CAISSE, KIMBERLY A.
CALLAHAN, MICHAEL J
CAMPBELL, CRAIG C.
CANDELLA, AARON,
CARBON, DANIEL,
CARRA, NICHOLAS B.
CARROLL, PATRICIA A.
CARVALHO, GARRON J.
CASSESSO, ROBERT J.
CASSIDY, KELLIE J.
CERRUTI, TODD M.
CHECAHI, KAREN E.
CHENG, LYNN,
CHERNEY, ALISA J.
CHINICKA, DANIEL J.
CHEVAIRE, NICOLE J.
CHURCH, SUSAN B.
CICHOCKI, PAUL W.
CLARK, ELIZABETH D.
CLARK, JILL A.
CLARKE, JULIETTE M.
COHEN, DIANA J.
COHEN, RHONDA B.
COHEN, STACE' M.
COLLINS, MICHELLE M.
COLUCCI, DANIEL B, JR
CONNOR, LAYNE C.
CONSTANTINIDIS, THEOPH
COOPER, DAVID H,
COOPER, TODD,
CORNIER, JEFFREY B.
CORRIGAN, KEVIN P.
CORTELLI, JONATHAN C.
COSTELLO, JOSEPH M.
COY, JOHN W.
CREGO, MATEW M.
CROWE, SARAH T.
CURRAN, JOSEPH N.
DAIMAN, BETH F.
DANIELL, SUSAN B.
DANIELSON, THOMAS J.
DAVIS, JENNIFER E.
DAVIS, R.CHARD A.
DEANGELIS, LISA M.
DEBUSSERES, MICHAEL J.
DEGROOT, DEBRA J.
DEMPSEY, SANDRA J.
DENOUTER, INGRID L.
DESILVA, TREVOR N.
DICORPO, MARIANNE,
DIFINI-VINCENT, JO
DILLON, MAUREEN C.
DIODONNE, CLAURA E.
DOESCHER, BETHANY M.
DOHERTY, JEFFREY J.
DONOVAN, HANNAH M.
DORISS, ASHLEY P.
DOTOLI, ANGELO
DOWNER, LINDA J.
DRISCOLL, KARA M.
DUDGEON, DENA A.
DUFREE, KEVIN T.
DUVAL, PAUL J.
EDER, LISA J.
EDINGTON, DIANE C.
EFRANOVA, JULIE A.
EMERY, KRISTYNA J.
EMMANUELLI, FRANCELYTH
ESTRELLA, MARY B.
EVANS, DANIEL P.
FAIRCLOTH, MICHELLE M.
FASCIANO, CLAUDIA J.
FAVA, JENNIFER ELISON J.
FEINSTEIN, KEVIN T.
FERRONI, JENNIFER L.
FINGLE, ROBERT J.
FITZGERALD, DAVID E.
FLAHERTY, WAYA S.
FLYNN, CAROLINE M.
FOLEY, JENNIFER A.
FOSTER, MICHAEL L.
FOWLER, TRACY P.
FRAGALA, ANGELA C.
FREEDMAN, MARCI B.
FRIEL, MICHAEL P.
GARDTNER, JOHN F.
GLOTTMANN, DEBORAH,
GOLDMAN, MARK S.
GOLLER, JEFFREY L.
GOYETTE, LESLEY B.
GRANAK, PATRICIA M.
GRANDE, BRADLEY A.
GRANT, ELYSSA S.
GREENBOUM, EDWARD P.
GRIFFIN, PATRICIA M.
GRIN, KELLY A.
GUSTOWSKI, CAROL J.
GUTMANN, LISA J.
HAASPER, SONJA
HALSTEAD, LACEY
HAMILTON, CHRISTOPHER I
HAMLIN, SUZANNE M.
HAMMOND, SHANE P.
HARDY, MICHELLE W.
HARFORD, ELIZABETH M.
GRAY, JEANNE C.
GREEN, LAUREN H.
GREENGRASS, MARC D.
GREENMAN, WILLIAM J.
GRIPPO, STEVEN E.
GUERTIN, DOROTHY A.
GULEZIAN, TRICIA A.
GULEZIAN, MARC P.
GUNTHER, NANCY E.
GUSTIN, JEREMY B.
GUILYCHEWSKI, CHRISTOPHE
HACKENBURG, STEPHEN R.
HADDAD, LISA S.
HANNON, SHERRI L.
HANSON, CHRISTOPHER J.
HARBOLD, KAREN L.
HARRISON, H CORINA,
HAWKES, AMY E.
HAWKINS, JOANNE M.
HAYES, MARIA C.
HECKMAN, JOHN S.
HEARTY, JEANNE E.
HESTER, JENNIFER L.
HEWITT, MELISSA J.
HILL, ANDREA E.
HIRSCH, MICHAEL S.
HOFFMEISTER, MITCHELL C
HOLDEN, JENNIFER L.
HOLLER, TIMOTHY R.
HOLTER SORENSEN, HANS,
HOPKINS, JAMES A.
HOWARD, NANCY E.
HOWLEY, CHERYL A.
HURAL, MICHELLE M.
HUSAN, SEAN W.
HUGHES, TARA L.
HUNTLEY, DAVID B, JR
HURST, MICHAEL P.
JACKSON, CAROL A.
JACOBS, ANDREW S.
JASMIN, THERESA A.
JAY, DAVID,
JOHN, ANISH W.
JOHNSTON, DAVID W.
JOSEPH, GEORGE H.
JOSHI, CHITRA W.
KAM, IVONNE Y.
KAPLAN, CRAIG S.
KAPLAN, ALYSSA S.
KAPLAN, ERIC,
KAPLAN, STUART J.
KATZ, TODD,
KEHNAN, JEFFREY P.
KEIMIA, MELISSA F.
KLEIN, CYNTHIA L.
KLEIN, ELISA N.
KLEIN, JEFFREY T.
KLEIN, STEFANIE D.
KLOVANICH, JOHN B.
KOPPELMAN, JEFFREY A.
KOTLER, JAYNE L.
KRAUSER, KEITH A.
KUCZYNSKI, PETER A.
KULKLI, PATRICK J.
KURSBAN, NEAL B.
KUZA, KATHY A.
LABELL, ROBERT M.
LALLY, MARIBETH,
LANDAU, SETH A.
LARKIN, VERN D.
LARRABEE, RICHARD J.
LARZELERE, CHRISTINE M.
LAUZON, JANET L.
LAVOIE, PATRICE J.
LAWRENCE, ANDREA S.
LEBOW, REBECCA A.
LEIFER, SCOTT D.
LEPORE, ANTHONY S.
LEROUX, CHRISTOPHER S
LESLIE, DAVID S.
LEVINE, LEONARD M.
LEWENBERG, ADAM S.
LIEN, DAVID A.
LILLEY, JULIE A.
LINCHWSKI, STANLEY D.
LIPSON, REBECCA,
LITMAN, DAVID A.
LOCAHAN, CHARLES P.
LONG, ELIZABETH A.
LONGPRE, TRACIE M.
LUBELL, MITCHELL S.
LUSTG, SCOTT W.
LYONS, MARC A.
MABEL, SCOTT E.
MACDONALD, BRUCE J.
MACINNON, ANDREW J.
MACLEOD, LORI B.
MAFFEI, CHRISTOPHER J
MAHONEY, SUE M.
MAHONEY, SHEILA M.
MAHONEY, TERENCE D.
MAHR, SALENA H.
MALDEN, EILEEN W.
MALLOY, MATTHEW J.
MALOUANY, GREGG S.
MANCHESTER, KRISTEN L
MANSELL, STEPHEN,
MARA, JOSEPH D.
MARANDO, JOSEPH W.
MARCHANT, KENDRA M.
MARCUS, RACHEL M.
MARDULA, REBECCA M.
MARGOLIS, MICHAEL A.
MARQUEZ, DEBRA A.
MARSHALL, ANNETTE L.
MARTINS, RODNEY D.
MASSEY, DARREN E.
MCCABE, ELIZABETH M.
MCCALL, WILLIAM A, JR
MCCANN, JOSEPH C.
MCCARTHY, EILEEN F.
MCCARTHY, JEAN W.
MCDONOUGH, PATRICK J.
MCGOVERN, KATHLEEN M.
MCKEEVER, KIMBERLY A.
MEITSNER, MATTHEW D.
MELCHIONNDA, KIMBERLY L.
MELLO, KRISTINE,
MELNICK, DAVID L.
MENDELSON, ANDREW J.
MERCIER, CHRISTINE E.
MEYERS, JAMES J.
MICKA, SARA J.
MILASZEWSKI, CARYN E.
MILLER, KEVIN J.
MILLER, KRISTIN M.
MILLER, MARK A.
MISIALOZEK, CASANDRA L.
MOFFOTT, DAVID J.
MOGOLESKO, GREGORY A.
MOLLOY, JOSEPH,
MORRISON, MARJEFRANCES,
MORRISSEY, CRISTINA P.
MOSS, JUDITH A.
MOUNT, LANE S.
MURPHY, BRIAN J.
MURPHY, JILL C.
NAGLER, HEIDI P.
NANJIAN, CAROL A.
NEUSNER, BARRY E.
NEWMARK, KERRI B.
NEWTON, DANIEL C.
NGUYEN, GUY H.
NICOTINSKI, THOMAS J.
NIMS, HEATHER L.
NOBREGA, STEPHANIE A.
NORWOOD, KAREN L.
NOWAK, DOROTHY M.
OAKES, JOHN W.
OCONNOR, ELLEN W.
OH, YOUNG-SOO,
OLIVERO, PATRICIA A.
OLLMANN, LISA K.
ONEIL, KATHARINE W.
OBR, JOSEPH L.
OSTROBINSKI, JULIE.
OSTROWSKI, CYNTHIA M.
OTOOLE, SABETH A.
OZOLEK, DIANE W.
PAINE, MATTHEW S,
PAK, ANN S.
PALES RODRIGUEZ, JAIME
PANOS, JAMES P.
PAPPAS, CHRISTOPHER J.
PAQUETTE, COLETTE R.
PARISH, ASHISH N.
PARKER, GARY R.
PATRONAS, EILEEN M.
PATTERSON, BETH E.
PAUL, LAURA B.
PEREI, BARBELA A.
PERVERE, BRIANA M.
PINKOVITZ, BARBARA M.
PINNEY, JOSEPH W.
PISCITELLO, MICHAEL C.
PLACHTA, CAROLYN A.
PROVENCHER, COLLEEN J
PRUSH IN, MARC A.
PURI, ROHINI,
RACHES, VIVIAN S.
RAFISH, SCOTT D.
RAMAN, RAMKUMAR,
RAKAUSKAS, DAVID P.
RASCO, CATHERINE C.
REEF, SAMUEL P.
REYNOLDS, CHRISTOPHER
RIBBE, CHRISTOPHER D.
RICHARD, GARY J.
ROGERS, STACEY L.
ROMAN, JENNIFER A.
ROSE, VALERIE L.
ROSEBRUM, LAURA E.
ROSETTI, CHRISTINA D.
ROSOFF, ALAN J.
ROSSETTI, STEPHEN W.
ROVENDRO, MARLA A.
ROY, SUSAN D.
SABLOFF, SHAWN D.
SADOSKI, LORI A.
SAGEMO, GEIR,
SALIMETTI, JEFFREY A.
SAMA, FRANK P.
SANDERSON, HERBERT L.
SARNO, DAVID J.
SATTERFIELD, GEOFFREY I
SAYMAN, WILLIAM C.
SCALESE, GAIL M.
SCHNEIDER, LISA B.
SCOTT, SHANNON G.
SEGARRA, SELENA T.
SEYLER, JEFFREY E.
SHARPE, JULIE A.
SHAW, DAVID S.
SHECHTMAN, NEIL W.
SHEEHAN, LORI E.
SHEEHAN, MARK J.
SHUMWAY, CHRISTOPHER A
SILVERMAN, SHARON F.
SIOUL, LINDA W.
SIRARD, JOHN B.
SLAVET, BENJAMIN D.
SHERNOFF, HALEY J.
SMIDY, JOHN W.
SMITH, JENNIFER M.
SNAPE, IAN J.
SNYDER, CAREY T.
SOLOMON, MARNI B.
SPARKS, DAVID B.
SPASH, MELISSA A.
SPORY, KAREN L.
ST HILL, KEVIN W.
STACHOWSKI, JENNIFER K
STAHL, SUSAN E.
STERBINS, SHALINA M.
STEINBERG, HILARY C.
STEINMANN, TRACY L.
STORK, RYAN D.
SULLIVAN, DAVID S.
SWITZER, KIRT,
SYDALA, WILLIAM B.
TANNENBAUM, MARA D.
TAUGAS, NINA M.
TAY, SOON YEOW,
THACKERAY, JEFFREY B.
THAYTE, AN JANA D.
THAYER ANNE E.
TIERNEY, RICHARD L.
TOCKER, BARBARA W.
TOLPA, WENDY L.
TOTH, MICHELLE A.
TOUSSAINT, JEAN W.
TOUSSAINT, JULIE A.
TRUDEAU, MICHAEL D, JR
TRUDEL, MELISSA A.
TRUDEL, ELIZABETH T.
TUCKER, KAREN J.
TUDISTO, MICHAEL, JR
TURBANSKY, JOEL W.
URQUHART, MATTHEW J.
VARBELL, JONATHAN E.
VASS, CRAIG T.
VERDE, MARC J.
WARD, THERESA M.
WARREN, MARY E.
WATSON, JENNIFER L.
WEISMAN, LAURA E.
WELCH, GREGORY M.
WESNOFSKE, MARYELLEN,
WIDDISON, PAULA M.
WILBUR, GREGG P.
WILBUR, KERRY A.
WILLARD, KAREN E.
WINCHENBACH, JONATHAN,
WITTENBERG, KIMBERLY B.
WOODMAN, DEBORAH A.
WOODWORTH, DEBRA A.
WOJ, JENNIFER A.
WYMAN, BETH A.
YACOVONE, MICHELLE A.
YAFFE, LAWRENCE J.
ZIEPER, MATTHEW,

Nursing

AVERILL, CHRISTINE B.
BRENG, KRISTINE C.
BRYAN, PATRICIA A.
CARLSON, ROBERT C.
CHAPATES, DIANE L.
CICCHETTI, SHARON A.
COATES, KRISTINA L.
DOUSINELLI, PAULA A.
DAGGETT, SHEILA M.
DARLING, KRISTIN M.
DILIGDO, DOROTHY M.
EARL, DONNA A.
FOLAN, JULIE A.
FREEDMAN, LISA G.
GOODMAN, ERIC M.
HARTIN, LAUREL A.
HANEL, DAWN T.
HEWETT, PAMELA J.
HILL, CHRISTINE A.
HUBBARD, LISA D.
LAFERRIERE, DIANE M.
LEVALLEE, LAURA A.
LEWALLEN, BELINDA L.
LYLES, SHERYL,
MACPHERSON, BRENDA L.
MALENFANT, JANET E.
MATARESE, JESSICA A.
MELLEN, KATHLEEN A.
MERCIER, FRANCES M.
MURRAY, CHRISTINE P.
POWERS, CAROLYN A.
RYER, GREGORY P.
SCHWARTZ, LEIGH A.
SELOVER, ELIZABETH B.
SIECINOWSKI, DIANE M.
SILVERSTEIN, ELIZABETH A.
STOUT, PATRICIA A.
TAMOS, LORI J.
THOMPSON, HEATHER A.
TITPACI, MICHELLE A.
VARDACH, JENNIFER S.
WATROBA, LISA M.

Physical Education

ALLEN, ROBERT S.
ANDERSEN, LUCILLE B.
BABSIDGE, KIMBERLY A.
BAUM, MICHAEL A.
BEAN, DAVID MARC D.
BONELLO, JOHN A.
SOUSA, SUSAN M.
SOUSA, JAMES W.
CAISSE, KRISTEN P.
CARROLL, PAUL B.
CAREY, LISA ANN,
CERULLO, NANCY P.
COULOMBE, KEVIN D.
COUTURE, TODD G.
CRIDER, DAVID G.
FRATTASIO, MARA A.
GAOLIN, MARK J.
GOHON, JEFF L.
GIBBONS, SCOTT W.
GILBERT, MARTI,
GOLOSTEIN, JENNIFER C.
GRENHAM, ROBERT E.
GRODZICKI, BENJAMIN J, III
HALL, WILLIAM M.
HALLAK, LISA B.
HARRIS, ROBYN B.
HURWIEWICZ, CAROLYN M.
KAPPEL, ADAM J.
KEEHE, WILLIAM J.
LABIS, JOHN A.
LANDESMAN, DANIEL M.
LITTLE, MATTHEW,
MARTEL, BERNADETTE J.
MORRISON, THOMAS,
NEVELING, LANCE W.
NORDBERG, JAMES B.
PARKS, ARTHUR E.
PARKS, PATRICK D.
PRIOR, BARRY,
RUGLIESE, CATHERINE A.
RASMUSSEN, PAUL D.
ROBERTS, DANIEL S.
ROGERS, CARL A.
ROTHKIN, LISA A.
SCHAFER, JOHN S.
SERAFINI, SUSAN M.
SEIPPER, KARA M.
STELNAY, THEODORE W.
STONE, DONNA S.
WEINROTH, BRETT W.
WEISMAN, STACY M.
ZECHES, SUSAN B.

Public Health

ABRAMSON, JULIE L.
ALPER, SUZANNE E.
BERNEGGER, SUSAN H.
BURNE, MATTHEW J.
COLEMAN, TRACEY L.
COLLINS, KATHLEEN M.
DACEY, MAUREEN P.
DARCY, MARGARET M.
DAVIES, GWYNN E.
DUNCAN, SAMANTHA J.
DUVAL, RENEE M.
ELIAS, DONNA M.
FEE, JENNIFER A.
FINKELMAN, DENISE A.
FORMATO, DAVID C.
FRANCIS, JOSEPH M.
GRANT, GINGER D.
HULSTRON, ERIC E.
IGOE, ANDREA M.
JOHN, GEORGE,
JOHNSON, VANESSA K.
KELLY-CHRISTINE M.
KEMP, PHILIP A.
KOGAN, LEANNE M.
LORDEN, SEAN M.
MANELLI, CLARISSA A.
MIHALAK, KELLY,
MERLE-SMITH, KATHLEEN
RAFFERTY, SUSAN J.
REGON, MELISSA CHRISTINE M.
REWILLARD, PAULA J.
SANTOS, KATHLEEN M.
SAUVAGEAU, PAUL H, JR
SMOLA, ANNEMARIE,
SOLARI, MELISSA J.
SOREL, LAURA E.
STANTON, KATHLEEN M.
TAYLOR, CATHERINE M.
TETREAU, TIMOTHY G.
TIMMONS, KATHRYN E.
WATTS, JANICE L.
ZIEGLER, SUSAN C.
ZIMMERMAN, BARRIE L.

Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration

BALDWIN, SHERILL L.
BRAUN, JODIE L.
DAVISON, JEMINE L.
DIXON, KERRY M.
DUSHIN, MARGARET E.
EDMONSON, SARAH E.
ENG, DAVID H.
FOLEY, JOSHUA D.
GASTENEY, KRISTIN,
GARRETSON, CHRISTOPHER
HUNTER, ELIZABETH T.
INSONOGUA, FELICIE E.
KOLB, SUSAN,
MATHERSON, JEWETT S.
MAYWELL, HOLLY E.
MORRIS, THERESA A.
NAVARRA, KAORU,
OREILLY, DOUGLAS J.
PAGE, ELIZABETH A.
RAMOS, CARLOS W.
ROY, JOANNE,
STEIN, MICHAEL S.
THINKELL, COLLEEN A.
TIMPLO, ADAM A.
WILLIAMS, ERIC A.
WOLFF, REBECCA W.
WOOD, MARIA J.

Exchange and Honors

ATKINS, PAUL D.
AUBIN, SHEILA
BELISTO, PETER J.
BLOOM, MICHAEL B.
CAFFERTY, JILL M.
COHEN, DANIEL W.
COLTON, CELINE M.
CORNELL, LAURIE E.
DURLEY, NICOLA J.
DANIELSSON, PETER HARA
DECOSTE, MARY MICHELLE
DEGEORGES, PAUL J.
DURAN, DARIO ALBERTO,
EGGERT, RANDALL,
FUKAMI, KRISTI,
GREEN, ELSE M
GREENWOOD, OLIVER D.
GUILLEMIN, JULIE M.
HOLMES, REBECCA L.
JOHNSON, LAURA A.
JOHNSTON, PATRICK,
JONES, CHRISTOPHER,
JOHNSON, CLAES PATRIK
JORDAN, PETER A.
KAMESHIRO, SHANA A.
KANADE, CHINATSU,
KHARBANDA, PRIYA,
KOHMAN, JOHN E.
KORMAN, MURALI,
LAROCQUE, MARIE-
LEE, SHEENA MARJORIE.
LEVIN, ADAM,
LIEWENBERG, WENDY E.
MACHIDA, HIROKO GRAHAM
MANZIAS, ALEXANDER,
MARX, ALAN P.
MORI, KATE A.
MIZUGUCHI, AKIFUMI,
MULLIN, CHIHARON,
MYRONIATIS, GEORGE,
NISHIHARA, JULIE,
O BRIEN, ANNE,
OSHIRO, RENEE,
PANOS, MARIA CLAUDIA,
PARKER, JENNIFER A.
PENNINGTON, MARK W.
PERROS, STRATIS J.
PETERSEN, LYDIA,
PLUMPTON, TARA A.
RAE, BROOKE,
RAJAMANI, SUBUSHANKAR.
RAPACKE, CYNTHIA A,
ROBERTSON, BRAD,
ROBINSON, ADELE RUBY,
SAMPSON, ANNE,
SFETSOS, HARALAMBOS,
SHEEHAN, DRAMIA RACHEL,
SHOEMAKER, SARAH M,
SHUKLA, LINDA ANN,
STRIDE, JOHN A,
SUTUR, CHIBURA,
THOMPSON, KRISTIN W,
THOMSON, ALAN,
UEDA, TAKEMI,
WAKE, AMY,
WALTON, ANDREW J.
WEISS, JEFFREY P,
WELCH, BARRY D,
WHITMAN, MAUREEN J,
WOO, JOHN W,
YAMASHIRO, HITOSHI,

Interdepartmental and Others

BERGER, MICHAEL A.
FOSTER, DAVID L.
HALL, BRUCE W, II
HALPERN, CARLA A.
KINGSBURY, PAUL G.
MASSEY, SUZANNE E.
MCMANUS, PORTER J.
QUINTEROS, ILLABY,
SZANTI, ERIC SIMON
WEINBERG, CHRISTOPHER J
WINSTON, AMY E.

Continuing Education

BARSTOW, MARK D.
CUSHMAN, JANNA H.
DALEY, DOUGLAS P.
GUILLET, ELIZABETH C.
HAN, SUM JONG R.
HAZLETT, JENNIFER A.
HEISS, ROBYN JO B.
HERZOG, STEPHEN G.
HURWITZ, TIMBERLY A.
JACINTO, ANNABELLE A.
JACKMAN, MICHAEL J.
KATZEN, LISA A.
KERSTEIN, MYRON E.
KNOWLTON, CHRISTINE J.
KON, LINGTIN A.
KONOP, SUSAN C.
KORS, STACEY B.
LEWIS, MELISSA C.
MALABOUTI, DAVID A.
MOSKUM, FLORENCE,
OSHEA, DAVID J.
OUIMLAN, JOHN F, JR.
RAPPAPORT, LYNLEY A.
ROBBINS, BARRETT L.
ROBBINS, JOSHUA,
SLAND, MARY,
STAUB, HANA,
TUCKER, DAVID D.
VAN PELT, SUSAN C.
WINSTON, REGINA B.

University Without Walls

DOHERTY, RUTH M.
RAFFNEY, PAUL,
GEORGE, JONATHAN F,
MARKARIAN, CAROL B,
RABURN, JANET E,
SULLIVAN, JOHN C,
THOMPSON, JOHN P,
TONNESSEN, TORE O,
WHITING, CRAIG H,

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1990 COLLEG

■ indians

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

20 minutes to the Northwest in Kaneh-Satake, approximately 50 Mohawk men, women and children are surrounded by 6 foot high barbed wire and 1000 army troops. 100 meters from the barbed enclosure, the Canadian press awaits with lensed eyes for possible confrontation.

In March 1990, a dozen Mohawk men, women and children known by the media as the people of the Longhouse constructed a barricade in Kanehsatake to stop the expansion of a golf course on disputed land. The land known as the Pines was developed in the 19th century by the ancestors of the present day Mohawks.

This land, which includes a burial ground, "was cooperatively shared by natives and non-native people of the Region" (Alex Mccomber principle of Survival School). On July 11, the Quebec Provincial Police (SQ) raided the Mohawk barricade with approximately 100 men, 30 cruisers, a swat team, and a backhoe. Upon arrival at 5:30 a.m. the police were met by a half dozen Mohawk women performing a sacred tobacco-burning ceremony.

Apparently baffled by the fearlessness of the women who told the SQ they are trespassing, the police fired tear gas and concussion grenades. From behind the barricade five Mohawk men awakened by the commotion rushed to aid of the women. Once the tear gas was fired the police charged. As the tearing gas exploded, a strong gust of wind carried it back into the police's charge.

From within the smokey conflict shots were fired. One policeman was killed. According to Mohawks there is no conclusive evidence as to who fired the fatal shot which killed the officer. As of yet no autopsy report has been released. When the armed Mohawks returned fire the police hastily retreated, leaving behind several police cars and the Backhoe.

With these vehicles and the use of the backhouse the Mohawks constructed a larger barricade. This same morning back in Kahnawake the armed warriors (a group of men of Kahnawake) closed off the Mercier bridge which connects the city of Montreal to the south shore area.

Those action inconvenienced many commuters who now had a two and a half hour detour around the blockaded area. The Mercier Bridge along with the St. Lawrence Seaway was constructed in the 1950s without the Mohawk communities approval, even though they are both upon Mohawk lands. With the losing of the bridge, a group of non-native Canadians formed to protest the Mohawk action. The group known as Solidarity Chateauguay rallied outside of the Mohawk barricades. These protestors would continue to protest through out the summer and in late July burn effigies of Mohawks as they taunted warriors behind the lines.

In late July Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec called in 4,000 troops to the Area. Meanwhile Prime Minister Mulroney sent 800 troops to Iraq. Upon hearing the troop movements, Mohawks inside the Reserve arranged through negotiations with the Sverte de Quebec for the evacuation of 60 cars. Inside the autos were women, children and elderly residents of the Reserve.

During this evacuation the motorists passed by protesting solidarity movement. As they passed, rocks and boulders were flung at the moving cars. Nine Mohawks were injured. One elderly man suffered a heart attack and later died. Before and after the caravan, the only other evacuation methods were by boat.

CORRECTION

The* Collegian misquoted Eqbal Ahmad in yesterday's article in which he said, "Israel has murdered 10,000 teenagers." Ahmad really said, "1,000 teenagers." The Collegian *regrets any problems this misquote might have caused.

■ faculty senate

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

result in a loss of funding to the University of $25-30 million, resulting in a 40 percent budgetary cut.

O'Brien said that before cutting faculty, he would try to "pursuade the Board of Trustees to raise student fees for next semester."

The Faculty Senate will vote on the proposal to make reductions in the unspecified departments and academic programs when it reconvenes on October 1.

Senate Faculty members expressed concern over the fact that there is presently no list giving the names of departments and academic programs that would be candidates for reductions.

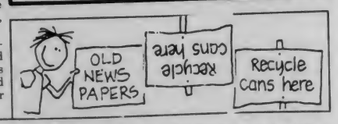
Some claimed that if the Faculty Senate passes O'Brien's motion, the administration would be given a carte blanche in selecting the departments which will undergo substantial shrinkage.

Presently, there is no conclusive report indicating which departments or academic programs would qualify for reductions, O'Brien said.

There is, however, a preliminary report issued by the Reallocation Committee which outlined the criteria for departmental reduction.

The criteria for reduction or termination would include productivity in research and instruction.

Throughout the session, O'Brien stressed his reluctance to terminate any departments or academic programs. "None of them deserve to be eliminated," he said.



Welcome Back Students
EASY LIVING INC., THE FUTON STORE
Best Quality and best Prices in Conn. and Mass.
The Futon Store designed to reflect your lifestyle and budget
FUTONS BY GOLD BOND MATTRESS COMPANY
Back to School Sale
For the Collegiate COLLEGIATE SPECIAL
6" TWIN FUTON
$59.00
6" TWIN FUTON & FRAME
$139.00
FUTON by Gold Bond
Take Advantage of Our Store Lay Away Plan
SALE ENDS 9-30-90
Sofia's Plaza II
Route 5 Exit 45 off I-91 N/S 122 Prospect Hill Rd. E. Winsor, CT 06088
Mon. Tue. Wed. Sat. 10-6 Thur. Fri. 10-8 Sun. 12-4 (203) 292-1919

湘園
PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
Open Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 11:30am-10:00pm
Fri. & Sat. 11:30am-11:00pm
Sunday 2:00pm-10:00pm
LUNCH HOURS: Mon.-Sat. 11:30am-3:00pm
103 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 (413)256-8924

CELEBRATE SENSATION

CHAMBER MUSIC
The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach
The King's Singers
Turtle Island String Quartet/ Billy Taylor Trio
Emerson String Quartet

THEATRE
The Negro Ensemble Company: WE Plays
A Traveling Jewish Theatre: Heart of the World
The San Francisco Mime Company: Seeing Double

DANCE
Margie Gillis
Desrosiers Dance Theatre
Urban Bush Women
Laura Dean Dancers & Musicians
Oakland Ballet
Bill T. Jones/Arne Zane & Co.

ORCHESTRAS/ CHAMBER ORCHESTRAS
Shanghai Symphony Orchestra
West German Sinfonia/Gary Schocker
English Chamber Orchestra/ Pinchas Zukerman

JAZZ
Count Basie Orchestra
Max Roach & Friends
George Shearing/Joe Williams/ Joe Pass
Sandra Reaves-Phillips

SPECTRUM
Sankai Juku
The Chieftains
Africa Oye!
Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour Revisited

BROADWAY
Lend Me A Tenor
Sarafina!
Love Letters
Side By Side By Sondheim

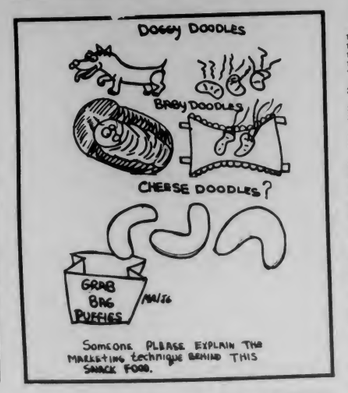
WINNERS CIRCLE
Midori, violin
Leon Bates, piano
Dang Thai Son, piano
Franciscan String Quartet/Peter Orth

Subscribe Now and Save
Call 545-2511
or 545-2512

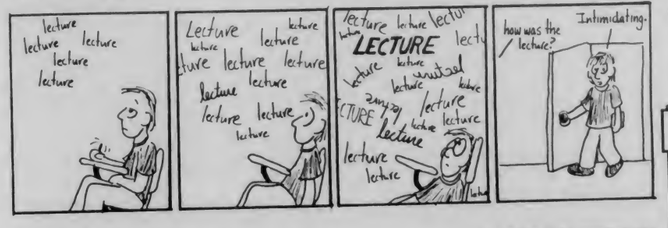
THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
1990-1991 SEASON

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN



CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

CALVIN, I...
YIKE!
YOU'RE HOME! I DIDN'T EVEN FINISH PACK... THAT IS, UM...
LIES! EVERYTHING MISS WORMWOOD SAID ABOUT ME WAS A LIE! SHE JUST DOESN'T LIKE ME! SHE HATES LITTLE BOYS! IT'S NOT MY FAULT! IN NOT TO BLAME!
SHE TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NOODLES, RIGHT? IT WASN'T ME! NOBODY SAW ME! I WAS FRAMED! I WOULDN'T DO ANYTHING LIKE THAT! I'M INNOCENT, I TELL YOU!
WHAT NOODLES?
OH... UH... HA HA! DID I SAY NOODLES? YOU MUST HAVE HEARD WRONG I DIDN'T SAY NOODLES

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

NIPPLE
By PITT

You need violence & action in your strip! Join me and be Super Stars!
What do you say Rufus?
Violence Sucks
EVIL
BEATING THROUGH CREATION

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

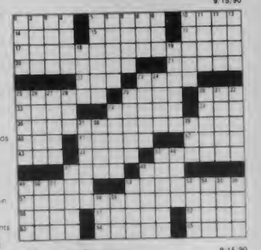
ACROSS
1 Shopper's paradise
5 Graphic lead-in
10 Not that
14 Ja! —
15 Ram
16 Proceeded
17 Bestseller by Bill Cosby
20 Part of a place setting
21 Brilliance
22 Poet's contraction
23 Bunyan's ox
25 Part of a school day
29 Musical Gluck
30 Princess lesser
33 Sleep like —
34 Native of Zagreb
35 USNA grad
36 Bestseller by Dale Brown
40 Eur.-Amer. link
41 Sutherland songs
42 Tardy
43 King of Spain
44 Namesakes of a Dickens tot
45 Beams
47 Boutique
48 Red or Dead
49 Bout of indulgence
52 Imprecation
57 Bestseller by Trudo Chase
60 — Misbehavin'
61 Some shoe leather
62 Pacific garlands
63 Entreaty
64 Bucephalus, e.g.
65 Emerald isle

DOWN
1 Brewer's grain
2 Lotion ingredient
3 Crater contents
4 Prevaricates
5 Slender craft
6 Fervor
7 Describe
8 Meadow
9 Jaffa's land: Abbr.
10 — — Told Tales
11 Mend
12 Actress Swenson
13 Editor's notation
18 Mimics
19 Car dealer's lure
23 Coalitions
24 Asian nurse
25 Pilot's aid
26 Make jubilant
27 Coquettishly
28 Self
29 Regions
30 Flower part
31 Relaxed on one's mother's side
32 Phoenix source
34 African ape, for short
37 "Life with —"
38 Chamber-music composition
39 New Haven name
45 Did an usher's job
46 School subj.
47 Wagner heroine
48 Insinuating
49 Trade
50 Donahue
51 M. Descartes
52 Busy as —
53 Golf course feature
54 Wide-mouthed pitcher
55 Eleventh century
56 Bus. abbr.
58 Dolt
59 Except

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

C	A	P	P		R	A	M	P	S		F	O	A	L
A	L	A	I		I	D	E	A	L		E	S	S	E
T	O	R	O		A	U	D	I	O		R	A	I	E
	G	R	U	N	T	L	E	D	W	O	R	K	E	R
			S	E	A			B	R	I	A	R	S
S	T	A	G	E	S		A	N	D	A	S
P	O	L	O		C	L	E	A	T		E	R	A
C	O	M	B	O	B	U	L	A	T	E	D	M	E	N
A	L	A		R	A	T	E	L		I	M	A	N
		A	I	R	E	S		N	O	S	A	L	E
A	M	U	L	E	T		H	I	S	T
M	A	N	I	L	E	D	M	A	C	H	I	N	E
O	C	T	A		R	E	E	S	E		N	E	R	D
L	A	I	R		E	V	E	N	T		C	A	L	L
E	W	E	S		D	I	T	T	O		T	R	E	S

9/15/90



© 1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

9/15/90

MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken burrito	Rotini/meat sauce
Deli ham on rye	Cheese spinach strudel
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Falafel pocket sandwich	Vegetables with dill
Three cheese pizza	Rotini/tomato sauce

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Break with tradition. Family members will applaud your choices. Artists, writers and composers have an especially rewarding day. Practice will hone your skills. A loan comes through in the nick of time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You get the go-ahead to travel. A crisis involving career vs. personal needs can be averted. Offer a compromise. Friends rally around to help. A new love makes everything else seem unimportant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Look your best if you leave the house. Mate, or partner provides the motivation you need to seek a more satisfying lifestyle. Do not let someone who is selfish stifle your emotions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your concern for a grown child is natural but should not be allowed to spoil the day. It may be time to cut the cord. An heirloom surface in a strange place.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Keep to a schedule and your self-discipline will return. Catch up on paperwork and return telephone calls. Use any spare time to brush up on a technical subject. A romantic mistake can be rectified.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A missing item is found in an obvious place. A problem is not as large as it first appeared. Avoid becoming involved in disputes that do not directly affect you. Romance is blissful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your friends encouragement helps you discover a special talent. The chaos at work can be sorted out if you pull back and get better organized. Revise your priorities. Romance could be frustrating.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Step back and try to figure out someone's motives. You may be missing something. Do not depend too heavily on sheer luck in business. Humor helps you cope with a delicate problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Use all your energy and talent to work toward a long-term goal. Check an inclination to go too far too fast. Take nothing for granted. Meet face-to-face with the authorities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A job well done should be generously rewarded. Guard against sacrificing your ideals in order to promote material gains. Ambition is urging you on. The element of surprise is powerful. Use it wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Personal research will help you develop a sound game plan. Heed the cautionary words of your partner. Do every task assigned to you. Avoid arguing with higher-ups and older family members.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Probe deeper to find out what has to be done. Pay closer attention to financial figures even when your mind is on other things. Do some shopping at lunchtime. Bargains abound!

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Gayle Long
Copy Editor.....Jody Gabin
Layout Technician.....Terry Starmer
Photo Technician.....Dondi Ahearn
Production Supervisor.....Doug Johnston
Typesetter.....Kim Frisino
Production.....Jason Toria, Lynn Kilroy, Paul Specht and Terry & Jody are traveling to Ware

Tennis teams lose wars, win battles

● Women lose to UConn

By P. TERRY BRENNAN
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team faced an evenly-talented squad from Connecticut in their season-opener Thursday afternoon. On the Upper Boyden courts, the UMass women struggled with their opponents as well as their nerves and a relentlessly scorching sun only to fumble their first match.

Junior Shizuko Yamasaki, playing her first number one college singles match, was stung with freshmen jitters losing 1-6, 1-6 to Ellen Barrett, Barrett controlled the game from its start and was determined not to let that control slip from her grasp.

At number two, UMass' Gail Girasella dueled with Ashley Vilinskis. After a hard fought match with each player trading points, Girasella toppled her opponent 6-4, 6-4.

Keremsa Eddy (1-6, 3-6) and Kelly Grim (2-6, 7-5), playing three and five singles respectively, each lost their matches.

UMass' Kerri Kaminski struggled through a three-set match against Krista Irmischer and answered with a much needed win (6-3, 4-6, 6-4).

With UConn ahead by point (3-2 in a best of 9 situation), UMass coach Edwin Gentzler and his squad were hoping Amy Ryan at number four singles would provide a needed win and even the score going into doubles play. Ryan, determined but weary, lost a heartbreaker, 4-6, 6-1, 2-6. Soon after that, the UMass' first doubles team gave UConn their fifth point and, in turn, the win.

● Men delayed by Pierce

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's tennis team was successful in their season opener on Tuesday, yet was unable to notch a win as darkness prevailed over the courts at Franklin Pierce College.

The Minutemen were ahead 4-3 and well on their way to winning their two remaining doubles matches when the games were postponed due to the unplayable conditions.

The unfinished matches will resume where they left off when Franklin Pierce visits the UMass on Oct. 9.

UMass first singles player junior Barry Wadsworth was victorious (6-2, 6-3), as were singles teammates, number two Jeffrey Hechemy (7-5, 6-2) and number four Richard Stone (7-6, 7-4, 6-3).

The number one doubles team of Wadsworth and Paul Audet won 6-1, 6-3. The number two doubles team of Stone and Hechemy, as well as the number three team of Matt Murphy and Tim Lipsky were up a set when the games were halted.

"He played an incredible match," UMass coach Manny Roberts said of Wadsworth, who defeated Franklin Pierce's Junior Dais Cup player Mehdi Belhasson.

Last year, the Minutemen defeated Franklin Pierce 8-1. Roberts described them as stronger than last year's squad.

The Minutemen tennis team will try to continue their winning ways as they host the University of New Hampshire today at 3 p.m. on the Upper Boyden courts.

Rugby visits BC in first game

By DAVE SZPILA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts rugby club travels down the Pike this weekend to face the traditionally hard-hitting team of Boston College.

Both the team and the coach have high hopes for the contest which will take place at 7 p.m. today.

"I feel pretty confident that our forwards could be as dominant as the Irish were [Wednesday]," said coach Doc Laurence.

According to both Tim Joyce and captain Bob Carney, the Irish rugby team told them they were the best team they had encountered so far. That is a big compliment coming from a team like the Royal Surgeons.

The team picks up new players throughout the season. If interested in joining the team, contact the Collegian sports desk or attend a home game and speak with Laurence.

Apologies to Ed Doyle; he was wrongly identified as Bob Doyle in yesterday's paper.

TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

Computerized upper body conditioning

Ultimate low impact aerobic machines

Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY READERS POLL 1990 1st PLACE Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"

NAUTILUS | LIFECYCLES | TREADMILL

Amherst Athletic Club, 460 West St. | South Amherst | Karate Health Fitness Center, 256-0080

RESTAURANT classé café BAKERY
Complimentary Chips & Salsa with your meal 5 p.m.-10 p.m.
now serving wine and beer
the Valley's best burgers
Homemade desserts
Soups and Salads
Monday - Saturday 7am to 10pm
Sunday Brunch 7am to 3pm
168 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA 253-2291

COME CLEAN WITH US!
Campus Coin Op
107 Sunderland Road, North Amherst
Open 7 a.m.-10 p.m.

SPEEDWASH
11 Pray St., Amherst
NOW OPEN 24 HOURS!
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St., South Amherst
Open 7 a.m.-10 p.m.

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring Busch Beer at $8.99 a suitcase
Vodka 80 Proof $8.99 1.75L
Maccabee $11.99 case
Captain Morgan $6.99 750ml
Sun Country Classic Cooler $6.00 per case of 2L bots.
3L Cribari Wine $4.99
Icy Vodka $9.99 750ml
Off Campus Delivery 253-5441
Labatt's Beer or Ale $6.49 12pk bots.
all beers plus deposit

HOTTER 'N GEORGIA ASPHALT!
"THE YEAR'S MOST EXCITING AND ENJOYABLE PICTURE!" -Jim Rolfe, MC 1290
"★★★★! FUNNY, SEXY AND ROMANTIC!" -Jack Garner, GANNETT NEWS SERVICE
DAVID LYNCH'S Wild at Heart
WEEKDAYS at 6:45 and 9:10 p.m.
Friday at 4:50, 7:15 and 9:40
Sat. and Sun. at 2:30, 4:50, 7:15 and 9:40 p.m.
•First shows on Friday, Sat and Sun are $3.50 •
PLEASANT ST. THEATER
27 Pleasant St., Northampton 586-0935

Johnson steps up to challenge, filling Bledsoe's shoes

By RICK SETO
Collegian Staff

In his first collegiate game, John Johnson didn't expect to get much playing time. But in his second game against Maine Saturday, not only will he be playing, he will be the starting tailback.

Johnson got his chance when Jerome Bledsoe broke his right ankle on the next-to-last play of the first half against Holy Cross last Saturday.

An 18-year-old freshman from Wayne, NJ, Johnson proved to be more than a capable replacement for Bledsoe. In his first game, he rushed for 28 yards in eight attempts, including four first downs. He also had two receptions for 12 yards in UMass' final fourth quarter drive.

"I think John does a very good job at concentrating. He was in the top five percent of his class and so he's got a lot of concentration and intelligence. I think those are ingredients made for a good ballplayer, and that's just what Johnny is."

Johnson is one who truly understands the term student-athlete. "Football is great and it's really important," the zoology major said. "But the academics is the most important to me. What I'm shooting for this semester is a 3.6 [GPA] and that's really high, but I'm shooting for it and I know I can do it."

Collegian file photo
John Johnson's small size and speed enable him to find pockets like this, and score.

He feels that his learning on the gridiron helps his learning in the classroom. "Football's keeping me disciplined for school. It gives me character, so when I get in the classroom, I have that competitiveness to do my best. I love academics, I love going to class, and I love school, period."

In his first carry as a Minuteman, No. 20 did not have an auspicious debut, as he only gained one yard. But Johnson proved himself on his next carry, answering Reid's call in a fourth-down- and-inches situation. Bursting for a hole on the right side, he was nearly stopped in the backfield, but broke a tackle and gained the key first down.

On the first play of the next UMass series, quarterback Gary Wilkos ran the option beautifully, freezing the defense before pitching to an uncovered Johnson. Displaying the speed which made him one of New Jersey's top high school sprinters last year, Johnson gobbled up 20 yards before the Purple could bring him down.

"I just want to prove that with a little hard work, dedication and commitment, you'll get really good things."

Johnson has had to work hard to overcome his diminutive size, especially to the scouts. "When I was getting recruited by some big schools, some felt that I was too small," the 5-foot-7, 175-pound Johnson said. "It has played against me, but I think my size is with me now. Being small has its advantages because I'm harder to catch and harder to grab.

"But when you're set in a program like I am, size doesn't matter to anyone and only good things can come out of it. Size isn't that much of a factor anymore."

Johnson picked UMass over such schools as Rutgers and Maine, citing coaches Reid and Doug Berry as the main deciding factors. "They love football, and they care about their players a lot. They really care about how you're doing in school, and that's the most important part. And then they care for you like you're their son. Just that feeling of the coaches being that close to us, it really changed my mind and made up my mind."

Reid remembers Johnson making progress during double sessions, and especially of his first impression. "The first day we timed him, he came in at 4.45 or 4.51 [seconds in the 40-yard dash] and that really boosted him in my mind," Reid said. Johnson grabbed the opportunity in a scrimmage against American International. "Johnny wanted to play, and he played beautifully against AIC. Just beautifully," Reid glowed. "And then he immediately moved to the No. 2 spot [on the depth chart] right away."

"He came in and filled in great," Bledsoe said of Johnson. "I had no doubts about Johnny. I knew he could do it. He showed it to us."

Reid does not regard his starting tailback as a freshman. Rather, he simply views as a player.

"If we treat him like a freshman, he'll play like a freshman," he said. "If we treat him like a regular, he'll play like a regular.

"If the coaches put their arm around him when he makes an error, then we're treating him like a freshman," Reid said. "But if the coach comes up in your face and explains to you that did the wrong thing in a voice above a whisper, then that's being treated as he needs to be, which is as an upper-class football player."

Volleyball out

Women to Brown tourney

By LIOR BEN-AHARON
Collegian Correspondent

When the UMass women's volleyball team arrives at Brown University today for a two-day tournament, they will be carrying with them an 0-4 record inherited at a tournament in Hartford last weekend.

Some people may think this baggage is too heavy for such a young team. Coach Ford, however, believes differently.

Going into the Brown tournament, Ford said the same thing she stated last week in Hartford, "If we play our best, we can beat anybody."

These are bold words coming from a coach whose team will face a strong Harvard team and an even stronger Brown team today, as well as an always tough Yale team tomorrow.

But after a long week of "working on the basics," Ford is confident in her team's ability to have a successful weekend. "Our number one goal is to come out strong."

One thing Ford does not have to worry about is her team's morale. Despite the tough weekend in Hartford, the long week of practices and the stiff competition they can expect at Brown, the volleyball team has maintained a good attitude.

One of the keys to a successful weekend will be the play of the team captain, senior Nancy Sullivan. Sullivan was a bit off last Friday for the Minutewomen's first two matches against Villanova and Drexel, but came back the next day for two very strong performances against Army and Boston College.

Another key for the Minutewomen will be the play of freshman setter Kathy Smith, who came in to replace Angie Paolucci. Smith had a tough time after being forced into play early last weekend, but is more prepared for this weekend's matches.

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE • 50 CENTS PER LINE • 2 DAY MINIMUM • DEADLINE 3 DAYS BEFORE 1ST PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE • 20% WORD DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

25+ CLUB Introductory meeting for older undergraduates. Brief discussion of activities. Socializing and refreshments. Wednesday 9/19 6:00PM CC 174-176

CHABAD HOUSE invites you for shabbat great people-great atmosphere 30 N Hadley Rd adjacent to lot 32 near southwest

INTERESTED in a personal relationship with God or good Christian fellowship. Campus Crusade for Christ 7:00PM Campus Center

SCHOOL SPIRIT!!!! If you have it, use it! Join Project Pride! Call Michael at 6-1331 for more info!

START THE SEMESTER by throwing up! Juggling Club meets today, 3-6 in CC 174 or near the pond. Learn how today!

THE BANGLADESH FRIENDS ASSOCIATION invites all the Bangladeshis to a get-together party on September 22, 1990. Contact: Emrer 546-5696 or Kabir 545-5399

UMASS OPEN: Come to the dance on the Sylvan Courts this Friday 9/14 7-11PM. Free for dorm dues payers!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

7:00PM ON THE 17th in the Campus Center there will be a meeting to help LSO regain its powers

ANYONE INTERESTED IN SHOTOKAN KARATE! There will be a demonstration, a self defense clinic and breaking. Tonita, 7:00PM in Totman 101.

ATTN ALL MULTISPORT ATHLETES UMass triathlon Club wants u General meeting Tuesday 16, Boyden Rm TBA

AUDITIONS FOR UMASS MUSIC THEATRE GUILD'S production of "School House Rock". S.U.B. 9/18 9AM-2PM, 5PM-11PM, 9/17 5PM-11PM Callbacks 9/16

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5061

EMTS & FIRST RESPONDERS Fire & First Aid Unit is recruiting. Paid details. Meeting Sept. 19 7pm W409 Morrill. Call 545-5115 5-Th 7-9pm or stop by N416.

HAVE MOM & DAD BUY YOU A COMPUTER THIS PARENTS WEEKEND Bring them to the IBM Computer Fair outside the University Store, 10AM to 5PM on Saturday in the Campus Center Concourse. Let us convince them that IBM is the affordable solution!

LOOKING FOR friends, companionship, love? Tune into the Dating Game on WMUA 91.1 FM Friday evenings from 6-7

PARTY!

Where: Bluewall
When: Sept 14 9PM-1AM
DJ by Perfect Mix Production
Sponsered by AASA

PHI ALPHA THETA National History Honors Society is accepting new members. Applications in history office 6th floor Herter due 9/26

TAG SALE kitchen, household items, baked goods. Saturday 9-3 corner, Finn and State, Northampton, rain date Sunday

VISA OR MASTERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. M-1207

ATTENTION!!!!

SUSIE HIGGINS!!!! The Collegian is looking for you Please come down here or call us soon or we'll send out a missing persons ad 545-3500 ask for Sue or Mark

AUDIO

TV 20" COLOR, features $225 584-0224

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 T-BIRD AC/FM runs great must sell Tammy 549-2786

1980 NISSAN 200SX Runs good. $1000 or B/O Tai 549-4675

1982 DODGE 400 CONVERTIBLE, white with red interior, 64,000 miles. Very clean. $2,800. 546-3142

1984 SUBARU 67000 mi AM/FM asking 2300 days 1-446-7578 nites 1-298-4753

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great. Excellent condition 50 MPG Must Sell $4500 586-7163

FOR SALE: 1986 Ford Festiva 32,500 miles 4-speed shift, 40 miles/gallon, highway metallic gray, excellent shape, best offer call 413-253-9397

MERCEDES 300D 1978 4300/BO rebuilt engine A/C FM/CASSETTE 545-2569/256-4926 Diane

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions. Classes begin 12th and 18th Call 253-4057

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

4 BEDROOMS in a beautiful house in Amherst. Two bathrooms, fireplace in the living room, pool and tennis court $325.00 per room, on bus route, call Bruce at 256-1215

HELP! Beautiful spacious apartment for rent. A must see with new rug and appliances. A steal at $625.00/month, includes heat and hot water. Call anytime 549-1367

LARGE 2 ROOM APARTMENT at 177 N. Pleasant St., 1 mile from UMass. $435 per month includes heat! Leave message for Mike H at 256-3457

ROOM FOR RENT! Located on campus! Stop by 209 Sunset or call 549-2947

ROOMS FOR RENT 3 doubles - $1600 semester 389 N. Pleasant St. Males only 258-8028

FOR SALE

ATTENTION GREENHOUSE! We have a second hand male-order bride for you! Will sell or trade for a better package 546-6321

COMPUTER DISKS - cheap 3½ DD HD guaranteed Call Ashley at 546-1612

COMPUTER FOR SALE: 1982 Northstar Advantage 64K. Comes with word processor, general ledger program and database program. $450 or best offer. Call 542-5702

FOR MACINTOSH COMPUTER -800K external drive, refrigerator 2'by2' exercise bicycle-mica sport. like new! 665-8954

PRINTER FOR SALE: 1982 Epson MX-100. $120 or best offer. Call 542-5702

RCA 19" COLOR, 13" B/W TV's, Typewriter w/printer interface. Moving sale. Raymond 548-0480

RED MYATA BIKE Ten speed. Excellent condition. Call Lea! at 253-9763.

SLEEP WITH US
Full size Futon and Frame $150
We'll beat anyone by 5%
Metawampe Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON-1

STEREO, complete component system 500 Watt output. Jerry 253-5734

YARD SALE - everything must go. Lamps, desks, dressers. For every dorm or apt. Sat. & Sun 15th and 16th Ball Ln. Amherst. Follow signs

FOUND

EYEGLASSES in a brown case in lot 44. If you lost them please call Kim at 545-3500

KEYS IN FRONT OF JQA - dorm/carhouse keys on a silver ring. Call Michelle at 6-0035 keys on a silver ring. Call Michelle at 6-0035

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

CAMPUS DESIGN AND COPY is hiring! applications available in 401 SUB. Deadline 4:45PM Mon 9/17 graphic art experience helpful 545-2271.

COUNTER HELP full time or part time apply in person at Copycat Print Shop 228 Triangle Street, Amherst (5 min walk from UMass) No phone call please.

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK. Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard. Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

IBM CAMPUS CO-OPS 15/20 hr/wk commitment. Interested sophomores or juniors inquire at the co-op office or call Andy Hopkins at 549-9367.

INNOVATIVE MARKETING PROGRAM needs sales rep for UMass Market. Excellent $$ opportunity. Local advertising experiance necessary. Call Gary at 1-800-874-5005

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required. Mornings 7-8am. Good pay. 7days/week 253-7000 Evenings

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! Call Sam 256-6434 40-80/day

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS Sept 17 - Oct. 29. Mon. 7-9pm $50.00 Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL Language Pacifica 549-5065

LEARN HUNGARIAN from native teacher! Call Raymund at 549-0480

INTERNSHIP

RECEIVE CREDITS LEARNING the music/entertainment industry Rack-A-Disc needs interns for fall/spring 20 hrs/wk, 6 credits, 586-9900

LOST

GREY POUCH lost in CC. Reward for return of contents 1-536-3719

GOLD RING cash reward sentimental value-leave message for Lynda 538-2931 after 4:00PM

SILVER ID BRACELET Jesse Newman. It's incredibly special. Please call me at 546-6397 or leave message at 549-4768 ASAP Reward$ Please help!

MOTORCYCLES

HONDA NIGHTHAWK 1983 550cc 4cyl fast new tires, radar detector, extras, 9,000 miles mint condition, 1,100 or best offer 549-6083 Jim

MUSICIANS

EXPERIENCED ROCK & ROLL/BLUES/ Rhythm & Blues/Reggae drummer seeks to play with gigging band Call Al at 665-7455

PERSONALS

CARLOS: Espero que pases un feliz dia de cumpleanos. Te quiero mucho, mucho, mucho. Edna

CHERYL Get psyched for tomorrow even though the "fool" might come. "It's because of the shape of his head!" Chrissy

HAPPY 22 RICH! Have a great day. Good luck tomorrow I love you!!

JUJUBE: even though we're young girl, one thing's for sure; with time our love will endure Love you -Bean

KAREN F. Have a Happy Birthday! Love, Gary

SARAH still love me after a year? Hope so, you're stuck with me in your building. Love Christian

TO THE RUNNING WOMEN: It hit me as you two left the E. Hemp 701 Bus last Friday that I could give you a tour of my home town! There are some places around here you've just got to see and there's this one spot... If still interested, show up at the Academy of Music this Friday between 2 and 5pm -The Running Man

ZOINKS!! Dave Rak is 21!! and he says, "Bon Jour Beaver" Meet the man and his BRAIN uptown tonight

ROOMMATE WANTED

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1224

SUNDERLAND. Female to share 2 bdrm apt. 250 • Close to bus line 665-1135

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course starts 9/10 . $195 Adv course starts 9/17 . $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 . $380 For further information call 549-8401

FRATERNITIES, SORORITIES, CAMPUS ORGANIZATIONS highly motivated individuals -travel free plus earn up to $3000 selling spring break trips to Cancun-South Padra Island-Orlando/Daytona Beach-1-800-258-9191

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S Deerfield 10 mins from Amherst. Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr, typing $2/pg. 545-1186

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING. $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications. 256-6373.

SPORTS

UMass home vs. Maine

Black Bears at McGuirk in YanCon opener

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

The first home game of the season is always a time for optimism. The season is young. The team is healthy. The weather is nice. Play ball.

And after last week's hard-fought 10-10 tie at Holy Cross, things are especially upbeat around the University of Massachusetts football team as it prepares to host the Maine Black Bears Saturday at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

The Minutemen will be without the services of tailback Jerome Bledsoe, who broke his ankle at Holy Cross and is lost for the year. Freshman John Johnson will start in Bledsoe's place Saturday.

Maine, meanwhile, comes to town for the first time in two years without the terrifying Mike Buck-Carl Smith tandem on offense. Buck moved on to the New Orleans Saints this fall after setting every passing record there is at Maine. Buck teamed with tailback Smith to paste a 40-23 loss on UMass in Orono last season. Buck passed for four touchdowns and ran for a fifth, while Smith chipped in 227 yards in 41 carries.

And last week, flying solo, Smith struggled. In Maine's 31-7 loss at Villanova, Smith managed just 26 yard on 15 carries.

Smith's cause is hurt further by the loss of offensive lineman Rob Noble, a 6-foot-3, 270 pound All-American candidate. Noble injured his knee, and will not play against UMass.

None of this is any reassurance to UMass coach Jim Reid, who has seen enough of Smith over the last two years to develop a healthy fear.

"I'm sure they're going to try to play smash-face," said Reid. "They're going to try to run the ball right down our throats. They don't have much respect for our defense, and frankly, I think they're right, because we haven't given them much to respect over the last three years."

The Black Bears have scored 116 points in their last three games against UMass, winning two. The Minutemen successfully debuted a three-linebacker defense against Holy Cross' run-and-shoot assault last Saturday, and will stick with it for the time being, said Reid.

"We're kind of committed to this defense because we've played it so much," said Reid. "It's adjustable to other types of running games. Nothing's worked against these guys in three years, so what do we have to lose."

Linebacker Matt Tulley, who missed the Holy Cross game with a sore shoulder, will return, moving to the middle linebacker spot for UMass.

Game notes: A valid student ID is your ticket into Saturday's game. For non-UMass students, reserved seats may be purchased at the game for $9. The game will be broadcast on WMUA 91.1 FM, WSPR 1270 AM, and WTTT 1430 AM, and televised live on WWLP-TV Channel 22, Springfield.

Collegian file photo

UMass football hosts the Black Bears of Maine at McGuirk Alumni Stadium in home-opening game at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Field hockey hosts JMU

Women play at Totman in home opener

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

Pam Hixon called for her team to play more aggressive field hockey, and they did. If the Minutewomen sustain this hard-nosed style of play, they should win their share of games.

Saturday, the Minutewomen unveil their 1990 team to the home fans when they host James Madison (1 p.m., Totman Field). James Madison comes to Amherst with a 2-2-1 record. JMU has played sporadic field hockey. They defeated Central Michigan 3-1, and Richmond 2-1, while losing games to William & Mary and Duke. Their one tie came against Ohio State.

"We're really preparing to play our game," said James Madison coach Dee McDonough. "We don't see UMass play too much, but we know they're aggressive."

James Madison is led by junior forward Megan Hoke (two goals, and two assists) and by freshman Debbie Blades (two goals and one assist). Defensively, Laura Knapp in goal has been the lone standout. Knapp has an impressive 1.27 goals against average, and is coming off of an impressive 2-1 victory in which she made 19 saves.

Tomorrow's game should give Hixon an opportunity to experiment with lineups. After Wednesday night's win at Boston College, Hixon said that she still does not have the right people in the right spots yet.

The Minutewomen started to click right at the end of the game Wednesday night. Perhaps they can pick up where they left off.

Men host Temple on Hill

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

One might think that a soccer match could barely be described as "crucial" only four games into the season.

Saturday's match at 3:15 p.m. on Upper Boyden Field between the University of Massachusetts and Temple University carries just that much importance.

In pre-season polls, the Owls were picked fourth and the Minutemen fifth. Only the top four teams make the conference tournament. These teams need to eliminate each other.

"They're a team we have to beat. Fifth place isn't good enough," said coach Jeff Gettler.

For the Minutemen, a win would go a long way towards a tournament berth. Beating Temple would put them at 2-1, near the top of the A-10, for nearly a month. They don't have another conference game until Oct. 7. A loss, however, would send UMass down in the standings for nearly a month. "They're a tough, physical team," said Gettler of the Owls, whom the Minutemen have never beaten. "We're in for a real fight."

Temple has not played a conference game yet. Still, with a record of 1-2 and two goals to show for 38 shots, the Owls need a boost — and UMass is a team the Owls are supposed to beat.

Gettler stressed that tomorrow's match would be won at the midfield position. He said the team is strong at the midfield. He named seniors Marinus Leidermeyer and Scott Rieber as two of Temple's stronger players.

"I'm hoping our midfield can outplay them — that's the key," continued Gettler. "Our goalkeeping has been strong. We're getting scoring from our new players, which is great. I'm really happy with the play of our defense, but our midfield needs to play well."

Gettler also cited Itzahk Assor and Chris Cotten, both forwards, as "two good players" for the Owls. Assor and Cotten are the sum-total of Temple's scoring output, with one goal apiece. The injury bug continues to bite at UMass. Todd Kylish, Aaron Zandy and Matt Bearce are all still sore. Joining those three is junior forward Ray Cuhna, who suffered an inside ankle sprain against New Hampshire. Cuhna is questionable for tomorrow's match.

Jon Gruber will start in net for the Minutemen, while Pat Kivlin is the likely keeper for Temple. Kivlin has 25 saves in three games, with a save percentage of 89.3.

Two other changes have been made in the UMass lineup. Matt Edgerly will start at midfield, while Brett Anthony will move from midfield to forward.

For Massachusetts, tomorrow's game is the end of a grueling stretch of four games in eight days. With four days until their next game, Gettler said he wants a total effort from the team.

"I expect them to leave everything on the field."

Reds welcome teams for tourney

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

This weekend looks mentally and physically tough for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team as well as their opponents, as the team hosts the UMass Classic.

Cal. Berkeley, William and Mary, and Boston College are scheduled to play with UMass Saturday and Sunday on Upper Boyden.

UMass and Cal. Berkeley lead off the series at 11 a.m. Saturday, followed by Boston College and William and Mary playing at 1 p.m.

Cal. Berkeley enters the tournament ranked 18th nationally, 5th regionally. UMass head coach Jim Rudy said those numbers aren't fair.

Berkeley head coach Bill Merrell is back at the helm after a three year absence and has returned to 14 freshman on a 25-man roster. Rudy said Merrell's absence, coupled with the novice squad, lowered the Bears' ranking — but not in his book.

"They're a very young team but talented," he said. "Their front six play very smart."

The Golden Bears are currently 3-1-1, with their only loss (1-0) at Wisconsin in overtime. They brought in three home-game wins against Sonoma State (2-1), Washington State (4-0), and Oregon State (2-1), while at Portland they tied scoreless.

The ball has been netted by sophomore Devon Fitzpatrick (2 goals, 2 assists), sophomore Molly Goodwin (2, 1), freshman Kim Brady (2, 0), freshman Erika Hinton (1, 1), freshman Alexis Thompson (1, 0) and senior Valerie Pope (0, 2).

"Pope is good in the air," said Rudy. "She's a mature player. She takes all the free kicks and has a long range." He also said she is an Olympic Festival player.

"Goodwin is dangerous on headers," he said. According to Rudy, this should be an air show.

In the net for UMass will be sophomore Skye Eddy, who has been out due to a persistent virus. Eddy said she is eager to play and enjoys the healthy competition freshman Briana Scurry has given her while she's been sidelined.

"It's great to have that competition," she said. "It pushes both of us."

Rudy said he's just as eager to have Eddy back on the field, "I want to see where she's at."

Playing back-to-back games poses problems for most athletes. But the Reds look after themselves and each other by eating well and sacking out early.

"We'll have to go full out every day," said senior Becky Bonzano. "This season is going to be very physically demanding."

UMass will face off against William and Mary at noon on Sunday. BC and Berkeley will resume at 2 p.m.

William and Mary are currently in the top five nationally and hold a 1-2 record. They have opposed North Carolina State (2-1W), Duke (2-1L) and number three-ranked Santa Clara (2-0L).

"They've been beat up," Rudy said of the team's slow start. "They're a good team. They play the game, they don't try to play the war."

Senior Jenn Tepper, senior Robin Lotze and junior Rebecca Wakefield each have one goal. Senior Kristen Jesulaitis and Tepper have an assist. Junior Peggy Melanson has taken the most shots on goal (11).

Polo to Navy

Team competes in EVT

By JOE DEGLORIA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts water polo team will travel to Annapolis, Md., Saturday to participate in the Eastern Varsity Tournament. The UMass team goes into the event ranked 15th in the country.

Of the 16 teams in the tournament, five are nationally ranked. Brown, Navy, Harvard, and Iona are all ranked in the top 20.

"This is a big weekend, we have been pointing to this all preseason. We have to go all out . . . we are now the team to beat with our ranking."said UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "Last weekend we didn't show up and play our best, we can't do that against these teams."

UMass will go up against Queens in the first round. UMass's B team beat Queens last week. Assuming that UMass wins the first game, they will face the winner of the Slippery Rock-MIT contest. Yarworth said he anticipates playing Slippery Rock in the second round.

Navy is scheduled to play Dayton in the first round, then the winner of the Princeton-Washington and Lee game.

Navy, ranked 12th, is led by the high scoring tandem of Elton Parker and Luis Nicolao who have combined for 22 goals and 9 assists in Navy's first five games (all victories).

WEATHER

Today will be cold and rainy, with partly cloudy skies in the afternoon. Temps 60-65.

EDITORIAL

The Collegian Board of Editors picks its primary election choices. Page 7.

SPORTS

UMass football beats Black Bears of Maine at McGuirk, 21-10. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 9

Directory policy to be decided

Committee set to debate SGA request for access to student info

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The newly-formed Committee on Directory Policy, composed of administration and student representatives, will decide on Wednesday whether the Student Government Association has access to listings of student addresses.

The SGA and the administration of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst jointly created the committee to set a campus policy for the release of student address listings by the undergraduate and graduate registrars.

The committee is composed of the undergraduate and graduate registrars, representatives from Student Affairs and University Relations and Development, Norman Aikens, the associate provost, and undergraduate and graduate representatives. The undergraduate representative will be appointed by the SGA this evening.

"Our main victory so far is having graduate and undergraduate representation on the committee," said Ken Parker, an SGA senator who has met with the administration on this issue.

The SGA suggested last May that a concrete policy be created for the release of students' campus addresses by home zip codes, after requesting listings last spring and fall through different procedures.

"There was no standard way to get a list," Parker said. "The Registrars' offices had the power to get the list but no clear guidelines."

The policy, approved by the vice chancellors on Sept. 13, authorizes the delegated registrars to release directory information for what the committee decides is routine use by on-campus groups. Non-campus group requests will also be reviewed by the committee. President-Chancellor Duffey has override power over any decision the committee makes.

The SGA will discuss what rights they have demanded from Wednesday's committee meeting, according to Parker.

The SGA will ask for access to a complete list of students' campus address by home zip code every year or semester. Each list would also be given to area governments and house councils so that they could also have access to this information.

"The SGA is a representative government legally recognized by statute," he said. "We have the right to have a list of our constituents. We can't do our job without this list."

The SGA also wants student requests for directory information to be considered on an equal basis with administrative requests.

"We wanted a policy on how directory information could be released because any administrator could get a list and students could not," he said.

The student representation must not be advising the committee but have equal voting rights with administrative members, according to the SGA.

The SGA also demanded that they have information on requests made by on-campus and non-campus groups to obtain student listings. Student Trustee Angus McQuilken said the SGA wants a copy of all requests, particularly by politicians, so they can be aware of who has access to student information.

The vice chancellors added a clause to the policy which charges the cost of producing the directory information to the recipient from the appropriate registrar, Parker said.

The policy states that students must know their names are being collected through the admission form or change of address form. All privacy requests by students will be honored under this policy so phone numbers and other specific information will be withheld.

The directory information, according to the policy, may not be used in manners which break either state or federal laws such as campaign laws, which forbid state agencies from spending state funds to lobby for political candidates or issues, and Privacy of Information laws.

A form will be drafted by the committee requiring a signature of the parties receiving directory lists. The appropriate laws will be part of this form.

Parker said the administration is wary of possible legal ramifications like privacy infringement or state campaign laws being broken by students misusing funds for lobbying purposes.

The undergraduate registrar, the provost, the associate provost and the vice chancellor of student affairs could not be reached for comment.

THRASHING AT UMASS — Fourteen-year-old Pat Waller, of South Hadley, skates in front of the Fine Arts Center Wednesday afternoon.

Nominee Souter unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — David H. Souter, described by one senator early in his Supreme Court confirmation hearings as "the stealth nominee," is not the same mystery man he may have been to many Americans just days ago.

His two days of nationally televised testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee yielded significant insights into Souter the man and Souter the judge.

Everyone was not satisfied with his answers, especially his reluctance to detail his views on abortion. But at least something was learned of this New Hampshire judge who was virtually unknown outside of his home state when he was tapped by President Bush in July.

Perhaps more will be learned today — Souter's 51st birthday — when he returns for a third day of answering senators' question.

Here's some of what has been learned so far:

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Primary races tighten; Democrats bicker

BOSTON (AP) — Two days before the primary, a tightened Democratic race for governor featured Francis X. Bellotti and John R. Silber arguing yesterday over which has the best personality for solving the state's problems.

The attacks by Bellotti and Silber followed Sunday's publication of a Boston Globe-WBZ-TV poll showing Bellotti leading 48 percent to 37 percent. In the middle of last week, a poll of likely Democratic primary voters showed Bellotti leading Silber 54-31.

The latest poll also showed the Republican gubernatorial race was a virtual dead heat, with William Weld ahead of Steven Pierce 45 percent to 44 percent.

In other campaign news, House Speaker George Keverian announced yesterday he had picked up the endorsement of Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn to bolster his campaign for state treasurer.

In separate interviews yesterday on WBZ-TV, Bellotti and Silber each raised questions about the other's personality.

Bellotti, a former attorney general, accused Silber of catering toward voter anger.

"He's irrational, he's intemperate," Bellotti said. "Appealing to anger isn't what leadership is all about. Anger won't balance the budget.

Instead, Bellotti said, "you need a stable, thoughtful leadership that brings people together instead of dividing them, that gives them bone instead of appealing to their darker side."

Silber, whose sharp comments have sparked controversy, has tried to turn his combative style into his advantage.

Silber, on leave as president of Boston University, said the public needs a governor who not only understands the issues, but "above all has enough courage and stamina to stay the course, and has the sense to be upset when he sees things done poorly, who has sense enough to make changes and to be outraged where outrage is appropriate."

"Somebody who is a good, friendly, likeable uncle and easygoing and a buddy to everybody is not going to make the kind of changes necessary in a state that is as badly managed as this," Silber said.

The campaign schedules of all four candidates included appearances at small-town events yesterday as they scrapped for votes heading into tomorrow's primary election.

Until recently, Pierce, the House minority leader, held a wide lead over Weld in the Republican race.

The two candidates appeared separately yesterday morning on WHDH-TV, and Pierce blamed the turnaround on Weld's ability to contribute large sums of money to his own campaign.

To combat this, Pierce has repeatedly stressed that he represents the wishes of working class people.

"I don't think this race is going to be decided by a checkbook and negative advertising," Pierce said.

Instead, he said the race will be decided by voters who want a candidate who has "talked about protecting the jobs and paychecks of people in Massachusetts."

Weld, a former U.S. attorney, attributed his rise in the polls to hard campaigning, his performance in recent televised debates and Pierce's lack of a legislative record.

Regarding campaign funds, Weld said he has raised more money than Pierce from outside sources.

On a separate issue, Pierce was asked about the prospect of the federal government not fulfilling its financial promise for the Central Artery-Third Harbor Tunnel project.

Pierce said if the federal government does not provide the necessary money, then the state will "need to go back and look at the whole project."

In other races, the Globe-WBZ poll showed Rep. William Galvin leading Keverian in the Democratic race for treasurer, 31 percent to 26 percent. Sen. Richard Kraus was third at 13 percent.

In the lieutenant governor's race, Rep. Marjorie Clapprood led the Democratic side with 36 percent.

For Your Information

For your information is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 17

Lecture— "The Physics of General Ocean Circulation," by Dr. Joseph Pedlosky (Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution) at 4:30 p.m., McConnell Hall 104 (Clark Science Center, College Lane, Northampton).

Lecture"Flying High: Balloon Photography of Medieval Archaeological Sites," by Dr. Wilson Myers and Eleanor Myers (Center for Remote Sensing, Boston University) at 4:30 p.m., Hillyer Hall 117 (Elm St.).

Older Undergraduate Math Anxiety Workshop— 4:30 p.m., GRT 1634.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

Religious— Episcopal/Lutheran fellowship. A joint Eucharist with a light lunch to follow. Noon at St. John's Episcopal Church (Elm St., next to Smith College Museum of Art).

Discussion—"The Iraq-Kuwait Crisis and U.S. Policy," a panel discussion with Joe Gerson (American Friends Services Committee), Karen Pfeifer (economics, Smith College) and Samir Abed-Rabbo (politics, Keene State College), at 4:15 p.m., Seelye Hall 10 (Main Campus, Seelye Drive)

Discussion—"Living in the Spirit," focusing on contemplation and action through conversations and exercises maximizing strengths and minimizing stress. Sponsored by the Smith Catholic chaplaincy. 4:30 p.m., Bodman Lounge, Helen Hills Hills Chapel (Elm Street and Round Hill Road).

Library Tour — For older undergraduates at 4:30 p.m., library entrance.

Recycling Program Needs Paper Bags— Entering into their second year of collecting newspaper for recycling, the Residential Recycling Program at UMass needs paper bags.

Brown paper bags are used to collect newspapers in the residence halls. Last year the program collected 64 tons of newsprint using over 11,000 bags. With the current financial situation, the program can't afford to buy bags for the coming year.

"We anticipate students will recycle even more this year," said Sherill Baldwin, coordinator for the Residential Recycling Program, "but we're concerned over how to collect the paper if we don't have bags."

Baldwin added that "donating bags for reuse saves even more energy than recycling." Baldwin feels most people have begun to recycle their bags now that Amherst is online with the recycling facility in Springfield, but hopes people will save their bags for the program.

If you are interested in donating bags or for more information, contact Sherill Baldwin at the Recycling Office at 545-1153.

Israeli Dep. Minister warns of Arab dictators

NEWTON (AP) — Israel's deputy minister of foreign affairs told Jewish community leaders yesterday that they can help Israel by calling on the world's democracies to support the Jewish state against Arab dictators.

"In order to secure the peace (of Israel) we must have the assistance of the other democracies as the only democracy in the Middle East against these dictators and their allies," said Benjamin Netanyahu, speaking to 550 members of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston.

Netanyahu said American Jews should not believe what he called fallacious pleads for peace and human rights by Arab leaders like Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

Iraq invaded its smaller, oil-rich neighbor Kuwait on Aug. 2. The invasion prompted several nations, led by the U.S., to set up a land, air and sea military force in the Persian Gulf to prevent Hussein from taking Saudi Arabia.

Hussein has characterized himself as a crusader for the average Arab, not the rich oil sheiks. He said the invasion of Kuwait freed Kuwaitis from their western-influenced rulers.

Netanyahu said of Arab dictators: "You speak in the name of democracy as you trample the men into dust, into fine, fine dust, you talk of the rights of men."

He said Arab dictators like Hussein and Moamar Gadhafi of Libya have turned the world's attention from their individual military plans in the region by drawing focus to Israel and the Palestinian occupation crisis.

"The core of the conflict in the Middle East is not the Palestinian problem but the presence of dictators and terrorists who use violence to further their ambitions of plunder and conquest," Netanyahu said.

Arab rulers have "warned and distorted and changed the truth," he said.

Netanyahu said in an interview after the speech that Israel needs continued support from the larger democracies in the face of Iraq's new threat.

"What have we got to do with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait? Nothing," he said. But he added that Iraq's military might force Israel to be leery of Hussein.

"Saddam Hussein is not a solitary phenomenon. He is a part of a breed of dictators that we have seen. . . the difference is that he has amassed more power," Netanyahu said. "He's got ballistic missiles, he's got chemical weapons, he is now working on obtaining nuclear weapons. So he is able to carry out the ambitions of these other dictators in ways that they couldn't do before,'simply because he is amassing his weaponry and his military force."

The Combined Jewish Philanthropies hosted Netanyahu as part of a campaign called Operation Exodus, which is trying to raise $18 million to send Soviet Jews to Israel.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Mraft, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Mark Truskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts

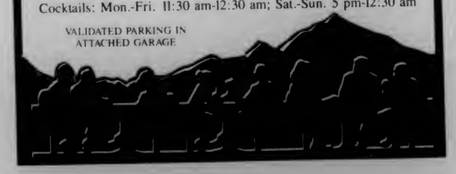
Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
□ 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
□ 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts (2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
□ 4 Racquetball Courts
□ Nautilus & Cardiovascular Fitness Center
□ Aerobics

CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte. 116 Sunderland
(Opposite Bub's BBQ on Bus Route)
Open 7 Days • 7:00am-11:00pm
Cut and present coupon below. Sept. 17-30 pay only $225 for a Semester Club membership that includes Nautilus, unlimited Raquetball and free aerobics!

Semester-Club Membership for $225
Nautilus, Unlimited Raquetball, Free Aerobics
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA 01059 (413) 549-4545
CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC
C

Top of the Campus
RESTAURANT and LOUNGE
The Top of the Campus has great food, fantastic service, weekly drink specials, an extensive lounge munchie menu and a spectacular view of the campus, all yours to enjoy in a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere.
Eleventh Floor, Lincoln Campus Center
549-6000 ext. 7636
Lunch: Mon.-Fri. 11:30 am-2:00 pm; Dinner: Tues.-Sat. 5:00-9:00 pm
Cocktails: Mon.-Fri. 11:30 am-12:30 am; Sat.-Sun. 5 pm-12:30 am
VALIDATED PARKING IN ATTACHED GARAGE



LOCAL

New 'satellite' office open

By PETER HERING
Collegian Correspondent

Last week's opening of the Mather Career Center's new "satellite" office in the Curry Hicks building at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst drew hundreds of students from across the campus.

The recently-acquired, centrally-located facility will provide students with information on a walk-in basis. It will function as a link between students and the main office, located on East Pleasant Street. It is hoped that the accessibility of the office will attract more students.

"We are very pleased with the turnout, it's really encouraging," said Joan Stoia, who has been director of the center since 1989. "In those three days we have had hundreds of students stop by and ask questions."

Stoia hopes that the new office will encourage more students, especially juniors and seniors, to make use of the Career Center's many useful services.

She also noted that many students come to the Center after they have graduated. "They walk in and expect us to help find them a job immediately. Well, after graduation it's a little too late," she said. Stolia is also director of the co-op program.

"It's important that the students know what we have to offer, because the sooner they start thinking about their future, the more we can do to help."

Stoia, herself a graduate of the University, knows that troubles are ahead for both the Career Center and the University.

"We have lost both money and staff due to budget cuts, but with the help of volunteers and students we have been able to survive," she added.

"The students are the reason we are here; we can cater to every major, every need," she said. "But the students must make the initial effort [to come down here]."

Design events to be held

LISA BOVARNICK
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts will host a "dazzling event" of prominent and widely acclaimed architects, landscape architects and designers, according to Helen Wise, a spokesperson for the event.

The speakers will be featured at an international design conference sponsored by the University's Center for Studies in Contemporary Culture, which is scheduled for later this month.

"The speakers will be previewing changes for the future, looking back at past developments to see where we are going," Wise said.

The need to replace the aesthetic "less is more" functionalism, which was popular throughout most of the 20th century, will also be discussed, CSCC Director Dennis Porter said.

He added many of the lectures will deal with the need for a new ethics of design.

'The world's growing population and polluted environment bring forth issues such as public safety and ethical responsibilities, he said.

"The focus of the conference is deliberately interdisciplinary and international and, unlike Prince Charles, we're not adopting an adversarial stance toward landscape architects, architects and designers," Porter said.

The goal of the CSCC in sponsoring the lectures is to "enrich the University's intellectual and cultural environment," Wise said.

Attendance is not only designed for those involved in the fine arts and humanities; the issues will go beyond those disciplines, Wise said.

The international design conference will be held Sept. 21-22. All sessions are free to Five College faculty and students and will be held in 163C Campus Center. Attendance is encouraged to any or all of the lectures.

ON THE MARCH — The UMass cheerleaders lead the way for the Minutemen Marching Band as they march to McGuirk Alumni Stadium for Saturday's football game.

Mohawk nation still at odds with Quebec

Editor's note — This is second of a multi-part series on the situation of the Mohawk Indians in Quebec, Canada. The writer is a Collegian correspondent who is currently in Kahnawake, Quebec.

By RIC OLIVEIRA
Collegian Correspondent

During the months of July and August there were dozens of attempts made for negotiations between the province and the Mohawks.

Many times the conflict appeared to be coming to an end, but just as negotiations seemed to be going well, last minute disagreements about native sovereignty stalled the process.

On labor day Monday, in a gesture of good faith, Mohawks and army servicemen dismantled the bridge barricades. The barricade dismantling was possible because of a verbal agreement stating that there would be checkpoints established, a patrolling system in effect, and no military vehicles upon the reserve.

After the barricades were dismantled the army stated that it "sighted armed Mohawks" so it invaded. A group of unarmed Mohawk women, fearing conflict, marched arm in arm to the bridge. From there the women marched to the longhouse (a traditional meeting house). At the entrance to the longhouse the women attempted to block the APCs and a foot soldiers' path. A confrontation arose which left several soldiers and a woman badly injured.

On Sept. 6, after a lengthy search of the bridge by the army for mines, the bridge was opened to commuter traffic.

As the army patrols the highways, just outside the village unarmed Mohawk men and Kahnawake peacekeepers patrol the entrances.

On Sept. 8 at about 4 a.m. at the Kahnesataje barricade, four army soldiers under reconnaissance orders

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

GLB group starts off academic year

Faculty Staff plans advocacy and support services

By SEAN SULLIVAN
Collegian Correspondent

The Faculty Staff Group for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns met last week to start off an academic year of advocacy and support services for the gay, lesbian and bisexual community at the University of Massachusetts, according to program officials.

Aside from continuing its role as the informal advisory board to the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, the organization announced a new meeting schedule as well as a change in its structural hierarchy.

According to Felice Yeskel, coordinator of Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, standard business meetings will alternate with special programs. The first of these, a wine-and-cheese social reception, commences on Monday, Sept. 17, from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Faculty Club.

Also, a dinner and conference, tentatively titled "The Changing Religious Perspectives Toward Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual People," is planned for late October and will be open to the campus community.

On Friday, November 2, from 12:30 to 2 p.m., the group will sponsor a luncheon with gay performer/songwriter Holly Near.

A new steering committee was announced, composed of Pat Griffin, a Physical Education faculty member, Linda Marchesani of Residential Academic Programs, Carolyn O'Grady, a graduate student, Karen Shelley, the Chief Financial Officer of Housing Services, Michael Wiseman, also of Housing Services, and Yeskel.

The committee replaces the chairperson-dominated system of previous years. Aside from coordinating and making decisions on behalf of FSGGLBC, it will work toward the organization's primary objectives with three other sub-committees.

According to the FSGGLBC Mission Statement:

- The Academic Committee "works on integrating gay and lesbian studies into the mainstream academic curriculum," among other issues.
- The Benefits Committee "works on issues of parity for lesbian, gay and bisexual employees and their families."
- The Program Advocacy Committee "secures the further institutionalization of the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns."

Since its inception in Spring 1986, FSGGLBC has striven to make UMass "a safe, supportive environment in which gay, lesbian and bisexual students can concentrate on their educational goals, and gay, lesbian and bisexual faculty and staff can pursue their work responsibilities without harassment."

FSGGLBC welcomes a "wide cross-section of University officials" to participate in its activities. Any administrator, faculty or staff member interested should contact Pat Griffin at 545-0628 for further information.

University Store struck by computer virus

Compiled by PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

The University Store on the concourse reported to police Thursday that someone had infected four IBM computers on public display with a computer virus.

A computer virus is a small, non-authorized program introduced into a computer system. Viruses are usually harmless although some viruses can destroy data.

Police said damage was minimal, but a store employee spent several hours ridding the virus from the machine.

The incident is under investigation.

LARCENY

- A Grayson Residence Hall woman reported to police Thursday that $9 was stolen from her wallet allegedly by a man leaving her room.
- A man in Thoreau reported to police Thursday that his telephone was stolen from his room.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON IS IT!

Open Rush Sept 18, 19, 23, 24

375 N. Pleasant St.

■ Mohawk nation

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

crossed the barbed wire entering the Mohawk lines. On their mission they stumbled upon a sleeping Mohawk known to the media as Spud Wrench. When the sleeping Mohawk awoke, the soldiers attempted to muffle his cries of warming.

Randy Horn (Spud Wrench) was badly beaten by the soldiers rifles. In the struggle, the 40-year-old Mohawk stabbed one soldier and lacerated another's face. Horn appeared on CBS badly bruised with a swollen face.

He was taken into army custody with Major Tremblay's on-camera promise that "he would be returned to the barricades after he had recieved medical treatment." When asked about the military action of the previous night, Tremblay replied "It's part of life."

On Sept. 9 Federal Justice Minister Kim Campbell appeared live on CBS News and stated to the country that "the warriors do not represent legitimate native land claims and the situation we see in OKA (Kahnosatake) is a law enforcement situation."

Later that day Bourassa stated "the government of Canada and Quebec will not accept that the warriors are not held under the criminal acts; we will simply only negotiate the removal of their arms."

Terry Doxletter, representative of the 6 Nation Confederacy, appeared later on CBS News where he said "we are wishing to achieve an honorable disengagement from all sides. Warriors do not want freedom from prosecution, they want freedom from persecution."

On Sept. 10 Mohawk peacekeepers (comparable to county sheriffs) were arrested and had their guns removed from them by the army. "For every honorable gesture the Mohawks have made to ease the tension, the army has filled the void," said Alex McComber.

On Sept. 12, Spud Wrench was charged with disturbing the peace, destruction of police and golf club property, wearing a concealing mask even though the SQ and army wore no name tags, possesion and illegal weapons and inciting riot.

Meanwhile Mohawks involved throughout the summer refrain from leaving the Reserve for fear of being arrested

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
Cinema Paradisio
Mon-Thur one show 7:30
Fri-Sun two shows 7:00 and 9:15
Student discount with valid ID $2.50

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS
OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS ON OUR DOORS FIRST.
Why? Because Army ROTC teaches you the leadership and management skills you need for success – in college and in life.
ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.
Contact Cpt. Richard Tracey
UMass Army Rotc
5-2321 or 5-2322

Save UP TO $160

Famous Double Discount
Now's the time to get the best deal on your college ring. Buy now and save up to $80 on your college ring, and get a second discount – a free "savings match" gift certificate – good for merchandise in the store. Choose from an exciting selection of men's and women's ring styles. Talk to your ArtCarved representative today and double your savings.
ARTCARVED
Mon - Fri
Sept. 17-21
9:30-3:30
UNIVERSITY STORE

Democratic candidates from two camps

Bellotti campaigns as an insider's outsider

BELLOTTI

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Listening to the negative television ads hawking Democrats for governor is almost reminiscent of the 1976 presidential election pitting a politically savvy yet acknowledged outsider against a candidate bruised by the perception of "insiderism."

Fourteen years later, with the Massachusetts economy in the intensive care ward and state government seemingly out of control, a similar anger has developed in the electorate and woe is the candidate tainted with the image of the present administration.

Perhaps this was the weak linch-pin in Evelyn Murphy's campaign. Although she carefully distinguished herself from Gov. Dukakis, she was always viewed as the lieutenant governor of the present administration. Several days after a "palace coup" two weeks ago, Murphy dropped out of the race.

This same problem bedevils long-time politician Francis Xavier Bellotti, a candidate marketing himself as an outsider although he has spent nearly 25 years in state government, including some time in Dukakis' administration. During the 1960s, Bellotti also served as lieutenant governor and previously ran for governor but lost by less than 1 percent in the general election.

Bellotti has been out of state government for the past four years since stepping down as attorney general in 1986 — after three terms at the post — and now faces an opponent running the same marketing vein but with obviously better credentials in the outsider department.

Boston University president-on-leave John R. Silber has never held a public office although he has extensive ties to the powers-that-be in the Legislature including Senate President William Bulger (D-South Boston).

Now that the de facto Dukakis insider is out of the race, the insider tag has been lifting off the Murphy campaign and placed on Bellotti's neck. Bellotti, the leader in the polls until Murphy bowed out, according to a recent Boston Globe poll, Silber is gaining ground on Bellotti in the race.

Unlike the other candidates in the race, Bellotti has not spoken widely about the role of the state public higher education system although he has detailed a proposed student-business partnership.

Silber pledges sound education support

Silber
Democrat · Governor

Compiled from campaign releases:

"I want to raise the educational competence and the income of teachers and restore respect for teachers. Teaching is crucial to both the moral and economic health of our society. Teaching is not merely a job or a career. It is a vocation — the dedication of one's life to the liberation and the fulfillment of children.

"The fiscal management of schools must be improved. It is essential to realize that a deficient educational system is not always the result of a deficiency of funds. If money is being spent on the wrong things, spending more money on the wrong things will not improve matters. There is waste in almost every school system's budget.

"Many school systems spend too much money at the top on administration and supervision and too little in the classroom. Additional waste is caused by misguided regulations. All waste must be eliminated. Reducing waste provides the equivalent of a funding increase.

But if additional funding is necessary, after waste and pointless regulations are removed, I shall certainly support it while insisting that the legislature clearly identifies the source of new money.

"I oppose the CLT ballot question because it involves a regressive formula that would ensure fiscal disaster. And I don't approve of rigid formulas as a general rule. The governor and the legislature should demonstrate the leadership and responsibility appropriate to their offices. CLT substitutes a blind rule for an intelligent, responsible government. I sympathize, however, with the concern that has prompted the development of the CLT position. It reflects a widespread lack of confidence by the people of Massachusetts in state government. They are understandably offended by the paralysis that has characterized state government during the past two years and they resent the deception perpetrated by state government in the previous years.

"We must keep in mind that money spent wisely on education is not an item of consumption, but an investment in our most important natural resource — our human capital. And it also is an investment in a civilized community relatively free of crime, drugs and violence."

John Silber, Boston University president on leave was born in San Antonio, Texas. He served as professor of philosophy and University Professor of Arts and Letters at the University of Texas Austin.

DON'T STAY HOME

London	$398
Nairobi	$1005
San Jose, CR	$338
Hong Kong	$849

*restrictions may apply
Council Travel
Amherst
256-1261

For Older Undergraduates
25+ CLUB
Did you know that there are more than 1500 undergraduates at UMass age 25 and over? Let's get together at an..
Introductory Meeting
Wednesday, Sept. 19
8:00 pm
Campus Center 174-176
Discussion of Activities
Socializing
Refreshments

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at UMass in Amherst presents an evening with Former U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Economic and Social Council and Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs; currently a Resident Scholar at American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research in Washington, D.C.
DR. ALAN KEYES
speaking on

"SELF-GOVERNMENT AND PEACE:
How Israel Can Survive
the Challenge of
Palestinian Rights"
Tuesday, September 18, 7:30pm
Campus Center Auditorium/UMASS
$3-General Public Free for Students
This event is made possible by a generous grant from Herman and Judith B. Swartz.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF THEATER
1990 SEASON 1991
THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD
by John Millington Synge
Oct. 31-Nov. 3 and Nov. 6-10
Curtain Theater
MESSIAH
by Martin Sherman
Nov. 29-Dec. 1 and Dec. 5-8
Rand Theater
BLOOD WEDDING
by Federico Garcia Lorca
Feb. 27-Mar. 2 and March 5-9
Curtain Theater
THE DON JUAN PROJECT
An original theatrical piece
April 4-6 and 10-13
Rand Theater
THE BLACK WOMEN'S SURVIVAL KIT
by Andrea Hairston
May 1-4 and 7-11
Curtain Theater
For information on ticket prices, matinees, and season subscriptions cont. the Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511

■ Souter unveiled

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

- Souter says he gave the Bush administration no assurances about how he would vote if the court were asked to overturn its 1973 decision in Roe v. Wade legalizing abortion.
- He believes the Constitution provides a general right of privacy even though such a right is not specifically mentioned, and that the right extends to married women's use of contraceptives.
- He thinks Constitutional provisions should not be interpreted to mean only what their framers intended, but what they mean in today's world. That separates him from those conservatives who espouse an "original intent" approach.
- He disagrees with Justice Antonin Scalia, the high court's most conservative member, about how judges should search out American tradition in determining some forms of constitutional protection.

In a recent decision, Scalia said the father of a child born out of wedlock is not entitled to certain parental rights because those rights previously had been recognized by married people. Souter said he found that reasoning too confining.

- He never heard his parents refer to another human being in racial or ethnic terms. "I am glad I am conditioned by my beginnings and I am glad I do not have to overcome them," Souter told the committee.
- He is not unflappable. Questioned by Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) near the end of Friday's session, Souter for the first time began answering before his interrogator had finished speaking.
- He doesn't think the Supreme Court should stick its nose into matters where it has no constitutional responsibility to act, but believes the court sometimes "is left to act alone when the political branches do not act beforehand."

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking.

With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

MUNCHY SALE

LENDERS BAGELS Asst. Varieties 89c 10 oz. Reg $1.12	'PHILLY' BRAND CREAM CHEESE 49c 3 oz. Reg $0.59
SNAPPLE All Flavors 69c 16 oz. bottle Reg $0.89	Nabisco TEDDY GRAHAMS honey, chocolate, cinnamon $1.69 Reg $1.98
HERSHEY CANDY BARS Milk Chocolate & Almond, Kit Kat, Peanut Butter Cups 3/99c Reg 40c ea.	VERY FINE Juice and Drinks 2/99c 10 oz. bottles Reg 60c
DIAL or CAMAY SOAP 2/99c 3 oz. bar Reg 55c or 65c	Available at all stores: Ameri Print film developing

	SINGLE	DOUBLE	4 x 6 DELUXE
12exp	3.19	4.49	4.49
24exp	5.89	8.39	8.39
36exp	8.39	12.59	12.59

One Day service available
Kodak color watch system

Prices Valid Through Saturday, September 29th
see store for details

DELTA UPSILON

invites all university men to

OPEN RUSH

MAP
Northeast Area
Grad tower
Totman Gym
ΔΥ

We offer:
- 24 hour kitchen
- Catered food
- Superior social life
- Cable TV
- Lifelong friends
- University and Greek area overall athletic champions
- Voted Best Philanthropy and Most Improved House

Rush Dates
Sept. 17 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 18 Just DU it. 8:00pm
Sept. 20 • Special Events • 7:00 pm
Sept. 21 Barbecue 5:00 pm
Sept 24 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 25 Informal —all day
Sept. 26 Just DU it. 7–9:00pm

You could get free tuition. Free books. A great job. All we ask is a piece of your mind.

Do you have the potential to be one of the best teachers in America? If so, the Kansas City Magnet Schools will pay for your education. All we ask in return is your 3-year commitment to teach in one of our exciting themes.

- Science/math
- Engineering
- Agribusiness
- Visual/performing arts
- Foreign language
- Reading
- Communications
- Montessori

If you're a U.S. college junior, senior or Master's candidate, complete and mail the coupon for complete information.

MAIL TO: TTAP COORDINATOR, Dept. 9
School District of Kansas City, Missouri
Human Resources Division, Room 801
1211 McGee, Kansas City, Missouri 64106

NAME
ADDRESS
CITY STATE ZIP
PHONE (ISC)
COLLEGE ATTENDING

The Kansas City Magnet Schools
An equal opportunity employer. M/F/H/V

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the respective authors. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Primary Picks

The outcome of November's state gubernatorial election will have major repercussions on this financially-strapped state, as well as on the future of taxes, budget cuts, civil liberties, crime, human services and overall morale. In no other recent election has so much been at stake for the future of Massachusetts.

The Collegian Board of Editors has endorsed candidates for both primaries. Hopefully, if one of these two candidates wins the November election, we will see some light at the end of this dismal fiscal tunnel.

- Democrat Francis X. Bellotti — Despite Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy's withdrawal from the race, Bellotti seems to share many of her views and would best represent this state in a time of crisis. John Silber, Boston University president-on-leave, represents narrow-minded, bigoted viewpoints toward women, the elderly and people of color. His election would not only alienate different communities, but to derision as well in an already tense climate.
- Republican William Weld — Weld's viewpoints seem more open-minded and compassionate, as compared with Rep. Steven Pierce's right-wing zealousness. His pro-choice stand on abortion, along with his other moderate stances, make him the better Republican choice for governor.

For a more promising future for Massachusetts, please vote in tomorrow's primary and let our student voices be heard.

Unsigned editorials reflect the majority opinion of the Collegian Board of Editors.

The politics of football

There are some things which should not be political — apple pie, for instance. However, in this day and age of the "Quest for Free Advertising," political campaigns are doing whatever they can to educate the electorate.

The day-to-day world here at the University is filled with political garbage. The majority of the students, however, try to ignore or stay clear of the tirades of ideologues which besiege them, have the politics of others crammed down their throat.

Gayle Long

I admit, the politics of this campus are more intense than that of the outside world, and the maneuvers performed by the extremes of both sides can get rather tiresome.

This page, I warrant, also can be a political forum at times. But the fact still remains: Politics should not be the end-all of life. There are much more rewarding pursuits, I think.

So, above all, on the weekend, everyone wants to escape the superficiality of political warfare.

On Saturday, there was another violation of political "freeness." The UMass football game was plagued by, you guessed it, campaigning youngsters.

Most people go to football games to, amazingly enough, watch the game. But the campaigners, more specifically the College Republicans, were in full force, trying to push the football fans of the area to hear the plea Pierce for Governor.

What could be more important to the fans of the Minutemen on opening day of the season than the fact that Steven Pierce wants the job no sane person the world — let alone the state — should want?

Nonetheless, the Segrettis of the campus — Donald Segretti was one of Nixon's aides who sabotaged the campaign of Muskie during the Watergate years— decided to pull out all the stops.

They handed out leaflets with the "official signals" of the football referees on one side and their "public endorsement" of Pierce as well as Paul Cellucci, who is running for lieutenant governor. Directly below the "official signals" was the slogan, "Carrying on the Reagan Revolution."

I was incensed that such propaganda was issued at a harmless sporting event. What made me laugh, however, is that people around me felt the same way. To my left, one man actually tore the paper in half; to the right, another threw his peanuts at the woman distributing these "information sheets."

But there was more. The Pierce crowd then decided it was time to wow the crowd with a spectacular parade of political signs and banners. They rushed the walkway at McGuirk Stadium walking together with huge banners reading "College Republicans" as well as the now-expected "Pierce for Governor" signs.

At first, I was livid. But then, two things happened.

First, I noticed that everyone was not looking at the twenty-or-so people wandering like a lost troop of elephants up and down the home side of the field. The fans were watching, believe it or not, FOOTBALL.

Then, I remembered the morning issue of the Boston Globe I had read. It reported that Pierce's rival, former U.S. Attorney General William F. Weld, had overtaken the Minority house leader 45 percent to 41 percent in the latest telephone poll.

Is it me or is it ironic that the same day I find out the College Republicans are supporting Pierce that Pierce falls behind in the polls?

The primary will truly be the test. I wish I could say "may the best man win." Unfortunately for us, there is no best man.

Unfortunately for College Republicans, they think there is.

Read Gayle Long every other Monday

There will be a meeting of all columnists for the Fall 1990 semester on Friday, Sept. 21, at 1 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. Attendance is mandatory.

This will be your only chance to arrange your weekly/biweekly schedule, etch it in stone, and not be subjected to your editors' whims and moods the rest of the semester.

Don't worry. If you don't show up, there's plenty of would-be columnists out there who would just love to take your prized columnist status away from you. And we might just indulge them.

Please call Reggie or Gayle at 545-0719 to confirm. Or just to ask us about any suggestions for original excuses.

In any case, we are giddy with anticipation.

The "funny feeling" of being discriminated against

Two women entered a downtown Amherst bank recently, in the hopes of landing a job. They had heard that this particular bank was looking for part-time help, and inquired about an application.

"No, we don't have applications anymore," came the reply. "Lots of students have been applying for the job; we should be getting more towards the end of next week."

Adam Stein

The women thanked the customer service representative and left with an uneasy feeling. Something just didn't sit right. It was one of those gut feelings that many of us would write off as insignificant, and continue on our merry way. Yet it was much deeper than that.

The women stood outside the bank and could not ignore what it was that bothered them about the transaction.

Once I remember pulling into a gas station at some random point on Interstate 95. I asked for the tank to be filled, was quoted a price, paid and started the car to leave. Yet something didn't sit right.

Maybe it was the length of time it took the attendant to fill the tank, or maybe it was the manner in which he told me the cost . . . I don't know. But what I do know is that I hesitated before pulling out of the station, and had the uneasy gut feeling that perhaps I had been cheated, though I quickly dismissed it as nothing.

The two women, for some unspecific reason, also had an intuitive feeling of being cheated. Maybe it was the way the service representative told them that the bank was out of applications, or maybe it was her body language. . .They don't know.

"How much of that is because we are Black?" asked one of the women to the other. Their feeling was so persistent that they had to find out for sure. They asked a White male friend to enter the bank.

The same representative, this time, responded, "Sure, hold on." After rummaging through some papers, she left the desk and returned, "We have no applications right now, but if you leave your name and address, we'll mail one to you."

The two women, waiting outside the bank and wanting desperately to be proven wrong, met the news with disappointment.

It was a disappointment that extended beyond this particular situation. It was a disappointment with society.

It was a disappointment which always reminded the women that they are a few living among a powerful many.

Everyday actions, such as sitting on a bus or applying for a job, can be met with disappointment — when the White woman next to you protectively pulls her bag further away from you, or a customer service representative steers you away from a job. . . just because you are Black.

If a questionable incident has happened to you, and you suspect discrimination on the basis of race, sex, creed, physical ability or sexual orientation, call the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD) in Springfield at (413)739-2145.

Filing a complaint will automatically result in an investigation by the Commission to determine probable cause. The outcome can be hefty fines placed on the heads of Civil Rights violators, and a step closer to bringing justice to the unjust.

Read Adam Stein every other Monday

The Editorial Desk welcomes submissions from the Five-College community. Columns must not exceed 65 typed lines, and letters must not exceed 35 lines. Please send submissions to Gayle Long/A.R. Santiago, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst 01003.

Please include your name, address and phone number.

Silber has no decency

John Silber's theatrics in Roxbury last Wednesday proved that he is truly the "outsider" that he has claimed but not as he has intended.

His racist and derogatory remarks towards the Humbolt Avenue residents in Roxbury have proven that he is solely an 'outsider" to the needs of minorities and the working class in Massachusetts.

Kendra Pratt

Roxbury residents are accurately interpreting Silber's selfish motives from his brash appearance.

If he had not been criticized for not making a campaign appearance in Boston's Area B, composed of mostly minority neighborhoods, during Tuesday's debate, he would never have bothered to go there at all to shoot down Bellotti.

And, he would have been in a better political position for the primary if he had left people he had never considered before well enough alone.

Silber's prejudiced comments about the people living in this community during the debate caused his foot to once again fly into his mouth and left Roxbury residents angry enough to tell him to stick his comments in another orifice.

Silber justified not appearing in Area B by saying, "There is no point in making a speech on crime control to a group of drug addicts."

Silber cannot claim that the media took him out of context because he said his insults during live coverage of the debate.

He cannot deny these, like similarly derogatory comments he has made about Cambodian refugees in Lowell, Puerto Ricans in Holyoke and the elderly living on Medicare.

Now he has said that all Area B residents are drug addicts.

The reality is that most of the drugs are brought into the neighborhood by other people and Boston Police hold the opinion that 90 percent of all Area B residents are "God-fearing, hardworking and law-abiding citizens.

His reaction to the community's criticism of his appearance added insult to injury.

When Roxbury residents demanded an apology from the Boston University president-on-leave-but-still-collecting-his-salary, Silber instead lashed out and demanded an apology from the residents because they did not meet him as the solution to their neighborhood's problems.

The residents of Area B know their problems. They live there.

They know that out of 102 murders in Boston this year, 62 have occurred in their neighborhoods. They have their own solutions as well.

They do not need the "straight shooting" John Silber to tell them how to fight crime on the streets.

Residents of Area B have already created more than 120 local crime watch groups to help themselves.

Roxbury residents condemned Silber as "a racist and a Nazi," as someone who would come into their neighborhood while "patting them on the head" and referring to them as "sorry Black people."" The sorriest issue to date has been Silber's lack of qualifications to be governor of the state.

He lacks human decency.

Kendra Pratt is a Collegian staff member

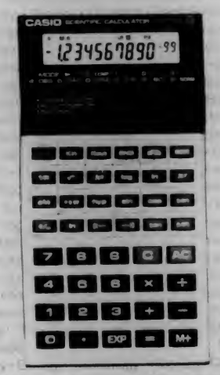
To excel in any major, make a minor investment.

fx-300A $16.95*



fx-115N $24.95*

fx-4200P $49.95*

Let Casio make your most complex courses look easy. With simple-to-use scientific calculators that offer high-powered features. Without the high price.

Our 8-digit Solar Plus™ fx-300A is easy to read and operates even in the dimmest light. Its 128 functions make it a valuable addition to virtually any math or science course. The fx-300A performs statistical and fractional calculations. And it stores six computations in memory.

For more power, tap into our Solar Plus fx-115N. This 10-digit scientific calculator gives you 154 functions. It offers computer math for everything from binary to hexadecimal calculations. Linear regression analysis. And an applications workbook that makes the fx-115N simple to use.

Our 12-digit fx-4200P data calculator is in a class by itself. The dot matrix LCD lets you see alpha-numeric formulas, names and technical data exactly as written. The replay feature prompts you to solve for different values of a variable without inputting the formula each time. Plus, there's a powerful 279-step memory and 150 advanced functions.

No matter what courses you're taking, Casio has a scientific calculator that's of major importance. At a price that's a minor subject.

CASIO
Where Miracles Never Cease

Ask for Casio Scientific Calculators at your bookstore.

Casio, Inc. Calculator Products Division,
570 Mt. Pleasant Avenue, Dover, NJ 07801 (201) 361-5400
Solar Plus is a trademark of Casio Computer Co., Ltd.

*Suggested retail price

Republican candidates discuss focus for Mass.

Pierce details plan to revive Mass. economy with business incentives

Steven Pierce

Compiled from campaign releases

"We must get our economy on the move. Business is the engine that drives our economy and, like any engine, business needs the proper fuel. State government can do much to encourage business. We must begin to create a climate where business is welcome. It's time, once again, to hang out the "open for business" sign.

"I will continue to fight excessive regulations and restrictions on business. My administration will move to streamline the permitting process on new development. I will repeal the Universal Health Care Law because of the excessive cost on businesses in Massachusetts.

"I fought hard against the largest tax hike in this state's history. The $1.8 billion tax hike on close to 600 businesses is a death warrant for the Massachusetts economy. I fought the tax hike on the House floor. I fought the tax hike in the Supreme Judicial Court and, within one hour of the Governor's signature, I filed legislation to repeal this tax increase. I have done everything I could and will continue to do all that I can to fight for our economic recovery.

"To attract new business and industry, we must offer incentives, not road blocks. I will offer businesses deferred tax credits on investments and research and development. We must assist troubled industries by offering alternatives which help not just business but society as a whole. To that end, as Governor I will offer incentives and tax credits to businesses that provide products and services which protect our environment while creating jobs.

"I was the first legislator to push for an Enterprise Zone Bill. This bill would offer tax incentives to businesses that move into depressed areas and hire individuals from that community. As Governor I will get the bill enacted. I have also pushed for legislation to help revitalize Roxbury by "anchoring" a new private development which will attract jobs and businesses to the area.

"I predicted the state's fiscal crisis more than two years ago. At that time I offered numerous reforms that would have helped avoid the current crisis. Now that my prediction has become reality, many of those reform ideas have been embraced by the Democrats in their effort to escape the fiscal mess they have created. For each of the past four years, the Democrats have spent more money than we have collected, forcing the Commonwealth to further mortgage its future."

Weld endorses CLT petition; advocates a state that is 'pro-jobs'

William Weld

Compiled from campaign releases

"I opposed the recently passed tax package. Given the state's weakened economy, I believe that the tax increase will send the economy into a tailspin.

"As governor, I will look to make up any revenue gap by cutting duplication and inefficiency in a budget that has grown from $6 billion to more than $13 million in the past eight years. I will cut administrative cost, consultant and purchased services accounts.

"I support the concept of "zero-based " budgeting, under which programs will be zero funded. Each program will then be carefully evaluated based on performance, cost effectiveness, staffing structure, duplication of services, etc.

"I am an advocate of the type of restructuring that Peter Nessen called for in his study of purchased services, the so-callled "07" amount.

"Nessen found that by reducing the amount of paperwork generated by providers and the state, significant savings can be made. Nessen said the state needs to streamline the bureaucracy, institute component pricing, performance-based contracting and uniform financial reports. Currently, a provider can be audited by many different agencies for the same program and even the same line item.

"I have endorsed the CLT petition. I believe that only the CLT petition will force the Democrat-controlled Legislature to make the kind of cuts — to do the kind of restructuring — that is necessary to resolve what is really a structural deficit, and to prevent tax increases from becoming an annual occurrence.

"I feel strongly that it is essential to create an environment in the state that is pro-jobs. I will foster such a climate by streamlining the regulatory process and by providing businesses with the incentive to locate and expand in the Bay State.

"Rather than taxing businesses to the point where they leave the state, I will work to lower or eliminate the capital gains tax for productive assets held in Massachusetts for a period of five years or more. He (Pierce) favors raising the existing investment tax credit for manufacturing from one to three percent, and I will work to establish a separate tax credit for research and development activities similar to that in many other states.

"These tax incentives will help jump start the economy by making it more attractive for business to locate here, to stay here and to expand here. Finally, I would work to resolve the state's current fiscal crisis , which has a negative impact on the commonwealth's business."

RUSH PIKE

THE FRATERNITY WITH A COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

FALL 1990 OPEN RUSH

September 17, 18, 19, 25, 26 8-10 P.M.
418 North Pleasant Street 549-6251

ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

- LIFE LONG FRIENSHIPS
- STRONG ATHLETICS
  - OLYMPIC WEIGHT ROOM
- CONVENIENT LOCATION

- UNPARALLELED SOCIAL LIFE
- STRESSED ACADEMICS
  - Two Computers
  - Course Files
- EXCELLENT MEAL PLAN

ΠΚΑ
PI KAPPA ALPHA

ΛXA

- LARGEST NATIONAL FRATERNITY ON CAMPUS
- DEFENDING INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS
- OLYMPIC WEIGHT ROOM
- ROOM & BOARD LESS EXPENSIVE THAN UNIVERSITY
- BEST MEAL PLAN ON CAMPUS
- UNPARALLELED SOCIAL ACTIVITIES
- EXCELLENT PHILANTHROPIES

GET THE MOST OUT OF COLLEGE & EXPERIENCE WHAT FRATERNITY LIFE IS ALL ABOUT

RUSH LAMBDA CHI!

374 NORTH PLEASANT ST phone 253 - 9032

MON 17th - MEET BROTHERS & BUFFALO WINGS 9-11 pm
TUES 18th - NIGHT AT THE RACES 9-11 pm
SAT 22nd - BBQ WITH BROTHERS 1pm
MON 24th - DINNER WITH BROTHERS 7pm
TUES 25th - FINAL NIGHT 9-11 pm

Class of '94

This course is for you!!!

"The Everyday Life of a College Student"

Fall 1990 - Course Offering

What is "The Everyday Life of A College Student ?"

One credit (10 week) course taught by upperclass students.

Meets in the residence halls – once a week (2 hours).

A small class (12 students) at a large University.

A chance to learn about the University and yourself in a relaxed atmosphere.

EDUC 4 191K

In this course, First Year students are encouraged to learn more about the University, and what they think about timely issues. Students explore ways to take charge of their college experiences - and their lives - by recognizing and analyzing problems and actively trying to solve them. Topics of discussion include: friendships, relationships, academics, sexuality, alcohol and drugs, diversity issues, etc.

Students who have taken EDL have said:

"A course that's fun, exciting and highly personal..."

"A great way to meet other first year students and to make friends..."

"Survival and success tips" for making the most of the college experience..."

Interested? Next Step:

Course Registration:
September 2nd - September 18th
8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 545-0422
130 BRETT HOUSE (CENTRAL AREA)

classes begin the week of Sept. 24th
All Sections of the course meet 7-9 p.m.

Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday
Section:	1A: Southwest/Emerson	1C: Sylvan/TBA		1H: Northeast/Dwight	1L: Orchard Hill/Field
	1B: Southwest/James	1D: Northeast/Thatcher		1I: Central/Brett	1M: Southwest/Emerson
		1E: Orchard Hill/Field		1J: Central/Van Meter	1N: Southwest/ Moore
		1F: Southwest/Moore		1K: Central/Baker	1O: Southwest/John Adams
		1G: Southwest/ James

• Place to be announced

SPONSORED BY : RESIDENTIAL EDUCATION/HOUSING SERVICES

ARTS & LIVING

Time for donuts and coffee: Twin Peaks is back

By LEAH ARINIELLO
Collegian Correspondent

The fish in the percolator may have added just enough quirky flavor to Twin Peaks for viewers to want another cup.

For those of you who are unaware of just what fish I'm talking about and are swimming in confusion about this whole cherry pie business, read on. Get those VCRs ready, on Sunday, Sept. 30. The television show Twin Peaks is set to air. It's a special two-hour flashback of what happened during the previous episodes of the mind-boggling series that depicted the investigation of a prom queen's mysterious murder. So, if you missed it last winter and you didn't catch the repeats of the series this summer or you didn't have the connections to grab one of those bootleg tapes, you have one more chance!

You may say to yourself: Why should I bother getting wrapped up in the many lovers and addictions of the murdered Laura Palmer? I mean, a person has enough names and dates to memorize for History 100, never mind keeping track of the dead Laura's boyfriend Bobby, who actually has something going with the waitress Shelley Johnson, who is married and occasionally beaten by Leo Johnson, the ponytailed trucker, who, even though he loves Shelley, wants to constantly beat up a kid Laura was seeing on the sly biker James Hurley, who is currently seeing Laura's best friend Donna Hayward. All this and the girl's body isn't even cold yet.

Huh? Don't give up! You don't have to know every little thing that's going on. There are a lot of crazy, zany, wacky happenings that don't make sense to the rest of us, but that's the fun of it. Few people understand what the eye-patched Nadine, who spends her time making noiseless curtain runners with cotton balls, has to do with anything. Or follow the FBI agent Dale Cooper's investigation by his listening to the lady with the psychic log, having dreams about midgets and tossing rocks at bottles to predict "who did it," but that's what draws people to it. Not only the fabulous cinematography and great beat of the music, but the mere confusion of what exactly is going on, is addictive as those donut's that are "a policeman's dream"

TWIN PEAKS

In Saturday's repeat of the season-ending cliffhanger everybody and anybody got creamed. Who's dead? Who did it? Was it a dream? Who cares? Leo Johnson found out about Shelley's affair with Bobby, so he tied her up while a bomb waited to explode beneath her. While she was hanging there, Leo went and tried to chop Bobby up with an ax, but in the process was shot through the window by Hank, who just got out of jail. Nadine, that nut, overdosed on pills. Laura's shrink got pounded on when he went to meet Laura, who was actually Madeliene, her lookalike cousin. Not to mention, Laura's father strangled one of the murder suspects. Then right at the end when agent Cooper figures Leo did it (or did he?), he gets shot.

The question is, do all good FBI agents wear bullet proof vests? Don't forget to find out Sept. 30. And once you get the lovers and archenemies straight, you may want to keep an eye on that chick, Madeliene, who's supposedly Laura's identical cousin. She may just be a "trap in the line." Whether it's a "keeper" or not, is another story.

Fateful combination creates Indigo Girls

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Some combinations are bound for success, and the Indigo Girls pegged it right, when they decided to team up during elementary school and continue a friendship that has brought them wide acclaim and access to people that they take very seriously.

Amy Ray and Emily Saliers said that they sang together in high school chorus and eventually were in a talent show together and "had a blast playing with one another." Their days at Emory University in Atlanta brought the adoption of the name "Indigo Girls."

"Amy found it in a dictionary, actually. She was just flipping through one day and said: 'Hey . . . how's this?'"

Seems not only the name but the music was determined to find a quality niche in an industry where sometimes anything can pass for art. Indigo Girls began their swift and sure rise with a vinyl debut in 1985 with the single "Crazy Game" and "Someone to Come Home" as the B-side, issued on their own Indigo label. An independently-released EP followed the next year, and Strange Fire was released in 1987 as their first full-length album (Indigo Label). Produced and engineered by John Keane, this limited-edition disc contained original versions of "Blood and Fire" and "Land of Canaan," later re-cut for Indigo Girls' first Epic album.

In 1988, they were signed to Epic Records and set out to make an album that was certified gold in Sept. 1989, seven months after its release. With Scott Litt as producer, the talents of Michael Stipe, R.E.M., Hothouse Flowers and Luka Bloom, Indigo Girls was cited as Best Debut Album of 1989, according to Steve Morse of the Boston Globe. Ray and Saliers criss-crossed the country on tour, opening for R.E.M. and Neil Young, among others. What more could a young duo hope for but . . . a Grammy — awarded to them for Best Contem-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 12

Spectrum Magazine

the art and literary magazine at the University of Massachusetts needs you!

Come to our general meeting at:
Room 168 Campus Center
On: September 18, 1990 7:30 to 8:30
or stop by our office at 406 Student Union Building or call us at 545-2240

HILLTOP/CROSSAN HEALTH CLUBS

- ★ Weight Lifting Facilties
- ★ Exercycles
- ★ Aerobics Classes
- ★ Special Interest Seminars

Registration for the fall semester will be held in Webster and Gorman from 7:00 to 9:30 on Monday and Tuesday, September 17 and 18. One $30 membership fee allows access to all facilities at both clubs.

(Check or money order at registration at registration please

Use Your Head:
Don't Neglect Your Body This Semester

WoNDeriNg AbOUt All tHE NoIse at tHe tOp of CLaRk HiLl RoAd?

OPEN FORUM Sept. 17 Campus Center Rm. 903 7-8 pm

The noise atop the hill is the

WILLIAM SMITH CLARK MEMORIAL
a new public space, with sculpture, that resulted from a design competition and project conducted in cooperation with our sister university in JAPAN! Hokkaido University

Clark was the first sitting president of UMass in the 1800s, then Ma. Agricultural College, and a leader in launching Hokkaido University, then Sapporo Agricultural College, in Japan.

The Memorial was designed by a recent UMass alumnus (while a student) Todd Richardson (MLA '87) in consultation with UMass Professor Emeritus of Landscape Architecture Barrie Greenbie and two landscape architects from Japan

It is slated to be completed in the late fall - join us at the dedication and reception in the spring.

• This is a sign for BOYS BE, a cafe in Japan named in honor of William Smith Clark. Now UMass will pay tribute to this outstanding leader.

Straight-forward music propels Miracle Legion

By ADAM McCLORY
Collegian Correspondent

Miracle Legion
Iron Horse
Sept. 13

"We just want to put out quality, real stuff that people can cry to and really enjoy," said Raymond Neal, lead guitarist of Miracle Legion. They exemplified this to the utmost Thursday night at the Iron Horse in Northampton.

Miracle Legion is Neal, singer Mark Mulcahy, drummer Spot and Dave Macaffery on bass. Band members ricocheted joyfully around the stage throughout their hour-and-40-minute set. Lyricist/singer/frontman Mulcahy began dancing on stage from the first — using an array of instruments ranging from the guitar to the harmonica to the flute, exciting the crowd with his wild antics.

The first song, with the use of Mulcahy's harmonica was enlightening: "Where are they now/How should I know?/I'm not ready to go." This might have been in reference to the band's semi-breakup before their major tour with the Sugarcubes in 1987. Two members left the band with only Mulcahy and Neal remaining.

"It was really difficult," Neal said. "Mark and I had to do more ourselves, but it was a fun tour regardless." He said these circumstances really helped the band and allowed them to become more versatile.

After the show, a friend of Neal's remarked about his ever-improving guitar skills. The sounds that flew from his equipment let the audience know he loved what he was doing and let them get into the show as well. At times, Neal got rambunctious, rattling off note after note while at other times he would play softly, quietly, drawing you in closer to listen to his world of sounds.

They invited their roadie Johnny, to jam during the last song of the set. Miracle Legion responded to the hoots and clapping of their appreciative audience with a quick one-song encore.

Later, I approached Mulcahy to ask him about his lyrics — instead, I received a laid-back response of "Would you like an Oreo?" as he ate from a freshly-opened bag. Apparently he was more intrigued by that bag of cookies right then than he was about discussing his lyrics.

Neal commented on a few issues concerning the band, regarding his younger days and his earlier band. Although his first band was more punk, musical influences consisted of the likes of Yes and Led Zeppelin. He wanted to dispel one rumor: "Most people thought we began by booking shows around New Haven. It wasn't like that. We were in groups previously, but we booked bands because nothing else was coming to town." As far as any material being released in the future was concerned, he said that some music was already cut, although they needed to find some time to record it in the studio.

David Brooks opened the show. He brought a solo acoustic act to the stage, which displayed his brilliant guitar skills in a short, four-song set.

Photo courtesy Rough Trade

Miracle Legion

The UMass Music Theatre Guild

is now accepting applications for:

Director Vocal Coach
Assistant Director Choreographer
Music Director

for our Fall, 1990 production of

Sweet Charity

to be performed November 29 through December 1 in Bowker Auditorium

Contact Kara Jenkins in the Guild Office 423 Student Union or call 253-3863. All applications due by September 17, 1990

■ Indigo Girls

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1)

porary Folk Group of 1989.

Strange Fire appeared as a re-issue last November with an exceedingly complete and gutsy version of the Youngbloods classic "Get Together." A subsequent video followed, in collaboration with Habitat for Humanity, a Georgia-based non-profit housing organization.

Ray said they found out about Habitat when they were at Emory through former President Carter.

"Come to think about it, I think we've always known something about it . . . it's just one of those things, 'ya know?"

But they don't dip their hand into everything — they say education is their primary goal.

"We want to make people aware of the world around them; about the resources that the world and life has to offer . . . I guess just general education," Ray and Saliers said.

"We're into the school systems, Planned Parenthood — things that give people a chance."

Touring for the Indigos has been a pleasure, according to them. "Yeah, we really enjoy it, audiences are great — really supportive," said Saliers.

They began playing smaller venues and have since moved to larger spots, but found themselves content during their summer stint with Joan Baez.

Saliers says in her spare time she loves to read and cites Faulkner, Flannery O'Connor and Toni Morrison as some of her favorite authors.

"I love listening to Elton John, 70s-type stuff, Dylan, Replacements, Sex Pistols . . . I don't know if I'd ever want to meet Dylan though. I kind of want to keep my image of him as is."

"Exercising, eating, making plane and automobile models and my record label Damon/Rough Trade takes up a lot of my time," Ray said. So far, the Ellen James Society is on that label, an alternative rock-n-roll band. "The label is sort of geared toward that kind of stuff," Ray reports.

What's up now

*Nomads*Indians*Saints* is their latest excursion into human loneliness, distress and triumph over life's little curve balls. Look for the following tracks — "Hammer and Nail," "1 2 3" (written by Ray and the Ellen James Society), "Pushing the Needle" and "The Girl with the Weight of the World in Her Hands."

Touring? Sure. They say they're beginning around October.

Maybe you'll hear their philosophy on life: "The world is screwed up in a lot of ways. There's a lot of pain and suffering, but there's also a certain beauty in that pain and suffering. We find hope in the humanness of things."

GET AHEAD AS A 1991 BSN GRADUATE.

Enter active duty immediately after graduation — without waiting for the results of your State Boards. If selected, you can enter a five-month internship at a major Air Force medical facility while enjoying:

- complete medical and dental care
- 30 days vacation with pay per year
- opportunities to advance

To apply, you'll need an overall 2.50 GPA. Get a jump on your future as an Air Force nurse officer. Call

USAF HEALTH PROFESSIONS 1-800-423-USAF

AIR FORCE

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT PROPOSAL DEADLINE

Deadline for submission of grant proposals for arts-related projects and events

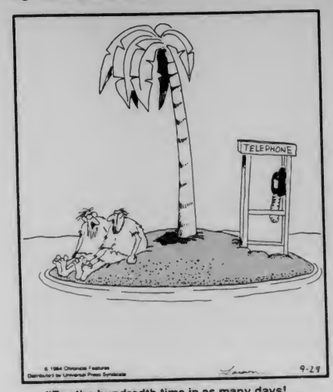
Friday, September 28

Guidelines and application forms are available at the Arts Council office and the Student Activities Office

UMass Arts Council 125 Herter 545-0202

NOTE: Grantwriting workshops will be held Sept. 26 and Oct. 9. Call the Arts Council for further information.

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON



"For the hundredth time in as many days! . . . I haven't got a quarter!"

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Pssst! Gabe! Over here!
How's about it?
No! Not again! I'm through with you! Go harass someone else!!
C'mon, Gabe, think of the times we've had! Just touch me, Gabe— touch me and remember...
Okay! But just Five Dollars!
Please state amount in increments of $250.00.
Instant Cash

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

LET'S START AT THE BEGINNING WHEN YOU ADD SOMETHING, YOU INCREASE WHAT YOU HAVE. YOU COMBINE
I DON'T WANT TO LEARN THIS! IT'S COMPLETELY IRRELEVANT TO MY LIFE!
THIS ISN'T IRRELEVANT. EVERYONE NEEDS TO KNOW THIS.
I DON'T! I CAN GET ALONG FINE WITHOUT MATH!
OH YEAH? WHAT DO YOU WANT TO BE WHEN YOU GROW UP? EVERY JOB REQUIRES SOME MATH.
THAT'S NOT TRUE! I'LL BE A... A...
A CAVEMAN! YEAH!
THAT'S NOT REALLY A JOB.

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

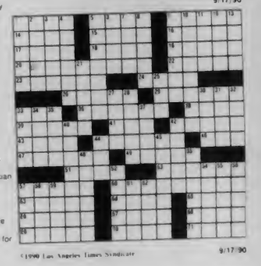
ACROSS
1 Spectacle
5 Stein
9 Haberdashery item
14 Mackerel's kin
15 Bhutan's location
16 Blue suit, sometimes
17 River to the Caspian
18 Fast time
19 Nest egg
20 Farewell
22 Ski resort
23 Actress Lansbury
24 Speaker's place
26 Lorelei, for one
29 Table wine
33 Sea dog
36 Most bizarre
38 Time
39 Wrong
41 Buck's mate
42 Part of EAP
43 Ritzy
44 Exchange witty remarks
46 Wapiti
47 Inuit
49 Edges
51 Sobriquet for Hemingway
53 Glacial epoch
57 Appears
60 Sinbad and Popeye
63 Fanfare
64 Cab
65 Turkey's neighbor
66 Jalopy
67 — Royale National Park
68 Staffer
69 Piano technician
70 Oboe
71 Smirk

DOWN
1 Diver's device
2 Wading bird
3 Borneo ape, for short
4 Certain howlers
5 Ship's tackle
6 On the deep
7 Encircle
8 Outmoded
9 Set upon
10 Starts a voyage
11 Farm yield
12 Fairy-tale character
13 Eight follower
21 Miscellanies
25 Statute
27 Norse epic
28 Broadway dazzle
30 Function
31 Inclusive expression
32 Word with suit or top
33 Ribbon
34 Coach Alonzo Stagg
35 Venture
37 A Pharaoh
40 Sailing companion
42 Betel palm
44 Jazz style
45 Ennobled
48 Ship's captain
50 Sequential
52 Up and about
54 High hideout
55 Quality
56 Ridge
57 Following
58 Pale tan
59 Anagram of lane
61 Luxury
62 Part of a cart

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

M	A	L	L		C	A	L	L	S		T	H	I	S
A	L	A	I		A	R	I	E	S		W	E	N	T
L	O	V	E	A	N	D	M	A	R	R	I	A	G	E
T	E	A	S	P	O	O	N		E	C	L	A	T
				E	E	R		B	A	B	E
R	E	C	E	S	S		A	L	M	A		P	E	A
A	L	O	G			C	R	O	A	T		E	N	S
D	A	Y	O	F	T	H	E	C	H	I	E	F	T	A	H
A	T	T	I	L	A	R	I	A	S			L	A	I	E
R	E	Y			T	I	M	S		S	M	I	L	E	S
			S	H	O	P		S	E	A
S	P	R	E	E			A	N	A	T	H	E	M	A
W	H	E	N		R	A	B	B	I	T		H	O	W	L	S
A	I	N	T		S	U	E	D	E		L	E	I	S
P	L	E	A		S	T	E	E	D		E	R	I	N

9/17/90



©1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

9/17/90

MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich	Roast Turkey Dinner
Sloppy Joe	BBQ Spareribs
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich	Garbanzo Vegetable Stew
Tofu Sloppy Joe	Roast Turkey Dinner

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Additional information is needed before signing contracts. Discussions will yield results. You love to wear beautiful things and want to buy new clothes. Balance your checkbook first.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Travel, legal maneuvers and distant affairs are favored. Trust yourself to handle things efficiently. Agreements you make now will last even if some people find them controversial.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20). Question any spur-of-the-moment purchases. Stay out of heated discussions about politics or morals. Idle speculation and gossip are best avoided. Romance deepens.

CANCER (June 21-July 22). Make the most of your time by organizing the busy days just ahead. Career matters will require meetings. A joint business venture could bring rich rewards. Add somthing nice to your home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The last of a series of financial discussions could aid your career. A legal settlement is possible. Be truthful about your feelings for someone. Other people will respond more affectionately.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your faith in certain aims is justified. By refusing to sacrifice your financial security in the name of excitement, you protect your loved ones. Some family members may disagree with your choices.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Do not let impulsiveness or extravagance go to your heads. Think twice about making an interesting purchase. Check the fine print before signing papers. Keep in touch with those at a distance.

SCORPIO (Oct.23-Nov. 21). Before plunging into a new business venture, apprise everyone involved of impending changes. Seek their opinions but stay out of pointless arguments. Make intelligent compromises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec.21). The atmosphere at home lightens when you make a special purchase for your housemates. A fascinating chance encounter could occur today. A close friend or relative could give your love life a boost.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Your personal magnetism is a big plus in both business and romance today. Career advancement or happy family news gives you cause for celebration tonight. Do not go overboard on spending.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Take advantage of an opportunity to enlist the aid of bank officials and financial backers in pursuing joint goals. Expressing your ideas to others helps you obtain information and advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Unusual developments center on creative financial ideas. Your recent socializing begins to pay off. You may have to put romance on the back burner while you concentrate in business.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Anna Regina Santiago
Copy Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Layout Technician.....Rick Seto
Photo Technician.....K.A. Burke
Production Supervisor.....Rick Seto
Typesetter.....Joanne Quimby
Production.....Nicole Dumas, Jennifer Arnold, Tania Ivany, Shawn Cotter

Minutemen beat Maine

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

Durkin standing all alone in the end zone. Marco Gabrielli kicked the extra point and UMass led 7-0, less than three minutes into the first quarter.

Wilkos stretched the lead to 14-0 early in the second quarter, tightroping 70 yards down the left sideline for a touchdown while the Maine secondary was chasing flanker Mike Tobin, and had its back turned.

Maine scored just before halftime on a field goal, following 31-yard run by Smith. UMass cornerback Matt Rajotte saved a touchdown on the play, hauling down Smith on the 13-yard line.

The Minutemen scored again late in the third quarter to take a 21-3 lead, on an almost identical play as their first touchdown. On Maine's 3-yard line, Wilkos faked a handoff to tailback John Johnson (22 rushes, 97 yards) then turned to his left and lofted a pass to 6-foot-3 tight end Ron Villone, who leapt up and backward, clutching the ball at the peak of his jump.

"Ron Villone mad a great, fantastic, incredible play," said Reid describing the catch. "From the moment it left Wilkos' hand it was overthrown. He reached up and caught both ends of the ball."

Maine's touchdown came with 7:20 left in the game, as DelRosso connected on a 9-yard pass with split end Mark Dupree.

Quick Kicks: The strangest play of the game didn't show up in the box score because it didn't count. Deep in Maine territory at the end of the third quarter, Johnson was stood up after a 4-yard gain. Though it appeared the play should have been blown dead, Maine safety Claude Pettaway stripped Johnson of the ball, and started upfield.

Pettaway seemed headed for a touchdown, but was overrun by Wilkos, who made a sensational diving tackle past midfield.

Field hockey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

From there, Nancy Philbrick netted her first of the season, and the Minutewomen went on to win 2-0.

UMass is playing solid offensive field hockey. They outshot JMU 22-4. If not for Knapp, the Minutewomen may have had five or six goals.

"We're getting a lot of corners, and we're creating a lot of opportunities," Hixon said. "They just have to keep their confidence up, because the goals are gonna drop. We have to keep doing the things that we do well, and touch the ball in front of the goal cage. "Everybody is trying to score so much that we're not relaxed when the ball comes into the circle and I think we're just a little bit over zealous."

The UMass defense has been nothing short of awesome to start the season. With Philippa Scott in net and Kerri Fagan stopping attackers from getting close to the goal, UMass possesses a defense that may be second to none.

In the three UMass wins, Scott has not allowed a goal, and in the one loss, she surrendered just one goal. Scott was not tested often against James Madison, but when she was called upon to make the big save, she did.

"I don't know if we had as much offensive power as we would liked to have had," McDonough said. "My attack is here on occasion, they play about 40 minutes of a 70 minute game, and you've got to get more pressuring than that. They played hard, and unfortunately that's the way the ball bounces. I'm not really upset with them. UMass is a nice team, they have a good program."

Do not forget, sometimes, it is better to be lucky than good, and right now the Minutewomen are a little of both.

UMass Classic

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

with four saves.

"We were too deliberate . . . we played too slow," Rudy said. "We lost to a good team, and a good coach."

On Saturday, the Reds displayed finer play, demonstrating why they are ranked nationally. In the first round of the UMass Classic, UMass shutout Cal. Berkeley 3-0.

Senior Robin Runstein scored unassisted 21 minutes into the first half. Twenty minutes later, Senior Sue Gaudette also scored unassisted. The scored remained 2-0 at the half.

MICHAEL'S
Billiard Room & Sports Bar
Featuring Monday Night Football—TONIGHT
- Five 9 ft. Championship Tables
- Your favorite sporting events on large screen TVs
- $1.00 Drafts in ice cold mugs
- 25 cent hot dogs
- Appetizer menu
- This Week: $1 Rolling Rock Bottles
- Thursday is Ladies' Night—Ladies play pool for half price on Thurs. Night

Formerly Changes Nightclub
256-8284
Amherst's Newest & Most Exciting Billiard Room is Here Now!
11 am to 12 Midnight Daily
21 and older
MICHAEL'S (Next to Hunan Garden Rest.)
Proper ID required

University of Wisconsin Platteville
Study in Seville Spain
Emphasis in Liberal Arts International Business
Courses available in Spanish and in English
Fluency in Spanish not required
All courses approved by UW-Platteville and validated on an official UW-Platteville transcript
$9635 per semester for Wisconsin & Minnesota residents.
$9875 per semester for non-residents.
Costs include Tuition and Fees Room and Board in Spanish homes Fieldtrips
All financial aids apply
For further information contact Study Abroad Programs 308 Warner Hall University of Wisconsin-Platteville 1 University Plaza Platteville, WI 53818-3099 (608) 342-1726

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER FOOD SERVICES
CAMPUS CENTER BOARD OF GOVERNORS
Presents
BE A STAR ON CBS!
FREE FOOD AND BEVERAGES!
"TEST DRIVE" IBM PS/2 COMPUTERS!
PRODUCT DEMONSTRATIONS, FREE SAMPLES, GAMES, ENTERTAINMENT!
ENTER SWEEPSTAKES TO WIN:
- AN IMPULSE OR AMIGO FROM ISUZU and A WALK-ON ROLE ON CBS' "The Young and the Restless"
- TWA TICKETS, CD PLAYERS & MORE FROM IBM
- MOUNTAIN BIKE FROM GEAR FOR SPORTS ON YOUR CAMPUS
Campus Fest™
DATE: SEPT. 17 –18
TIME: 10 AM – 4 PM
PLACE: SOUTH STUDENT UNION LAWN
FEATURING: IBM CBS ISUZU L'ORÉAL ORION HERSHEY'S GEAR FOR SPORTS SUNSHINE BISCUITS CALVIN KLEIN CLOROX BARNES-HIND AMERICAN EXPRESS NEWSWEEK

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

UHS NUTRITION WORKSHOPS
Concerned About Your Eating Behavior?
Find out if you or a friend have an eating disorder, and where to go for help.
When: Wednesdays 5:30 - 6:30 pm
Where: University Health Services, Room 304
Topic-Focused Series
When: Tuesdays, 4:00 - 5:00 pm
Where: UMass Campus Center Room 917 Open to anyone, drop-in October 2: What is an Eating Disorder-compulsive overeating, bulimia and anorexia?
October 9: Is My Eating Disorder Really Affecting My Health?
October 16: Balancing It All Out Nutritionally
Self-Help Group
When: Mondays, 7:00 - 8:00 pm
Where: UMass Campus Center Room 901
Confidential and Supportive Atmosphere in All Groups
No Charge No Registration Just Drop-In Programs Sponsored by University Health Services 549-2671 x 181.

BC beats out cross country teams in tri-meets

Eagles' depth downs men's team

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team finished second to Boston College Saturday in a tri-meet against BC and the University of Lowell. BC won the meet with 31 points.

UMass finished with 44 points, and Lowell had 56 points.

Div. 2 All-American Dave Cremin, of Lowell, led all runners over a difficult course to capture individual honors on the day.

He was followed closely by Jon Corso and Tom Degnan, both of UMass.

Cross country is, however, a team sport with the score calculated by the places of a team's top five runners. This is where BC's depth prevailed.

Paul Shea led the way for BC with a fourth place finish. He was followed by Keith Yuen, in fifth place, Jamahl Prince, in sixth place, and Tom Sheeran, in seventh place. After John Doherty of Lowell finished eighth, BC added a ninth place finish to seal the team victory.

Rounding out the top five for UMass, after Corso and Degnan, were Craig Cormier, in eleventh place, Gerry Squiers, in thirteenth place, and Pat Ryan, in sixteenth place.

Coach Ken O'Brien was particularly pleased with the performance of Craig Cormier, who is only a freshman and was running in his first collegiate meet.

"We have four or five freshman with that kind of ability," said O'Brien. "Any one of them can finish in the top five for us on a given day."

O'Brien pointed out that another freshman, John Rock, had been the team's third man at the two-mile mark before having to drop out of the race because of leg cramps.

The team's next meet is on Saturday against teams from Northeastern and Iona.

Minutewomen edged by seven points

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Correspondent

The women's cross country team may have lost on Saturday, but it was happy with its performance.

The Reds dropped a close contest to Boston College while defeating the University of Lowell. The final score was Boston College 24, UMass 31, and Lowell way behind with 89. The team with the lowest score wins.

"It was a good first race," said Becky Johnson, the top finisher for UMass. "People are getting in shape and we have good depth. We are pleased with our performance.

"Today was a good start. We just want to keep improving and not burnout. Hopefully we will do well [this season]."

Johnson led the way for UMass, coming in third overall behind Boston College runners Jen Rolfe and Diane Connolly. She finished the three-mile course in 18:55, just ahead of teammate Kelly Lijebald, who was fourth with a time of 19:13.

Kathy Holt, Michele St. Laurent, and Cathy Crocker rounded out the UMass top five, coming in seventh through ninth, respectively.

"The top five were outstanding," said LaFreniere. "They ran with a lot of heart and kept the meet very close."

LaFreniere was also pleased with the performance of Mo Meldrina, who finished 12th. She said she is looking for more improvement from Meldrina and the return of Dana Goldfarb (out with an ankle injury) to improve the team.

"Becky and Kelly did a great job," said coach Julie LaFreniere. "Both had strong finishes."

The next meet for UMass will be this Saturday at Springfield College.

Volleyball wins twice in tourney

By LIOR BEN-AHARON
Collegian Correspondent

The UMass women's volleyball team went to Brown University this past weekend for a two-day tournament and came away with an impressive third place finish.

Although the Minutewomen began the tournament with three losses, they were able to bounce back and earn a semifinal berth.

UMass began the tournament on Friday facing Harvard. After winning the first game 15-10, the Minutewomen "lost their confidence," said coach Carol Ford, and dropped the next three games by the tight scores of 13-15, 11-15, and 13-15.

Umass' next opponent was Brown University. The Minutewomen played an outstanding match, but were still overcome by the powerful Brown team and its awesome service game.

The final scores of the match were 11-15, 12-15, and 10-15.

While UMass lost admirably to the Harvard and Brown teams, both stocked with exceptional west coast players, they were embarassed by a tough Yale team.

The Minutewomen came out sluggish for their first match on Saturday against Yale and were routed in three games 0-15, 5-15, and 7-15.

At this point the volleyball team was 0-3, at the bottom of their bracket, and within one game of being eliminated from the tournament.

The young team, however, showed the poise of veterans and came back with two impressive wins.

Against Lehigh, UMass played outstanding and and won in four games by the scores 16-14, 7-15, 15-11, and 15-12.

The Minutewomen next played a strong Fairfield team and won an exciting five game match 6-15, 15-12, 15-7, 12-15, and 15-9.

This win put UMass into the semifinals against the University of Hartford.

By now UMass had already played three matches, each over two hours long, without any breaks in between.

"The kids were zapped" Coach Ford said.

In contrast, Hartford had been waiting to play for at least three hours and were obviously well rested. Hartford coasted to an easy victory 7-15, 7-15, and 0-15.

"We just ran out of gas," Ford added.

All in all, it was a good weekend for the women's volleyball team, and Coach Ford was full of praise for all her players.

"They work hard and have the best attitudes of any of the teams I've coached" Ford said.

Key performers for the Minutewomen were setter Angie Paolucci and captain Nancy Sullivan.

Paolucci was not slated to play this weekend, but she did come in and in the words of her coach, "She played out of her mind." Sullivan was named to the All-Tournament team.

The women's volleyball team will travel to Boston College on Tuesday.

Men's tennis sweeps UNH

Second win for Minutemen

By P. TERRY BRENNAN
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's tennis team displayed its skills Friday in front of the home fans as they dominated the courts at Upper Boyden, shutting out the University of New Hampshire 9-0.

All six singles players were victorious in straight sets as UNH managed to win only a handful of games. In addition, the Minutemen easily swept the three doubles contests, which were reduced to eight game "pro sets" (first team to win eight games).

The Minutemen came into the match confident after their successful season opener on Tuesday.

"I am happy with the way we're playing," said coach Manny Roberts.

UMass travels to face Connecticut on Tuesday.

Second Service: Roberts called on Tim Lipsky, a freshman from Sharon, Massachusetts, to start at number five singles. Lipsky responded with a convincing 6-0, 6-0 victory... Number three singles player Paul Audet was noticeably limping through the last few games in his victory. His status is unknown.

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE - CC 113 MON - THURS 8:30-4:30 FRI 8:30-2:00 • DEADLINE: 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

25 - CLUB Introductory meeting for older undergraduates. Brief discussion of activities. Socializing and refreshments Wednesday 9/19 8:00PM CC 174-176.

HOLIDAY SERVICES Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, warm traditional services held Chabad House call for further info 549-4094.

Pi SIGMA ALPHA Political Science Honor Society First general meeting Monday, Sept 17, 4:00 6th floor Thompson. Hope to see you there!

SCHOOL SPIRIT!!! If you have it, use it! Join Project Pride! Call Michael at 6-1331 for more info!

START THE SEMESTER by throwing up! Juggling Club meets today, 3-6 in CC174 or near the pond. Learn how today!

UNDERGRADUATE BUSINESS CLUB First general meeting! Tuesday, September 18 in SBA 120 at 7:15PM. All majors are welcome!!!

UPC MEETING this Tuesday and every Tuesday at 6:30PM. Call 545-2892 for details. Get involved with your concerts!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTN ALL MULTISPORT ATHLETES UMass triathlon Club wants u. General meeting Tuesday 18, Boyden Rm TBA.

CAPE VERDEAN STUDENT ALLIANCE meeting on September 18th, 1990 at 6:00PM in room 805-809 Campus Center. Everyone welcomed.

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends. 549-5961

INTERESTED in making Central Area a better place? Attend a Central Area Govt meeting. Monday 9PM in Baker B22

PHI ALPHA THETA National History Honors Society is accepting new members. Applications in history office 6th floor Herter due 9/26.

AUDIO

TV 20" COLOR, features $225 584-0224

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 T-BIRD AC/FM runs great must sell Tammy 549-2796

1978 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is. 549-5333 6-8PM

1982 DODGE 400 CONVERTIBLE, white with red interior 84,000 miles Very clean $2,800 546-3142

1983 SENTRA WAGON Excellent condition power steering air-conditioning AM/FM radio $1995/BO Call 549-0072

1984 SUBARU 67000 mi AM/FM asking 2300 days 1-448-7578 nites 1-298-4753

1984 4WD SUBARU STATION WAGON 95500mi good mechanical cond., some rust, all weather tires, 1989 muffler $2200/BO Janny 259-1318, 5-7PM Mon-Thurs

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great Excellent condition 50 MPG Must Sell $4500 586-7183

1988 FORD RANGER excellent condition 5 speed 40,000 miles $4,800 253-0770

CHEN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4057

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

4 BEDROOMS in a beautiful house in Amherst. Two bathrooms, fireplace in the living room, pool and tennis court $325.00 per room, on bus route, call Bruce at 256-1215

HELP! Beautiful spacious apartment for rent. A must see with new rug and appliances. A steal at $625.00/month, includes heat and hot water. Call anytime 549-1397

LARGE 3 ROOM APARTMENT at 177 N. Pleasant St., 1 mile from UMass. $436 per month includes heat. Leave message for Mina H. at 256-3457.

ROOM FOR RENT! Located on campus! Stop by 209 Sunset or call 549-2947

SINGLE ROOM house in N. Amherst 187.50 549-6650

FOR SALE

COMPUTER FOR SALE: 1982 Northstar Advantage 64K. Comes with word processor, general ledger program and database program $450 or best offer Call 542-5702

COMPUTERS Apple IIC Computer excellentcheap $400 268-7164

CUBE FRIDGE great for dorms Call Julie at 546-3987

DON'T PATRONIZE MONOPOLY at Textbook Annex(TA). Bought books already? Take them back to TA for refund! Will beat TA's price! Textbooks at $5 to $15 less for: Statistics 111, Stattle 140, Hist 151, Econ 305, Art His 100, HIRTA 493A Call Gordon Geikso at 546-3323 24hrs

PRINTER FOR SALE: 1982 Epson MX-100 $120 or best offer Call 542-5702

RCA 13" COLOR, 13" B/W TV's, Typewriter w/printer interface Moving sale Raymond 549-0480

SAX FOR SALE Bundy II Alto student model Great shape $500 or best offer 586-3100 ext 4364

SLEEP WITH THE BEST say goodnight to the rest full size futon and frame $150 we'll beat other bozos by 5% Metawampe Furniture 1-800-3-FUTON-1

FOUND

EYEGLASSES in a brown case in lot 44. If you lost them please call Kim at 545-3500

KEYS IN FRONT OF JQA - dorm/car/house keys on a silver ring Call Michelle at 6-0036

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

CAMPUS DESIGN AND COPY is hiring! applications available in 401 SUB Deadline 4:45PM Mon 9/17 graphic art experience helpful 545-2271.

CHRISTMAS, SPRING BREAK, SUMMER TRAVEL free Air couriers needed Worldwide cruiseship jobs. Call 1-800-682-7555 ext. F-1426

EARN $300 to $500 per week reading books at home Call 615-473-7440 Ext B-281

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard. Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

ESTABLISHED HARD ROCK BAND seeks male lead vocalist with presence and ambition. Have gigs! Leave message at 549-4768 or call 546-2838.

INNOVATIVE MARKETING PROGRAM needs sales rep for UMass Market. Excellent $$ opportunity. Local advertising experience necessary. Call Gary at 1-800-874-5005

LOOKING FOR a fraternity, sorority or organization that would like to make $500-$1000 for a one week on-campus marketing project must be organized and hardworking. Jennifer 800-592-2121

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required. Mornings 7-8am. Good pay. 7days/week. 253-7009 Evenings.

NO NUKES! Work for it at Greenpeace Action! Call Jenny 549-0607 EOE

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! Call Sam 256-6434 40-60/day

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS Sept 17 - Oct 29, Mon 7-9pm $50.00 Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening, TOEFL Language Pacifica 549-5065

LEARN HUNGARIAN from native teacher! Call Raymond at 549-0480

INTERNSHIP

RECEIVE CREDITS LEARNING the music/entertainment industry. Rack-A-Disc needs interns for fall/spring 20 hrs/wk. 6 credits. 586-9900

LOST

GREY POUCH lost in CC. Reward for return of contents 1-536-3719

GOLD RING cash reward sentimental value-leave message for Lynda 538-2931 after 4:00PM

ONE TURQUOISE AND SILVER BRACELET between Marcus Student Union Thompson Call Anna 256-0569

PANASONIC WALKMAN reward call 549-5997

PERSONALS

KERRY FROM CHICAGO: I miss air juggling with you! Let's get together Cash in cluster office MWF AM Jim

NEAL S. Have a wonderful Birthday! XOXO Adina

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA FALL SPECIAL small cheese $3.50 large cheese $6.99 2 toppings only $1 more must mention this ad! 549-8073 549-8086

RIDE WANTED

RIDE NEEDED to Long Island for Wed Sept 19 or Thurs will share expenses Leslie 546-2704

ROOMMATE WANTED

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1224

SUNDERLAND. Female to share 2 bdrm apt 250 + Close to bus line 665-1135.

SERVICES

STUDY ABROAD IN AUSTRALIA information on semester, summer, and internship programs. All run under $6000 Call Curtin University 1-800-878-3696

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St Northampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course starts 9/10 $195 Adv course starts 9/17 - $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 $360 For further information call 549-8401

FRATERNITIES, SORORITIES, CAMPUS ORGANIZATIONS highly motivated individuals -travel free plus earn up to $3000+ selling spring break trips to Cancun-South Padre Island-Orlando/Daytona Beach 1-800-258-9191

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S Deerfield 10 mins from Amherst Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr, typing $2/pg. 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg. Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications, 256-8373.

WORDPERFECT- fast and reliable, spellcheck, call Tim 546-6472

SPORTS

Defense cages Bears; UMass wins 21-10

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Defense is winning football games for the University of Massachusetts.

10,431 sun-dried fans in McGuirk Alumni Stadium Saturday saw the Minutemen beat Maine, 21-10. The game was nearly a replay of last week's game-saving defensive effort at Holy Cross, as UMass held its opponent to 10 points for the second game in a row.

The Black Bears punted 11 times. Their lone touchdown came in the fourth quarter, when UMass led by 18 points. Of 17 third downs, the Black Bears converted one.

The statistic that will end up on UMass coach Jim Reid's refrigerator door, however, is tailback Carl Smith's harmless 88-yard, 18-carry bottom line. Smith had rushed for 429 yards and five touchdowns in his previous two games against UMass.

"I'm tremendously proud of our football team, and I emphasize team," said Reid. "Our defense was absolutely terrific. They played aggressive and intense."

"The defense is the heart," said UMass linebacker Mario Perry, who had six tackles, most of them on Smith.

Succinctly put by UMass quarterback Gary Wilkos: "I love UMass defense."

The win dropped Maine to 0-2 under first-year coach Kirk Ferentz. UMass' record stands at 1-0-1, including last week's 10-10 tie at Holy Cross. UMass in 1-0 in the Yankee Conference. Reid returned to the four-man rush that was effective against Holy Cross, and started Matt Tulley, out last week with a sore shoulder, at middle linebacker. Tulley was one of five UMass players with seven tackles or more, tallying nine, including two for losses.

With Jerome Bledsoe out of the offense, meanwhile, UMass struggled in spots, but still took advantage of several Maine mistakes.

On the first play of the game, Smith and quarterback Jeff DelRosso (12-39, 168 yards) fumbled a handoff on their own 28-yard line, setting up a UMass score 6 plays later.

Wilkos faked a handoff to fullback David Mitchell, then faked an option rollout to the right side, then hit tight end Bill

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

Photo by Carrie Wyeth

Defensive lineman Steve Brothers had nine tackles Saturday, as the UMass defense stifled Carl Smith and the Maine Black Bears 21-10 at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Temple surges past men's soccer

Two quick goals late in game down Minutemen

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

Losses like this one hurt.

For 78 minutes, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team held Temple scoreless. It seemed certain that Brett Anthony's first half goal would be enough to give the Minutemen their second Atlantic 10 Conference win and their first win ever over Temple.

Three short minutes later, Temple had taken command, courtesy of goals by freshmen Andrew Craig and Keith Taylor. Those two tallies held up for the final nine minutes, giving Temple a 2-1 come-from-behind win Saturday afternoon at Upper Boyden field.

The loss put UMass at 1-2 in conference play and 2-2 overall.

Both coaches had their own explanation as to why momentum suddenly swung the Owls' way. Temple coach John Boles said that the Owls' move from four midfielders to three forwards late in the second half gave them the offensive punch they had lacked for much of the game.

UMass coach Jeff Gettler was more brutal in his assessment.

"We gave the game away," said Gettler afterwards. "We can't afford to do that. We sat back, we didn't pressure the ball, and they took advantage of it."

Temple struck so abruptly that one was left amazed and bewildered as to just what happened. Off an indirect kick, Craig sent a high cross zipping toward the left post. Taylor leapt up and headed it past UMass keeper Jon Gruber, beating him cleanly at 78:54. For both players, the goal provided career firsts.

Three minutes later, a Temple corner kick from the left was headed high into the air in front of the goalmouth. Gruber came out of the net to grab the ball out of the air, but the ball was headed again, and Gruber found himself trapped in 'No Man's Land,' a situation in which the keeper finds his/herself out of position and unable to fight through the scrambling players to regain position. Craig took advantage of UMass' bad luck, heading the ball into the net to put Temple up for keeps at 81:54. "UMass played well today," credited Temple coach Boles. "They should do well this year."

Massachusetts came out on fire in the first half. They played fundamentally sound soccer, making good passes and getting several scoring chances early on. But only one of those chances translated into a goal.

Anthony cashed in for UMass at 34:55, heading a Peter McEvoy cross past Temple goalie Pat Kivlin. The play started off an indirect kick. UMass midfielder Dan Lawrence nudged the ball over to McEvoy, who let a cross fly at the Temple goal. Anthony broke in from the right, and sent the ball home.

At the same time, the defense weathered several strong offensives by Temple forwards Itzahk Assor and Marinus Leidelmeyer.

Gettler singled out McEvoy, Darren Stone, and Matt Bearce as being outstanding on defense.

Gruber was exceptional in goal, robbing Leidelmeyer of goals at least twice. He finished with six saves for the afternoon, few of which were routine.

"It's a tough learning experience," said a disappointed coach Gettler of the loss. "It's a whole lot tougher to play well and lose than it is to play poorly and win."

Gettler added that he was interested in how the team would react to the loss. "I hope it hurts a lot - it could make us a lot better" he said.

Collegian Photo by Toni Sandys

Senior forward Margie Jaede breaks up Kim Brady's attempted header in Saturday's 3-0 win over Cal. Berkeley.

Field Hockey beats JMU

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

After the University of Massachusetts field hockey team won its third game of the season Saturday afternoon 2-0 over James Madison University, coach Pam Hixon said, "We're winning ugly."

For the second game in a row, the Minutewomen waited until the final 20 minutes to win the game. Actually, Saturday, they waited for the final 10 minutes to put JMU away.

Freshman forward Holly Hockenbrock scored her first collegiate goal to put the Minutewomen ahead 1-0. It was a goal that Hockenbrock will remember for a long time, because not only did it give the Minutewomen the lead, but it was a goal that clearly should not have gone in.

Hockenbrock came barreling in down the right side, and slapped a shot from about 10 yards out. JMU goalie Laura Knapp went to kick the ball away, but she slipped and the ball went right by her into the net. If ever there was a fluke goal, this was it.

"It seems like we always deserve a better fate than we get," said James Madison caoch Dee McDonough. "She [Knapp] went to play the ball and it bounced, and went underneath her. It was just a misjudgment, we're not used to playing on a grass surface."

"The goal was lucky," Hixon said. "The goalie fell down, and thank God she did, or I don't think we ever would have scored."

After Hockenbrock scored, JMU came right back down the field and earned themselves two penalty corners, neither of which they could convert.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

Reds split pair in UMass Classic

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

For University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy, this was the one that got away.

"This was the best tactical team we've faced yet," he said of William and Mary.

In the second heat of the UMass-U.S. Express Classic, UMass dropped a 1-0 decision to William and Mary yesterday at Upper Boyden. This was the Reds' first loss this season.

"It really could have gone either way," William and Mary coach John Daly said. He said he was impressed with the Reds' skills and ability.

The first half was characterized by constant volleys consisting of smart taps and one-touch passes. Midfield action was intensely played, with evenly won and lost possession.

"I knew we'd have to fight tooth and nail the entire game if we wanted to score," Daly said.

Scoring did not occur until well ino the second half. There were a few fast breaks and scrambles in the goal box, but a cornerkick, taken in the last five minutes of regulation, decided the game.

Senior Jenn Tepper took the corner, sending the ball in a picture-perfect arc into the box where it made a short bounce. Junior Grace Martindell swung a shin at the ball and it met the the bottom left corner of the net.

Tepper had two assists for the Classic series, and one goal and three assists for the season. Martindell completed her second goal for the Classic series, her only scoring for the season.

"We needed to stick to our type of play, which is move the ball fast," Daly said. "We were able to play our game."

William and Mary are now 2-2 for the season.

"They beat us at our strength," Rudy said in reference to the cornerkick. "They did to us what we were trying to do to them."

Both teams finished the game with four cornerkick opportunities. UMass completed five shots on goal, as William and Mary had six. UMass committed 16 fouls, while William and Mary had 12.

Senior Kathy Carter had eight saves for William and Mary, her second shutout of the season. Carter has 33 saves for the year, allowing only five goals.

Freshman Briana Scurry allowed her first goal of the season against William and Mary. She finished the game

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 10

WEATHER	EDITORIAL	ARTS
Sunny today, 58 - 63 degrees. Tonight, clear and chilly, low will be 32 degrees.	Meredith O'Brien laments the poor choices in 1990's gubernatorial race. Page 5.	Regain lost innocence with Schoolhouse Rock and UMass Theater Guild. Page 7.

Anti-CLT headquarters created in Amherst

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The Democratic Town Committee voted recently to turn a local building into the headquarters for the opposition of Citizens for Limited Taxation petition next week.

These new headquarters will allow members of the Student Government Association to fight the petition more directly as presently state legal campaign regulations restrict the SGA from fighting the CLT petition from campus buildings.

The CLT petition, if passed, will rollback state tax revenues to 1988 levels. The petition will appear as question number three on the November 6 ballot.

"We feel CLT would bring economic chaos to the Commonwealth," said John Hite, chairman of public relations for the committee. "It will destroy human and social services we all rely on."

Hite said the headquarters will provide information to the public about question number three and Democratic candidates. He encouraged students to join as staff.

"CLT is a meanspirited attempt to control spending that will hurt poor people, students, and the elderly," Hite said.

Projections on the impact of the CLT petition on the University of Massachusetts indicate a $25-35 million cut in state allocations. University administrators would be forced to either raise tuition by $2,000 per student next semester or to lay off 750-1290 Umass employees in January.

The petition will also devastate the state programs, according to the Massachusetts Teachers Association. A rollback would eliminate local and education aid to cities and towns, and funding for human and social services. The MTA projects that 50,000 of the 75,000 state employees will lose their jobs if CLT passes.

The building being rented by the Democratic Town Committee is what used to be the Amherst Chrysler-Plymouth dealership on Triangle Street across from the Amherst Baybank. Student Trustee Angus McQuilken said the new headquarters will provide a place from which students legally can centralize the campaign against CLT.

Since the SGA is legally a state agency, they cannot use any funds, office supplies and equipment, or building space for campaigning purposes in accordance with state campaign law.

"Now we have a central place to hold meetings, run activities such as postering, leafleting, and to store materials," McQuilken said.

The SGA is also approaching the Amherst Chamber of Commerce, campus unions and the Democratic Town Committee for donations to ensure that the student fight against the CLT petition can be legally maintained.

"People should vote no on CLT for two reasons," McQuilken said. "If they are affiliated with this University, then they should vote no out of self-defense.

"If they are a member of the Commonwealth, they should [vote no] out of common sense. CLT will destroy the fiscal stability and social fabric of the whole state."

A meeting for CLT opposition will be held tonight at UMass.

Iraq's papers scornful

European community to toughen embargo

Saudi Arabia (AP) — Two Kuwaiti men trying to flee their occupied homeland were seized today by Iraqi troops, refugees reported, and their sobbing wives and daughters were forced to cross into Saudi Arabia without them.

In Iraq, state-run newspapers today heaped scorn on President Bush for his broadcast warning the Iraqis that their president, Saddam Hussein, is leading them into war. One newspaper's headline read: "Shut up Mr. Bush."

"Saddam Hussein tells you that this crisis is a struggle between Iraq and America. In fact, it is Iraq against the world," Bush said in his speech, aired Sunday on Iraqi television.

Standing in front of his Oval Office desk with the American flag behind him, Bush urged Iraq to withdraw its troops from Kuwait, which it overran on Aug. 2.

Iraqi authorities responded that Bush's statement was full of "lies and contradictions." They said the U.S. President aimed to be "dictator of the world."

Thousands of protesters gathered in the streets of Baghdad's capital after Bush's broadcast, chanting "Death to Bush! Death to America!"

International opposition to Iraq, however, appeared to pick up strength.

Britain said today it would expel the Iraqi military attache and three aids from the embassy in London. Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd indicated the Home Office would be announcing further sanctions against Iraq later in the day.

Twelve member nations of the European Community, meeting today in Brussels, Belgium, are expected to consider new retaliatory measures against Iraq and more aid for countries hurt by the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with that country.

Dutch Premier Ruud Lubbers said today he expected European nations to agree on toughening the economic embargo against Iraq within the next two days. But he said the Netherlands has no immediate plans to expel Iraqi diplomats in retaliation for Iraq's intrusion into diplomatic premises in Kuwait last week.

AP Photo

Saudi-Kuwait Border — Distraught over the seizure of her husband, a Kuwaiti woman weeps inside her car Monday after she arrived by herself at the Saudi-Kuwait border.

Umass administrators drive for escort service

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Administrators at the University of Massachusetts — and most colleges — tend to be nearly nameless entities. Sure, almost everyone knows the president-chancellor is Joe Duffey but who is, say, the director of public safety or the executive director of housing services?

Now students here who use the Escort Service for jaunts around campus after dark will be able to meet administrators, staff and hopefully faculty members, serving as chauffeurs for the fleet of three vehicles shuttling students across campus.

Arthur L. Hilson, director of public safety — now you know — said he decided to start driving for the Escort Service, a program run out of his department, at least twice a week in order to hear students' concerns.

"I developed this out of my need to be on the frontline, to hear it up from students rather than filtered through the system," he said, adding that his schedule prohibits most contact with students.

The Escort Service, which operates with two sedans and a van from sunset to 3 a.m., is operated by three drivers. Hilson said the service receives 50-80 calls a night. The service is used mostly by women traveling between buildings on campus.

Last fall the service was nearly shut down because of a lack of funds but was restored after the department received complaints from the campus community. Several members of the community including President-Chancellor Duffey's wife, Anne Wexler, donated money to aid the service. Hilson said a small amount of money will be saved by using administrative labor but he stressed that the focus was on meeting students rather than money.

"I hope to get an entire group of faculty, staff and administrators working together to help students," he said. "I would like to have administrators and others that are willing to go the extra yard — although most of them already do."

Hilson has signed up two administrators to the program, Executive Housing Director Joseph Zannini and Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin.

"I am here for the students and I love working with students," said Zannini. "I'm using this as a way to get around a big institution bridging gaps between students and departments."

GEO to vote on fee waiver

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization will vote this Thursday and Friday on a proposal by the administration that all tuition-waived graduate employees and interns recieve full curriculum fee waivers for the fall semester.

In negotiations with GEO yesterday, the administration proposed that all waived teaching assistants, resident assistants, teaching associates and interns receive the $175 fee waived for the fall semester.

Administrators added that fee waivers for the spring semester will be determined by financial need. "This is a great victory for us," Renee Heberle, a spokesperson for GEO said. "This is what we asked for in our original talks with the administration."

Heberle said graduate employees should file financial aid forms by October 15. She added that the administrators said they are willing to negotiate fee waivers for the spring semester in the following cases and further negotiation will take place for:

- Language that insures foreign graduate students and other special cases will be able to apply for financial aid through a committee which will look at the unique cases of need.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Women's Forum

Incest Support Group —The Counselor/Advocate program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a support group for adult survivors of incest. Meetings are from 6 to 7:30 p.m., starting October 15th through December 17th.

Women who participate must be in individual therapy, and should not be abusing drugs or alcohol. The group is free and confidential and open to women from the 5 College area and the community at large. For more information and to register for the group, contact the C/A Program at 545-0800.

Rape Support Group —The C/A program is also offering a 10 week support group for adult survivors of rape. The group will begin meeting on Tuesday nights from 7 to 8:30 through December 18th. Women should not be abusing drugs or alcohol to participate. The group is free, confidential and open to all women.

For more information contact the C/A Program at 545-0800.

Self-defense course —"How to survive your social life," a self-defense course for women is being sponsored by the Everywoman's Center. The course is taught by Chris Wings, co-founder of the recently established Flying Tiger Martial Arts in Greenfield, MA.

The course will emphasize acquaintance rape avoidance and information sharing along with mental, verbal, and physical self-defense techniques. The course will meet for 6 consecutive Wednesdays, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. beginning September 19th at the UMass Campus Center.

Women of all ages, abilities and levels of physical fitness are encouraged to enroll in the course. Call 545-0883 for more information.

Brown Bag Lunch Series offers provocative issues and stimulating speakers for faculty, students and staff. One credit is available for students who come to every program to participate. For more information, contact the Women's Studies Office.

The dates are September 19th, 26; October 3, 17, 24, 31; November 7, 14, 28; and December 5 in Campus Center 904-908.

Post-Abortion Support Group — An eight week, facilitated, pro-choice, Post-Abortion Support Group will begin meeting in late September. The group is open to all women who have had abortion/s, either recently or in the past, and who would like to work through the experience more fully. For more information, call the Everywoman's Center at 545-0883.

Necessities/Necesidades has been awarded a 1990 IOLTA grant of thirteen thousand and eight dollars from the Massachusetts Bar Foundation to support their program of legal advocacy for battered women.

Necessities/Necesidades is an organization that provides emergency shelter, a 24-hour crisis hotline, advocacy, peer counseling and support groups for battered women and their children.

Battered women can contact Necessities/Necesidades twenty-four hours a day at 586-1125 from 9 to 5, Monday through Friday.

Womanshelter/Companeras, a shelter providing services to battered women and their children in the Greater Holyoke-Chicopee Area, needs volunteers for the 24-hour hotline, children's program, advocacy, and fundraising in the office.

Training sessions begin Saturday, September 22, 1990. For further information please call Edie Jennings Wigfall Monday through Friday, between 8 and 4 p.m. at 538-9717.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

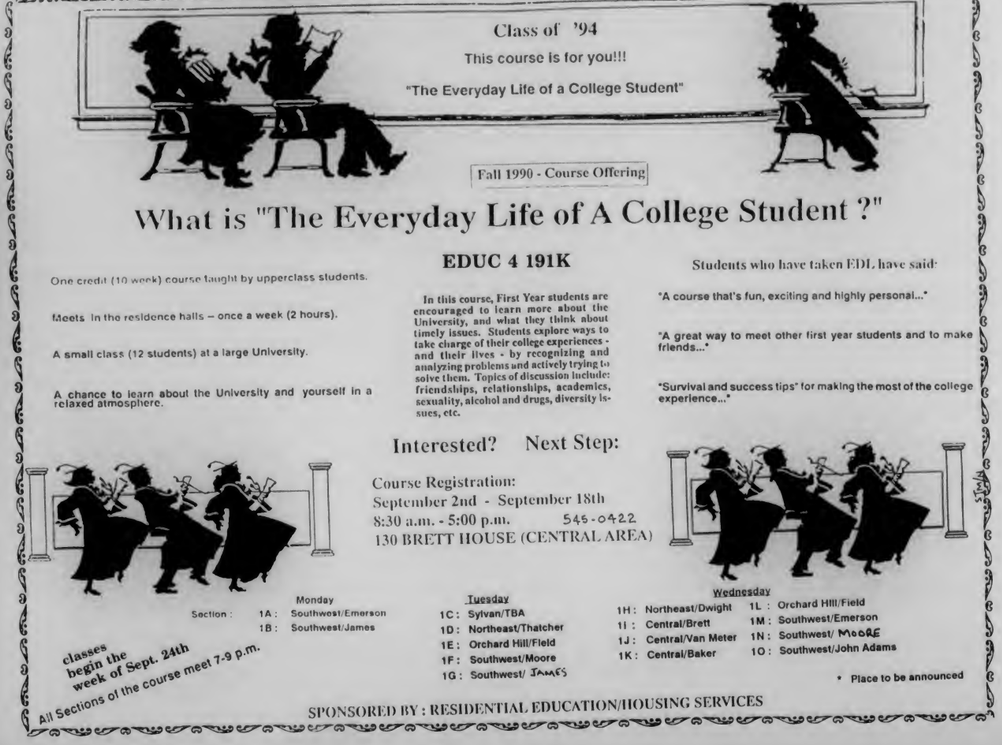
STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago, Chris Mather
News Editor
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Mark Truskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.



Class of '94
This course is for you!!!
"The Everyday Life of a College Student"
Fall 1990 - Course Offering
What is "The Everyday Life of A College Student ?"
One credit (10 week) course taught by upperclass students.
Meets in the residence halls – once a week (2 hours).
A small class (12 students) at a large University.
A chance to learn about the University and yourself in a relaxed atmosphere.
EDUC 4 191K
In this course, First Year students are encouraged to learn more about the University, and what they think about timely issues. Students explore ways to take charge of their college experiences - and their lives - by recognizing and analyzing problems and actively trying to solve them. Topics of discussion include: friendships, relationships, academics, sexuality, alcohol and drugs, diversity issues, etc.
Students who have taken EDL have said:
"A course that's fun, exciting and highly personal..."
"A great way to meet other first year students and to make friends..."
"Survival and success tips" for making the most of the college experience..."
Interested? Next Step:
Course Registration:
September 2nd - September 18th
8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 545-0422
130 BRETT HOUSE (CENTRAL AREA)
Section: Monday
1A: Southwest/Emerson
1B: Southwest/James
Tuesday
1C: Sylvan/TBA
1D: Northeast/Thatcher
1E: Orchard Hill/Field
1F: Southwest/Moore
1G: Southwest/ JAMES
Wednesday
1H: Northeast/Dwight
1I: Central/Brett
1J: Central/Van Meter
1K: Central/Baker
1L: Orchard Hill/Field
1M: Southwest/Emerson
1N: Southwest/ MOORE
1O: Southwest/John Adams
* Place to be announced
classes begin the week of Sept. 24th
All Sections of the course meet 7-9 p.m.
SPONSORED BY: RESIDENTIAL EDUCATION/HOUSING SERVICES

LOCAL

AP Photo

The Pentagon announced yesterday Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Mike Dugan was fired one day after he remarked about U.S. plans for a massive air strike against Baghdad in an interview.

Affordable housing policy proposed

Plan for University, community to reach low-priced housing goal

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

State Representative Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst) and University of Massachusetts Vice-Chancellor Dennis Madson presented what they called "a policy breakthrough" to the Amherst Select Board to provide an incentive for Amherst and surrounding towns to work with the University for low-priced housing.

The Regional Affordable Housing Plan was the result of a study to produce a set of recommendations regarding affordable housing policy in Massachusetts. State law mandates that at least 10 percent of all housing in each community adhere to affordable housing standards. The new policy allows affordable housing for the academic community to be considered part of the 10 percent goal.

Under the previous law only affordable housing paid by public funds qualify for the 10 percent goal. "The new provision is a tool to help the community with it's affordable housing goals," said Rosenberg, who chairs the Special House Commission on Affordable Housing Needs in Higher Education.

According to Rosenberg, the new policy is useful to the area since achieving the 10 percent goal will allow Amherst access to additional state funds and a higher ranking for state grant eligibility. "If the University had built more affordable housing, Amherst would not have received credit toward the 10 percent goal," said Madson. "Now the University will be able to help meet affordable housing guidelines."

The new policy will also benefit surrounding communities if they work with the University to provide additional affordable housing. "If other communities aggressively pursue affordable housing they will receive credit toward their 10 percent goal and they are more likely to receive state grants," said Rosenberg.

"It's a win, win, win situation," he said. "The town, the surrounding community, and the University all benefit from the policy. The new policy allows more participation in creating regional affordable housing and an opportunity for everyone to win."

Rosenberg said Amherst has been "particularly aggressive" in pursuing its 10 percent goal. "Currently Amherst is a tiny fraction over its goal — that's why Amherst has benefitted in scarce grants for the past few years," he said.

In other issues, the Select Board contemplated appealing the population assessment of the Census Bureau, though Board member Barry Del Castilho claimed "no action was required."

Amherst Town Meeting member Vince O'Connor informed the Board that a number of errors and discrepancies existed including miscalculations of University students in the Greek areas and of residents living in the fringes of Amherst.

According to 1989 census statistics, Amherst's population has decreased by 1,000 residents since the 1985 census despite the addition of 300 to 400 new housing units.

O'Connor expressed concern over the implications of the census since Massachusetts could stand to lose a Congressional seat this year.

Police break up two Southwest brawls

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

University Police responded early Saturday morning to a report of a large disturbance and fight outside Patterson Residence Hall arrested two men for disorderly conduct.

David M. Dove, 19, of Conway and Brian W. Brueggemann, 18, of North Grafton were arrested.

Police were also called earlier that night to John Adams on a report of a disturbance and fight. Richard J. Viscay Jr., 19, of East Boston, was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

Other details about the incident were not available at press time.

The Civil Disorders Division of the police department is investigating an alleged indecent assault and battery committed against a woman the first week of school in an upper Central Residence Hall. Police said the woman reported the incident Saturday night.

In other University Police reports:

ARRESTS

- Police arrested two 19-year-old Boston residents Friday night for being minors carrying alcohol. John W. Earley and Matthew Rose were arrested in Lot 50.
- Police also arrested two other 19-year-olds Friday night for alcohol violations: James M. Brennen, of Taunton, and Nelson C. Couto, also of Taunton, were arrested in Lot 32 for being minors in possession of alcohol.
- Donald M. Boudreau, 19, of Hopkington, was arrested Friday night for being a minor in possession of alcohol.
- Michael Paul Pierson, 18, of Westboro, was arrested early Saturday morning in Lot 50 for possession of a Class D substance, marijuana.
- Christopher Gampel, 19, of Lawrence, was arrested Sunday morning in Lot 22 Access for operating under the influence of alcohol and failure to stay within marked lines.
- Andrew S. LeBlanc, 19, of Springfield, was arrested Sunday morning in Kennedy Drive for operating under the influence of alcohol and taking a U-turn where prohibited.
- Michael B. Whitney, 20, of Dudley, was arrested Sunday morning in Kennedy for using the motor vehicle license of another person.

Man raped in SW lot

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

University Police are investigating the alleged rape of a non-University of Massachusetts 21-year-old man by another man living in a Southwest Residence Hall in a Southwest parking lot.

Joseph Mutua Makau, 27, of 1901 John Quincy Adams Residence Hall, was arrested early Saturday morning and charged with rape. Police said Makau does not have any University

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Five College Inc. to mark 25 years with lectures

By KATHY LEWIECKI
Collegian Correspondent

In celebration of its silver anniversary, Five College Inc. will hold a series of seven lectures throughout the school year by selected faculty members from the five colleges.

Twenty-five years ago, with the incorporation of Hampshire College to the Pioneer Valley, Five Colleges, Inc. was established. The group was known until 1965 as Four Colleges Inc.

The group is a collaboration of staff and administrators from the five colleges. It sponsors faculty lectures and student cultural events throughout the five college area.

The seven lectures are "designed to highlight current research being done in the sciences, humanities, and arts by the faculty of the five colleges," according to Carol Angus, spokesperson for the program.

Each lecture is being hosted by a member of the Board of Directors, which is composed of the presidents from each of the colleges, Angus said, including an additional representative from University of Massachusetts, Provost O'Brien, and Lorna M. Peterson, the newly-appointed Five College Coordinator.

Tonight at 8 p.m., Professor John Mack Faragher, chair of the history department at Mount Holyoke College, will speak at the college on the subject of the reshaping of North America's landcape during the 18th and 19th centuries.

Other anniversary events planned for this year include a January symposium on the art of documentary filmmaking. It will focus on the Civil War in American History.

There will also be three special music performances in February, including an 800-member Five College Choral Festival scheduled for students retuning from winter vacation.

The events are funded by a $10,000 grant from the Braitmayer Family Foundation.

AIDS program may close

Budget cuts threaten residential treatments

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

Chesed House, the only residential treatment facility for persons with AIDS or ARC in Western Massachusetts, may have to close its doors due to a state funding cut.

Begun in 1987 by the Jewish Family Service of Springfield per the state's request, Chesed House has served 103 resident patients over the past three years. The program provides a place for patients to live independently while receiving medical treatment and having access to individual, group and family counseling.

During the past year the program was forced to double its bed capacity while having 30 percent of its funding cut because of patients who were transferred from programs in Eastern Massachusetts. The program was able to obtain a private grant to cover expansion costs for the new patients. However, Chesed House's operation is supported solely by state funds.

According to a letter from the Commissioner of the Department of Public Health: 'Since the Department's resources are limited, the funds available for residential programs will be used to support those proposals ranked above the proposal for Chesed House."

Sandra Chalnick, executive director of JFS, said that she was not given any reason why Chesed House had a lower ranking, and that she was "curious as to the underlying considerations [for the denial of state grants] which may be of a highly political nature."

The program must now go through an official appeal process in order to attempt to get funds restored. The first step of this process is a debriefing before the state grants committee, which is scheduled for September 26.

If the program cannot get its funds restored, it will have until January 1, 1991 to relocate the patients currently under its care. It will also have to refer 115 Western Massachusetts residents now on Chesed House's waiting list to facilities in Eastern Massachusetts. "Patients that are dying shouldn't be treated like pingpong balls that can be bounced around the state," said Chalnick. "For many of the residents, this is the first safe place that they could call home."

DELTA UPSILON
invites all university men to
OPEN RUSH

We offer:
• 24 hour kitchen
• Catered food
• Superior social life
• Cable TV
• Lifelong friends
• University and Greek area overall athletic champions
• Voted Best Philanthropy and Most Improved House

Rush Dates
Sept. 17 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 18 Jam DU it. 8:00pm
Sept. 20 • Special Events • 7:00 pm
Sept. 21 Barbecue 5:00 pm
Sept. 24 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 25 Informal —all day
Sept. 26 Jam DU it. 7-9:00pm

MAP
Northeast Area
Grad tower
Totman Gym
AY

ALL UNIVERSITY MEN
DELTA CHI
FRATERNITY
OPEN RUSH TONIGHT
Rush Dates:
Tue. 9-18, 8-10pm Hoop & V-Ball
Thurs. 9-20, 6-9pm Beach Party BBQ
Delta Chi
118 Sunset Ave
call 549 6505 for rides & info
ΔX

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at UMass in Amherst presents an evening with Former U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Economic and Social Council and Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs; currently a Resident Scholar at American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research in Washington, D.C.
DR. ALAN KEYES
speaking on

"SELF-GOVERNMENT AND PEACE:
How Israel Can Survive
the Challenge of Palestinian Rights"
Tuesday, September 18, 7:30pm
Campus Center Auditorium/UMASS
$3-General Public Free for Students
This event is made possible by a generous grant from Herman and Judith B. Swartz.

Aerobics Instructors Wanted AFAA or IDEA Certified

Lifecycle:
Pedal Pushing!
Students
$185 NOW 'TIL MAY 21 1991
10 percent discount for normal membership
584-4975
NORTHAMPTON NAUTILUS, INC.
216 North King Street
Northampton
Aerobics•Nautilus•Lifecycles
•Tanning•Free Weights
Call for Information

CELEBRATE SENSATION

CHAMBER MUSIC
The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach
The King's Singers
Turtle Island String Quartet/ Billy Taylor Trio
Emerson String Quartet

THEATRE
The Negro Ensemble Company: WE Plays
A Traveling Jewish Theatre: Heart of the World
The San Francisco Mime Company: Seeing Double

DANCE
Margie Gillis
Desrosiers Dance Theatre
Urban Bush Women
Laura Dean Dancers & Musicians
Oakland Ballet
Bill T. Jones/Arne Zane & Co.

ORCHESTRAS/ CHAMBER ORCHESTRAS
Shanghai Symphony Orchestra
West German Sinfonia/Gary Schocker
English Chamber Orchestra/ Pinchas Zukerman

JAZZ
Count Basie Orchestra
Max Roach & Friends
George Shearing/Joe Williams/ Joe Pass
Sandra Reaves-Phillips

SPECTRUM
Sankai Juku
The Chieftains
Africa Oye!
Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour Revisited

BROADWAY
Lend Me A Tenor
Sarafina!
Love Letters
Side By Side By Sondheim

WINNERS CIRCLE
Midori, violin
Leon Bates, piano
Dang Thai Son, piano
Franciscan String Quartet/Peter Orth

Subscribe Now and Save
Call 545-2511
or 545-2512

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
1990-1991 SEASON

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Gubernatorial choices disheartening

Democrats: Frank Bellotti. John Silber.
Republicans: Steven Pierce. William Weld.
Hardly thrilling choices.

With so much at stake in today's primary vote it is indeed sad that we are left with such a poor laundry list of candidates whose stances on pertinent issues facing this state are woefully drab.

Meredith O'Brien

Massachusetts has become the laughing stock of the nation. Republicans, nationwide, chuckle when perusing '88 presidential campaign material espousing the now-defunct "Massachusetts Miracle." Voters grew so angry that they viciously, and rightfully, berated Gov. Dukakis, blaming him for every state problem under the sun. With the largest tax hike in state history, coupled with two consecutive across-the-board cuts totaling over $8 million looming over the state's political climate like a hurricane cloud, there was a desperate hope that there might be some salvation to be found in a new crop of candidates — people who could save the state from itself.

No such luck.

Not one of the four candidates vying for your primary vote today is offering the electorate anything to remedy our plight. They are not proposing any radical or healthy solutions to not only lift us out of our fiscal abyss, but their poorly orchestrated campaign messages and scathing, childish ads have simply dampened our morale.

The only candidate who offers any bleak of glimmer of hope is Bellotti. His stances on abortion, the environment, crime, health care and civil rights are progressive and fairly encouraging. But his stance on the most immediate, most important issue facing this state right now — the state economy — is muddled and vague (much like his performance during the latest televised debate.)

And though I hate to give any credence to political propaganda, the "questions lingering over Bellotti's corruption record" still bother me. Despite the lack of concrete proof, the suspicions do still linger. Maybe it's that I don't trust someone who's been in politics as long as he has, someone who owes people favors. . . "baggage" does come with the territory.

That is why it is hesitantly that I profess Bellotti as the lesser of two (four) evils aspiring for Beacon Hill's top spot.

Silber's recent ignorant and insensitive statements regarding Roxbury residents, the elderly, female English professors, women who have abortions and welfare recipients do not warrant extensive comment. In short, if Silber is chosen as our state's gubernatorial savior, Massachusetts will have another reason to be embarrassed and hide its head.

With both Republican candidates supporting the deadly Citizens for Limited Taxation petition, which would roll taxes back to 1988 levels (effectively flushing our economy down the toilet), there is hardly a choice between evils. The only small redemptions for Weld are his pro-choice stance and moderately open mind.

Pierce — who has proven himself as a whiny, little cry-baby who could allegedly predict the fiscal crisis but made no moves to prevent it until he made a bid for office — is so stringently conservative (opposing the gay rights bill and necessary sex education in schools, pro-life and is staunchly business as opposed to citizen-oriented despite his "working class" rhetoric) that his leadership would set the state back at least 30 years of civil and human right's progress in the state.

"It's worth the fight." "No more politics as usual." "Fighting for the working class voters." Sure, just like there would be "no more new taxes" right?

Like most disheartened voters, I too will trudge to the voting booths feeling helplessly unable to bolster the state's situation with any vote that I might cast. But promising or not, there are still some choices to make — Massachusetts needs someone.

Bart Simpson maybe?

Read Meredith O'Brien every Tuesday

Don't intern Mullins Arena

If you stood in an add/drop line, or if all the lights are blown in your classroom and there's no money to replace them because of budget cuts (please don't flip to comics, please don't flip to comics), or if you were on the now-defunct women's lacrosse team . . . then it might be kind of hard for you to comprehend why it makes sense to spend $44 million to build a sports arena on campus.

But it does, for several reasons.

First, we don't have a choice. In the summer of 1988 — when the state's money situation was just a tad rosier — the Legislature issued, and Governor Dukakis approved, a $25 million dollar bond issue to build the Mullins Center on campus.

Sam Silverstein

The University of Massachusetts Building Authority then borrowed $24 million through a similar bond issue.

Both hunks of money are untouchable, because that's what a bond issue is; the money was borrowed to build an arena only, and cannot be spent for any other purpose. It's an all-or-nothing deal, period.

It would cost UMass almost $3.5 million to get out of its end of the bargain, in fact, according to Jack Littlefield, associate vice chancellor of Administration and Finance for the University. And that figure swells daily.

"We're at the point where we're well into the bond issue and it would cost us money to get out," said Littlefield.

So, if the money is ours to build with, beyond the reach of Dukakis's bloodied budget cutting ax, then let's start digging.

There's another angle to approach this from, as well. Besides graduations and such, the arena will, ideally, house concerts, an ice hockey team and a nationally competitive basketball team (and right now, there's every reason to believe that's where the basketball program is headed.)

Eight thousand nutty college kids, screaming and yelling for the UMass basketball team, perhaps. . . who's to say that's not exactly what this school needs right now. A little boost. Something to jump up and down and stick your index finger in someone's face about.

And in the most pragmatic view, staging concerts or winning basketball games will make money for UMass students to spend building polymers and reading books, etc. For the athletic department, each team that qualified for the NCAA Basketball Tournament last March earned $294,468. Television contracts can dwarf that figure.

A little school spirit never killed anyone, I say, and if a few deep-pocketed alumni get caught up in things, then everybody benefits.

Assistant UMass Basketball Coach John Robic came to Amherst from Kansas, where the state shuts down if the Jayhawks are on TV, and has seen the formula work.

"[The Arena] every night was packed," he said. "It can be nothing but positive, financially, and it also gets the school in the public eye because of the support of the students and the community."

One last myth: Students have not begun paying for the arena yet. That's what the bond issue was for, to cover the cost of construction. In the fall of 1994, according to Paul Page, vice chancellor of Finance and Administration, a $100 fee will be attached to our tuition bill. Not a dollar comes out of our pockets until then.

Don't blame the arena for UMass' problems then, pick up a shovel and let's get it done, already.

Sam Silverstein is a Collegian staff member

A dashed political hope for women

After successfully completing my first paper of the semester, I cheerily walked into my house only to once again be accosted by my housemate, who wanted to know if I would write something for the Collegian.

I did not really have the time, I protested, as I fished my schedule out of my backpack as evidence. "Besides," I added, "I'd rather write an editorial, and I can't do that unless I have something to react to."

I had barely finished my sentence when she said, "Evelyn Murphy dropped out of the gubernatorial race."

"Oh yeah, right. Sure, that's your idea of a joke — not very funny at all," I said.

Larissa Diephius

Now, I confess that I don't know a whole lot about politics, or even much about the people who are running for governor, but I do know that she is the only candidate whose values resemble my own. She is adamantly pro-choice, is against the current law in Massachusetts that requires parental consent in order for a woman under eighteen to seek an abortion and strongly supports childcare as well as gay and lesbian civil rights. The best part is that she is not afraid of saying she is a liberal.

Although she may not have had a terrific chance of winning, I would at least feel I was doing the right thing by voting for her.

By now I had expected her to chuckle and say, "Just kidding! But you could write an article about her anyway." But she wasn't laughing anymore, this was no joke. I was horrified. Not only had the only person I considered voting for completely given up, but I now had to write an editorial.

In a state of denial, I quickly called my father to confirm the horrible news. He is usually up on these kinds of issues. But, as usual, my father was a great disappointment to me.

He said it was true. Murphy had indeed dropped out of the race. In an effort to calm me handed the phone to my stepmother. This only made matters worse, she said, "You have no one to vote for! Bellotti is barely pro-choice, Silber is a fool, Weld supports Citizens for Limited Taxation and Pierce thinks women should bear children, stay at home, and await their husband's return from work wearing a negligee and holding a martini."

Though I tend to agree that I now have no one to vote for, Murphy has urged her supporters to vote for Bellotti. Belloti says he is "pro-life" personally, but claims he wouldn't legislate against the right to have an abortion. The thought of voting for someone who only half-heartedly believes in reproductive rights for women disgusts me.

But, I guess I do not like the idea of greeting my husband at the door wearing close-to-nothing and holding his favorite alcoholic beverage very much either.

Larissa Diephius is a UMass student

Eliminate CLT before it eliminates communities

You're sitting at your desk, desperately trying to keep yourself awake as you struggle through your history reading.

In the distance, your ear detects the steady click of boots on the pavement outside. Suddenly, you hear a loud rustle in the bushes below your window. A scream escapes your throat as you see an axe raised.

DeMaster/Pavia

Is it Freddy? Is it Jason? No, it's your worst nightmare.

It's Barbara Anderson.

But this is no movie. If the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition is passed, the state will see more slashing than in all the horror film sequels combined.

Halloween falls on October 31, but the real scare this year is coming November 6.

Barbara and her money-grubbing CLT buddies have a proposition for us.

They would like to reduce personal income tax from 5.75 percent to 4.25 percent, roll back all fees to what they were in 1988, and return all taxes to their 1989 level.

And guess what? The state would save $6.4 billion during the next three fiscal years.

Sounds great. Doesn't it?

Yes, and all you have to do to reduce the state's fiscal burden is make this simple choice:

- Eliminate all education aid to cities and towns and all funding for public higher education OR
- Eliminate all other general local aid to cities and towns OR
- Fire 50,000 of all 75,000 state workers OR
- Eliminate all funding for day care.
- Eliminate all homelessness protection.
- Eliminate all AIDS action.
- Eliminate all elderly home care.
- Eliminate all child abuse prevention.
- Eliminate all drug abuse prevention.
- Eliminate all affordable housing.
- Eliminate all environmental protection.

No thanks, Barbara, unless you personally plan to house the homeless, counsel the abused, aid the elderly, teach the children, and treat the AIDS patients — many of whom will be abandoned if question three is passed.

Barbara may be able to rest easy at night, but we can't afford to.

We all know scary movies cause nightmares.

Let's not wake up to one.

Vote no on question three.

Tara Pavia is a UMass student, and Sarah Demaster is a Collegian staff member

■ GEO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

• A suggested May 1 deadline for fee collection for the spring semester.

Emily Isaacs, a spokesperson for GEO said negotiators were pleased to have obtained the $175 fee waived. Isaacs said the curriculum fee eventually pays for graduate employee salaries, so paying the fee is like taking a salary cut. She added that GEO members were also asked to take a pay cut.

Heberle said if the administration proposal passes, GEO will be able to sign an agreement with the administration that will pledge that GEO members will not strike.

She said GEO officials did not want to sign the clause previous to negotiation on the curriculum fee waiver.

"It was important we had the option to strike," she said. "It's an important bargaining tool."

She said she is optimistic the fee waiver will pass the secret ballot election scheduled for later this week.

The GEO Coordinating Committee voted unanimously to recommend the acceptance of the administration's proposal in a meeting last night, according Heberle.

Karin Sherbin of the University Press Office said there are about 1,200 TA's and TO's and 950 RA's working on campus.

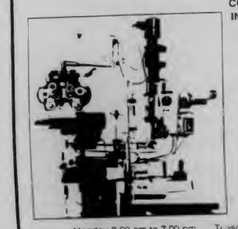
DON'T STAY HOME

Round Trips from New York starting at

London	$370
Paris	438
San Jose C.R.	370
Bangkok	929
Hongkong	849
Tokyo	759

Student and Faculty Fares
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change. One-ways available. Work/Study abroad programs. International student and teacher ID.
EURAIL PASSES ISSUED ON THE SPOT!
FREE Student Travel Catalog!
Council Travel
71 So. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
413-256-1761

DID YOU KNOW THAT YOU CAN GET YOUR EYE CARE AT UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES?



COMPLETE OPTOMETRIC EXAMINATION INCLUDES:
- Health History Review
- Visual Acuity Test
- Glaucoma Check
- Cataract Check
- Retinal Check (with pupil dilation when indicated)
- Refraction (Eye Glass Determination)
- Color Vision Test (when indicated)
- Blood Pressure Screening (when indicated)
- Eye Health Consultation
- Complete Contact Lens Evaluation
- Reduced Rates on Spectacle Lenses and Frames from Participating Opticians

Monday 8:00 am to 7:00 pm Tuesday - Friday 8:00 am to 5:00 pm

Convenient On Campus Location
For Appointments or Questions Call: 549-2600

WHEN • YOUR • LIFE • NEEDS • A • LIFT

U MASS SKI CLUB

DON'T BELIEVE THE HYPE!

WE ARE BACK

COME CHECK US OUT
At our first General Membership Meeting

THURDAY SEPT. 20th
6:00 PM
Campus Center Room 163 C

ALL ARE WELCOME!!
GET INVOLVED WITH US!!

UMass Ski Club
430 Student Union
545-3437

THE CROWS HAVE SOARED ABOVE THE REST

RUSH AXP

MEET THE BROTHERS OF ALPHA CHI RHO A'T

RUSH

NEVER HAZED--NEVER WILL

Sept 18	Northeast (Leach) 7-9 PM
Sept 23	"All You Can Eat Pasta Night" 5 PM (Across from Patterson dormitory)	12 Sunset Court
Sept 24	Monday Night Football/Pizza Night	12 Sunset Court 9 PM
Sept 25	Chicken BBQ/football game	Southwest Fields 6 PM
Sept 27	Sylvan (Brown) 7-9 PM

FOR INFORMATION CALL: IVAN (549-5935) OR BILL (546-0436)

MUNCHY SALE

SALE

LENDERS BAGELS Asst. Varieties 89¢ — 10 oz. Reg $1.12	'PHILLY' BRAND CREAM CHEESE 49¢ — 3 oz. Reg 59¢
SNAPPLE All Flavors 69¢ — 16 oz. bottle Reg 89¢	Nabisco TEDDY GRAHAMS honey, chocolate, cinnamon $1.69 — Reg $1.98
HERSHEY CANDY BARS Milk Chocolate & Almond, Kit Kat, Peanut Butter Cups 3/99c — Reg 40c ea.	VERY FINE Juice and Drinks 2/99¢ — 10 oz. bottles Reg 60¢
DIAL or CAMAY SOAP 2/99¢ — 3 oz. bar Reg 55c or 65¢	Available at all stores: Ameri Print film developing

	SINGLE	DOUBLE	4 x 6 DELUXE
12exp	3.19	4.49	4.49
24exp	5.89	8.39	8.39
36exp	8.39	12.59	12.59

One Day service available
Kodak color watch system

Prices Valid Through Saturday, September 29th
see store for details

ARTS & LIVING

L.A. Law sweeps Emmys ABC's Twin Peaks shut out

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — L.A. Law won the Emmy for best drama series for the third time in four years, Murphy Brown was named best comedy and the acclaimed Twin Peaks nominated 14 times, managed only two technical trophies.

Candice Bergen of CBS' Murphy Brown won best actress as the acid-tongued newswoman for a second consecutive year. And Ted Danson, the skirt-chasing bartender Sam Malone on Cheers, finally won as best comedy series actor Sunday night after being nominated eight times every year the show has been on the air.

In a big sign-off for The Tracey Ullman Show the British comedian's program grabbed the most awards at the 42nd Annual Emmys, with six. Ullman, who pulled the plug on the little-watched show last spring, won Fox Broadcasting Company its first Emmy last year.

"Oh, blimey, this brings it all full circle," said Ullman honored with a pair of Emmys in the music-variety category for her work as star and a writer. Peter Falk's bumbling but brilliant Columbo earned him the dramatic actor award. Patricia Wettig, who plays a cancer-stricken young mother on ABC's thirtysomething won the best dramatic actress trophy.

"I would really like to thank all the women with cancer who have shared their stories with me so wholeheartedly," a teary Miss Wettig said. "I shared their insights and their fears. I truly salute their courage."

Despite 14 nominations, ABC's Twin Peaks, the strange new series about murder in a Northwest logging town, captured only two technical trophies, for editing and costuming. Both were given in a non-televised ceremony Saturday.

Instead, NBC's L.A. Law went home with the best drama Emmy, an honor it also received in 1987 and 1989, won a writing award and also a best supporting actor Emmy for Jimmy Smits, who plays lawyer Victor Sifuentes.

Best miniseries went to NBC's Drug Wars: The Camarena Story, an account of the torture-slaying of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena. "This is a victory for him, too," said Executive Producer Michael Mann.

Kennen Ivory Wayans, whose irreverent Fox comedy sketch series "In Living Color" won the variety, music or comedy category, welled up.

"Oh, forget it," said the show's executive producer and host. "This is for you, Mom."

Scott Winant of thirtysomething, who tied with Thomas Carter of Equal Justice for best drama series director, got choked up, too. "I'm afraid I'm not really going to be able to express myself," he said.

Danson's award was presented by the animated family from Fox's The Simpson's.

Asked how it felt to receive his award from cartoon characters, Danson replied, "I think it is appropriate after nine years. I feel a little weird."

Joseph Sargent was named best director in a miniseries or special for his work on CBS's Caroline. Vincent Gardenia won for best supporting actor in a miniseries or special, given for HBO's Age-Old Friends

A special recognition was given to puppeteer Jim Henson, who died earlier this year. To the strains of Kermit the Frog's song "The Rainbow Connection," Miss Bergen, daughter of puppeteer Edgar Bergen, movingly recounted Henson's career.

Alex Rocco won outstanding supporting actor in a comedy for his portrayal of sleazy talent agent Al Floss in The Famous Teddy Z, which was canceled this year. The supporting actress award went to Rebe Neuwirth, the cold-as-ice psychoanalyst on Cheers.

ABC's The Wonder Years collected trophies for best directing (Michael Dinner) and writing (Bob Brush) in a comedy series.

Miss Bergen, Jay Leno and Jane Pauley were the program's hosts.

During Saturday's technical awards, Fox's The Simpson's was selected top animated program.

Barbara Hershey, who played the lead in A Killing in a Small Town won for best actress in a miniseries or special.

Schoolhouse Rock revived, production slated for Oct.

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Rainy Saturday mornings with a bowl of Cheerios, the Road Runner, Animalympics and Schoolhouse Rock. We are the last of the Saturday A.M. lounge-around-the-house-with-quality-cartoons generation. Just when you think chunks of innocence have vanished and your childhood is all swallowed up in the mire of maturing, innovation strikes!

Schoolhouse Rock is back and you can test your recall power by joining the University of Massachusetts Theater Guild in their presentation of this timeless learning tool on Oct. 30 and 31.

Bill Larkin is the director behind the idea. He said he was doing a show about three years ago in Chicago while friends of his were singing "Conjunction, Junction," "I'm Just a Bill," "Lolly, Lolly," "Interplanet Janet," "Preamble," and "The Great American Melting Pot" — among others — during the breaks.

"They said how great it would be to sing those songs onstage and a lightbulb went on in my head and it didn't go off," Larkin explained. "I called ABC for the rights, and they told me they couldn't give me the rights, but that they could give me permission to perform the songs in public, as long as it wasn't publicized off-campus."

Larkin tells his tale of running around for months trying to find videotapes of the songs and finally purchasing four tapes at the Boston University Bookstore.

"It took a while, but we've got them."

And the students passing through the Student Union Building late last week and through the Campus Center Concourse today have noticed: they've gathered on the floor in front of television screens outside the Hatch, they've scattered themselves in front of video links to youth on the Concourse singing along with the statue of liberty.

Larkin says this is the last plausible year to run a show because the blurbs went off officially in 1986, which, he maintains means the freshmen will barely remember them and it's something everyone can enjoy. "It's been like Woodstock: people singing, skipping classes."

Auditions ended last night and callbacks are today. Larkin says he plans on a cast of 20 — enough for one person per song and background singers if necessary. "Everyone has been so talented, it's going to be an excellent production."

Larkin has also proposed bringing the show to area elementary schools for performance dates and expects to hear by week's end whether it will happen.

50c OFF any Calzone — One coupon per order - Expires May 31, 1991
50c OFF any Calzone — One coupon per order - Expires May 31, 1991
50c OFF any Calzone — One coupon per order - Expires May 31, 1991
50c OFF any Calzone — One coupon per order - Expires May 31, 1991

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO
PIZZA & SUBS
FREE DELIVERY (limited delivery area)
1177 N. Pleasant St. N. Amherst
Coupons valid for delivery or pick up only.
549-3669

$1 OFF any Large Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 1, 1991

$1.50 OFF any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 1, 1991

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO
PIZZA & SUBS
FREE DELIVERY (limited delivery area)
1177 N. Pleasant St. N. Amherst
Coupons valid for delivery or pick up only.
549-3669

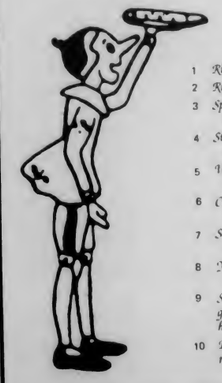
★Twin Special★
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$11.00 (plus tax)
Additional items $1.20 per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Limit 1 coupon per customer. Expires May 1, 1991

★Twin Special★
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$11.00 (plus tax)
Additional items $1.20 mper pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Limit 1 coupon per customer. Expires May 1, 1991

La Cucina di Pinocchio
549-3669
New Item

Just Tree Delivery or Pick-up
1177 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts

Hours
Weekday - 4 pm to 2 am
Saturday - 4 pm to 3 am
Sunday - 4 pm to 1 am



Calzones

1	Ricotta, Ham, Salami, Mozzarella	3.50
2	Ricotta, Mozzarella, Provolone, Swiss	3.50
3	Spinach, Garlic, Mozzarella, Parmigiana (Popeye Special)	3.50
4	Steak & Cheese (your choice green pepper, mushroom, onion, hot pepper)	3.75
5	Vegetarian Delight (broccoli, spinach, ricotta, eggplant, mozzarella)	3.50
6	Chicken Parmigiana (breaded chicken breast, mozzarella & sauce)	3.75
7	Sausage Parmigiana (sweet sausage with mozzarella & sauce)	3.50
8	Yippie Calzone (smoked mozzarella, goat cheese, broccoli & pesto)	3.50
9	Steak & Cheese Bomb (steak, mushroom, green pepper, onion, salami, ham & hot peppers with cheese)	3.75
10	Pesto Calzone (mozzarella, swiss cheese ricotta, fresh pesto)	3.50

KIMDAD AUTO SALES

Rt. 9 Belchertown
323-8553
Affordable Cars!
Many Cars under $1000

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

The outlook is good,

and the future is yours for the taking. With your choice of nearly 200 credit and noncredit courses, the forecast for personal and professional growth looks promising. This fall, let the UMass Division of Continuing Education help you plan the right course for your future.

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Fall 1990

Late register for University day classes and Continuing Education evening classes, on a space-available basis, through September 18 in Room 615, Goodell Building.

For more information or a free catalog, call the Division of Continuing Education at 545-5198.

We're predicting your success.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

ΣAM

PRESENTS...

LIVE AT

UMASS

FOR MORE INFO. CALL JEFF AT 253-5165

Monday, September 17th: "Pizza Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:00 pm.

Tuesday, September 18th: "Jai-Alai Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30 pm.

Monday, September 24th: "Billiards" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Tuesday, September 25th: "Movie & Sundae Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Wednesday, September 26th: "Kentucky Fried Chicken Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30pm.

1990

EARN $250-$350+ PER WEEK

Part-Time
Evenings & Weekends

Cablevision of Boston is looking for aggressive, self-motivated individuals to join our rapidly growing sales team!

IF YOU:

- ☐ Are a go-getter
- ☐ Have a neat appearance
- ☐ Enjoy working outdoors
- ☐ Have a valid Mass. driver's license
- ☐ Have your own transportation
- ☐ Are dependable

GIVE US A CALL!

We offer $100 per week salary, plus excellent commissions and bonuses! Sales experience is a plus, however we will train highly motivated individuals.

This is an excellent opportunity to join a fast-paced, exciting company!

Please call Tracey O'Neill at (617) 787-6673.

CABLEVISION

Cablevision of Boston is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer who agrees to hire Boston residents and minorities.

RUSH PIKE

THE FRATERNITY WITH A COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

FALL 1990 OPEN RUSH

September 17, 18, 19, 25, 26 8-10 P.M.
418 North Pleasant Street 549-6251

ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

- LIFE LONG FRIENSHIPS
- STRONG ATHLETICS - OLYMPIC WEIGHT ROOM
- CONVENIENT LOCATION

- UNPARALELLED SOCIAL LIFE
- STRESSED ACADEMICS - Two Computers - Course Files
- EXCELLENT MEAL PLAN

ΠΚΑ

PI KAPPA ALPHA

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"Oh no, Elliott! Why? . . . Why? . . ."

ROBOTMAN By JIM MEDDICK

MATHEW HERE IS OUR MOST PROMISING STUDENT OF TELEKINESIS
WATCH THIS BLUEBERRY MUFFIN CAREFULLY.
AMAZING.
HE DEVELOPED HIS GIFT DURING A 3-MONTH STAY AT A WEIGHT-LOSS CLINIC.
I DRAGGED A GOOD HUMOR TRUCK OFF I-70

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

HERE, MAYBE THIS WILL MAKE MORE SENSE. I HAVE EIGHT PENNIES, I ASK YOU FOR FOUR MORE.
I SAY FORGET IT. YOU'RE THE ONE WITH A STEADY PAYCHECK.
JUST GIVE ME FOUR PENNIES. GOOD. HOW MUCH MONEY DO I HAVE NOW?
INVESTMENTS AND ALL?
NO, JUST HERE ON THE TABLE.
EIGHT CENTS.
NO, EIGHT PLUS FOUR IS TWELVE. SEE? COUNT THEM UP.
BUT THOSE FOUR ARE MINE!

TANGELO PIE By TIM SNIFFEN

There, see? No money in my account.
So? Take it from someone else's!
Instant Cash
what?!
you think that "code thing" matters? Hit any four numbers— who'll know?
Instant Cash
Instant Cash
Why do I feel guilty?
That's not guilt, that's the warm glow of success!
Really Instant Cash

NIPPLE By PITT

We Are a Vulnerable Skate Boy Considering The Evil Stranger's Suggestions.....
9 Out of 10 recommend SKATE
SKATEBOARDS
HMMMM
Will Skate Boy give up riding through Cambon in an Iron Maiden?
Send Comments or for T-Shirt to 21st Butterfield

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

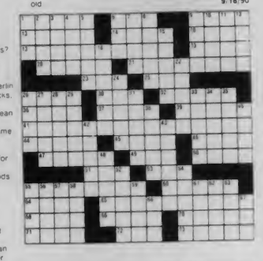
ACROSS
1 City of Light
6 Garden tool
9 Place for 6 Across
13 Concerning
14 Leather workers' tools
16 Edible root
17 Chopped food, of a kind
19 Nobelist Wiesel
20 Rain forest vine
21 Church toppers
23 Frequently
25 Seabird
26 Decrease
30 — pro nobis
32 Plant disease
36 Aid
37 Rajah's spouse
39 Exams
41 Warning to an equivocator
44 Mister, in Mexico
45 Positions for Strange
46 Regimen
47 Side order
49 Hesitatant sounds
50 Corn units
51 Taxing initials?
53 Collection
55 Dissertation
60 — Rae
64 Mister, in Berlin
65 Drat or shucks, e.g.
68 Shakespearean villain
69 M*A*S*H name
70 Apponion
71 Street sign
72 6th sense, for short
73 Pound sounds

DOWN
1 Shriver of tennis
2 Blue dye
3 Italian artist Guido
4 Andes Indian
5 Memo taker
6 Certain actor
7 Is in debt
8 Enthuse
9 Short distance
10 — of Fame
11 Lake port
12 Fawns' parents
15 Metric measure
18 Misshape
22 Provide funds
24 Do a detective's job
26 Young men
27 Hautboys
28 Tropical American tree
29 Mikmaid's seat
31 Laurie or Oakley
33 Wear out
34 Mrs. Schwarzenegger
35 White poplar
38 Freezers
40 Speedy planes, for short
42 Characteristic
43 Ascetic sect of old
48 Theater offering
52 Pasture fence
54 Yesterday follower
55 — -is the forest primeval
56 Authentic
57 Jason's ship
58 Boast
59 Pass catchers
61 Tracy to Beatty
62 Shoppers' stop
63 On the summit
66 Beret
67 Elevations Abbr

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	H	O	W		H	A	R	D		A	S	G	O	T
C	E	R	O		A	S	I	A		S	E	R	G	E
U	R	A	L		L	E	N	T		S	T	O	R	E
B	O	N	V	O	Y	A	G	E		A	S	P	E	N
A	N	G	E	L	A			D	A	I	S
		S	I	R	E	N		C	L	A	R	E	T
T	A	R		O	O	D	E	S	T		L	O	T	A
A	M	I	S		S	O	D	E		A	L	A	I	N
P	O	S	H		P	A	N	T	E	R		E	L	K
E	S	K	I	M	O		S	I	D	E	S
			P	A	P	A			I	C	E	A	G	E
S	E	M	I	S		S	E	A	F	A	R	E	R	S
E	C	L	A	T		T	A	X	I		R	I	A	K
C	R	A	T	E		I	S	L	E		A	I	D	E
T	U	N	E	R		R	E	E	D		L	E	E	R

9/18/90



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese Hamburger	Szechuan Beef and Broccoli N.E. Style Scrod
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese Bean Burger	Stir Fry Veggies and Tofu N.E. Style Scrod

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-May 20): Emotional or financial ups and downs could unsettle you. Be careful not to overreact. Regular exercise helps relieve tension. Tempers may be short. Avoid adding fuel to the fire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Many people appreciate your loving ways. Conserve your energy for exciting new developments. Make overdue changes in your domestic arrangements. Loved ones will provide valuable support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Two heads are better than one when trying to solve financial problems. You are ready to make a bigger effort to achieve success. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your timing in business and social matters is excellent today. A long-distance call holds a clue to an impending change. Someone special will enter your life in the near future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A neighborhood project lead to a surprising romantic encounter. You may be feeling more domestic than usual. Entertain good friends. You quickly fathom other people's motives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Watch out for impulsive decisions. Impatience or carelessness could lead to added expense. Afternoon brings a big improvement in your outlook. Give innovative ideas a try. Heed constructive suggestions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial progress and improved self-esteem are part of the picture. Showcase your special talents to best advantage. Trying to advise a young person can be taxing. Socialize this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Visiting a museum with friends could be part of today's plan. Others cherish your company. Get to places on time. Special patience is required when dealing with older relatives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Getting overheated about the letter of the law could make you ignore the spirit. Be understanding with those who have erred. A longstanding problem can be solved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may have to choose between a romantic partner and a friend. Logic will play a major role in your decision. Curb a tendency to generalize or exaggerate. Limit spending on entertainment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Rely on your own efforts to sort out difficult matters. Be formal with acquaintances until you have established rapport. An analysis of your budget may reveal room for more expenditures.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give those you love lots of time and attention today. A friend's or relative's goals may differ greatly from your own. Do not sacrifice your security to the impatience of other people.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Sarah DeMaster
Copy Editor.....Kendra Pratt
Layout Technician.....Nicky Dumas
Photo Technician.....Jeff Holland
Production Supervisor.....Nicky Dumas
Typesetters.....Sue Kent
Production.....Paul Specht, Bill Connor, Jody Trotman, Maggie Trudell selnate セルネート合同就職セミナー in U.S.A. & TOKYO

これが近道。

道はいろいろ就職活動。でも出来るだけ無駄を避けて合理的に行ないたいものです。そこで注目。ADAPT でおなじみのセルネートがお贈りする、セルネート合同就職セミナー。今回はワシントンDCと、東京で開催。いずれも留学生採用に積極的な一流企業が一堂に会して、説明会はもちろん、面接も行ないます。会場には一流ホテルを予定、交通費もセルネートが応援します。留学生の皆さんにとっては、まさにお誂え向き。日本から遠く離れて大変だけど、こんなところに近道があったのですね。

U.S.A セミナー —Washington D.C.
'90.11.10(SAT) 11(SUN)
TOKYOセミナー
'90.12.27(THU)

●セミナー内容● U.S.A セミナー：約30社、TOKYO セミナー／約50社の説明会、個別面接 ※1社当たり30分程度の個別面接、および自由面談室での面接を実施致します。
●対象● 大学または大学院を1992年6月までに卒業(Bachelor 以上の学位取得)予定の学生
●費用● 参加無料。会場までの往復新幹線交通費は U.S.A セミナー：500マイルまで実費を給予定 TOKYO セミナー：12月15日(土)に日本に帰国される方で卒業が1991年以降の方は500マイルまで。12月14日以前に帰国される方、または既卒の方は国内交通費として2万円まで実費支給予定。(往復の新幹線交通費に限ります。タクシー、ガソリン代等は対象になりません。 ●お申し込み締切日●
USA セミナー 10月8日(月)
TOKYO セミナー 11月12日(月)

※お申し込み受け付けは、慎重な選考を行なったうえで参加了承の通知を致します。
●お知らせ● 当社では、セミナーのほか個別で企業の直本セミナーも援助しています。お気軽にお問い合わせ下さい。

大手建設 New York, Los Angeles 11月中旬予定
担当：小嶋・村岡・斎藤(東京本社)

大手電機メーカー New York 9/22(土)23(日), Boston 9/25(火)26(水)
Chicago 9/28(金), San Francisco 9/29(土)30(日)
担当：佐藤・村田・池間・秋山・桑嶋(東京本社)

●お申し込み、お問い合わせ●
株式会社セルネート(東京本社)採用推進事業部
TEL 1-800-537-2186 または 03-234-5071
(平日9:00a.m～6:00p.m 日本時間)
担当／佐藤・村田・池間・秋山・桑嶋

セルネート U.S.A New York Office
TEL 1-800-344-7241 または 212-986-5520
(平日9:00a.m～5:00p.m NY Time)担当 IJH

HERE'S WHY THE SMART MONEY AT UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS IS GOING WITH TIAA-CREF AS IF THE FUTURE DEPENDED ON IT.

Because it does. Smart investors know that your future depends on how well your retirement system performs. TIAA-CREF has been the premier retirement system for people in education and research for over 70 years. We have enabled over 200,000 people like you to enjoy a comfortable retirement. And over 1,000,000 more are now planning for the future with TIAA-CREF.

SMART MONEY LOOKS FOR SECURITY, GROWTH AND DIVERSITY FOR RETIREMENT SAVINGS.

Security—so the resources are there when it is time to retire. Growth—so you'll have enough income for the kind of retirement you want. And diversity—to help protect you against market volatility and to let you benefit from several types of investments.

THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT YOU GET WITH TIAA-CREF.

TIAA offers you the safety of a traditional annuity that guarantees your principal plus a specified rate of interest, and provides for additional growth through dividends. CREF's variable annuity offers opportunities for growth through four different investment accounts, each managed with the long-term perspective essential to sound retirement planning:

The CREF Stock Account
The CREF Money Market Account
The CREF Bond Market Account*
The CREF Social Choice Account*

CALL 1-800-842-2776
TO FIND OUT MORE

Our experienced retirement counselors will be happy to answer your questions and tell you more about retirement annuities from TIAA-CREF.

Experience. Performance. Strength.
Your future is protected by the largest private retirement system in the world. We have done so well, for so many, for so long, that we currently manage some $85 billion in assets.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.℠

* The CREF Bond Market and Social Choice Accounts may not be available under all institutional retirement plans, but are available for all Supplemental Retirement Annuity plans.

For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext 5509 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

■ rape

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

affiliation.

The residence hall director, Khaleelah Abdul-Kareem, former resident director of Grayson in Orchard Hill, refused to discuss Makau's residence in the hall, though she did confirm that he was a JQA resident.

"Well, there are many people living in the halls who are not authorized to live here but this person was authorized to live in this hall," she said.

Abdul-Kareem refused to state who authorized Makau to live in the lounge.

The 19th floor of all Southwest residence halls have lounge space and an apartment for either the residence hall director or assistant residence hall director.

Larry Moneta, associate director for residential education in Housing Services, declined to comment on the specifics of the incident but said his department was also investigating. He refused to comment on Makau's status in the hall.

"The residence halls are supposed to be occupied by students," he said. "The only non-students allowed in the halls are staff and their partners."

University Police said they did not release a date or time of the alleged rape so as not to jeopardize the continuing investigation.

AIM HIGH

ALLIED HEALTH PROFESSIONALS

Discover a challenging future with opportunities to advance. Serve your country while you serve your career with:

- great pay and benefits
- normal working hours
- complete medical and dental care
- 30 days vacation with pay per year

Find out how to qualify as an Air Force professional. Call

USAF HEALTH PROFESSIONS
1-800-423-USAF

AIR FORCE

New Horizons

Wednesday
Sept.19th
9:00 PM

$2.00 cover
for the best reggae & soca
in the valley

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

FIRST GENERAL MEETING

for International Students Association

Date: Tuesday, Sept. 18th
Time: 7:00 p.m.
Place: Campus Center Rm 163c

All Nationalities Welcome

■ Red Sox

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

lead in the second inning. Dan Pasqua blooped a double to left and scored on a single by Ron Karkovice, who then scored on a bloop double by Sammy Sosa.

Winner Eric King (10-4) allowed five hits in seven innings. Marshall's drive in the second might have been a homer, but Lance Johnson leaned up and knocked the ball back onto the field to hold Marshall to a triple. Tony Pena grounded out to end the inning.

The Red Sox scored a run in the third when Randy Kutcher singled, stole second and scored on a single by Evans. Wade Boggs singled and an error by Robin Ventura loaded the bases. But Mike Greenwell hit into an inning-ending double play.

"That's probably the worst I've ever seen King pitch," said Morgan. "He was all over the place and we could not score. But that's how it goes when you're going bad."

Shaw starts

FOXBORO, MA (AP) — The New England Patriots activated rookie linebacker Chris Singleton, their top draft choice, and placed safety Ton Zackery on injured reserve Monday.

Singleton, the eighth pick in the draft, didn't sign his contract until Sept. 3, six days before the season opener. He received a two-week roster exemption.

Sigma Pi Epsilon is IT!

Open Rush
Sept. 18,19,23,24
375 N. Pleasant St.

THE BACK ROOM
Cafe & Lounge

50c Drafts (GD) Sept 22-29

Sat. Sept 22, Miller Giveaways & D.J. all night
Mondays 25c hot dogs during the game
Cable TV - Major Sports Channels
★ Entertainment Saturday Nights
Thursday and Friday Night Free Hors D'oeuvres
COCKTAILS★FULL BAR★MUNCHIES ★POOL TABLE ★
LUNCH (soup, salad, sandwiches) limited dinner menu

37 State Street, Belchertown 323-5818
Rte. 202
(Behind C & C Health and Fitness)

ROSH HASHANA
שנה טובה

Services held in the Student Union Ballroom
Wednesday, Sept. 19–7pm Service & Kiddush
Thursday, Sept. 20–10am Service & Tashlich
–7pm Service and Kiddush
Friday, Sept. 21–10am Service

ALL WELCOME

Sponsored by UMass Hillel– for more info call 549-1710

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE—CC 113 MON.-THURS. 8:30-5:30 FRI. 8:30-3:30 • DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE. 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

25¹ CLUB introductory meeting for older undergraduates. Brief discussion of activities. Socializing and refreshments Wednesday 9/19 8:00PM CC 174-178.

FIRST GENERAL MEETING for International Student Association. Tuesday, Sept 18th Campus Center 163C 7:00PM All nationalities welcome

HSA GENERAL MEETING Wednesday September 19 9:30PM Field main lounge forming committees for upcoming events open to all students

HUNT FOR RED OCTOBER playing at the Campus Center Auditorium 5:30, 8:00 & 10:30PM Wed Sept 19th $2.50

THE BANGLADESH FRIENDS ASSOCIATION invites all the Bangladeshis to a get-together party on September 22, 1990. Contact: Enver 546-5098 or Kabir 545-5399

UMASS CHESS CLUB first meeting tonight in the Bluewall Cafe 7PM-11PM all are welcome to stop in and play

ANNOUNCEMENTS

AHORA'S MEETING will be held Thursday the 20th at 7:30Pm in Wilder Hall. The Bilingual Collegiate Program. Come all

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5961

BOLTWOOD PROJECT Fun, friends, credit. Work with physically and developmentally delayed people. Meeting tonight 7PM room 917CC

CLASS OF '94 "Since the day T-shirts" Pick up yours Rm 304 University Admissions Center.

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM $1000 in just one week Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization. Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed! Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 50

SPECTRUM, arts and literature magazine is having a new members meeting tonight in 168 CC at 7:30. All welcome!

THE FIRST UNIVERSITY PLAYERS MEETING tonight at 7. Check at the info desk in the Campus Center for room number.

UMASS TRIATHLON CLUB wants you general meeting Tuesday 18 Boyden 8-0042

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 T-BIRD AC/FM PS/PB 90,000mi runs great $500 or best offer Call Tammy 549-2786 must sell

1979 SAAB 900GLE 4 speed sunroof must sell $2000 bo (413)665-8119

1978 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is 549-8333 6-8PM

1982 DODGE 400 CONVERTIBLE, white with red interior 84,000 miles. Very clean $2,800 546-3142

1982 TOYOTA STARLET $2000 or B/O 535-2322

1983 SENTRA WAGON Excellent condition power steering air-conditioning AM/FM radio $1995/BO Call 549-0072

1984 SUBARU 67000 mi. AM/FM asking 2300 days 1-448-7578 nites 1-298-4753

1984 4WD SUBARU STATION WAGON 95500mi good mechanical cond., some rust, all weather tires, 1999 muffler $2700/BO Jenny 259-1318, 5-7PM Mon-Thurs

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great Excellent condition 50 MPG Must Sell $4500 586-7163

1988 FORD RANGER excellent condition 5 speed 40,000 miles $4,800 253-0770

SEIZED cars, trucks, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. C-1675.

CH'EN STYLE T'AI CHI

LEARN THIS TRADITIONAL Chinese martial art in 12 sessions. Classes begin 12th and 18th. Call 253-4057

CONDO FOR SALE

UNBELIEVEABLE! Townehouse 2 bedroom-1½ bath Reduced to $62,000! Joan Rosner DH Jones 549-3700

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

FRIDGE RENTALS call R&P 253-9742

HELP! Beautiful spacious apartment for rent. A must see with new rug and appliances. A steal at $625.00/month, includes heat and hot water. Call anytime 549-1397

MALE TO SHARE ROOM 125 /mo 256-1859

ONE BEDROOM APARTMENT at 177 N Pleasant St. Quiet $435 per month includes heat. 256-3457

SINGLE ROOM house in N. Amherst 187.50 549-6650

TOWNHOUSE APARTMENT: 2 bedroom, 1½ baths on bus route Call 1-567-1352 and leave message

FOR SALE

"COMPUTERS" Apple IIC Computer excellent/cheap $400 268-7164

CUBE FRIDGE great for dorms call Julie at 546-3987

RCA 18" COLOR, 13" B/W TV's, Typewriter w/printer interface Moving sale Raymond 549-0480

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD homes Available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent for eclosures Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext H-2009 for repo list your area.

SAX FOR SALE Bundy II Alto student model Great shape $500 or best offer 586-3100 ext 4364

SLEEP WITH THE BEST

say goodnight to the rest full size futon and frame $150 we'll beat other boros by 5%! Metawampe Furniture 1-800-3-FUTON-1

FOUND

ATTENTION NEW STUDENTS- personal items left at the New Students Program this summer may be picked up at the New Students Office 304 University Admiss Center

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

CHRISTMAS, SPRING BREAK, SUMMER TRAVEL free Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs Call 1-800-682-7555 ext F-1426

EARN $300 to $500 per week reading books at home Call 615-473-7440 Ext B-281

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK Helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard Send for free information American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

ESTABLISHED HARD ROCK BAND seeks male lead vocalist with presence and ambition. Have gigs! Leave message at 549-4768 or call 546-2836

FULL TIME POSITION available Excellent base salary plus bonuses. Fluency in any African, Indian, Korean, or Middle Eastern dialects a plus. Contact Lanny Parron, Metropolitan Life (413)567-1248

INNOVATIVE MARKETING PROGRAM needs sales rep for UMass Market. Excellent $$ opportunity. Local advertising experience necessary. Call Gary at 1-800-874-5005

NEED A BABYSITTER! responsible educ. major able to sit on nights and weekends Please call 549-9311 Gretchen

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required Mornings 7-8am. Good pay 7days/week 253-7059 Evenings

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! Call Sam 256-6434 40-80/day

INSTRUCTION

BEGINNING PORTUGUESE CLASS Sept. 17 - Oct. 29 Mon. 7-9pm $50 00 Language Pacifica 549-5065

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE Workshops begin September 17 Intensive day, PT evening. TOEFL Language Pacifica 549-5065

LEARN HUNGARIAN from native teacher! Call Raymund at 549-0480

INTERNSHIP

RECEIVE CREDITS LEARNING the music/entertainment industry Rack-A-Disc needs interns for fall/spring 20 hrs/wk: 8 credits. 586-9900

LOST

GOLD RING cash reward sentimental value leave message for Lynda 538-2931 after 4:00PM

SMALL BLACK NOTE/ADDRESS BOOK. Christina 256-8756

SONY WALKMAN Thurs 9/13 either in front of Mass Public Health Center or Cape Cod Lounge. Tape inside extreme sentimental value. If found please call! I'm miserable 6-0924 evenings

ONE TURQUOISE AND SILVER BRACELET between Marcus Student Union Thompson Call Anna 256-0569

PANASONIC WALKMAN reward call 549-5997

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
FALL SPECIAL
small cheese $3.50
large cheese $5.99
2 toppings only $1 more
must mention this ad!
549-6073 549-6098

ROOMMATE WANTED

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1224

SOUTH DEERFIELD 2-bdrm Apt on bus line $300 665-8230 545-1028

SERVICES

DO YOU NEED SPANISH HELP? Tutoring available for intermediate to advanced call Glow 549-0071

LEGAL QUESTIONS? The Legal Services Center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

STUDY ABROAD IN AUSTRALIA information on semester, summer, and internship programs. All run under $6000. Call Curtin University 1-800-878-3696

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St Northhampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course starts 9/10 - $195 Adv course starts 9/17 - $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 - $380 For further information call 549-9401

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S Deerfield 10 mins from Amherst Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr, typing $2/pg 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications 256-6373

WORDPERFECT- fast and reliable spellcheck, call Tim 546-5472

WORDPROCESSING—Fast, Professional Reasonable rates. Free pick-up and delivery. Call Nancy 367-9437

SPORTS

Photo courtesy AP

Boston Celtic Brian Shaw smiles during an afternoon news conference Monday at Boston Garden in Boston. Shaw, who played last season for Il Messaggero in the Italian league, was the 1988 first-round draft pick for the Celtics.

Shaw returns to Celts after $50,000 in fines

BOSTON (AP) — Brian Shaw said Monday he was happy to return to the Boston Celtics even though he endured a bitter court battle and $50,000 in fines to avoid it.

The Celtics, eager to regain their point guard after he spent a season playing in Italy, announced Monday that Shaw would rejoin them under a contract he signed last January. It runs for the next four seasons.

"Glad to be back," Shaw said at a news conference.

The dispute began after he signed the deal while in the first year of a two-year contract he had with Il Messaggero of Rome, then fought to return to the Italian club for next season.

The resolution followed a federal court decision last June 26 ordering Shaw to end the Italian contract and allowing him to play only for the Celtics. The court fined him $50,000 for defying the order.

"I never felt I did anything wrong," Shaw said. "I was in a situation in Italy where the people over there were very nice to me and I had two contracts.

"I wanted to try and make everybody happy and step back and do it in such a way that everybody could get a little bit," he added. "Everybody felt they had a legitimate claim."

He said it was his intention to play one more year with Il Messaggero, then return to the Celtics.

"I never ever said or ever felt that I didn't want to be here," Shaw added.

He decided to return to the Celtics when Federal Judge A. David Mazzone "said I couldn't play for anyone else. That cut out my options."

I want to make it clear that the Celtics have made no deal with the court, no deal with Brian," said David Gavitt, the Celtics' chief of basketball operations, said at a news conference he attended with Shaw and Celtics coach Chris Ford. "There's been no renegotiation of contract. There's been no promise to renegotiate."

Shaw said he was wrong in signing with the Celtics in Italy after leaving one agent and before hiring Jerome Stanley to represent him. "I felt at the time that I knew what I was doing and I could do everything myself," said Shaw, 24. "The lesson that I've learned is I don't know it all."

Shaw said he told the Celtics he had no representation when the new contract was negotiated. He said he is satisfied with the deal now, but did not say how he felt soon after signing it.

After the news conference, Stanley said he could have gotten a better contract for Shaw, but avoided the question of whether the dispute arose as an attempt to renegotiate.

"Right now is not the time to go over the terms of Brian's contract," he said.

Did he feel the Celtics tried to rush Shaw into signing before he could hire an agent?

"I obviously have clear feelings on that," Stanley said, "but right now it's really the time of year where the focus shifts from lawyers and transactions to Xs and Os. It's really nothing else gained by rehearsing old facts."

Shaw was Boston's first-round draft pick in 1988 out of California-Santa Barbara. He became a starter as a rookie and averaged 8.6 points and 5.8 assists per game. The Celtics labeled him as a cornerstone of their team in the 1980s.

When he signed with Boston last January, Shaw said, he agreed to exercise the notion in his Italian contract allowing him to terminate it between June 20 amnd July 20. Starting on July 21, Mazzone fined Shaw $5,000 a day for contempt.

Sox determined despite losses

BOSTON (AP) — Their hitting and pitching are disappearing. So is their once substantial lead in the American League East. But you can still see signs of confidence in the struggling Boston Red Sox.

"We're not giving up. We're battling," first baseman-designated hitter Mike Marshall said. "We're not playing real well right now, but there's time."

The Red Sox began a four-game series in Chicago last Thursday night with a four-game lead over Toronto. They lost all four games, and their division lead dipped to a single game.

They have six more road games before returning home next Tuesday for two games with Cleveland. The 10-day road swing continued Monday night with the first of three games in Baltimore.

Boston took an 80-67 record into the game, while Toronto was 79-68 before its home game against New York Monday night. Each had 15 games left.

"I'm sure some of them are panicking," Boston's Dwight Evans said of the team's fans. "But as long as we don't panic, we'll be okay."

Not if they don't hit or pitch.

The Red Sox hit just .235 in the Chicago series as their batting average for the season dropped to .274. The starting pitchers gave up 18 earned runs and 29 hits in 17 1-3 innings against Chicago, an earned run average of 9.35.

"We've still got pretty good confidence in this pitching staff," said Dana Kiecker. "he starter and loser in Sunday's 4-2 setback to Chicago, "but we need more than one or two runs to win games.

"Any pitcher, even Roger, needs more than one or two runs a game," Kiecker said.

Roger is Roger Clemens, and he's been sidelined with a shoulder injury. He was expected to throw on the side Tuesday.

If all goes well, he should start Friday in the opener of a three-game series with the Yankees in New York.

While Boston dropped four consecutive games, Toronto won three in a row at home against the Orioles.

"We knew it was going to be a dogfight and, sure enough, it's come to one," Boston second-baseman Jody Reed said.

The Blue Jays gained ground with a 6-5 win over the Baltimore Orioles Sunday while Boston was losing.

"I wish I could say I was wrong but this one series I feared in the last month," Boston manager Joe Morgan said. "We don't play well here, and we never get any breaks."

On Sunday, the White Sox blooped their way to a 2-0

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Photo courtesy AP

San Francisco Giants catcher Terry Kennedy tags out Cincinnati Reds baserunner Jeff Reed at homeplate completing a double play in the second inning of the National League game at River front Stadium Monday night.

WEATHER	ARTS	SPORTS
It will be sunny in the morning, giving way to afternoon clouds. Highs, 65-70 degrees.	Read what George Lentz has to say about Postcards from the Edge. Page 7.	The field hockey team will face stiff competition as they travel to Providence. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 11

Underdogs prevail in primaries

AP photo

John Silber leaves the voting booth in Brookline yesterday morning. The Boston University president-on-leave defeated Frank Bellotti in the Democratic primary.

Silber and Weld are the big winners

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent
and DANIEL BEEGAN
The Associated Press

In yesterday's state primary, in which William Weld defeated Steven Pierce and John Silber defeated Francis Bellotti, precincts in Amherst were perhaps the only place where University students did not have to wait in line yesterday as voter apathy prevailed.

Weld, a former federal prosecutor, won the Republican nomination, while former Boston University President Silber captured the Democratic race.

Voter turnout in Amherst was assessed as "lower than usual" by polling officials.

Ken Mosakowski, Deputy Warden of Precinct 5 expressed surprise at the poor turnout considering the economic status of the state. "This is the first time in 26 years that we'll have a new state treasurer and a non-incumbent Governor," he said. "I haven't seen the voter anger they've been predicting."

Weld had trailed throughout much of the primary campaign, but surged in the final weeks. His opponent, House Minority leader Pierce, conceded with only a small percentage of the vote counted after television exit polls showed him losing badly.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

AP photo

William Weld greets pedestrians Monday afternoon in downtown Boston on the campaign trail. He defeated Steven Pierce in the Republican primary yesterday.

Canadian army attacks Indians

Editor's note — This is the third of a multi-part series on the situation of the Mohawk Indians in Quebec, Canada. The writer is a Collegian correspondent who is currently in Kahnawake, Quebec.

By RIC OLIVERA
Collegian Correspondent

Canadian Army troops yesterday shot two rounds of tear gas into a crowd of Mohawk Indians on Katari Tekawitha Island, located along the St. Lawrence Seaway, on the outer edge of the Kanawaki Village, in the first day of fighting there between the Indians and the Canadian government.

The dispute between the Mohawks and the government began July 11, when the government informed Mohawk Indians in Oka, Quebec that they wanted to use their land for a golf course.

The first attack came at about 4:15 p.m. About 300 villagers crossed the bridge :ading onto the island. The Army was sta- :ioned there with 160 troops armed with :ear gas masks and riot gear.

The Army lined up three square-feet of barbed wire to separate the protestors and soldiers. Two or three Mohawk men began pushing the soldiers, screaming, "Go home. Who's land is this anyway?"

After one Mohawk man grabbed a tear gas mask, the crowd of unarmed women, men, and children pushed forward. At this point the Army fired tear gas into the center and rear of the crowd.

The tear gas landed, and women and children rushed back. The heavily armed soldiers swung their rifles and connected with the heads of the front of the Mohawk line.

One woman fell off the 12-foot bridge and landed on the rocks on her chest. Another man was pushed over the side by the sightless crowd, and fell on his knees upon the rocks.

Hundreds of Mohawks were subjected to the gas, which left many of them bent over and gasping for breath. Eight Army helicopters hovered above the army troops, while across the waterway, four Armored Personnel Carriers pointed machine guns and .50 caliber rifles at protestors.

After the first four tear gas canisters were fired, teary-eyed Mohawks again pushed up on the army line. The Mohawks, being unarmed, began to throw hundreds of rocks at the soldiers.

Major Bassarab said five to seven soldiers were injured. One was badly beaten. Asked about being on Mohawk land, he said, "This is not Mohawk land. This is Canadian land."

Bassarab said about being on the island, "We received information that there was a cask of weapons located on the island. The Army reported that there were a dozen weapons located "under rocks wrapped in plastic."

Mohawk Chief Joseph Norton said, "If there were any guns they were planted."

Bilingual Collegiate Program aids Latinos

By MAURA CANAVAN
Collegian Staff

When Roberto Ortiz arrived at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in the spring of 1985, he was immediately overwhelmed by his fear of speaking the English language and being surrounded by strangers. Not being preregistered did not help his situation.

Ortiz said he knew he was in for "a very rough time." After one glance at the bustling campus, Ortiz thought of flying back to his native home of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Two days later, his situation had not improved. With nowhere to turn, Roberto went to the Bilingual Collegiate Program to ask for help.

The professional staff immediately assisted Roberto in registering and selecting classes, explaining the add-drop system, and advising him about course requirements.

"Without this program, I would have transferred," said Ortiz, now a UMass graduate and staff member of the Bilingual Collegiate Program.

Located in Wilder Hall, the Bilingual Collegiate Program offers a variety of services to bilingual Spanish-speaking students desiring an undergraduate degree. The program, which was originally given a quota of 75 students, now serves nearly 600.

As Benjamin Rodriguez, director of the Bilingual Collegiate Program explained, the project was started in 1974 when thousands of Puerto Ricans emigrated to Western Massachusetts. Rodriguez said the University was originally not receptive to the idea of the program, which was initiated by a group of Latino students.

"It was a forced situation," Rodriguez said.

Project 75, as it was originally named, was formed to meet the needs of Latino students interested in attending the University. The program provides tutorial and counseling services as well as remedial programs in Math and English.

Members of the staff are also involved in

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Students fight back versus CLT

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Student leaders' call for student mobilization against the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition brought some 70 students together to set a campus agenda for fighting ballot question number three last night.

The petition, which will be on the Nov. 6 election ballot, calls for a tax rate rollback to 1988 levels. The rollback, if passed by voters, would cut $1.4 billion from the $4.4 billion of state discretionary funding in the middle of the fiscal year.

State legislator use discretionary state monies to fund education, roads and bridges and human services.

Student Trustee Angus McQuilken translated the $1.4 billion cut to the University level. He said although UMass has already lost $29 million in the last three years, the petition could cut an additional $30-35 million which would be 40 percent of the campus budget.

"A tax rollback would bring drastic tuition hikes and huge layoffs to this campus," he said.

John Hite, a Town Democratic Committee of Amherst member, said they have rented a headquarters on N. Pleasant St. to utilize in the fight against CLT. The building has been rented through donations.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

GSS and SGA fail to stop EWC cuts

Vice Chancellor Madson recognizes need for discussion

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

Representatives of the Graduate Student Senate and Student Government Association failed to convince the Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, Dennis Madson and other administrators to rescind the cuts affecting the Everywoman's Center at last night's Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Council meeting.

The EWC has already had six positions cut out of 11 in the past two years. The two positions that were cut this semester were relocated to University Mental Health Services and to Financial Aid.

The GSS this week sent a letter to Madson expressing their anger at the latest round of cuts to the EWC and Division of Student Affairs.

GSS Vice President Marc Kenen objected to not being informed of the latest cut because the GSS gives EWC $8,000 yearly.

"... We would like to call your attention to the cuts to the EWC, which has once again been disproportionately targeted. Over the years, the EWC has become an institution that women and men both on and off campus have come to regard as central to university life.

"We call on you to put a halt to the cuts and/or reassignments in your division, and to set up a joint committee with the SGA and GSS representatives to review and recommend appropriate adjustments," GSS officials wrote.

GSS President Pierre Laliberte asked for a formal process in which the GSS could be notified and then discuss cuts before they occur.

Madson said that he has time constraints but would retain the Council meetings as a forum in which cuts could be discussed between the student governments and the administration.

"Process needs to be one of suggestions. I am open to thoughts of how we can communicate better," Madson said.

Laliberte said, "We cannot give informed input unless you give us information."

Natasha Diephuis, SGA President, said, "It is primary to the mission statement of the University to have the EWC. We are concerned that given these cuts and more to come that it will not be around next semester."

Madson said that he recognized the need to have an EWC and he would like it to be around next year."

Laliberte asked if there was anyway Madson could reverse the cuts.

Madson replied that the next round of cuts would be implemented and the EWC positions would not be restored.

Diephuis said, "It is really hard to see a conference last semester such as 'UMass Acts to End Date Rape' and then come back this semester to find two positions have been cut from the EWC."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003.
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Mulher
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editor — Amy Henry
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Marc Pruskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski, Rory Evans
Graphics

New England s largest college daily newspaper Circulation 21,000 Published every weekday during the calendar semester The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts

For Your Information

For your information, this is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publicaion. We reserve the right to edit for space.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19

Rosh Hashanah— sponsored by UMass Hillel, 7 p.m. Service and Kiddush in the Student Union Ballroom. Also, Sept. 20, 10 a.m. Service and Tashlich. 7 p.m. Service and Kiddush. Friday, Sept. 21, 10 a.m. Service. For more information, call 549-1710.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20

Recycling Meeting— at 7 p.m., there will be a meeting for all students interested in volunteering to promote recycling on campus. Meet at the Bluewall with your ideas for promoting the Residential Recycling program. We will discuss tabling and other ways of promoting recycling at UMass. Call Rochelle Chambless at 545-1153 for more information.

Supper— Wesley United Methodist Church College Fellowship will reconvene at 6 p.m. at Thompson House for a light supper. Thompson House is located in back of Wesley Church at 365 North Pleasant St. Interested students are invited.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

Mt. Tom Toddler Tromp— A child-focused interpretive walk for toddlers and/or babies-in-packs and their parents. The length and difficulty of this outing will depend on the ability and interests of the group. Meet at the Bray Lake parking area in the Mt. Tom Reservation at 10:30 a.m. and bring liquid and a snack. Please call Mary (413) 534-1320 in advance to sign up. Rain cancels.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

Bicycle Tour— An intermediate tour of about 30 miles with a long climb to Shutesbury and 2-3 brief rest stops. This is a fairly strenuous ride and participants should be experienced cyclists in good condition. Meet at the Mill River Conservation Area in North Amherst at 9 a.m. and bring liquid and a helmet. Expect to return by about 12:30 p.m. Call Mike (413) 572-4743 for more information.

Save UP TO $160

Famous Double Discount

Now's the time to get the best deal on your college ring. Buy now and save up to $80 on your college ring, and get a second discount – a free "savings match" gift certificate – good for merchandise in the store. Choose from an exciting selection of men's and women's ring styles. Talk to your ArtCarved representative today and double your savings.

ARTCARVED
Mon - Fri
Sept. 17-21
9:30-3:30
UNIVERSITY STORE

You are cordially invited to attend
A Piano Recital
by
Kyung-Mi Lee

Works by: Mozart, Debussy, Schuman, Liszt

Miss Lee was the first Korean musician to attract the attention of Mr. Dmitriji Kitayenko, Music Director of the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra in the U.S.S.R.
She received her B.M., M.M. and Graduate Diploma from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston as a fellowship student. Miss Lee received many prizes from national competitions including First Prize at the Youngtown Symphony Orchestra Artist Piano Competition in Ohio.
Miss Lee was the first Korean musician to be invited from the Bulgarian government as a cultural exchange artist and played with Sofia Symphonietta under Oliver Holt.

AT THE BEZANSON RECITAL HALL
(FINE ARTS CENTER • UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, AMHERST)
September 19th, 1990
Wednesday at 8:00pm
FREE ADMISSION

LOCAL

Keyes speaks on self-determination

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

The establishment of democratically elected governments in the Middle East must be a precondition for Palestinian self-determination in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, according to Dr. Alan Keyes, a U.S. diplomat and a scholar who spoke at the Campus Center auditorium last night.

Keyes said the issue of Palestinian self-determination and Israeli security is closely linked, and that the democratically- elected government of Israel will not negotiate with an Arab state which does not have "a representative government with a responsibility to its own people."

Keyes served as the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Economic and Social Council and as an Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs during the Ronald Reagan adminstration.

"The establishement of self-determination and democratic governments in the Middle East is not going to be possible until Arabs will come to terms with themselves," said Keyes.

Referring to the demand that Israelis provide self-determination for Palestinian Arabs in the West Bank, Keyes said that "Israel cannot give it because it didn't take it away."

According to Keyes, Great Britain is responsible for leaving West Bank and Jordan under the legacy on non-democratic regimes. He blames Great Britain for turning Arab majority into the hands of the minority regime headed by the Hashimite kingdom of Jordan when Palestine was partitioned by the United Nations in 1947.

Keyes said that the consequences of not creating a democratic Arab state are presently being felt.

It is for that reason that Israel cannot presently negotiate either with King Hussein of Jordan or the Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat, he said.

Israel cannot negotiate with Arafat even under the assumption that he is sincere about recognizing Israel's right to exist, Keyes said.

"Arafat can give a promise of trading land for peace, but he can't guarantee it," Keyes said referring to the factional strife in the PLO over which Arafat does not exercise control.

Arafat claims to represent the people but he cannot guarantee peace," Keyes said. "King Hussein can keep the peace but he does not represent the people."

Keyes condemned Arab states that are pressuring Israel to negotiate for Palestinian self-determintaion and government.

"They speak glibly of human rights and self-determination in Israel when they deprive their own citizens of that right."

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

Dr. Alan Keyes

Theta Chi regains charter, hangs letters

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

The men nicknamed "the North Pleasant Street Social Club" are no longer. Theta Chi fraternity yesterday regained their charter and hung their Greek letters on their house.

The Greek Affairs Office approved Theta Chi's application after the fraternity received unanimous approval by the Greek Area Expansion Committee and the Greek Council.

The fraternity's status was revoked March 1989 by Greek Affairs for violating probation. The fraternity, which was on a "trial colony run," was banned from campus after holding an unauthorized keg party, a violation of University regulations.

Theta Chi was the second fraternity to be banned that academic year by Greek Affairs, the overseer for the system. In October 1988, Alpha Tau Gamma lost Greek status because of a hazing incident. The fraternity has not sought reinstatement.

President Mike Rowe said Theta Chi, which reorganized as the North Pleasant Street Social Club after its status was lifted, has carefully revised the structure of the house. He said younger members with more of a stake in the future of the house will hold leadership positions rather than seniors who have a "who cares" attitude.

"We have stricter policies and members that are much more responsible," he said. "We also have a live-in advisor – the only fraternity on campus with one."

He said major improvements in the North Pleasant Street house have also been made. Rowe said with the financial support of fraternity alumni, new windows, decks and carpeting have been installed.

Rowe, a senior management major, said the fraternity during the past year and a half has operated as

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Collegian photo by Toni Sandys

Theta Chi

Money for construction to be OK'd

Rebuilt highway and third Harbor tunnel to survive budget talks

BOSTON (AP) — Money for a rebuilt highway and third tunnel under Boston Harbor will survive budget summit talks continuing today in Washington, House Speaker Thomas Foley (D-Wash.), predicted.

Speaking to a group of Boston business leaders Monday, Foley said the secret budget summit between congressional leaders and Bush administration officials must cut spending programs and raise taxes on the economy will be endangered.

But the multi-billion dollar reconstruction of the downtown Central Artery here and completion of a third tunnel under Boston Harbor will likely survive the budget trimming, Foley said.

Touching on the importance of stimulating economic growth by maintaining the nation's roads and bridges, Foley said the Boston project was a part of a national maintenance plan.

"My general concern for the advancement of the infrastructure does not exclude the completion of this very needed project," Foley said to loud applause.

Speaking to reporters after the speech, Foley said,"I think the project is going to be completed." He said there might be some reduction in the share borne by the federal government.

In another area of concern to the Northeast, Foley indicated that the participants in the budget summit are cool to the idea of an oil import tax.

The proposal was aired last week by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, as one of several revenue-raising measures. Northeastern lawmakers strongly oppose the idea since their energy-dependent region would hear the brunt of the cost while oil-producing states would benefit from higher oil prices.

Foley is committed to secrecy on the details of the budget summit, taking place at Andrews Air Force Base outside of Washington, D.C. But he said proposals that place a heavier burden on any one region or group of people would not pass muster.

"We're very concerned not to have special burdens placed on any region of the country or on any group of people as much as that can," Foley said. "We're very conscious of the fact that particular proposal would have a regional impact."

The goals of the budget summit, Foley said, go against the nature of most elected officials. In most cases, politicians want to improve federal programs and, if possible, cut taxes. The summit process, Foley said, requires lawmakers to raise taxes and cut programs.

The negotiators, who include House and Senate leaders of both parties and Bush administration officials, have little choice, Foley said. If they fail to reach an agreement to cut $50 billion in spending by Oct. 1 automatic cuts of roughly $100 billion would kick in.

Foley said the key sticking point among the budget summit participants is whether, in exchange for a Republican-backed reduction in the capital gains tax, the tax "hubble," which provides a lower income tax rate for the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Malone honored by students again

By COLLEEN JOYCE
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts School of Management Professor James D. Malone has once again been named Marketing Professor of the Year for the fifth time in the last eight years by his students.

Malone came to the University to teach and administrate in the Management Development Program of Continuing Education ten years ago. He came to the School of Management in 1984.

Because Malone teaches popular courses like Sales Management, Advertising and Fundamentals of Marketing most SOM students come across him in class.

Prior to joining the University, Malone said he spent 28 years in the marketing industry, from salesperson to vice-president, enabling him to teach his courses from a practical standpoint.

"I like to do it that way because it enables me to lend a balance from theoretical teaching to practical experience," Malone said. "I like to make class as interesting as possible so that when they come, the atmosphere is beneficial to the learning process.

"I want them seriously to get something out of it and to come to class because they want to, not because they have to."

Sarah Brown, a senior Marketing student, said, "[Malone] is one of those professors that's really willing to go the extra mile for you and really cares about his students. He also adds to the class with his real life experience and insight."

"He really deserves this honor," said Tom Blake, a UMass SOM graduate said. "He puts in his time and is there anytime you want to talk to him, even for things such as advice on career choices and resumes."

Malone said he cannot say enough about his colleagues, students, and the University.

"For ten years I've enjoyed teaching and as long as I'm able to be here I will seriously continue to enjoy the teachers, students, and atmosphere," he said.

Collegian staff photo

Professor James Malone

Silber, Weld victorious

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"Under the Democrats who have controlled our state government for the past several years, Massachusetts has lost its way. The politicians on Beacon Hill have grown arrogant and cynical. Too many years of unchallenged power. They're concerned with only protecting their jobs, their patronage and their net programs," Weld declared to cheering supporters.

Silber had been considered an underdog to Bellotti, who won the endorsement at the June Democratic State Convention and has led in political polls through most of the campaign.

"Some must win and some must lose," Pierce said. "The future of Massachusetts depends on Republican victory in November."

"A lot of cobwebs are forming at the door," said Mosakowski. "The polls will be open 13 hours and most precincts will be lucky to get 350 people to vote all day. The voter apathy is absolutely terrible," said Mosakowski.

Despite "low voter turnout", Mosakowski said Precinct 5 was 'busier than most' with a total voter turnout of 632 by the late afternoon.

"I was surprised at the low turnout considering all the hype about the tons of people who would be coming out this election,' said Precinct 10 pollster Mary Andrews.

"It certainly didn't happen here," she said.

Most precincts particularly noted the 'scarcity' of student voters. According to Andrews, about 70 registered voters from the Southwest North residential area had cast ballots in precinct 10 and even fewer had appeared at other precincts.

Bilingual Collegiate Program

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

a program called Outreach, designed to encourage Latino students in the seventh and eighth grades to excel in education. Staff members talk to both students and parents to emphasize the importance of education.

Groups of these parents and students are brought to the university to see firsthand the world of higher education. The efforts of this program can help decrease the 67 percent dropout rate of Latino high school students, Ortiz said.

Rodriguez talked about their need to truly reach the middle school age students to emphasize the possibilities that exist in education.

The program also assists students in adjusting to life at UMass and succeeding in their academic studies. According to Ortiz, bilingual staff advisers are always willing to help students to offer academic, personal and guidance counseling as well as financial advising. These tutors are offered by the program at no cost to the student.

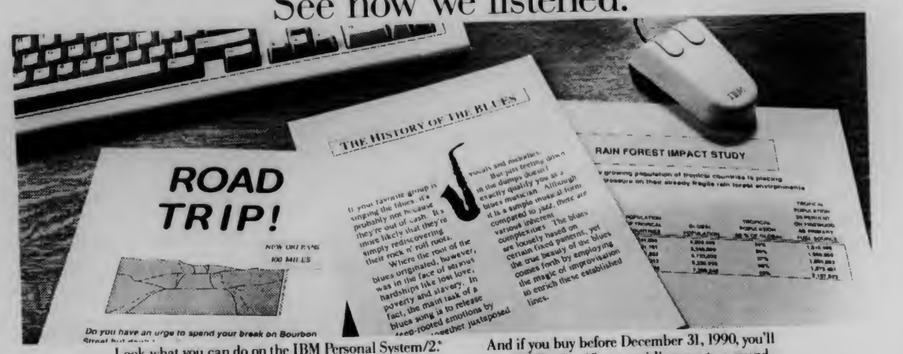
Carmen Gutierrez, a graduate of the university through the Bilingual Collegiate Program, described the program as one in which "your progress is followed closely."

"At the Bilingual Collegiate Program," Gutierrez said, "students are always welcome."

THE BACK ROOM
Cafe & Lounge
50c Drafts (GD)
Sept 22-29
Sat. Sept 22, Miller Giveaways
& D.J. all night
Mondays 25c hot dogs during the game
Cable TV - Major Sports Channels
★ Entertainment Saturday Nights
Thursday and Friday Night Free Hors D'oeuvres
COCKTAILS★FULL BAR★MUNCHIES
★POOL TABLE ★
LUNCH (soup, salad, sandwiches)
limited dinner menu
37 State Street, Belchertown 323-5818
Rte. 202
(Behind C & C Health and Fitness)

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS
Hiring Now For The School Year
Interesting, part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm, and Saturday, 11am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $5.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to maximum $6.00/hr.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, 586-8635.
Abt Associates Inc.
Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035
An Equal Opportunity Employer

You said you wanted to turn in papers that turn heads.
See how we listened.



Look what you can do on the IBM Personal System/2.*
And with the easy-to-use preloaded software, including Microsoft® Windows™ 3.0, writing papers is only the beginning. Just point and click the mouse to move text. Create graphics, charts, even spreadsheets, or do other projects like resumés and flyers.
Plus, the PS/2s* and select printers are available at special student prices.* Print impressive output with the IBM Proprinter,™ IBM LaserPrinter E or the Hewlett-Packard PaintJet® color graphics printer.
And if you buy before December 31, 1990, you'll receive a TWA® Certificate entitling you to a round-trip ticket for $149/$249. Plus a free TWA Getaway® Student Discount Card application. You'll also get a great low price on the PRODIGY® service.
If you want to start turning heads with your work, there's really only one place to turn...the IBM PS/2.
UNIVERSITY STORE
Open:
Mon.-Fri. 9-5 Sat. 10-3
Located in the Campus Center
*This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice. Valid for any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for travel September 16, 1990 through December 19, 1991 at the following round trip fares: $149.00 round trip for travel from September 16, 1990 through June 14, 1991, and September 16, 1991 through December 19, 1991 $249.00 round trip for travel June 15, 1991 through September 15, 1991. Seats are limited. Fare is non-refundable. 14 day advance purchase, blackout dates and certain other restrictions apply. Complete details will be shown on certificate. Applicants for TWA's Getaway Student Discount Card must be full time students between the ages of 16–26. †IBM Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. Microsoft is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation. Paint Jet is a registered trademark of Hewlett Packard Company. TWA is a registered service mark of Trans World Airlines. Inc. TWA Getaway is a registered trademark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. PRODIGY® is a registered service mark and trademark of Prodigy Services Company a partnership of IBM and Sears. ††IBM Proprinter is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation. Windows is a trademark of Microsoft Corporation.
©IBM Corporation 1990
IBM®

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Fitting everything into life

"I haven't taken Spanish in about 10 years," the woman sitting beside me says.

"How old are you?," I ask.

"Twenty-eight."

Twenty-eight!

I walked into Spanish 120 feeling nervous about participating in discussion, worrying about picking up a fifth class and straining my mind over when I could possibly find the time to pick up some more hours at work.

The woman I sat next to did not look 28. I really didn't care at the time, though . . . what, with all my worries, are you kidding?

David Erickson

The day was warm, and I had to rub the sweat from my brow and temple every few moments. I thought of how pleasant it would be when October finally settled over the valley. Its cool air dying the leaves, plucking them from their branches. A couple of months later the first snowfall would arrive. Pretty soon, I'd be praying for spring.

I passed the back of my hand over my forehead and it came away wet. Looking at the woman, I noticed she didn't appear comfortable in the microwave of a classroom. I also noticed there was something naggingly familiar about her.

"Where did you take Spanish last?"

"High school, back in New York. . ."

The woman's name is Jill. She tells me she's been waiting tables in Cape Cod for what "feels like forever," but was actually eight years. While working, she completed two years of community college. I find out she's an artist and that some of her works have appeared in galleries on the Cape. I ask her if they helped her pay the rent. Grinning, she shakes her head.

Waiting tables wasn't for her. She didn't want to end up being 55, still saying, "What can I get you?" Through our conversation I discover that she has a seven-year-old daughter and a five-year-old son.

"How do you like UMass?"

"It's all right. I'm glad to get home everyday, though."

Home is Belchertown, in an apartment above a Chinese restaurant. She plans to go and ask if they need help nights, but it is hard with the kids.

I think, yeah, I know how hard it is to find time to work.

Yeah, right.

It suddenly dawns on me what is so familiar about this 28-year-old mother of two.

She reminds me of many people I used to work with; many of them were Jill's age, working part time, wishing they had more, wishing they were more, settling for what they feel unfairly stuck with, but always maintaining a smile. Yet, they are all unhappy.

What can I get you?

Jill has a strength which separates her from all these people. I can't help but admire and respect her, regardless of how little I know her. I feel a need to advocate her cause.

A minute later our instructor enters the room and says, "Buenos tardes!" I open my notebook, hardly worrying about participating in class any longer.

David Erickson is a UMass student

We're really not like that

"But we're not really like that. Honestly, guys. We don't, uh, oh, God, this is so embarrassing."

I said this more than once last year when I was on exchange in England.

I have some bad news. The U.S. has an image problem.

I know what you're thinking. "Nooooo kidding." Some of you may even think that we are the favorite scapegoat for the world's problems. But I'm not talking about that. I'm talking about what people overseas think of us just from what they see on television and in the cinema.

Pamela McCarthy

When I spent a year in Sheffield, England I was mildly amused at the ideas people had about us Yanks. I couldn't understand how some people got the idea that we were all rich, backstabbing, war mongers who lived in a violent, crime-ridden country.

Then I turned on the tube. Then I checked out the film listings. I don't think I will ever say "We're not all like that," so many trillions of times again.

At first I thought we just exported our garbage to the British. Then I realized this garbage was well-loved in the U.S.

Why do people overseas think our society is so much more dangerous and violent than theirs? Gee, I don't know. Could it be the world according to Miami Vice? You know, that program where vice cops dress like millionaire pimps and drive sports cars, while killing people to pop music. I don't know about any other city, but there are always car explosions and shootouts involving well-dressed cops and a cranking musical score in Boston. Come on. Those cops would never be seen again; they'd be buried alive under a mountain of paperwork.

Of course, we also have movies to make us seem like the rowdy rah-rah Yankees so many folks think we are. Rambo flicks for one. You know, the films where Sylvester Stallone would grunt, drool, yell and kill a bunch of Vietnamese and Communists. Gotta love those good ol' boys like Stallone; they do so much for our image. We better not have the gall to wonder why everyone thinks we are always itching for a fight — even if we're not currently fighting with anyone.

The rich American? Look to Dallas, Dynasty and Knots Landing. Watch a television show where the characters have sex, backstab, wear more sequins than Michael Jackson ever saw in his life, have sex, tease their hair, have sex and wear so much make up that they need a cement mixer to put it on. Watch that and don't feel embarrassed. I dare you. (And remember, this is the country where Jackie Collins' story Hollywood Wives got funding for a T.V. movie.)

All Americans are tan and hang out at the beach a lot. At least, according to Baywatch they do. Never have I seen lifeguarding look so glamourous. One of my housemates always insisted on putting the god-awful waste of perfectly good celluloid on. I think she did it to watch me — it was on during dinner, and it was a real feat for me to hold my food down.

American youth does nothing but have sex and drink. We don't, according to Porky's and its ilk. American females constantly show their breasts and squeal; American males drink lots of light beer and belch (okay, so in many instances, that's true); everyone has sex, but no one gets any STDs and no one gets pregnant. We are magical people in that respect, I suppose.

Any good American programs get air time on channel 4 — much like our own Channel 2 (PBS). Can you say kiss of death? No one watches channels like that because they figure only a social outcast who has an extensive dead insect collection watches it. So in the United Kingdom, no one bothers to watch some of our semi-intelligent hits such as the Cosby Show, Kate and Allie and Thirtysomething. They aren't perfect, but they are a far cry from Miami Vice and Dallas.

"Really. We're not like that. Well, not all of us. . ."

Read Pamela McCarthy every Wednesday

Political commitment forgotten

In reference to Gayle Long's column ("The Politics of Football," Sept. 17), I am writing to offer the community the other side of the story.

First, as a true connoisseur of the game of football, I do not need Ms. Long to remind me of the importance of opening day. However, her belief that opening day at UMass takes precedence over the ensuing governor's race is one of the underlying reasons that our state is in such a mess.

Tuesday's election could change the course of our state forever. Therefore, it is of the utmost importance that EVERY registered voter chooses a candidate and votes. The political apathy among voters in this state and in the country is just as big of a problem as the mismanagement on Beacon Hill.

Second, I believe that those fans, whom Ms. Long says were unsupportive of the literature, were in the minority. Many of the people to whom I gave this literature were enthusiastic about both the content and its sponsors. Even those from whom I sensed political dissention seemed to at least respect me for being committed and trying to make a difference.

Glen Caroline
President, UMass Republican Club

Questioning of Supreme Court nominee not deep enough

Barring any startling revelations falling out of the sky over the Senate Judiciary Committee, Judge David Souter will be confirmed as an Associate Supreme Court Justice in very short order.

How, one may ask, can such an important vacancy be filled without more apparent scrutiny? Where are the personal freedom loving forces that combined to stop Robert Bork?

Granted, much of the attention the Souter hearings deserve has been overshadowed by the Gulf crisis (a coincidence, or some very key timing by the White House staff?) and Souter's own taciturn and monkish lifestyle has taken a lot of the sheen off the process as well (he is no Doug Ginsberg). But President Bush's first Supreme Court nominee, whose selection has the opportunity to fully tilt the Court in a certain direction, surely deserves more questioning and senatorial skepticism.

Why are many Democrats on the committee giving him such an easy time? It may be that many Democratic senators are quite content with David Souter and would not mind him sitting on the High Court.

During the other morning's hearings our nominee voiced support for constitutional precedent-setting cases including Miranda v. Arizona, the arrested person's Bill of Rights, Baker v. Carr, which outlawed gerrymandering in Illinois and Griswald v. Connecticut, which allowed public dissemination of contraception.

Judge Souter also expressed his support for privacy codes and his disagreement with school prayer and admitted to being mistaken for attempting to defend New Hampshire's school prayer law in 1975 as the state's attorney general. These all appear to be moderate, if not progressive positions.

However, make no mistake, Judge Souter is no liberal. We should not expect former Justices Warren or Goldberg to suddenly reappear.

Jason Kofman

He has stated that he believes the death penalty is constitutional, and he is certainly not expected to embrace affirmative action or comparable worth, although he does appear to measure his responses during the hearings with a sense of New England pragmatism and common sense. Yesterday he even went so far as to admit that the New Hampshire school prayer law he wanted to defend 15 years ago was a "Constitutional defect." This is important because Judge Souter does not seem to be following the conservative mold of the long line of Reagan Supreme Court nominees.

It is a given that he is a conservative judge. And that is inherent within the ideology of the Bush administration. However, it is a brand of conservatism that is much different from the Reagan ideologue that Justices Scalia and Kennedy, and to a lesser extent O'Connor, represent.

History shows us that certain "conservative" justices have ended up being quite liberal, like Justices Blackmun, Stevens and Warren. So, maybe there is something to the grumbling that appeared over the weekend from many Reagan leftovers, who thought Judge Souter was not taking a hard enough line in his conservatism.

And maybe there is reason why many senators on the Judiciary Committee are not giving him such a hard time. Appearing as a conservative from New Hampshire and a Bush appointee, we the people may have been handed a more moderate Justice-to-be than we thought, dressed up in traditional conservatism — although it is difficult to believe that people like Chief of Staff Sununu would be so supportive of a moderate player.

But Judge Souter just turned 51 and will most likely serve for the better part of two decades, and having a consistent, pragmatic stable voice on the bench of benches may be the legacy the Bush people and many Democratic senators are looking for.

His appointment is a given, but we now know the reasons behind the lack of opposition.

Jason Kofman is a UMass student budget summit

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

"This is the main if not only sticking point," Foley said. He said he would personally oppose a capital gains cut, "if it has the sole effect of eliminating from higher income Americans the Burden of deficit reduction."

Republicans led by President Bush have long sought a capital gains cut as a way to promote investment and stimulate the economy. The move would reduce the tax on profits earned by the sale of property such as real estate, stocks, and artwork.

Democrats criticize a capital gains cut as primarily a benefit to the wealthy. But Democratic budget negotiators have said they would go along if, in exchange, Republicans agree to some sort of tax increase on the wealthy. A leading proposal would eliminate a current anomaly in the system which taxes the upper middle class at a 33 percent rate yet taxes the wealthiest Americans at a lower 28 percent level. The Democratic proposal would knock the rate on the wealthiest up to 33 percent.

Summit participants, Foley said, should make sure that whatever plan they draft spreads the burden evenly among businesses and taxpayers of various income levels a boarding house but has continued charity pursuits. Theta Chi, now among 22 UMass fraternities and sororities, is active in children's causes and especially in the American Heart Association.

Theta Chi

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Director of Greek Affairs Edward Korza said he granted Theta Chi full recognition status with a year probationary period because of the "comprehensive" application submitted by the fraternity. He said he expects the fraternity to be a "model" other Greek houses will emulate.

"If something goes awry it's their neck on the chopping block," he said. "They have to prove themselves as an outstanding member of the Greek community."

Korza said next September he will review the fraternity's record and either recommend continued probation or lift the restriction.

Secretary Chris Litster said the fraternity will now immediately start rush to bolster the sagging membership. He said only eight original members now remain since the group lost recognition.

"Things have changed with the fraternity and with the organization of the fraternity," the senior French major said. "And we have a house that looks good — and we want to keep it that way."

CLT

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

He criticized how closely Barbara Anderson, the executive director of CLT, has been watching the student government to enforce state campaign laws which forbid state employees from using state facilities or funds for campaign purposes. The SGA must abide by these campaign laws.

"Together we can use the headquarters so that Barbara Anderson doesn't complain that we are using state funds or standing on state carpet to fight CLT," Hite said.

McQuilken said all students, in-state and out-of-state, should register in Amherst by Oct. 9 in order to vote against the petition on Nov.6.

"We should turn out in droves because this is a pressing issue," he said.

Massachusetts Public Interest Group has designated Oct.2 and Oct.3 as their voter registration drive days. McQuilken encouraged students to abandon "their disgustingly poor record of not voting" for this election. Out of all age groups, people of the 18-to-22-year-old age bracket have the lowest percentage of voters, he said.

Students attending the meeting established area directors who will mobilize their residential area. The headquarter will provide a place for students to team up their efforts with the Town Democratic Committee and the Campaign for Massachusetts' Future, an human services advocacy organization which has opposed CLT.

FREE CD TO THE FIRST 25 VISITORS!

Come to Zenith Data Systems'

SOUND DECISIONS

And Win A Sony® Portable Discman® With Speakers In Our On-Campus Rockin' Raffle!

ZENITH DATA SYSTEMS INNOVATES AGAIN™

Be sure to take part in the most exciting event on campus. Just drop in for some fun and a chance to win a Sony Discman with Speakers in Zenith Data Systems' Rockin' Raffle!

Win A Prize To The Tune Of $10,000 In Our SOUND DECISIONS MUSIC TRIVIA CONTEST!

When you stop by, you'll also find out how you can participate in the major musical event of the school year—Zenith Data Systems' SOUND DECISIONS MUSIC TRIVIA CONTEST! You could win a $10,000 Sony Surround Sound/Projection TV Home Entertainment Center, a Sony Discman with Speakers, a Sony Sports Walkman,® or any of thousands of other great prizes!

More Prizes Worth Singing About Just For Stopping By!

In addition to a chance at winning a Sony Discman in our on-campus raffle, you could take home a FREE CD—featuring a variety of popular recording artists—just for being one of the first 25 visitors to show up. So get in line early!

Be Sure To Stop By And Find Out More About Our SOUND DECISIONS MUSIC TRIVIA CONTEST!

Hear Here:

September 18 & 19
at the
Campus Center
9:00am - 5:00pm

For more information on our SOUND DECISIONS MUSIC TRIVIA CONTEST, call 1-800-553-0559

Hurry! Contest Ends November 15, 1990!

ZENITH data systems
Groupe Bull

UNIVERSITY STORE

No purchase necessary. Void where ...ed by law. See contest rules on entry form for complete details. Estimated retail value: Discman with Speakers, $350.00; Walkman, $75.00; Compact Disc, $15.00. Raff... ...ng will be held at conclusion of event. Raffle participants need not be present to win. Sony, Discman and Walkman are registered trademarks of Sony Corporation of America. Graphics simulate Microsoft® Windows™ version 3.0, a product of Microsoft Corporation. © 1990 Zenith Data Systems Corporation.

YOU COULD BUY A HIGH PRICED SYSTEM FROM ANOTHER COMPUTER BUSINESS...

OR YOU COULD BUY A SYSTEM FROM ACI AND TAKE A VACATION!

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO CHECK OUT ACI'S BIG SAVINGS, QUALITY SERVICE AND MERCHANDISE BEFORE YOU BUY.

ACI AMERICAN COMPUTER INNOVATORS
259 Triangle Street, Amherst, MA 01002 549-0701

LEGAL PROBLEMS?
Call the Legal Services Center of UMass!

HOUSING · FAMILY · STUDENT RIGHTS · CIVIL RIGHTS · WORKERS RIGHTS · CRIMINAL AND CONSUMER LAW ·

Legal Services Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01060

Call 545-1995

Kennedy

screen graphics

QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR AT REASONABLE PRICES
T-SHIRTS SWEATSHIRTS CAPS JACKETS
APRONS GOLF SHIRTS TEAM SHIRTS
COMPUTER GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413) 584-2124 1-800-287-2124

ARTS & LIVING

Cast shines in Postcards

By GEORGE LENTZ
Collegian Staff

One of the great joys of being a human being is that sense of accomplishment after a great struggle. Some would argue that it's this very sense of achievement and earned gratification that enables us to endure our troubles in life. But for those who have never felt the rewards of labor — who have never had to work for anything — life is filled with very little meaning. They look around and recognize that they're living a privileged life, but for some reason they don't feel it. They're oblivious to their own lives and set out to find other means of gratification. For some, that search for self-discovery can lead to drugs.

Photo courtesy Columbia Pictures

Actress Suzanne Vale (Meryl Streep) is indignant that her mother, legendary star Doris Mann (Shirley MacLaine) still treats her like a child in Postcards From the Edge.

THE SCREENING ROOM

Mike Nichols' Postcards from the Edge is a film about that journey to self-discovery. Meryl Streep plays a troubled actress, the daughter of a successful but aging movie queen (Shirley MacLaine), whose only sense of self-satisfaction stems from a cocaine habit. But when a one-night stand with smooth talking producer Dennis Quaid ends in a near-fatal overdose, Streep goes through rehab and is later forced by the studios to live under MacLaine's care if she wants to keep working.

The film is based upon Carrie Fisher's novel of the same name, which dealt with her drug addiction and her troubled relationship with her mother, actress Debbie Reynolds. And even though Fisher maintains that both the book and the film (adapted by her) are semi-autobiographical, you still sense a large degree of reflection. Much of the film focuses on the mother-daughter struggle as Streep tries to break free of the iron grip MacLaine's been using to mend their estranged relationship.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
Cinema Paradisio
Mon-Thur one show 7:30
Fri-Sun two shows 7:00 and 9:15
Student discount with valid ID $2.50

RUSH PIKE
THE FRATERNITY WITH A COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE
FALL 1990 OPEN RUSH
September 17, 18, 19, 25, 26 8-10 P.M.
418 North Pleasant Street 549-6251
ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

CARRY OUT COUPON
Buy ONE, Get ONE for 99¢
Buy Any Large Pizza Or 12" Pan Style Pizza and Get One of equal or lesser toppings for 99c!
Good on Carry Out only. Not Good With any other offer Expires 11-30-90

Open for Lunch and Open to 3AM
DOMINO'S PIZZA
Amherst 256-8911

DELIVERY COUPON
Buy ONE, Large or 12" Pan Style Pizza, and get ONE of equal or lesser toppings for $1.99 delivered in 30 min or less
Not good with any other offer Expires 11-30-90

EXCELLENCE IN JAPANESE CUISINE COOKED AT YOUR TABLE

Two Dinners for $15
Sukiyaki Steak & Chicken Combo
Includes soup, salad, veg, noodles, steamed rice, tea and icecream

Two Dinners for $18
Shrimp & Scallop Combo Dinner
Includes soup, salad, veg, noodles, steamed rice, tea and icecream

Specials available Tue., Wed., Thurs., Fri., and all day Sunday 2-9

Goten OF JAPAN
Rte 116, Sunderland, MA
Regular Menu available

Cocktails and Oriental Drinks
Open Tue.- Sat. at 5:00pm
Sundays at 2:00
Closed Mondays
413-665-3628
Reservations Welcome

TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

GRAVITRON
Computerized upper body conditioning

STAIRMASTERS
Ultimate low impact aerobic machines

AEROBICS DAILY
Donna Kelley AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY READERS POLL 1989 1st PLACE
Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"

NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL

Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. South Amherst Karate Health Fitness Center 256-0080

AIM HIGH

LOOKING FOR COLLEGE ASSISTANCE? LOOK TO AIR FORCE ROTC.

You may be eligible for a scholarship that can pay full college tuition, textbooks, fees ... and $100 each academic month.

Best of all, your future will get a boost that lasts a lifetime. You'll respond to the challenge to become a leader, graduating with a commission as an Air Force officer – an individual with solid management skills and an unlimited future.

This can be your world through Air Force ROTC.

Contact
CAPT RODLY J. MILLET
413-545-2451

AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

Good Advice — Honest Price.

NEW!

Boston Acoustics HD5 and HD7 Speakers

HD5 $143/pair
HD7 $189/pair

ONKYO TX-811 Receiver $185

ONKYO DX-1400 18-bit CD Player $187

ONKYO TA-W200 Dual Cassette Deck Fully Calibrated! $235

Five College delivery available.

Sound & Music

Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant • Northampton • 584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

University of Wisconsin Platteville

Study in Seville Spain

Emphasis in Liberal Arts International Business

Courses available in Spanish and in English

Fluency in Spanish not required

All courses approved by UW-Platteville and validated on an official UW-Platteville transcript

$9625 per semester for Wisconsin & Minnesota residents.
$9875 per semester for non-residents.

Costs include Tuition and Fees Room and Board in Spanish homes Fieldtrips

All financial aids apply

For further information contact Study Abroad Programs 308 Warner Hall University of Wisconsin-Platteville 1 University Plaza Platteville, WI 53818-3099 (608) 342-1726

screening room

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7

It's during one of their heated bouts that MacLaine, furious with Streep's irresponsibility and disrespect, exclaims, "I came from nowhere and made something out of my life. You come from somewhere and are trying to do nothing with yours." That line marks the beginning of Streep's self-discovery, a journey that comes to an end on a film set when she breaks down and admits, "I can't feel my life anymore."

It should be mentioned that Postcards is far and away from being an all-out drama, because it is in fact a wonderful satire directed by one of America's leading screen satirists, Mike Nichols. With Hollywood itself as their main target, Nichols and Fisher attack the high-pressured nature and the brute callousness of the industry in a manner that's as disarming as it is hilarious. But credit most of the laughs and much of the film's charm to Streep and MacLaine who are sensational together, generating a wonderful comic chemistry. They're a joy to watch as they throw verbal retorts back and forth with the force of a Mike Tyson uppercut.

Like all great satires, Postcards from the Edge does more than just poke fun at sacred cows and institutions: it's here to teach us a lesson; to let us know that it's not what we're given in life that causes us problems, but how we take what we're given.

Postcards from the Edge is now playing at Mount Farms Theater on Route 9 in Hadley.

FILM CLIPS: Andrew Lloyd Webber has finally decided on Flatliner's director Joel Schumacher to take the helm for the screen version of his Broadway smash, Phantom of the Opera.

Shooting is scheduled to begin in December with Michael Crawford and Sarah Brightman reprising their roles.

RESEARCH INFORMATION
Largest Library of information in U.S. - all subjects
Order Catalog Today with Visa/MC or COD
800-351-8222
BILL FAST (800) 351-8222
In Calif. (213) 477-8474
Or, rush $2.00 to: Research Information 11322 Idaho Ave. #206-A, Los Angeles, CA 90025

DON'T STAY HOME

Round Trips from New York starting at

London	$370
Paris	438
San Jose C.R.	370
Bangkok	929
Hongkong	849
Tokyo	759

Student and Faculty Fare
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change. One ways available. Work/Study abroad programs. International student and teacher ID.
EURAIL PASSES ISSUED ON THE SPOT!
FREE Student Travel Catalog!

Council Travel
71 So. Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002
413-256-1261

You are the eyes and ears of the Collegian.

If you see anything you think should be covered in the Collegian please call the paper at 545-3500

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM Tel: 549-2692

Super Location, Super Prices
Scott's Liquors!

Budweiser Suitcases 24-12 oz. cans $11.49+ Dep
$11.49

$6.39
Michelob Reg-Light-Dry 12-12 oz. cans $6.39+ Dep

Knickerbocker Beer 24-12 oz. cans $6.99+ Dep
$6.99

$13.49
Smirnoff Vodka 80 proof 1.75 L $13. 49

$6.99
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 750 ml $6.99

$10.99
Kahlua Liquer 750 ml $10.99

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE

6 University Drive, Newmarket Center, Amherst
Diagonally Across from the UMass Stadium
Plenty of FREE Parking
Telecheck for Your Personal Check

MPGA PLUS We Have It
We now have all Mass Lottery games!

Aerobics Instructors Wanted AFAA or IDEA Certified

Free weights:
Press Ahead!

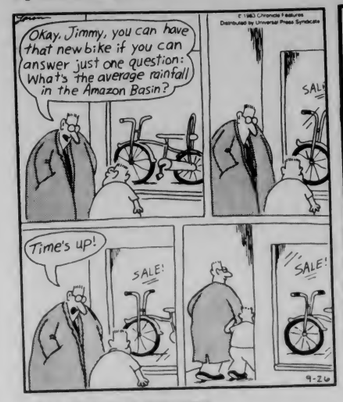
Students $185 NOW 'TIL MAY 21 1991
10 percent discount for normal membership

584-4975

NORTHAMPTON NAUTILUS, INC.
216 North King Street Northampton
Aerobics•Nautilus•Lifecycles •Tanning•Free Weights

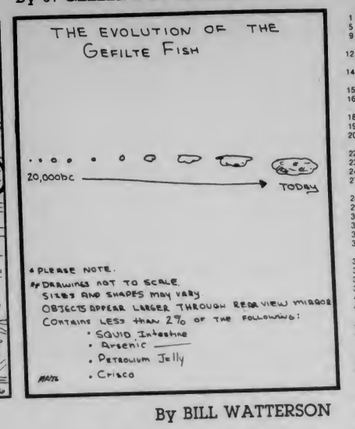
Call for Information

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON



Okay, Jimmy, you can have that new bike if you can answer just one question: What's the average rainfall in the Amazon Basin?
SALE!
Time's up!
SALE!
SALE!
9-20

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 — of the earth
5 Theda
9 New England cape
12 Middle Eastern titles
14 North Carolina college
15 Singe
16 Musical from a Shavian play
18 Wisdom
19 Judgment
20 — a small hotel
22 Bites
23 Covers
24 Prototypes
27 Visitors from Mars
28 Say yes
29 Aida and Arkin
30 TV's "L.A. —"
33 God of war
34 In a hurry
35 Part of a china set
36 — culpa
37 Corday's victim
38 Wash cycle
39 Silk fabrics
41 Take umbrage
42 Give My — to Broadway
44 Offspring: Abbr.
45 Loos and Louise
46 Filleted
50 Scale starters
51 Vehicle for Barbra and Carol
53 Misfortunes
54 Words of understanding
55 That: e.g.
56 Western hemisphere org.
57 Sunday seating
58 Roof part

DOWN
1 Ditto
2 Irving and Carter
3 Skiers transport
4 Recruits
5 Hits a homer
6 Wings
7 Steiger or Stewart
8 — Goes Cole Porter musical
9 Broadway's long-running smash, with "A 10 Sculled
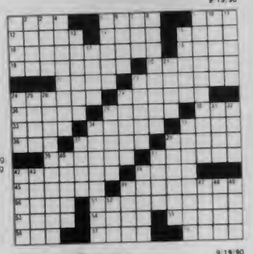
11 Kind of code
13 Figure of speech
15 Former Met — Jones
17 Sounds from the beyond
21 Formal legislative opinion: Abbr.
23 Diagonal
24 Yes —!
25 Fairy-tale heavy
26 Musical about songbirds
27 A.k.a.
29 Lew who played Dr. Kildare
31 Part of NAACP
32 Sharpen
34 Deprivation
35 Reveal
37 Variable star
38 Grayish green
40 Author Joyce Carol
41 Cole Porter's — Sweeney
42 One of the media
43 — Gay: historic plane
44 Rations
46 Played a trumpet
47 Lamb's pen name
48 Eastern European
49 Auld lang —
52 Journal ending

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

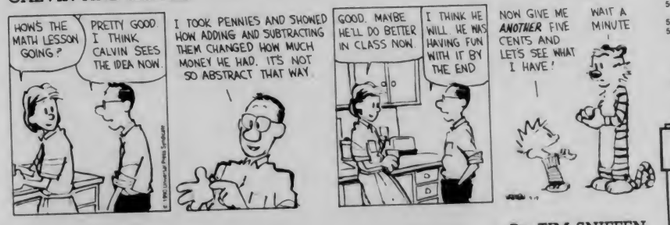
P	A	R	I	S		H	O	E		S	H	E	D
A	N	E	N	T		A	W	L		T	A	R	O
M	I	N	C	E	D	M	E	A	T		L	I	E
L	I	A	N	E		S	T	E	P	P	L	E	S
			D	F	T		E	R	N
L	O	S	S		O	R	A	T	E	D	E	M	A
A	B	E	T		B	R	A	I	N		O	R	A	L	S
D	O	N	O	T	M	I	N	C	E	W	O	R	D	S
S	E	N	O	R		I	L	E	S		D	I	E	T
		S	A	L	A	D		F	I	S		E	A	R	S
			I	R	S			S	E	T
T	R	A	I	T		A	T	E		N	O	R	M	A
H	E	R	R		M	I	N	C	E	D	O	A	T	H
I	A	G	O		A	L	O	D		A	L	L	O	T
S	L	O	W		E	S	P			T	E	L	P	S

9/19/90



9/19/90

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



HOW'S THE MATH LESSON GOING?
PRETTY GOOD I THINK. CALVIN SEES THE IDEA NOW
I TOOK PENNIES AND SHOWED HOW ADDING AND SUBTRACTING THEM CHANGED HOW MUCH MONEY WE HAD. IT'S NOT SO ABSTRACT THAT WAY
GOOD. MAYBE HE'LL DO BETTER IN CLASS NOW
I THINK HE WILL. HE WAS HAVING FUN WITH IT BY THE END
NOW GIVE ME ANOTHER FIVE CENTS AND LET'S SEE WHAT I HAVE!
WAIT A MINUTE

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Ah, hello, roommate. You're back from your little walk.
—and you seem to have aquired some packages. Some very large, Out-of-Your-Economic-Range packages.
Marcus, listen to me.
Through a Shawmut Instant Banking machine, God touched my life tonight. A wonderful thing has happened, and we are not going to question it.
so you've made the jump to crime.
Shut up and help unpack the jacuzzi.

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

HEY!! CHECK OUT THIS OLD LAMP I FOUND
IF WE SOLD THIS WE COULD GET SOME MONEY
PRICE, I WOULDN'T GIVE YOU A NICKLE OF SPIT FOR THAT OLD RUST POT
GOOD, THEN I'LL GIVE YOU A DIME'S WORTH OF PAIN.

IT AIN'T EASY BEING CHEESY OK...
I call bullshit on that
We could train your dog to be a killer!!
HAMMM
PLOT
BOY AND HIS BLOB
NO BIG WORDS!
Contained by Stanley Greenberg

MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Deli Ham on Water Roll	Rib Roast of Beef
Boston Burger	Chicken Cordon Bleu
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Tomato and Egg Sandwich	Country Strudel
Garden Chili	Broccoli and Cheese Chicken

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Answer business correspondence promptly or you could miss out on a golden opportunity. A loved one's actions make a tough decision much easier. Idle gossip could upset important plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful! Secret transactions could put you in a bind. The money you receive might not be worth the sacrifice you must make. Do not pursue personal pleasures at the expense of your career.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Social events are especially enjoyable now. Romance gives you the extra glow, and you are eager for tonight's activities to get under way. Listen to an expert when it comes to financial decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Catch up on chores you have been trying to ignore. Those closest to you go along with your plans. Business associates are surprisingly eager to work with you. Be aware of hidden motives.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The imminent arrival of someone special could be responsible for your good mood today. Rely on your own efforts to resolve any difficulties. A friend's advice may be inappropriate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The busy day could find you involved with meetings and travel. The end result will be highly favorable. You may decide to cancel your social plans and relax at home this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial matters are easier to handle now. Be proud of your talents and abilities. Others will not realize how really good you are if you constantly downplay or dismiss your accomplishments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Invite people to share in a venture that could earn big money for everyone involved. A practical, long-range approach meets with great success. Romance and good luck go hand-in-hand now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may feel like kicking yourself over an investment. Stop looking back! You are entering a period of great promise and good times. Romance beckons.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep a low profile if you feel you may have overstepped your authority. Exercise leaves you feeling fit. Your mate deserves to be told the truth about a financial matter. Speak up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A visit or phone call leaves you walking on air. The future looks brighter than ever. Answer invitations promptly. A mixup in messages could upset your social plans. Run an important errand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved one could distract you from work. Better announce your priorities and stick to them. Travel is inconvenient but could prove highly profitable. Postpone signing legal documents.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Rick Seto
Copy Editor.....Tamir Lipton
Layout Technician.....Rick Seto
Photo Technician.....K.A. Burke
Production Supervisor.....Michelle Gemme
Typesetter.....Beth Clark
Production...Terry Strarmer, Jenniter Fatkin, Steve Paris, Mark Sturm

Creative ideas sought for library murals

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

"Walk! Don't Ride! Conserve Energy."

There is incentive for this in the stairwells of the University of Massachusetts Tower library.

The mural project in the library began as a part of Masstransformation in 1986. Murals, forty each measuring roughly six feet by eight feet, were done by Art Department students at the landings between floors in each of the two interior stairways. Originally, placement of the murals was to discourage the offensive graffiti that covered the walls.

The Library Art Committee of UMass is now accepting proposals for murals to be installed in five additional stairwells and in the lobby of the 26th floor of the library.

William Markey, chair of the Library Art Committee said the competition is open to all registered undergraduate and graduate students at the University. Students will receive $250 for each stairway mural selected and $1500 will be awarded for the winning scheme for the elevator lobby.

Measurements for the actual space to be covered in the stairway landings is approximately six feet by eight feet and may be designed for specific landings or location may be left to the discretion of the Library Art Committee. The approximate scheme for the elevator lobby should measure 10 feet by 25 feet and may consist of a series of integrated panels or one four-wall mural.

Students may submit a proposal either individually or as a group for the elevator mural. Proposal specifications state: "Proposals for the stairway murals must be submitted as scale images with no dimension greater than 36 inches nor less than 12 inches. Proposals for the elevator lobby must also be scale images and might include a mock-up."

Materials used must not violate state fire and health codes.

Markey said the competition will be juried by a group composed of two faculty members, a graduate student from the Graduate Arts Student Association, an undergraduate from the Undergraduate Arts Student Association (which is nearly defunct) and the chair and secretary of the Library Art Committee.

Faculty members from the Art Department will act as advisors on the proposals and monitors of the mural execution.

Schedule: October 15, proposals due at office of the Director of Libraries — Richard J. Talbot.

November 1, students are notified of the jury decision.

December 15, murals are to be completed.

Further details can be obtained by contacting Markey at 545-0058.

Money for the competition was derived from UMass Arts Council, Art Department, library, and the Graduate Student Senate. Any and all funds donated will be utilized as cash awards.

"The only way the library benefits is by the art work there," Markey said.

COLLEGIAN ARTS
Needs Writers
Come down and ask for Jody or Julie
OR
Call 545-3500

For Older Undergraduates

25+ CLUB

Did you know that there are more than 1500 undergraduates at UMass age 25 and over? Let's get together at an..

Introductory Meeting

Wednesday, Sept. 19
8:00 pm
Campus Center 174-176

Discussion of Activities
Socializing
Refreshments

Top of the Campus
RESTAURANT and LOUNGE

The Top of the Campus has great food, fantastic service, weekly drink specials, an extensive lounge munchie menu and a spectacular view of the campus, all yours to enjoy in a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere.

Eleventh Floor, Lincoln Campus Center
549-6000 ext. 7636

Lunch: Mon.-Fri. 11:30 am-2:00 pm; Dinner: Tues.-Sat. 5:00-9:00 pm
Cocktails: Mon.-Fri. 11:30 am-12:30 am; Sat.-Sun. 5 pm-12:30 am

VALIDATED PARKING IN ATTACHED GARAGE

ΣAM
PRESENTS...

LIVE AT UMASS
FOR MORE INFO. CALL JEFF AT 253-5165

Monday, September 17th: "Pizza Night"
Southwest Horseshoe, 7:00 pm.

Tuesday, September 18th: "Jai-Alai Night"
Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30 pm.

Monday, September 24th: "Billiards"
Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Tuesday, September 25th: "Movie & Sundae Night"
Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Wednesday, September 26th: "Kentucky Fried Chicken Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30pm.

1990

The University Store announces

AutoCAD®

the world's most popular design and drafting program for desktop computers and workstations, at special educational prices.

A trained representative will be on the Campus Center concourse Thursday, Sept. 20, and Friday, Sept. 21, to answer questions and give demonstrations on the entire Autodesk product line.

AUTODESK

UNIVERSITY STORE

Available to students, staff, or faculty of The University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Rugby takes one from BC

By DAVE SZPILA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts rugby club came back from a first half deficit to defeat the Boston College Eagles 13-7 last Friday night. The win was the first for the club since last fall.

Down 4-3 after one half of play, and having to deal with a crowd of BC fans totalling close to 1,000, UMass rallied.

Mark Finley took the opening kickoff 60 yards to the BC 22. This set up a penalty kick by Bob Hill, putting UMass up 6-4.

BC came back, however, and with seven minutes to go, kicked a field goal of their own, putting them up 7-6.

UMass used its size, kept on the offensive attack. The BC defense finally broke down and Bob Hill kicked his third penalty of the game, giving UMass a 9-7 lead. This would prove to be all UMass needed for the victory.

UMass scored once more on a weak side try by Bob Carney.

■ field hockey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

pressure well, have good speed up front, and control the middle of the field well."

The Minutewomen have been working hard this week to correct some of their sloppy play. What Hixon needs to get her team to do is relax, she said. After Saturday's game against James Madison University, Hixon was unhappy about how her team seemed to panic in certain situations.

"I feel it's gonna be a great game," Gladu said. "It's gonna be fast paced. I'm excited."

Everybody's Gotta Have A Gang...

HAVE WE GOT A DEAL FOR YOU

You have the capacity to lead others - we have the capacity to develop it
You have a great friendship to share - we have the opportunity to share it.
You have the potential to enrich the lives of others - we have the potential to develop it.
The leadership, friendship and service you begin with us will take the rest of your life to finish.

All University students welcome!

ΑΦΩ

Co-Ed College Connection

Stop by our office:
Student Union Rm. 415A
545-2068 or call Eric at 253-4135

OPEN RUSH
Wednesday, Sept. 19, 7:30 p.m.
Thurs, Sept. 20, 7:30 p.m.
Monday, Sept. 24, 7:30 p.m.
Tuesday, Sept. 25, 7:30 p.m.
Student Union 415A

BE A LEADER
BE A FRIEND
BE OF SERVICE

Alpha Phi Omega
NATIONAL SERVICE FRATERNITY
ΑΑΡΡΑ ΟΜΙCRON CHAPTER

GOLD RING SALE

$100 off 18K, $50 off 14K, $25 off 10K

Order your college ring NOW.

JOSTENS
AMERICA'S COLLEGE RING

Date: Sept. 24-28 10am-4pm, Deposit required: $25.00
at the University Store, Mon-Fri
Meet with your Jostens representative for full details.
See our complete ring selection on display in your college bookstore

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE • 106 CAMPUS CENTER • M-TH 9:30-5:30 F 9:30-3 • DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

BOLTWOOD PROJECT Fun, friends, credit. Work with physically and developmentally delayed people. Meeting tonight 7PM room 917CC

HSA GENERAL MEETING Wednesday September 19 9:30PM Field main lounge forming committees for upcoming events open to all students

HUNT FOR RED OCTOBER playing at the Campus Center Auditorium 5:30, 8:00 & 10:30PM Wed Sept 19th $2.50

KUNG-FU / KARATE CLASSES! beginners meet Mon-Fri for info call 774-4179 ask for Stuart

MODEL UNITED NATIONS first general meeting Wednesday Sept 18 1990 in Herter 201 at 7PM for more info call Alex 6-5993

RUSH ALPHA PHI OMEGA! A National Co ed Service Fraternity! CC415A 7:30PM Sept 19, 20, 24 & 25. All welcome!

TRAIN WITH US!! Learn self-defense & teamwork Tae Kwon do meets Mon & Wed 6:30-8:30PM Call Marty 6-7003 Marie 6-1622

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5961

CLASS OF '94 Seize the day! T-shirts Pick up yours Rm 304 University Admissions Center

THE FIRST INSTITUTE OF INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERS meeting will be held in Marston 211 at 4:30 today! Free pizza!!

VIETNAMESE STUDENT ASSOCIATION General meeting on Wednesday Sept. 19 7:30 room 82 Thatcher. All freshmen are welcome.

AUDIO

TWO 200 WATT top of the line Boston Acoustic Speakers Very cheap Call 253-2728

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 T-BIRD AC/FM PS/PB 90,000mi runs great $500 or best offer Call Tammy 549-2786 must sell

1979 GMC SIERRA 15 8 fleetside 3speed V8 power steering/brakes Vston $1,200 584-9818 call after 2:30PM

1979 SAAB 900GLE 4-speed sunroof must sell! $2000 bo (413)665-8119

1979 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is 549-6333 6-8PM

1980 BUICK CENTURY LIMITED $750. 665-7492

1982 DODGE 400 CONVERTIBLE, white with red interior 64,000 miles Very clean $2,800 548-3142

1982 TOYOTA STARLET $2000 or B/O 535-2322

1983 NISSAN SENTRA WAGON, 83M mi reliable, $900 253-7122 eves

1984 SUBARU 67000 mi AM/FM asking 2300 days 1-448-7578 nites 1-298-4753

1984 4WD SUBARU STATION WAGON 95000mi good mechanical cond., some rust all weather tires, 1989 muffler $2200/BO Jenny 259-1318, 5-7PM Mon-Thurs

1987 HONDA CRX Runs great Excellent condition 50 MPG Must Sell $4500 549-7163

1988 FORD RANGER excellent condition 5 speed 40,000 miles $4,800 253-0770

IS IT TRUE...peeps for $44 through the U.S. Gov't? Call for facts! 504-649-5745 Ext. s-596

CONDO FOR SALE

UNBELIEVEABLE! Townehouse 2 bedroom 1½ bath. Reduced to $62,000! Joan Rosner DH Jones 549-3700

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

FRIDGE RENTALS call R&P 253-9742

HELP! Beautiful spacious apartment for rent A must see with new rug and appliances A steal at $625.00/month, includes heat and hot water Call anytime 549-1397

HUGE ROOM in beautiful house for 1-2 people. Full bath and walk-in closet. 1½ miles from campus. Non smoker $155 or 2/$280 for 1 + utilities 549-4211

MALE TO SHARE ROOM 125 /mo 256-1859

ONE BEDROOM APARTMENT at 177 N. Pleasant St Quiet $435 per month includes heat. 256-3457

SINGLE ROOM house in N. Amherst 187 50 549-6650

TOWNHOUSE APARTMENT- 2 bedroom 1½ baths on bus route Call 1-567-1352 and leave message

FOR SALE

CHECK OUT ACI'S great deals on Computer Systems, Cables, Hardware, and Accessories. If you're in the market for a 100% IBM Compatible computer, we manufacture a complete line of systems. If low price, high quality, and personalized on-site service are all concerns, no one compares with ACI Conveniently located in downtown Amherst next to Baybank.

CUBE FRIDGE great for dorms call Julie at 546-3987

LARGE REFRIDGERATOR (twice the size of most dorm fridges) freezer section, exc cond, will deliver, $90/bo 256-3192

SAX FOR SALE Bundy II Alto student model Great shape $500 or best offer 586-3100 ext 4364

SLEEP WITH THE BEST
say goodnight to the rest full size futon and frame
$150 we'll beat other bozos by 5%
Metawampe Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON-1

1989 SMITH CORONA PWP 3000: features word processor and typewriter options comes with disks and paper: printer included $700 value: asking $500 bo call 542-3032

TOSHIBA MICROWAVE- good small unit Great for dorms Asking $75 Call Steve 549-4758

FOUND

ATTENTION NEW STUDENTS- personal items left at the New Students Program this summer may be picked up at the New Students Office 304 University Admiss Center

CALCULATOR found Monday in Cape Cod Lounge Call 256-1479 to describe and claim

WATCH found in front of Bartlett Call Christine at 546-4975

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard Send for free information American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C Boston, MA 02215

EARN UP TO $20,000 A MONTH! If you are a motivated person, and wish to be an entrepreneur, don't let this opportunity slip past you. A multi-level marketing company is looking for executive distributors. Be your own boss, make your own hours! for more info call 549-4349

EASY WORK! EXCELLENT PAY! assemble products at home call for information 504-641-8003 ext 596

FULL TIME POSITION available Excellent base salary plus bonuses. Fluency in any African, Indian, Korean, or Middle Eastern dialects a plus. Contact Lanny Perron, Metropolitan Life (413)567-1248

INNOVATIVE MARKETING PROGRAM needs sales rep for UMass Market. Excellent $$ opportunity. Local advertising experience necessary. Call Gary at 1-800-874-5005

NEED A BABYSITTER! responsible educ. major able to sit on nights and weekends. Please call 549-9311-Gretchen

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms No car required Mornings 7:8AM Good pay 7days/week 253-7009 Evenings

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! 40-60/day! Call Sam 256-6434

INTERNSHIP

RECEIVE CREDITS LEARNING the music/entertainment industry Rack-A-Disc needs interns for fall/spring 20 hrs/wk 6 credits. 586-9900

LOST

3 RINGS in Boyden women's locker room reward 549-8282 leave message

GOLD RING cash reward sentimental value-leave message for Lynda 538-2931 after 4:00PM

HELP I keep bumping into things! Have you seen my glasses? 6-1937

PANASONIC WALKMAN reward call 549-5997

MANICURES

SPECIALLY PRICED $5 by experienced UMass student 549-2682

MOTORCYCLES

1983 YAMAHA SECA 400 runs good new tires, battery $400/bo 546-0633

PERSONALS

KATH IS BACK IN TOWN...and now she's legal! Have a great 21st- celebrate in a huge way! Love ya (kind of!) -Beck

KELLY- It was great meeting you Saturday on the football field. Would like to cheer with you again sometime. If interested call Scott 6-7104

NOEL HATFIELD Congratulations on your pinning! Last Saturday was great too. Thanks!

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
FALL SPECIAL
small cheese $3.50
large cheese $5.99
2 toppings only $1 more
must mention this ad!
549-8073 549-8098

ROOMMATE WANTED

$158* PER MONTH own room quiet nonsmoker call Mark or Shane 253-3498

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1224

SOUTH DEERFIELD 2 bdrm Apt on bus line $300 665-8230 545-1028

SERVICES

DO YOU NEED SPANISH HELP? Tutoring available for intermediate to advanced call Giov 549-0071

STUDY ABROAD IN AUSTRALIA information on semester summer, and internship programs. All run under $6000 Call Curtin University 1-800-878 3696

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St Northampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course starts 9/10 $195 Adv course starts 9/17 $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 10/28 $380 For further information call 549-8401

ONE-WAY American Airlines ticket Hartford-Seattle December 21, 1990 excellent price 1-413-562-2582, (after 3)

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S. Deerfield 10 mins. from Amherst Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr. typing $2/pg 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications 256-6373

WORDPERFECT- fast and reliable spellcheck call Tim 546-5472

WORDPROCESSING-Fast Professional Reasonable rates Free pick-up and delivery Call Nancy 367-9437

SPORTS

Collegian file photo

Senior outside hitter Nancy Sullivan and the University of Massachusetts volleyball team were beaten by Boston College yesterday. UMass will visit Central Connecticut Thursday.

Boston College beats back UMass loss of starting setter hurts

By LIOR BEN-AHARON
Collegian Correspondent

Heading into Boston College last night, the UMass women's volleyball team knew the type of team they would be facing. After all, it had only been a week earlier that the Minutewomen faced the Eagles at the University of Hartford Classic.

That was a consolation match because both teams had been knocked out of the tournament, and UMass lost in three straight games.

Since the Hartford tournament, however, the Minutewomen improved a great deal and showcased their improvement by finishing a strong third at a tournament at Brown University this past weekend.

At the same time, Boston College was receiving a rude awakening at another tournament in Wisconsin, where they lost three straight matches to Loyola of Chicago, Wisconsin, and Bradley respectively.

The stage was set for UMass to take revenge on the Eagles for their earlier meeting. But it was not to be, as the Minutewomen once again fell to Boston College three games to none, last night in Chestnut Hill.

"We didn't make out as well as I was hoping," coach Carol Ford said.

The first game, which Ford said was "our best game," ended up a tough 15-10 loss for the UMass team.

"After that, BC played better and we didn't improve as the match went on" said Ford. "We just couldn't get our offense going."

UMass went on to lose the next two games and the match 15-8 and 15-5.

One of the reasons the Minutewomen could not get going was the absence of starting setter Angie Paolucci, who is out again indefinitely with a virus.

"It really puts us at a disadvantage, [losing] her setting abilities and her leadership, even though she is a freshman," Ford said. "We're a little out of sync, it's very difficult to play with a new setter."

Ford was also impressed with the play of the Eagles' middle blockers Jennifer McEnroe and Allison Glovina as well as Jennifer Smith.

"They just played well, BC is very tough" she said.

Unfortunately, the road ahead is a tough one for the Minutewomen. Ford conceded "Our schedule only gets tougher."

UMass volleyball, now at 2-9, will travel to Central Connecticut on Thursday.

Men's soccer faces test

Dartmouth team is nationally ranked

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

After finishing a four-game homestand at 2-2, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team begins a stretch of three road games today against Dartmouth in Hanover, N.H. The match kicks off at 4 p.m.

The Big Green, ranked seventh in New England, are currently 0-0-1. They tied Pennsylvania 0-0 on Sunday. UMass coach Jeff Gettler saw that game, and was duly impressed by Dartmouth's play.

"It was one of the best collegiate games I've seen in the past two years," complemented Gettler. "We'll need to play well to win today."

Dartmouth has several weapons to resort to on offense. Two of the bigger threats are defenders Todd Gibby, a senior, and junior John Milne. Both are a solid 6-foot-4, and coach Bobby Coark loves to bring them upfield on "re-start" plays (i.e., corner, indirect and direct kicks) to utilize their height and size advantage.

Richie Graham and Danny Sankar, both forwards, are also players the Minutemen will have to watch out for, according to Gettler. They were Dartmouth's second and third leading scorers last year, respectively.

Gettler said that the Big Green rely on a quick zone defense and a flank-oriented offense. "They play to the corners and then cross the ball into their big guys. Peter McEvoy (UMass' sweeper) will need to play back a little more," he said.

"We've got to move the ball well," added Gettler. "They send two or three players at every ball in the midfield. We'll need quick midfielders if we're to do well. But if we hold the ball instead of move it, it'll be a long afternoon."

Dartmouth also plays a zone defense. However, zone defenses have a built-in weakness: they can lead to breakaways if the opposition can chip the ball over the zone.

Coach Gettler is aware of this. He is also aware that the Minutemen have found it hard to cash in on such scoring opportunities. UMass has six goals on 72 shots — a shooting percentage of .083.

"We've been making it hard for ourselves," said Gettler. "Our defense has been outstanding, but our offense has to score.

"It's great that we've been getting offense from unexpected sources," said Gettler. "But our co-leader in scoring — McEvoy — is a sweeper. Ray Cuhna, Brett Anthony and Dan Lawrence, our three top guns from last year, have one goal between them. We can start scoring. But that's the bottom line."

The Big Green spent their early season playing exhibition in Scotland, from where coach Coark hails. They went 3-0-2, playing such teams as Dundee United and Aberdeen (Coark's former team).

In the injury department, both keeper Steve Armenti and midfielder Tom Novajasky are doubtful for today's match. Armenti has a possible stress fracture in his foot. Jon Gruber will start in his place. Novajasky has a tendon injury in his foot, making possible freshman Ken Smith's first-ever varsity start.

Regarding the Minutemen's chances today, Gettler said "It's a tall order, but I'm very confident we can get it done."

Meanwhile, back at the A-10: UMass is currently in third place in the Atlantic 10 men's soccer race at 1-2. . . league-leading Rutgers (2-0, 6 pts., 5-0 overall) is ranked second in the nation in the ISAA Gatorade poll of the nation's top 20 men's soccer sides. The Scarlet Knights have scored 14 goals while allowing only 1. . . Steve Armenti is tied for the A-10 goalkeeping lead with an 0.00 goals-against average, while Jon Gruber is fourth with a 1.48 GAA. . . Matt Edgerly and Pete McEvoy are third and fourth, respectively, in A-10 scoring.

Water polo goes 2-1 at tournament

By JOE DEGLORIA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts water polo team went through its first real test of the season last weekend in the Eastern Varsity Tournament at the Naval Academy. The UMass squad went into the tourney with a 3-0 record.

UMass played the weaker Queens team in the first round, taking the contest 12-7. Senior Jon Miller and sophomore Dan McOsker led UMass with three goals apiece.

"We did what we had to do, but did not play perfect polo, we were looking ahead to the next game a little bit," said coach Russ Yarworth.

After beating Queens, UMass went up against a much tougher Slippery Rock team, and lost, 12-10. UMass outplayed Slippery Rock in the first half and went into the intermission with a 7-4 lead.

"We came out fired up and controlled the first half of the game," said Yarworth.

The UMass team lost it late in the third quarter and early in the final period, however. Slippery Rock was double man-up at one point, but UMass failed to score despite the discrepancy. Slippery Rock rallied to scored when their two players returned, upping the score to 7-5 in their favor.

"We lost all momentum and the game right there," said Yarworth.

Slippery Rock went on to score five straight times and win the game, putting UMass in the losers bracket.

McOskan scored another four goals in the losing cause.

With the disappointing loss behind them, UMass played Princeton, which had lost to Navy 19-6. UMass had a little trouble in the first half of the game with the score in the Tigers' favor 4-3.

UMass then stormed out of the half, shut down the Princeton offense, and went on to win by a 9-5 margin.

Yarworth said he was pleased to see his team's defense clamp down a decent Princeton offense after the Slippery Rock game. McOsker put in two more goals, with sophomore Scott Reed and senior Brian McIver netting three apiece.

UMass demonstrated strong play in their final game versus Iona. They came together defensively and outscored Iona 5-1 through the first three quarters. UMass ended up winning the game 8-4.

"The Iona game was proof to us that we are still a top-twenty team," Yarworth said.

Yarworth said of his team's play in the tournament as a whole, "I was pleased with the defense and our goalie, Todd Larsen. G.T. Ladd played good defensively as well."

He said he was also pleased with McOsker who, scored nine goals, the most for UMass.

The Minutemen finished the tournament fifth of 16. Brown beat Navy 10-9 in the finals to win the tournament. Boston College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology ended finished and fourth.

Sox tied for first after loss to Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP) — Boston's Tom Bolton pitched 6 1-3 hitless innings before Baltimore solved him with four runs in the seventh, including rookie David Segui's three-run homer, as the Orioles won 4-1 Tuesday night to drop the Red Sox into a first-place tie with Toronto in the AL East.

The Blue Jays beat New York 3-2, to tie Boston at 81-68

The Red Sox have lost five of six and 11 of 16. About the only good news they had Tuesday was Roger Clemens throwing hard on the sidelines and penciled in to start on Sunday against the Yankees.

Bolton took his no-hitter and 1-0 lead onto the seventh, but he couldn't finish the inning as the Orioles got five hits — four of them with two out.

Leo Gomez started the inning with a groundout and Cal Ripken ended Bolton's no-hit bid by lining a single between shortstop and third base. One out later, Chris Hoiles singled to center, and Mike Devereaux grounded a single to score Ripken.

Segui then hit his second homer inot the left-field seats to make it 4-1.

Field hockey to Providence

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

Today, in Providence, R.I., the University of Massachusetts field hockey team faces some stiff competition. The Friars of Providence college are 3-1, including a win over defending champion North Carolina.

The Minutewomen take with them a two game winning streak, and a 3-1 record of their own.

Providence is an explosive team, capable of blowing out most any team in the country. Senior forward Karen Krawchuk has been a standout for the Friars. In four games, Krawchuk has four goals and one assist. Cami White and Cathy Guden each have two goals, while White has three assists.

The most impressive statistic of Providence's game is the number of shots on goal they are averaging per game. The Friars are bombarding opposing goalies with nearly 24 shots per game. It doesn't take a scholar to realize that UMass goalie Philippa Scott will have her hands full.

While the Providence offense is potent, the defense has been vulnerable. Providence is susceptible to the penalty corner; they have allowed 55 in their four games, and have attempted 44, (22 against James Madison). Goalie Debbie Hagie has allowed six goals in three games, and Gina Martiniello has surrendered one.

The key to this game will be whether or not UMass can withstand the Providence offense, and if they can, whether they can mount an attack of their own.

The Minutewomen have played solid offense in the past two games. They have created dangerous scoring opportunities, and they have been the recipient of lots of penalty corners.

"We have to play our game, and not worry about what UMass does," said Providence coach Jackie Gladu. "We know UMass' strengths, we know they

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

WEATHER

Clear in the morning, turning fair. Highs in the 70s for a lovely Indian summer day.

THIS WEEKEND

Fierce women of song, Sweet Honey in the Rock, will sweeten Smith College, Sunday.

WOMEN'S ISSUES

Voice provided for all women regardless of race to sing their stories of hope and joy

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 20, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 12

Newcomers pledge salvation for state

BOSTON (AP) — John Silber, Boston University's blunt and caustic president, upset former state Attorney General Francis Bellotti for the Democratic nomination for governor as voters swept out candidates with ties to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

Silber, who was all but written off a week ago for referring to an inner-city neighborhood as a "group of drug addicts," will face Republican William Weld, a former federal prosecutor, in November.

In Oklahoma, voters on Tuesday approved a first-in-the-nation constitutional amendment limiting state lawmakers to 12 years in office. In runoff elections for the gubernatorial nomination, Democrat David Walters and Republican Bill Price slipped past their opponents by as few as 3,046 votes.

"It is time to put limits on the professional politicians," said businessman Lloyd Noble II, chief backer of the limit on legislative careers.

Both men in Oklahoma were newcomers to politics, as was Silber in Massachusetts, where the native Texan styled himself a political outsider and stunned the state Democratic establishment in winning.

"There was a tidal wave coming and we happened to be standing on the beach when it hit," Massachusetts Attorney General Shannon said after losing his re-election bid.

Shannon and Bellotti were among several Democrats with ties to the Dukakis administration who were swept away amid the state's inability to come to grips with a crumbling economy. Dukakis, like Republican Gov. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma, is stepping down.

With 93 percent of the precincts reporting, Silber had 520,926 votes, or 54 percent, to Bellotti's 423,390 votes, or 44 percent. Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy had 27,546 votes, or 3 percent. She was on the Democratic ballot despite having dropped out following a mutiny against Dukakis in which she tried to take control of the state's finances while he was in Europe.

Weld also won an outsider's victory in the GOP primary, defeating House Minority Leader Steven Pierce, an early favorite. With 93 percent of the vote in, Weld had 245,179 votes, or 40 percent.

Silber, a 64-year-old shoot-from-the-hip educator whose "drug addicts" remark was one of his trademark "Silber shockers" said he would continue to emphasize his 19 years as BU president as experience that qualifies him to change the ailing state government.

"The choice is between leadership proven by experience or more of the same," Silber told cheering supporters at his victory party. "Have you had enough? I think you have. Then join me in taking back our government."

Weld said only Republicans would provide the change voters want. "Massachusetts lost its way," Weld, 45, told jubilant backers. "Politicians on Beacon Hill have grown arrogant and cynical. They see the taxpayers as a limitless source of cash with which to feather their own nests or fund their latest experiments."

In the other major statewide contest, businessman James Rappaport, who spent $2 million of his own money on his first major campaign, easily defeated Dan Daly for the right to oppose Democratic incumbent John Kerry in the U.S. Senate race in November.

In Oklahoma, voters approved the limit on lawmakers' tenure by a 2-1 margin. The amendment takes effect Jan. 1; lawmakers now in office will be allowed to serve 12 more years.

THE NATIONAL RACE, Walters, the Democrats' 1986 nominee, slipped past U.S. Rep. Wes Watkins, 242,997 votes to 236,181. The Republican nominee, Price, won by even less, beating businessman Vince Orza 94,588 to 91,542.

AP photo

Mass. Reopublican gubernatorial candidate William Weld (right) speaks to a member of the masses, Tuesday

Candidates cause concern

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Students, faculty and administrators yesterday were surprised by the John Silber and William Weld underdog victories but many said the gubernatorial race plays a secondary role to the Citizens for Limited Taxation proposition on the November ballot.

John W. Cole, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, said that "these days nothing surprises me about Massachusetts" politics. Cole, an anthropology professor, said it concerns him greatly that neither candidate has denounced the CLT petition, which if passed would roll taxes back to 1988 levels.

"Of the candidates on the ballot Tuesday the only one strongly opposed to CLT was Frank Bellotti," he said. "Now we have Silber and Weld I'm very concerned. Silber has not endorsed CLT but has praised the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

UMass grad. gets nominated

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

Two years ago, when he graduated from the University of Massachusetts, Dan Valianti never dreamed he would win the nomination for state representative at the age of 25.

Valianti, who graduated in 1988 with a double major of Political Science and Communications won the Democratic nomination for state representative in Marlboro and Berlin by a 561 margin over two opponents.

Valianti said he ran his campaign on a grassroots effort that included going door to door and "a lot of hard work." He won the nomination from two older and well-established opponents, one of whom spent $20,000 more on his campaign than Valianti.

The youngest of nine, Valianti said he was considered a long shot at the beginning of the race in January. He will face Republican Marc DeCourney in the November 1 general election for the 4th Middlesex representative seat in the Legislature.

Valianti, the manager of a sign company in Marlboro, said he ran his campaign stressing the issues of health care and education.

"I will never vote for a cut to education," Valianti

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

Minority women's program eliminated

Budget cuts kill Everywomen's Center "Bridge Program"

By BROOKE R. BURTON
Collegian Correspondent

After ten years of helping thousands of women, the Bridge Program of the Everywoman's Center was eliminated this semester as a result of continuing cuts to the University.

The Bridge Program was concerned with women facing multiple oppressions. Its purpose was to reach out to women of color, women with disabilities, lesbians and Jewish women.

The Bridge Program offered support groups, workshops and training on issues of oppression. In addition, the program worked closely with several campus and community groups including ALANA students, American Friends Service (AFS), Parents Against Racism in Schools, and the NAACP.

Last year the ten year old Bridge program received over nine hundred inquiries from women through walk-ins and call-ins. With the budget cuts, the university "has become less accessible to populations that have historically been excluded from higher education" said the director of the Everywoman's center, Carol Wallace.

July marked the end of the Bridge program when the position of coordinator was frozen. Peters' position was frozen because of the unavailability of funds to further finance the program. With the budget crisis, the Everywoman's center has been facing drastic cuts in their program offerings.

Wallace said the University has a double standard regarding services to women and people of color.

"The University raises tuition and fees and cuts services to women and people of color. We are making decisions about the kind of the University we want to be and decisions about who has access to higher education," she said.

Wallace attributes the recent freeze to its perceived role on this campus.

"Because the Everywoman's center isn't seen as central to the academic mission of the University, its funding is vulnerable," she said.

Wallace urged students to let the administration know that the Everywoman's center is important to their lives.

"Students who come to the University because there's an Everywoman's center, or have remained here because of the services we provide, need to let the administration know about the difference that these services have made in their lives as students," she said.

Iraq freezes assets as embargo tightens

IRAQ (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein today froze the assets of foreign-owned companies whose governments are honoring the embargo on trade with his country.

The trade cutoff could tighten with a U.N. plan to

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

For Your Information

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

Indian Classic Music– Music of the Whole Earth Series: IMRAT KHAN AND SONS, sitar and surbahar, 8:15p.m., at Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College.

Amherst Flics–CHOCOLAT, 7:30 &10p.m., Campus Center Theater, Amherst College.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22

Classical Chinese Music & Dance–sponsored by the Asian Students Association, 8:15p.m., in Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 23

Audition–"Talk Radio", sponsored by University Players, Commonwealth Room, 12p.m.-6p.m., Free.(Auditions will also be held on Monday, Sept. 24 from 6p.m.-11p.m.).

Fun Classic– at 1pm the Springfield Symphony Orchestra is holding its Fall Fun Classic II. Join the 5k "backward parade" where you run or walk through beautiful Forest Park in Springfield while enjoying the live musical entertainment that will be lining your route. There will be awards and prizes too! Early registration is $8 and $14 if you wish to purchase the Fun Classic sweatshirt. Kids under 12 are free! More information and entry blanks are available at the Campus Center information desk.

Meeting–the Orchard Hill/Central Women's Center will be having their first general meeting at 7 p.m. in room 115 Van Meter South. Refreshments will be served. All interested women are welcome.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003.
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ... Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor ... Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors ... Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor ... Chris Muther
Sports Editors ... Adrienne Matt, Sam Sliverstein
Arts Editors ... Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor ... Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor ... Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editors ... Amy Henry, Minu Sebastian
Multicultural Affairs Editor ... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ... Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ... Ali Woolwich
Business Manager ... Susan George
Advertising Manager ... David Melnick
Finance Manager ... Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager ... Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager ... Susan Kent
Promotions Manager ... Marc Pruskin
Production Manager ... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager ... Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ... Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND
presents:
The Business Card BONANZA

Do you own a Business Card?
That's all you need to reach 21,000 readers daily.

Discount Rate (for 2 col. x 2 inch ad): $20

The Business Card Bonanza Page runs every Monday beginning September 24th.

A new and exciting way to advertise for less money.

Contact the Collegian for more details.
545-3500

Happy Rosh Hashanah

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

Hiring Now For The School Year

Interesting, part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm, and Saturday, 11am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $5.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to maximum $6.00/hr.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, 586-8635.

Abt Associates Inc.

Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035
An Equal Opportunity Employer

CELEBRATE SENSATION

CHAMBER MUSIC
The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach
The King's Singers
Turtle Island String Quartet/
Billy Taylor Trio
Emerson String Quartet

THEATRE
The Negro Ensemble Company:
WE Plays
A Traveling Jewish Theatre:
Heart of the World
The San Francisco Mime Company:
Seeing Double

DANCE
Margie Gillis
Desrosiers Dance Theatre
Urban Bush Women
Laura Dean Dancers & Musicians
Oakland Ballet
Bill T. Jones/Arne Zane & Co.

ORCHESTRAS/
CHAMBER
ORCHESTRAS
Shanghai Symphony Orchestra
West German Sinfonia/Gary Schocker
English Chamber Orchestra/
Pinchas Zukerman

JAZZ
Count Basie Orchestra
Max Roach & Friends
George Shearing/Joe Williams/
Joe Pass
Sandra Reaves-Phillips

SPECTRUM
Sankai Juku
The Chieftains
Africa Oye!
Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour
Revisited

BROADWAY
Lend Me A Tenor
Sarafina!
Love Letters
Side By Side By Sondheim

WINNERS CIRCLE
Midori, violin
Leon Bates, piano
Dang Thai Son, piano
Franciscan String Quartet/Peter Orth

Subscribe Now and Save
Call 545-2511
or 545-2512

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

1990-1991 SEASON

LOCAL

GSS votes to defend EWC and attack CLT

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

Graduate Student Senate voted unanimously Tuesday to request that Student Affairs Office stop disproportionate budget cuts targeting Everywoman's Center without first negotiating with student representatives."

In addition, the GSS called on the UMass Board of Trustees to permit it to formallly endorse a campaign against the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition. Also, the GSS passed a motion requesting that the Board of Trustees restore limited litigation power to the Legal Services Center.

According to GSS President Pierre Laliberte, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dennis Madson rejected the Limited Litigation Proposal which would restore partial litigation rights to the Legal Services Center, permitting it to represent UMass students in law suits involving outside parties.

The UMass administration rescinded all litigation rights from the LSC in 1986. Presently the LSC performs only counselling functions.

According to Laliberte, Madson said that the GSS proposal to restore limited litigation to the LSC is not acceptable because "it is not in the best interest of the students."

Madson could not be reached for comment.

Graduate Student Senate also passed a motion asking the Board of Trustees to permit it to use the GSS trust fund to legally organize opposition to CLT. According to Laliberte, the Board of Trustees exercises control over that fund.

Laliberte added that the EWC has been the target of disproportionate cuts and that the Student Affairs Office has been placing those cuts without "an acceptable process for student input."

"Vice-Chancellor Madson imposed administrative cuts without an input on our part," Laliberte said. "There has been no effort on the part of administration to make sure that their priorities meet our priorities."

"A Crisis situation on campus calls on everyone to be reasonable, and that sould start with the administration," Laliberte added. "It should provide a process for our voices to be heard."

Photo by Heather Norfleet

COUPONS – An unidentified coupon vendor practices his talents near the Machmer buillding last week

Faculty club, dorm burgled

Compiled by PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

University Police reported Monday that officers on patrol observed a suspicious vehicle in the Physical Plant compound. Police stopped the vehicle and identified the driver as a University employee.

Police confiscated several objects believed to be University property. A further investigation is pending. The estimated value is $230.

In other police reports from Monday and Tuesday:

BURGLARY/LARCENY

- The Faculty Club director reported to police Monday that the club was broken into and alcohol was taken. The estimated value is $150.
- A Cashin Residence Hall man reported to police Monday that his room was broken into and a compact disk player, compact disks, Walkman, headphone, shaver, camera, and film were stolen. The estimated value was $671.
- A man reported Monday that his car in Lot 11 was broken into and speakers removed. The value was $60.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

Boltwood Proj. seeks helpers

By LINDSAY HOADLEY
Collegian Correspondent

As the hectic bustle of the first few weeks of school begins to wind down at the University of Massachusetts, many students are noticing those familiar blue and orange flyers lining the walls of campus dormitories, dining halls, and classrooms.

The advertisement, spreading the news of the student-run Boltwood Project, is one commonly seen, yet not always understood by passers-by.

The Boltwood Project is a volunteer organization which places college students with physically and developmentally delayed residents of the Belchertown State School on a one-on-one basis.

The program, divided into groups of about ten volunteers each, meets one night a week and is organized as an independent study out of the University of Massachusetts, although students from the Five College Area are also welcome to participate.

As the 200 member program is acknowledged as a "class" in the eyes of the Leisure Studies Department, participation in the project can be worth one or two academic credits, depending on degree of participation.

According to senior Psychology major Melissa Penn, program coordinator of the Boltwood Project, the volunteers anticipate meeting nights as a time to relax and see new faces.

"People really look forward to it as a break away from school," Penn said, "It's nice spending some time with someone who's happy to see you."

Penn said that the program helps students develop confidence and an overall awareness of the physically challenged. "People who've never done Boltwood before have come in apprehensive, really scared," she explained, "but at the end find that they've actually formed a relationship. They really overcome something."

Sandy Diamond, recreational therapist at Belchertown State School, said that she has witnessed a similar change in volunteers in her years working with

CONTINUED ON PAGE 12

W.Mass anti-AIDS group formed

Local ACT-UP chapter fights AIDS with education, testing

By DAVID N. BROWN
Collegian Correspondent

New York City, 1987: Larry Kramer, A.I.D.S. activist and author, calls an open meeting in Greenwich Village to address the A.I.D.S. crisis.

He is fed up with the lack of organized help for people with A.I.D.S. He is fed up that people with A.I.D.S. (P.W.A.s) are being ignored and fight a daily bureacratic battle to have their needs adequately met.

He is joined by many others in his frustration. They organize into a group, and the first official ACT UP chapter is formed.

This past August, 1990, our very own ACT UP/Western Mass. chapter was formed.

Jen Kates, a University of Massachusetts graduate student, and her friend Susan, along with thirty other individuals joined for the first meeting out of concern that the A.I.D.S. issue is very real here in the Hampshire Valley, yet there are few and poorly funded organizations to deal with the problem.

What is it to "ACT UP"? First, it is to look around and become aware.

Jen Kates said, "We'll look at housing, employment, education, HIV testing, racism, and homophobia — anything that could be related to A.I.D.S. The point is to classify the need and then act on it."

Kates went on to emphasize that the group is not a hierarchical organization — there is no one person who directs ACT UP.

All decisions are made by group consensus. Nationally, all chapters work independently of each other.

One member said that they felt "great"about the first meetings, and that there is a lot of interest.

Kates said, "Everyone in the group wants to learn as much as they can."

So far the group has discussed A.I.D.S. education for the public schools, the anonymous UMass HIV test site, and the controversial "Put a condom between you and A.I.D.S." campaign which was recently vetoed by PVTA's Robert Manz.

At present, the group's essential focus seems to be on public awareness.

The ACT UP/Western Mass chapter meets on the first and third Wednesday of the month at 8:00 p.m.

If you are concerned with A.I.D.S-related issues, issues of homophobia/heterosexism, and would like to attend an ACT UP meeting, call 586-9739, or 585-5895 for meeting locations.

Kenyan man pleads innocent to rape

Collegian Staff Reports

NORTHAMPTON — A 27-year-old former Hampshire College student living in a Southwest residence hall pleaded innocent Tuesday to the rape of a male student in a Southwest parking lot.

Joseph Mutau Makau, a native of Kenya, pleaded innocent in Northampton District Court to four counts of rape of a 21-year-old man.

Bail was set at $25,000 cash or surety.

At his arrest early Saturday morning by University Police, Maka, who has no University affiliation, gave an address of 1901 John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

University officials said this week that only students, staff and the partners of staff members may live in the halls. The residence director of JQA said Makau was authorized by Housing Services to live in the hall.

The 21-year-old man alleges that Makau raped him at about 4:45 a.m Saturday in a Southwest parking lot.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Relay news, not propaganda

I went to the Collegian offices the other day to complain about the way a columnist had written an article. Someone corrected me by saying that a journalist had written that article and that there is a big difference between journalists and columnists.

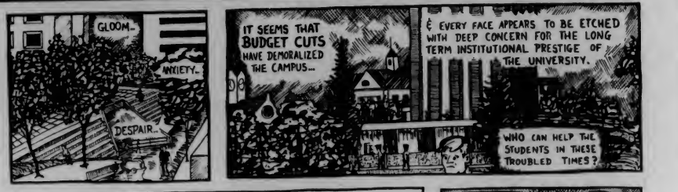
I consulted my faithful Webster's, which told me that while a journalist relays news to the public, a columnist writes his opinions. I didn't expect such a mistake from the Collegian Editorial staff, who assigned Pratip Dastidar to cover the Five College Middle East forum at Amherst College on Sept. 12.

Although I wasn't at the symposium, I can still say that main facts weren't there just by reading his article. Did Mr. Dastidar miss the presence of the Israeli speaker who was represented, or did he simply leave it out? Was the quote which counted, inaccurately, how many Palestinian teenagers died in the Israeli uprising relevant to the topic at hand, or was this just an opening for Mr. Dastidar to blast away at Israel?

Mr Dastidar should not use the Collegian as a way to vent his anger against Israel and use it to funnel Palestinian propaganda. In the future, leave the reporting of news to the journalists.

Harry Horowitz
Sylvan

Editors' note: A correction of the number of Palestinians who died was printed on Sept. 14. The Editorial staff is not responsible for the assignment of news stories to reporters



GLOOM...
ANXIETY...
DESPAIR...
IT SEEMS THAT BUDGET CUTS HAVE DEMORALIZED THE CAMPUS...
EVERY FACE APPEARS TO BE ETCHED WITH DEEP CONCERN FOR THE LONG TERM INSTITUTIONAL PRESTIGE OF THE UNIVERSITY.
WHO CAN HELP THE STUDENTS IN THESE TROUBLED TIMES?
IT'S
CHANCELLORMANIA
THE DEBACLE CONTINUES...
NOW THAT I'M PRESIDENT AND CHANCELLOR, I CAN MINIMIZE THE IMPACT OF THE BUDGET CUTS TWICE AS WELL!
BUDGET CUTS? HELL, I'M GONNA GET DRAFTED & SENT TO IRAQ?
OH...
WELL, CAN YOU PAY YOUR TUITION BEFORE YOU GO?

Surrounded by violence

The loud voices, the yelling and screaming, floated up to our 18th floor window in Southwest. None of this is unusual for a Friday night. I guess it was the sirens which finally brought my friends to the window where we saw the parking lot below swarming with people. Then we notices off to the edge of the crowd, a boy being badly beaten by at least two others. The activity spread quickly and soon arms and legs seemed to be flying everywhere, striking many. I had to look away from the scene.

Kathleen O'Neil

This was a start of a weekend during which I was badly shaken by the violence that I felt around me.

"Did you guys see what happened?" A fellow floormate enthusiastically bounded into our room a little while after the commotion below had subsided. He found the whole thing to be awesome. He informed us that he had wanted to join in on the action until he saw someone with a broken bottle. Upon seeing my disgusted reaction, he assured me fighting was fun as long as there was no glass or knives involved. I couldn't believe what I was hearing.

I had to wonder how much the young men involved had been drinking that night. I suppose it's the male ego at work, but guys have an incredible eagerness to fight when they are drinking. That must be part of the fun.

Everyday the paper tells if the rising number of homicides in Boston this year. The number is up to 103, already more than last year with three and a half months left. The number projected is 150, more than ever before.

I spent the rest of the weekend with a friend who lives on the outskirts of Boston. I am very unfamiliar with the area and it made me very nervous.

So, for the first time I saw some of the places that I always read about. We drove through Roxbury, walked down a street in Jamaica Plain and visited a friend in Roslindale. All seemed rather quiet to me. I felt a little calmed by this, perhaps it really wasn't so bad.

Deborah Cann, a 25 year-old finance analyst was killed on Center Street in Jamaica Plain at 1:45 a.m. Saturday morning. Her rear window was shattered by a gang of youths and she was shot in the back. She was number 104.

I drove down this same street 18 hours later and I thought it looked relatively safe. I think I would have been too scared to go there if I had known a murder had taken place.

So now I wonder, have I just been naive or are things getting worse? I feel scared. I worry for the safety of friends and strangers living in that area of Boston. Deborah Cann could have been anyone. Who will be 105?

I'm also unnerved by the violence here. It's not safe on campus at night. Women are always told to not be alone after dark. That rule should apply to everyone. A male walking somewhere alone on a weekend night may be harassed and abused if he is to meet up with a few, drunk egos. Especially if they find fighting fun like my floormate.

So what do we do? Is there any answer or does everyone go on watching their backs and hoping it doesn't happen to them. This weekend brought the issues to my mind like never before. I don't feel safe on campus or in this state and I'm scared.

Kathleen O'Neill is a UMass student

Governmental rights not extended to all

"If this gets much worse, we're going to take you to Canada," my mother told me last month when the United States began to send troops to the Persian Gulf with increasing vigor.

Chris Muther

"You don't have to worry about it," I explained to her with an unusual calmness to my voice. "Even if I wanted to fight for my country, the government doesn't think I'm good enough."

Homosexuality is incompatible with military service.

What does the government mean by this statement? I don't understand how an individual's sexual preference impairs their ability to persevere in a military lifestyle. The last time I checked, I have gay, lesbian and bisexual friends who worked in settings where their colleagues are primarily straight and no problems occurred.

[Homosexuality] seriously impairs the accomplishment of the military mission ... and interferes with discipline, good order and morale.

Department of Defence policy on homosexuality

In what way does the fact someone prefers the same sex demoralize the "military way?" Most gay people I know have a good sense of reality which enables them to perform responsibly in high-tension situations, isn't that what military life is all about?

To insure the integrity of the system of rank and command ... and prevent breaches in security

Homosexual people are banned from military service. This is nothing but government-endorsed discrimination. Who's to say that homosexuals can't be patriotic? Why deny them the right to fight for their country like everyone else?

Why would a well-trained homosexual officer be considered a more probable suspect in a breach-of-security conflict compared to a heterosexual officer? Who are we to claim such indiscretions?

Two hundred years ago, African-Americans were facing the same problems. They were finally allowed to serve, but only in specialized troops. Do homosexuals face the same fate?

Allowing homosexuals in the military would also cut down on the number of heterosexual people who try to evade military service by claiming they are homosexual.

Discrimination against homosexuals is not only tolerated, it is encouraged. At a prison in Texas, a new system has been instated in which gay prisoners wear grey wristbands to designate they are homosexual. What's next, a Star of David for Jewish prisoners? Adolf Hitler would be proud.

What purpose does singling someone out as a gay serve, especially at a prison? Does it make them an easier target for beatings and rapes?

People expect certain rights in this country. We think homosexuals deserve the same rights as everyone else in this country.

Chris Muther is a Collegian staff member

Editors' note: Kimberly Burke, a UMass student, contributed to this editorial

Enlightenment to special needs

When I was younger, my mom would reminisce about the old days. She'd tell me about how she worked summers at a special needs camp. "Times were different then. You never saw these people. They were hidden away. At first, I didn't know how to treat them. Times have changed. Mentally retarded people are accepted now. Society is aware and enlightened." This summer I learned just how wrong mom can unfortunately be.

Susan Casey

During the spring, my friend Jan told me she could get me a great summer job lifeguarding at a camp. When I went for the job interview, the priest who ran the camp told me some details about the children who attended. They came from poor or broken homes, they were often abused or neglected. There was also a special division of the camp for special needs children.

One of the most special kids was Carol. She was a nine-year-old full of hugs and kisses. The other guards warned me about her on the first day. "She seems like an angel, but she'll love you until you suffocate."

But Carol had scars all over her body. She always had a new cut or bruise, and then she scratched until they scarred.

The other day, a special needs camper named Beverly was asking me why I wore my father's dog tag, and I said I was daddy's little girl. When I asked her if she was daddy's little girl, the sunshine that always shone from her face suddenly became clouded over.

"I don't have a daddy. My daddy wasn't nice to me. He hurt me. So I don't have a daddy anymore." I asked her if she was mommy's little girl, and the clouds passed away from her face. But the clouds didn't leave my mind.

On another occasion, Carol got very dirty at the beach. Her hair was full of sand, although it was very poorly taken care of to begin with. So I told her I'd wash her hair in the outside showers when we got back to camp. She jumped up and down and cheered that I was going to wash her hair.

When I met her at the showers, her excitement dimmed. She really didn't know how to get her hair really wet. When I brought out the shampoo, excitement turned into anxiety. "Shampoo! Oh no, no shampoo. Mummy says no shampoo. No."

"But, Carol, I have to use shampoo to get all the sand out. It's okay." She finally agreed. She didn't remember how to lather her hair, or to keep her eyes shut.

Then came the rinse. This became difficult because she didn't know how to put her head under the shower nozzle. I had to show her how to tip her head back so that the soap would wash down her back rather than get into her eyes.

I toweled her hair and told her how beautiful she looked with her pretty clean hair. And I cried as she proudly walked away to show off her washed hair.

I learned a lot from these loving, caring innocent children. And I have an earful for people in this world, including the families of retarded children, who think that mentally disabled people are less than human. I'm here to tell you that they feel just as much, if not more, than you and me. They don't understand our ignorance. And neither do I.

Susan Casey is a UMass student

America lacks a common ground

America has a serious sociolinguistic problem.

The fact that our nation lacks a single official language, in which all educational, governmental and financial affairs must be conducted, is a problem that strikes the heart of our internal political and cultural stability.

Bradley P. Heintz

Racial tensions fester, education is slow and ineffective, and legal and governmental proceedings become incoherent without a single, universally-recongnized common language.

America has been, from the outset, an immigrant nation. In this day and age, though, it is impossible to assume that everyone disembarking at Ellis Island speaks English. If we are to stand by the words of our founders and call these people ours, something (obviously) must be done about this lingual disparity.

The way this is currently dealt with is atrocious. Past and present initiatives to cope with the problem have been things such as bilingual ballots, or the idea of providing public schooling in a child's native tongue.

None of them do anything to help integrate non-English-speaking peoples into our society. The ultimate end to these initiatives is an immigrant population that is crippled in school, in the workplace and in the voting booth.

How can a non-English-speaking person expect to be accepted at an American university when he can't write an entrance essay, because he was never taught enough English in the public schools?

How can someone without English skills hope to pass a job interview for a management-level position? How are racial tensions supposed to ease when two groups have no common language?

Above all, how can someone who can't understand English vote? How can he choose a president who says all of his most important words in English? By allowing immigrants to function in native languages, we destroy their ability to compete in a dominantly English-speaking culture.

The solution, then, lies not in working around their needs, but integrating them into mainstream society by teaching them English, as early as possible. Earlier really is better — a child under the age of six can pick up virtually any language, simply by regularly being in an environment where the language is spoken.

Bilingual programs in schools should concentrate on educating new Americans not in their own language and culture, but in English and American history and culture, so that they may grow up without cultural and economic handicaps. New immigrants should be required to take an intensive course in English upon arrival.

Many private companies recognize that workers with better language skills are better workers, and will pay their employees to learn English. With measures like these in place, legislation may be passed to standardize all ballots, governmental procedures and legal and financial dealings into a wholly English format.

The end result is a linguistically and economically integrated nation that may still draw on a myriad of different cultures to support its growth.

My point is certainly not that newcomers to the United States must give up their own language and heritage. They should be encouraged to keep these things alive, but it is not the government's responsibility to help them do that. To be done at all, it must be done within the homes, the families and the churches of ethnic peoples — they understand best what their culture is all about, not a team of social workers underpaid by the state.

We're all in the same boat, but it doesn't move unless everyone hears the destination and understands his part in getting there.

Bradley P. Heintz is a UMass student

Vivisection a dubious science

Her view from within the cage is of cold and impersonal tools used to probe, poke and mutilate. A restraining chair formidably sits in the corner with immobilizing straps, screws and clamps.

Matthew V. Jaquith

It is here that she has felt the piercing scalpel penetrate her skull and abdomen. It is from her cage that the macaque has seen her cagemates mutilated at the hands of vivisectors who uncaringly dispatch the lives and bodies of sentient animals.

This is a deeply disturbing scenario. To witness the torments of laboratory animals is intensely upsetting. However, vivisection requires the experimenter to discredit animal suffering. Indeed, the father of modern vivisection, Rene Descartes, had stated that animals are soulless beings and are simply biological automata.

Their cries and grimaces are merely the manifestations of biological gears breaking down. Most anyone knows that this dismissal of animal suffering is rubbish. To any individual animal, its suffering is just as real as our suffering is to us.

But is it not the assumed similarities between human and non-human animals that make vivisection so conducive? It is hypocritical to at once recognize the psychological/biological sameness of human and non-human animals in order to justify vivisection, only to turn around and ignore that sameness when claiming that animals do not suffer?

As maddening as this all may be, it is not all that fuels the fire of anti-vivisectionists. The campaign against vivisection rests on a double-pillar foundation. In a phrase, the argument is that vivisection is cruel and unnecessary. Consider the following in order to measure the scientific validity of vivisection.

It is an obvious fact that animal species react differently to various chemicals, treatments and environmental situations. What is harmful to one may not be to another. It is, therefore, difficult to have faith in a system which arbitrarily applies the reactions of one species discovered through tenuous tests onto another species. Put more boldly, the models on which vivisection depends are fundamentally unreliable.

The drugs Orafelex, Opren and Erealdin were all extensively tested on animals before hitting the market and dubbed safe. However, they still proved harmful and even fatal for humans. Thalidomide was introduced in the late 1950s as a sedative for pregnant women. Although it was tested on animals and produced no deleterious effects, its use was halted due to a high percentage of birth defects among babies born to mothers who took the drug. The list of drugs tested on animals but found harmful to humans is overwhelmingly long. Indeed, our faith in so-called "safety tests" should be seriously reevaluated.

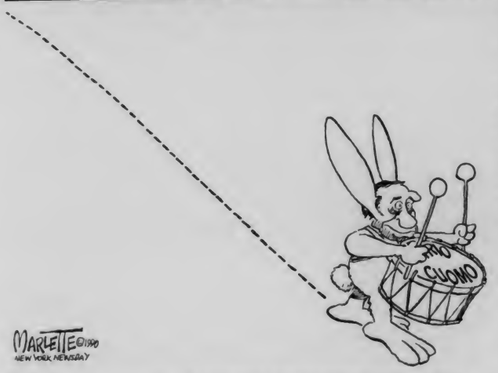
The best way to study a human disease is by working with humans. It is illogical to study human disease in non-human subjects. Yet, vivisection is supported by an unsuspecting populous despite the false premise on which it is based.

The science of epidemiology has taught us that over 80 percent off all cancers are 100 percent preventable. However, instead of directing medical action towards preventive medicine, the medical community insists on chasing that glorious cure-all which will miraculously save lives. It is precisely this mis-directing of scientific resources that has made our loss of the "War on Cancer" inevitable. By pouring millions of dollars annually into vivisection, the medical community has forfeited the opportunity to prevent disease in the first place which would be the most cost-effective and humane way to alleviate suffering.

Anti-vivisectionists are not anti-science nor do they believe animal suffering is more significant than human suffering.

Anti-vivisectionists simply ask for responsible scientific investigation; a method of scientific inquiry which is both valid and morally sound. Vivisection is an out-moded practice which is wasteful, dangerous, and morally indefensible.

Matthew V. Jaquith is a UMass student



Basic economic sense lacking

The solution to the economic situation which exists in Massachusetts is evident because the options open to the government are so limited. There is one political policy that a state government can use to affect the economy: fiscal policy.

Fiscal policy consists of taxation and government spending. During times of inflation, taxes are increased and public spending is cut. This reduces demand in the economy which lowers prices. During times of recession, taxes are cut and public spending is increased through deficit spending, which creates jobs.

Massachusetts is in a recession, but the people in Boston want to raise taxes and cut government spending. This goes directly against economic theory. No wonder this state is in such a mess. This entire situation could have been avoided if the government had raised taxes when the Massachusetts Miracle was still a reality.

Now, we will have to put ourselves in a hole to get out of it.

Pasquale Rettura, Jr.
West Springfield

Administration must match its rhetoric with actions

This is to express our and many other students' frustration with the refusal of the administration, especially Vice Chancellor Dennis Madson, to support our proposal to restore limited litigation authority to the student-funded Legal Services Office.

According to the Collegian article of Sept. 5, Dr. Madson maintains that restoring the off-campus litigation authority to LSO is "not in the best interest of this campus."

How could he possibly justify such a conclusion? Whose interest would be harmed? Accepting this proposal would in fact greatly advance student interests, without any harm or cost to the University or state. Given the fact that the state supports and funds legal services, including litigation, for low-income people — even when such programs end up suing the state — and that most students cannot afford to hire lawyers when their rights are violated, this position is totally contrary to public policy as well as concepts of fundamental fairness and equal justice under the law.

Dr. Madson "believes in [his] heart that a strong legal service is necessary," that he is committed to "giving students a fair shake," but that "doesn't rest on litigation rights."

Doesn't he see the contradiction in his words? Is he naive enough to believe that negotiation or mediation alone will give students a "fair shake" when their rights are violated? Doesn't he know that a rip-off by an unscrupulous landlord or used-car dealer could be enough to force many students out of the University? This "fair shake" sounds like empty rhetoric.

The administration and trustees have a duty to administer student fees in a manner consistent with the best interests of the students, and the current restrictions on Legal Services are totally inconsistent with those interests.

Furthermore, Dr. Madson's and the administration's position violates UMass's 20-year tradition of student government autonomy and decision-making authority, and contradicts any notion of trust and partnership between students and the administration at a time when these are more important than ever.

Dr. Madson claims that the delay in rejecting the limited litigation proposal, which he himself had invited us to submit, was caused by the need to have the University legal counsel review it.

In fact, legal counsel's written response was received in mid-April, almost six weeks before the end of the semester. Again, there was no effort on the part of the administration to have any meaningful negotiations over this issue at all — so much for a "fair shake" without litigation.

We again call on the University administration and trustees to make their actions match their rhetoric: end these unfair restrictions on student-supported legal services, and restore the office's authority to represent students with housing, consumer, family and other off-campus legal problems.

Pierre Laliberte
Graduate Student Senate
Richard Urena
Legal Services Governing Board

There will be a meeting of all columnists for the Fall 1990 semester on Friday at 1 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. Attendance is mandatory.
This will be your only chance to arrange your weekly/biweekly schedule.
Please call Reggie or Gayle at 545-0719 for any questions or problems.
Otherwise, just show up. It will be brief.

COMEDY ZONE
PEKING GARDEN RESTAURANT
Route 9 Hadley
COME EARLY FOR DINNER
It's hard to laugh with a mouthful of food!
EVERY THURSDAY 8:30
All Women Comics
♀ FOR WOMEN ONLY
COMEDY & CONVERSATION
90 minute show followed by panel discussion
$6.00 at door
Monday-Thursday 5-8 p.m.
All you can eat
BUFFET $5.99
Comedy Reservations
586-0012 549-8615
11:30-3 p.m.
All You Can Eat
SUNDAY BRUNCH $6.99
Fri-Sat Sept 21-22
from Boston-seen on MTV
He's also an associate professor at Emerson
MIKE BENT
Special Guests
Thom Brown & Ken Dubner
$6.00 at door-reservations suggested
•STUDENT SPECIAL•
Party of 10 - $40.00
Save $20 plus 20% of dinner
ALL AGES
Reserve w/your phone at 585-8615 only
All Comedy Info 585-8615
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS
All Ages-All Shows

DON'T STAY HOME
Round Trips from New York starting at:
London $370
Paris 438
San Jose C.R. 370
Bangkok 929
Hongkong 849
Tokyo 759
Student and Faculty Fare
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change. One ways available. Work/Study abroad programs. International student and teacher ID.
EURAIL PASSES ISSUED ON THE SPOT!
FREE Student Travel Catalog!
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
413-256-1261

A HEALTHY COMPLEXION AND BODY
begins with a deep pore cleansing treatment and a full body massage.
Improves how you look and feel relaxing • refreshing revitalizing
also lash and brow tinting and hair waxing
AESTHETICS
THERAPEUTIC SKIN CARE AND MASSAGE
AMHERST • 253-9479

ROBERT DE NIRO
RAY LIOTTA
JOE PESCI
GoodFellas
A MARTIN SCORSESE PICTURE
Three Decades of Life in the Mafia.
WARNER BROS. presents a IRWIN WINKLER production a MARTIN SCORSESE film GOODFELLAS ROBERT DE NIRO • RAY LIOTTA • JOE PESCI LORRAINE BRACCO and PAUL SORVINO BARBARA DE FINA NICHOLAS PILEGGI
Screenplay by NICHOLAS PILEGGI & MARTIN SCORSESE Produced by IRWIN WINKLER
Directed by MARTIN SCORSESE
R RESTRICTED
STARTS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21st

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
Cinema Paradisio
Mon-Thur one show 7:30
Fri-Sun two shows 7:00 and 9:15
Student discount with valid ID $2.50

EMPTIES?
We'll gladly take 'em!
WE NOW HAVE MEGABUCKS
Super selection of Beer and Wine
We stock over 100 brands of beer
R+P LIQUOR STORE
"the friendly store..."
Come check out our new location at:
West St. Rte 116, S. Amherst 253-9742

Buying an IBM PS/2 before December 31 can help you go places.
Places like these for only $149, round-trip.
TWA
And plenty of other places, too. Purchase an IBM Personal System/2* before the end of the year* and receive:
• TWA Certificate good for a round-trip ticket for $119 off-peak and $249 peak season
• Free TWA Getaway* Student Discount Card
• Special offering on PRODIGY*
Use your TWA Certificate to travel to any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico. Climb the Rockies. Sail off Cape Cod. Surf the Pacific. Or tan in the Keys.
Keep on going places for less. Apply for a free TWA Getaway Discount Card to receive a 10% discount on future TWA travel. TWA has waived the annual application fee.
And keep up with what's happening around the world with the PRODIGY service. For only $99 you receive the PRODIGY Start-up Kit, a 2400 bps Hayes* Personal Modem, a software connection package and three months of service.
So buy an IBM PS/2* before December 31, 1990... And start going places with a PS/2.
Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE
Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5 Sat. 10-3
IBM
DEL90 3B
* This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations from August 1 through December 31, 1990. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice.  Valid for any TWA destination in the continental U.S. or Puerto Rico for travel September 16, 1990, through December 19, 1991 at the following round trip airfares: $149.00 round trip for travel from September 16, 1990, through June 14, 1991, and September 16, 1991 through December 19, 1991; $249.00 round trip for travel June 15, 1991 through September 15, 1991. Seats are limited. Fare is non-refundable. 14 day advance purchase (plus tour dates and certain other restrictions apply. Complete details will be shown on certificate. Applicants for the discount card must be full-time students between the ages of 16-26. • IBM, Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation. TWA is a registered service mark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. TWA Getaway is a registered trademark of Trans World Airlines, Inc. PRODIGY is a registered service mark and trademark of Prodigy Services Company, a partnership of IBM and Sears. Hayes is a registered trademark of Hayes Microcomputer Products, Inc.
© IBM Corporation 1990

WOMEN'S ISSUES

Women of color's voices will be heard

Minu Sebastian

The current women's movement has been defined by many of us as a White women's movement. The current movement excludes a large, diverse and significant portion of women.

"Women of color" includes a diverse body of women, some of whom grew up in the American cultural context and others who grew up in various cultural contexts within the Third World. Depending on environment, cultural context and personal experience, our needs are varied.

In addition, our definitions and perspectives on sexism and women's rights are unique. Many of us view racism as an issue which overrides sexism. Without economic and social equality and stability, how can we even begin to address sexism in our communities?

Where can our voices be heard? And are there any organizational structures within this University representing us?

For the first time in Collegian history there is a staff position this semester which has been established to represent us.

As Co-Women's Issues Editor, I have the challenging task of seeing that our issues get accurately and comprehensively covered within this newspaper. I am looking for people to write, give ideas and learn layout skills. I look forward to meeting all people who wish to contribute.

The time has come for us to let our voices be heard and rise above those who have failed to recognize and understand our needs and concerns.

Minu Sebastian is the Co-Women's Issues Editor

Collegian photo by Richard DuCree

Jana Sorge, President of Abilities Unlimited

Abilities Unlimited offers advocacy for the disabled

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

"Abilities Unlimited," at the University of Massachusetts is a student advocacy group for the disabled.

Jana Sorge, president of the group said, "By calling the organization 'Abilities Unlimited' instead of 'Disabilities Unlimited' we are saying everyone is able in some way."

The group has weekly meetings with about six or seven students and it is open to disabled and ablebodied students. The group was begun in 1977 by a deaf and a disabled student.

"Sometimes I get angry that there are only a few people but since there are 100 disabled students at UMass that is 6 percent of the population," Sorge said.

During the first week of October the group in conjunction with "Disability Services" will launch an "Accessibility Awareness Week."

The group will have wheelchairs at "Disability Services" so that Faculty and Staff can experience a whole day of being disabled, Sorge said.

"This is a good way for faculty and staff to learn what it is like to be disabled by experiencing it first hand," Sorge said.

"For example if someone from Building Operations comes and uses a wheelchair they will be more aware of the physical needs of the disabled on this campus."

A panel discussion made up of the faculty and staff who used the wheelchairs will follow that evening so they can express how it felt to be in a wheelchair for a day, she said.

Sorge said she feels the UMass campus is fairly accessible but still needs work.

"Buttons are too high in elevators," she said. "The Textbook Annex is not accessible and we have to send someone into grab our books."

The winter time is especially difficult in terms of accessibility, she said.

"The plowing was so bad one day I could not get up on sidewalks because there was so much snow."

Sorge said she had difficulty in getting Building Operations to install grab bars in the Student Union Restrooms.

"I had to nag the hell out of Building Operations for six months to get the bars up."

Sorge said she feels a lot of people perceive disabled people as being really innocent and inactive.

"My friends were shocked when they were discussing sex and I knew what they were talking about," she said. "People are shocked that I like to party too."

She added, "I want to have a family and get married just like everyone else."

Sorge's daily routine is very different than most people's. She has to have a personal care attendant help her get out of bed in the morning and feed her breakfast, lunch, and dinner, she said.

Being dependent on others to some extent takes the spontaneity out of life.

"I cannot just go to a movie without finding a pca to put me to bed later," she said.

Leslie Newman offers insight into writing

By SUSAN LEMERE
Collegian Correspondent

Have you ever thought you might have a poem, a story, or even a novel in you?

Northampton writer, Leslea Newman is committed to helping women translate their experiences and ideas into writing. Her ten-week workshops provide a safe and supportive environment for women writers, some of whom may be just starting out.

"Often women who come to my groups want to write but do not think they have anything to say; they think their lives are too ordinary," Newman said.

One of her workshops, called "Write from the Heart" is specifically geared toward helping participants overcome their writing inhibitions.

"The process of committing your thoughts to paper is very empowering," she said.

Newman has been writing daily for five years since her first novel, "Good Enough to Eat." She recalls having been assigned almost exclusively white male authors in school. She said the implicit message was that women do not have anything worthwhile to say.

She eventually discovered Gertrude Stein, an author, who she considers to be true to herself and her art. She said she was later influenced by author, Grace Paley, who she considers to be true to a particular Jewish voice. Paley's writings made Newman feel she had permission to write in her own voice.

Newman said she encourages the members of her groups to get in touch with their own language and to write it freely. Her groups usually begin with a 20 minute writing exercise. Afterwards members share with each other what they have written. She limits the size of each group to ten and describes the atmosphere of the groups as relaxed.

"There's an intimacy and trust in the groups," she said. "The women are very supportive of each other."

Newman said she lead co-ed groups but stopped when the men commonly spoke up and took part in discussion while the women often remained silent. She said the women in her group feel less inhibited and reserved with their same sex peers.

Newman's first novel, "Good Enough to Eat," is about a woman's struggle with bulimia. She has since taken her interest in women's relationships with food outside of the fiction arena and has channeled it into a group she calls "What Are You Eating, What's Eating You."

She said this group differs from her others in its primary purpose.

"My other groups are writing groups, with the emphasis on the actual writing. This group is more of a support group that uses writing for self-healing," she said.

"The approach works because it's very difficult to lie on paper. You end up realizing things about yourself," she said.

Another group, "A Novel Idea," is particularly exciting because the nine participants all have novels in progress, she said. She has written poems, short stories, and novels and feels comfortable with all three forms.

She wrote her first novel somewhat by accident.

"I thought 'Good Enough to Eat' was going to be a short story. Then I thought it was going to be a long story. Then I thought it was a novella. Finally, at three hundred pages I had to admit, okay, it's a novel," she said.

She now has eight books to her credit. The latest, a collection of short stories titled "Secrets," was published last spring. "Every story has a secret in it," Newman said. "Usually the reader knows what it is, but one or more of the characters do not."

Newman's advice to aspiring writers? "Take my class! Beyond that, read, write, listen to people talk, most importantly believe in yourself." She firmly believes that the writing process itself is the true teacher. "Sooner or later, you reach a point where it's between you and the pen," she said.

With 8 books to her credit and workshops scheduled through May, Newman and pen are a force to be reckoned with.

Newman's workshops are held in Northampton for ten weeks. There is a sliding scale fee for both morning and evening sessions. There is no previous writing experience required for any workshop. For more information on her workshops call 584-3865.

Women's Issues Needs Writers

ARTS & LIVING

Alto sax legend Phil Woods is a joy to hear

By BILL ROSENBLATT
Collegian Staff

Countless thousands of musicians, in jazz and elsewhere, have been influenced by Charlie Parker. Some played with him; some hung out with him; some tried to emulate him in every way possible. Some stepped forward when he died in the 50s and claimed to be the inheritor of the tradition he helped establish. But only one took his admiration so far as to marry Parker's widow. That person is alto saxophonist Phil Woods, who will be appearing with his working group at the Iron Horse on Sunday night for 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. shows.

Phil Woods was born in Springfield (yes, right here in the Valley) in 1931. Like most jazz musicians intent on advancing their careers, he went to New York. His first education in the Apple was under the rigorously disciplined piano iconoclast, Lennie Tristano; then he spent time in the even more formal atmospheres of the Manhattan and Julliard Schools of Music.

Like Miles Davis, Woods balanced out his formal, Eurocentric education by hanging out with Parker and other beboppers. He also picked up the big band experience that, at the time, was all but required for an aspiring jazz musician. Big-band employment had the advantages of being associated with a big-name bandleader and of getting one's name circulated wider. In very little time, Woods was known as one of the hottest altoists in New York; when Parker died in the mid-50s, he was ready to take over.

Valley Jazz

Woods got a working group together (the recent reissue Warm Woods is from this period) and quickly rose to the top. The industry at the time was looking for a "more socially acceptable" (i.e., White, formally educated, no "nasty habits," etc.) version of Parker, and Woods — having married Parker's widow Chan — fit perfectly. Plus, he could play. He went immediately to the top of the Down Beat readers' poll on alto sax, a position he held almost continually until 1974.

He became known as a consistently inventive, swinging improviser who wore his musical debt to Parker on his sleeve. His popularity held until the mid-60s, at which time the emphasis in the jazz community was on leaving the older forms behind and searching for new avenues of expression. Like many others in his predicament, he moved to Paris, where he found himself more popular than ever. While there, he maintained another working group, the European Rhythm Machine.

Woods returned to the U.S. in 1972. Shortly afterwards, he recorded what is probably his finest LP to date: Musique du Bois, which featured the fantastic Boston-based rhythm section of pianist Jaki Byard, bassist Richard Davis and drummer Alan Dawson. Then he put together the group that has (with a couple of personnel changes) been working with him to this day: pianist Hal Galper, trombonist Hal Crook, bassist Steve Gilmore and drummer Bill Goodwin. Although he has put in appearances with other musicians, Woods believes that a tightly-knit working group is essential to good improvised music. In these days of "all-stars" and "young lions" who have over-inflated egos and recording contracts when they should still be learning, truly empathetic working groups are hard to find. Although Woods is a major stylist on alto sax, the other members of his group cannot be described as such. However, they demonstrate that there is nothing like working together night after night for close to two decades. The group's musical cohesion and receptiveness to each other's ideas, elements so essential to jazz, are a joy to hear and even more so to see.

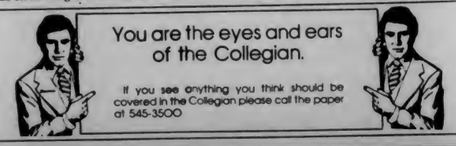
University Players Presents

TALK RADIO

Audition Dates: Sept. 22 and 23
12 - 6 in the Commonwealth Room, S.U.B.

Show dates: November 4-7

For more info contact Kristie—585-0390



You are the eyes and ears of the Collegian.
If you see anything you think should be covered in the Collegian please call the paper at 545-3500

ΣAM

PRESENTS...

LIVE AT

UMASS

FOR MORE INFO. CALL JEFF AT 253-5165

Monday, September 17th: "Pizza Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:00 pm.

Tuesday, September 18th: "Jai-Alai Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30 pm.

Monday, September 24th: "Billiards" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Tuesday, September 25th: "Movie & Sundae Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Wednesday, September 26th: "Kentucky Fried Chicken Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30pm.

1990

Save UP TO $160

Famous Double Discount

Now's the time to get the best deal on your college ring. Buy now and save up to $80 on your college ring, and get a second discount – a free "savings match" gift certificate – good for merchandise in the store. Choose from an exciting selection of men's and women's ring styles. Talk to your ArtCarved representative today and double your savings.

ARTCARVED COLLEGE JEWELRY

Mon - Fri
Sept. 17-21
9:30-3:30

UNIVERSITY STORE

Special Payment Plans Available

■ nomination reactions

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

organization. Weld is an enthusiastic supporter.

"We have no one on the ballot strongly opposed to it," he said.

Cole also said because the candidates have been generally quiet on state higher education he does not know which candidate might be better for the system.

He said the MSP, which represents professors and librarians on this campus, generally does not endorse candidates for public office as other unions do but said the union might consider an endorsement this election year. He said a decision will be made in a few weeks.

Dean of Students Eileen Stewart said the election results did not surprise her much. "I think things were much more up in the air than the pundits said."

Stewart declined to comment on her political beliefs or the candidates but said about Silber, "I don't think running a university qualifies you to run a state."

She echoed a statement many contacted by the Collegian made about Weld: "I really don't know too much about him."

"There will be some real choices [this fall] especially with CLT on the ballot so I suspect it will sharpen the debate [between the candidates] and about who will run state government and who will pay for it," she said.

Gary Aho, a professor in the English department, said he was surprised Silber got the nod from the electorate. "I thought he had put his foot in his mouth just too many times," he said.

"He's a very scary man," he said. "Silber's election might be a harbinger that we are on the wrong end of the CLT petition as well."

Aho said he suspects many people voted for Silber because he is not a professional politician. "I think many people are disgusted by the pols in Boston now."

John Lewis, a senior communications major, said he did not vote Tuesday and that neither Weld nor Silber impresses him.

"No one stands head and shoulders above the other," he said. "But I suppose they are as capable as any other."

■ state rep.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

said. "I'm not afraid to raise taxes, anybody who says no new taxes is misleading the voter."

While at UMass, Valianti said he ran for student trustee, helped found the University Democrats and was involved with WMUA, the college radio station.

He said his experiences at UMass helped him "sow the seeds" of his political future.

"I owe a lot to my experiences at UMass, I had a lot of great professors who helped shape me into a well rounded person," he said.

Ted Chambers, a UMass student, said Valianti's campaign staff is comprised totally of UMass students. Chambers said Valianti ran as a full time representative, he added salary for a representative ranges from $30,000 to 35,000 a year.

Kathy McFarland, Valianti's mother, said she was "very proud" of her son, but quickly added she always has been.

"I have nine children and four of them have graduated from UMass and have gone on do to well," she said.

She said Valianti has always been very ambitious and she has rarely seen him over the past few months.

Valianti won eight of the city's 14 precincts, nearly sweeping the blue collar neighborhoods in the city of 32,000.

Valianti captured the primary with 2,539 votes, easily defeating Marlboro lawyer Sem Aykanian, who finished second with 1,978 votes. Marlboro City Councilor Marilyn A. Perry finished third with 1,828 votes.

■ cops

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

PROTECTIVE CUSTODY

• An officer responding to a report of a subject taking food in a Campus Center restaurant on Monday placed a 21-year-old subject under protective custody. The person was under the influence of alcohol, police said.

TWENTY YEARS GONE

R.I.P.
JIMI

AMPLEXUS

We're Half Crazy.

BUY ANY 2 ITEMS AND THE HIGHER PRICED ITEM IS ½ PRICE!

WITH COUPON 50% OFF!

BUY ANY 2 ITEMS AND THE HIGHER PRICED ITEM IS ½ PRICE!

NAME
ADDRESS
CITY STATE ZIP
50% ITEM
REG. PRICE ON ITEM $ TOTAL SALE $

Coupon Valid Thurs., Sept 20 thru Sun., Sept. 30, 1990

CARD gallery

Coupon must be presented at time of purchase. One coupon per person. Store stock only. All candy, Hummel, Reading Room, Precious Moments, Halloween and Christmas Merchandise excluded. We reserve the right to limit quantities. All sales final. C920

CUT ME OUT!

WE'VE GOT YOUR GIFT!

CARD gallery

15 CT AND MA STORES TO SERVE YOU

MASSACHUSETTS

HADLEY/AMHERST
Next To Super Stop & Shop

METROPOLITAN BOOKSELLERS'
BOOK FAIR
W·A·R·E·H·O·U·S·E S·A·L·E

is entering its

4th FABULOUS WEEK

The Excitement Continues with

TEXTBOOKS $2.50 to $5.00

70% Off! Original Publishers' List Price ON THOUSANDS OF BOOKS

50% Off! Original Publishers' List Price ON TONS OF CHILDREN'S BOOKS

★ ALL BOOKS ★ AT EXCELLENT SAVINGS!

This Ad is worth $5.00 towards any purchase over $25.00! (limit one per customer)

The Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley, MA

(In the old Almy's Store at The Mountain Farms Mall.)

Hours: Mon-Sat. 10-9, Sunday 12-6

This extraordinary selection is available from publishers overstocks, returns, special printings and liquidations.

Northampton Bowl
584-4830 Pleasant St.
Thursday Nights
8:45pm-close
College Special
3 Games & Shoes all for $5.00
with College I.D.

A Sure Sign of Glamour...
Intrigue... and Perfect Hair
HOLLYWOOD
Ditto...
JUNGLERED
Lower Level,
Amherst
Carriage Shops
549-1840
JUNGLE RED SALON

MICHAEL'S
Billiard Room
& Sports Bar
Thurs Night Featuring NFL Films
Weekends:Top College & Pro footbal action
- Five 9 ft. Championship Tables
- Your favorite sporting events on large screen TVs
- $1.00 Drafts in ice cold mugs
- 25 cent hot dogs
- Appetizer menu
- This Week: $1 Rolling Rock Bottles
- Thursday is Ladies' Night—Ladies play pool for half price on Thurs. Night

Formerly
Changes Nightclub
256-8284
11 am to 12 Midnight Daily
21 and older
MICHAEL'S
Rt. 9, Amherst
(Next to Hunan Garden Rest.)
Proper ID required

TOTAL FITNESS
Celebrating 8 years of quality service.

Computerized upper body conditioning

Ultimate low impact aerobic machines

Donna Kelley
AAFA IDEA certified

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1989 1st PLACE
Five Times!

"Big enough to afford the best equipment but small enough to know your name"
NAUTILUS LIFECYCLES TREADMILL
Amherst Athletic Club
460 West St.
South Amherst
Karate Health Fitness Center
256-0080

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
DAILY COLLEGE DEALS IN NEW ENGLAND
presents:
The Business Card BONANZA
Do you own a Business Card?
That's all you need to reach 21,000 readers daily.
Discount Rate (for 2 col. x 2 inch ad): $20
The Business Card Bonanza Page runs every Monday beginning September 24th.
A new and exciting way to advertise for less money.
Contact the Collegian for more details.
545-3500

VAN NOSTRUM
THE HAPLESS EXCHANGE STUDENT
AFTER A GRUELING EVENING STUDYING MERADODECAHEDRONS VAN NOSTRUM GETS HUNGRY.
I TO YEARN FOR SOME FOOD PERHAPS...
TWO STOMACH SCREACHING HOURS LATER - THE DELIVERY GUY ARRIVES...
OKAY DUDE - THAT'S $43.86
DEITZ FREITZ!
A SHORT WALK OR DRIVE TO THE CENTER OF TOWN AT 50 MAIN ST.
ENJOY!
OH NOOO! IT'S EITHER EAT THIS MESS OR→
1990 RUFFALO CREATIONS

Seven incumbents lose seats in state elections

The Associated Press

Boston— Voter anger at incumbents trickled down to the legislature, where at least seven long-term state representatives lost their seats in the primary.

Tallies were close in other House races, and a Democratic member of the Senate lost his seat to a newcomer.

"It's a tough time to be an incumbent," said Charlie Baker, who followed legislative races for the Democratic Party. "What you're seeing is a lot of good Democratic challengers doing well."

The closest race appeared to be in the Republican state senate race in Norfolk and Plymouth County, where convenience store owner Cristie Mihos held a one-vote margin over Robert Hedlund, 5,963 to 5,962. Don Hussey was about 1,000 votes behind at 4,812.

While political observers said incumbents still have many advantages going into the general election, the primary election was considered an early gauge of voter anger over the $1.2 billion tax increase signed into law this year by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis after a protracted battle in the legislature.

One Democratic race considered a test of incumbency pitted former House Speaker Thomas McGee, D-Lynn, against Edward Clancy, of the Lynn City Council, with McGee barely surviving.

With 100 percent of the vote counted, the vote was 50-50, with McGee holding a nine-vote edge, 4,033 to 4,024.

"It's basically about dead even," Clancy said.

McGee also acknowleged a tight race. "I don't know what's going to happen," said McGee. "There's no question that being an incumbent has hurt me."

Glancy said early today he was considering requesting a recount, but that he had not made up his mind. He said he has 10 days to call for a recount.

Another Lynn incumbent Democrat, Rep. Vincent Lozzi, lost in a four-way race to Jeffrey Hayward, the chief of staff to Lynn's mayor.

"There was obviously an anti-incumbency across the state," said Hayward, who had 3,076, or 40 percent, to 2,389, or 31 percent, for Lozzi, although Hayward added he was not sure how much of a role incumbency played in his race.

Incumbency in the past has meant powerful advantage for those seeking re-election. In the last legislative race in 1988, all 34 incumbents seeking re-election in the House took their seats back.

But this year, Democratic incumbents faced challenges in a number of key primary races.

One long-time incumbent, Rep. Michael Flaherty, D-Boston, who served 12 terms, lost to challenger Paul Gannon, who took 55 percent of the vote in a five-way race. Flaherty took only 38 percent of the vote, or a total of 3,696.

GOLD RING SALE
SAVE UP TO $100!
$100 off 18K; $50 off 14K, $25 off 10K
Order your college ring NOW.
JOSTENS
AMERICA'S COLLEGE RING
Date: Sept. 24-28 10am-4pm, Deposit required: $25.00
at the University Store, Mon-Fri
Meet with your Jostens representative for full details.
See our complete ring selection on display in your college bookstore.

Kerry, Rappaport compete

BOSTON (AP) — The November ballot will give voters the choice between liberal Democratic Sen. John Kerry and conservative real estate developer James Rappaport, while in central Massachusetts, Rep. Richard Neal, D-Mass., has cleared his lone opponent in a bid for a second term.

Rappaport sailed to an easy victory in Tuesday's primary over Hingham businessman Dan Danly. The Republican Senate primary between Rappaport and Daly was among the first called by Boston television stations and Rappaport gave his victory speech a half hour after the polls closed.

In Springfield, Neal easily beat back a primary challenge from former Springfield Mayor Ted Dimauro. No Republican ran for the traditionally Democratic seat, ensuring that Neal will return to Washington.

Rappaport, who spent nearly $2 milion of his own money in defeating Daly, goes into the November election a clear underdog to Kerry But some indication of the high hopes Republicans hold for the 34-year-old businessman came at 11:55 p.m. Tuesday when President Bush telephoned his congratulations.

"We really need you to beat John Kerry," Bush told Rappaport. "I'll do what I can to help."

Both candidates wasted no time in moving to the attack, leaving little doubt that negative tactics will dominate the Senate race.

"John Kerry, who is Mike Dukakis' ambassador to Washington, believes in more spending and ever higher taxes," Rappaport told cheering supporters in his vitory speech.

Even as Rappaport was speaking, Kerry held an impromptu campaign news conference outside the Park Plaza Hotel. Later, in a telephone interview, he said, "I'll take my record of leadership out against the 34-year-old real estate developer any day."

Kerry easily rattled off instances in which Rappaport has spread "lies' about his primary opponent, republican Dan Daly, and "distortions" about his Senate record.

"The issue of character and integrity is central to this campaign," Kerry said. "this fellow wants to be a U.S. senator. He ought to show that he knows how to behave like it."

Another likely issue in a Rappaport-Kerry contest is the Central Artery and Third Harbor tunnel project to help alleviate traffic congestion in Boston. Rappaport opposes it as a waste of public money that could be spent on roads and bridges across the state. Kerry supports the plan and has worked in Washington to secure federal funds for the job.

Rappaport is also likely to harp on an issue he raised during the primary: that Kerry has paid too much attention to foreign policy and not enough to the Massachusetts economy.

Kerry, anticipating that charge, brought up a counter-charge of his own that while he was in the Senate looking after the interests of the state, Daly "was off in Hawaii or Vermont making money." It was a reference to various out-of-state business interests of Rappaport's.

Daly spent nearly a half million dollars of his own money against Rappaport, but said he has no regrets.

"We simply got outspent," Daly said in a telephone interview. "We're happy and we've got no regrets."

With 2,012 of 2,138 precincts reporting, or 94 percent, Rappaport had 242,183 votes, or 66 percent, to Daly's 125,458 or 34 percent.

Neal led challenger Dimauro from beginning to end in his bid to keep his 2nd District congressional seat

GO! SHOP! SAVE! WIN! LIQUORS! 44!
5|0 4|0 3|0 2|0 1|0
BEER WINE LIQUORS

BUDWEISER Suitcase 24-12 oz. cans $11.39
SAMUEL ADAMS case of 24 12 oz. bottles $16.99 + DEP
Moosehead BEER case of 24-12 oz. bottles $14.49 + DEP
O'KEEFE BEER case of 24-12 oz. bottles $10.49 + DEP
PIELS DRAFT & PIELS LIGHT suitcase 24-12 oz. cans $7.49 + DEP

August Sebastiani PROPRIETERS WINES $3.99 1.5L
FOLONARI SOAVE $4.99 1.5L
M.G. VALLEJO CHARDONNAY $2.99 750 ml
Beringer WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.99 750 ml
MANISCHEWITZ BLACKBERRY, CHERRY, CONCORD $3.99 1.5L
TAYLOR California Cellars BURGUNDY, CHABLIS, BLUSH, RHINE, CHENIN BLANC, FRENCH COLUMBARD, WHITE GRENACHE, ROSE $5.49 3.0L

STOLICHNAYA VODKA $18.49 1.75 L
CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $8.29 750 ml
GORDON'S GIN $9.99 1.75 L SALE $11.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $2.00 AFTER REBATE
JOHNNIE WALKER RED $24.49 1.75 L
CASTILLO WHITE RUM SALE $10.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $3.00 $7.49 1.75 L AFTER REBATE
FLEISCHMANNS VODKA $9.49 1.75 L

not responsible for typographical errors
LIQUORS 44
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
TWO LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4565
8am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
SALE PRICES THURS 9/20/90 THRU WED 9/27/90
TeleCheck

Colombo FROZEN YOGURT
Make a date for Colombo frozen yogurt at.
BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Northampton 186 Main St Fitness Rd
Amherst Bothwood Walk

boltwood

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

the project.

"In the beginning, the volunteers know how the person looks different, but in the end, they know the actual person, not the disability, Diamond said.

The Boltwood Project, in its twenty-first year running, was originally developed by an Amherst College student who began the program at a house on Boltwood Avenue in Amherst. Currently, however, all Boltwood volunteer members are University students.

Sandra Hodge, Political Science major and third-semester member of the project, said that the program is a multi-functional learning experience.

"It's teaching me valuable life experience, working with a client, working with a group, and working within a set program," Hodge said. Jen Limbacher, a project supervisor, stressed the importance of the program for the residents of the State School involved in the program. "It gives them a weekly chance to feel good about themselves and participate in activities with people who really want to see them," she explained. Without the program, this is something they may not ordinarily get.

The program, which continues recruitment next week, is holding information meetings at the Campus Center, Monday September 24, and Tuesday September 25.

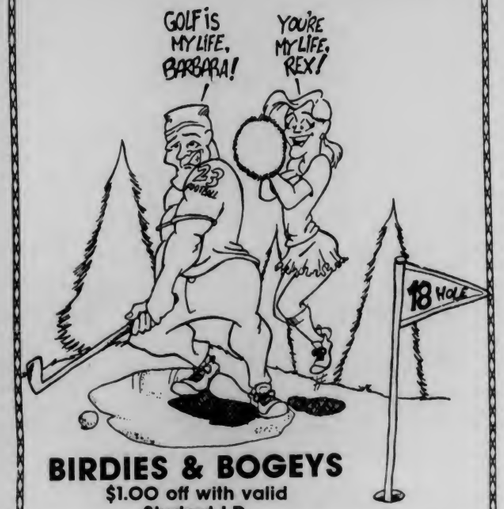
Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
- 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
- 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts (2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
- 4 Racquetball Courts
- Nautilus & Cardiovascular Fitness Center
- Aerobics

CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte 116 Sunderland
(Opposite Bub's BBQ on Bus Route)
Open 7 Days • 7:00am-11:00pm
Call and receive coupons before Sept. 30 and pay only $225 for a Semester Club membership that includes Nautilus, unlimited Raquetball and free aerobics!

Semester-Club Membership for $225
Nautilus, Unlimited Raquetball, Free Aerobics
Rt. 116, Sunderland, MA 01059 (413) 549-4545
CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC C

INDOOR MINIATURE GOLF
Thursday and Friday-Student Night



BIRDIES & BOGEYS
$1.00 off with valid Student I.D.
5-9:30
Call Stacey for group discount
Holyoke Mall-Lower Level
536-3765

Spirit Haus
Liquor Store

Busch Beer suitcase cans $8.99

Bacardi Rum 750 ml $6.99

Absolut Vodka 750 ml $9.99

Heineken case $15.99

Southern Comfort 750 ml $6.99

Purple Passion 2 L $3.99

Post Road Real Ale six pack $4.69

Old Australia six pack $3.99

Knickerbocker 16 oz. bottles case $9.49

338 College St. (Rte. 9), Amherst 253-5384

Wesley United Methodist Church
365 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002
10:45 a.m. Worship
Free UMass bus leaves GRC and FAC at 10:35, stops at our door
549-1550

KIMDAD AUTO SALES
ROUTE 9
Just Before Belchertown Center
323-8553
Many AFFORDABLE CARS $295 and UP

75 AMC s/w 6cyl.A.T.	only $295
76 NOVA 4 dr. 6 cyl.a.t.	only $395
76 NOVA 4 dr. a.t. new paint	$895
77 Monarch 4 dr.a.t. 6 cyl.	$695
79 LTD 4 dr. a.t. good running	$695
78 Cutlass 2 dr. a.t.	$695
84 Capri 4 cyl. 4sp.sharp car	$1995
84 LTD s/w 6 cyl.a.t. clean	$1495
80 Monte Carlo 2dr.a.t. clean	$695

many more to choose from
We also do any kind of repairs mechanical or auto body, so give us a call
WE SERVICE WHAT WE SELL

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Early vegetarians returning from the kill.

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

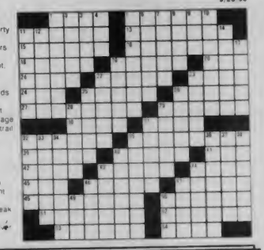
ACROSS
1 Price tag
5 Regard with pleasure
11 Mosaic piece
13 Spear for Neptune
15 Banker, at times
16 Wire
18 Consumed
19 Admits defeat
20 — king
21 Culture medium
22 Coiffure feature
23 Matures
24 Horse doctor, for short
25 Large throng
26 Used up
27 Obliterations
29 Shoreines
30 Horse's gait
31 Lion's warning
32 Cooked hat
35 Enticing
39 Powder for polishing
40 Lions' prides
41 Afternoon party
42 Dairy
43 Money makers
44 Back talk
45 Bank account, for short
46 Crescendo
47 Sentry's words
48 Not forever
50 Chancel seat
51 Plowed acreage
52 Follows the trail
53 Iced
54 Part of B A

DOWN
1 Musical composition
2 More ancient
3 Brit. gun
4 Mountain peak
5 Waits upon
6 Deepen a bed
7 Distance measures
8 March 15th, to Nero
9 Rule, for short
10 Causes anger
11 — the raveled — of care Shak
12 Scant
14 Ability
17 Harbor sights
19 Insertion mark
22 Chemical element
23 Separated
25 Speed it up!
26 TV serials
28 Tempest
29 Arrives
31 French income
32 Be appropriate
33 Turkish hospice
34 Made from clay
35 Lake the webs we weave
36 Printing style
37 Snuggle
38 Neon et al
40 Desert vision
43 Wall painting
44 Nobel Peace Prize co-winner t 1978
45 By oneself
47 German title
49 Mideast org
50 RR stop

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	A	L	T			K	A	R	A		C	O	D
A	M	I	R	S		E	L	O	N		C	H	A	R
M	Y	F	A	I	R	L	A	D	Y		L	O	R	E
E	S	T	I	M	A	T	E		T	H	E	R	E	S
			K	I	P	S		S	H	R	O	U	D	S
M	O	D	E	L	S		A	L	I	E	N	S
A	G	R	E	E		A	L	A	N	S		L	A	W
A	R	E	S		H	Y	L	I	N	G		D	I	S	H
M	E	A		M	A	R	A	T		R	I	N	S	E
			M	O	I	R	E	S		R	E	S	E	N	T
R	E	G	A	R	D	S		D	E	S	C
A	N	I	T	A	S		D	O	N	E	L	E	S	S
D	O	R	E		H	E	L	L	O	D	O	L	L	Y
I	L	L	S		I	S	E	E		A	S	I	A	N
O	A	S			P	E	W	S		L	E	A	V	E

9/20/90



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos Reuben on Rye	Roast Pork Baked Ziti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
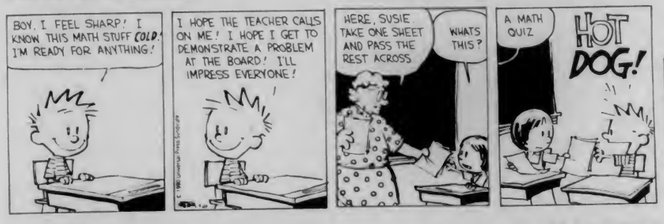
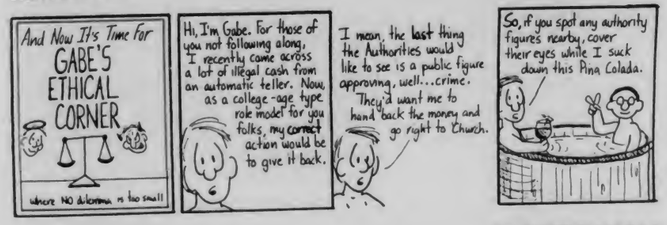
Vegetable Taco Vegetable Melt	Golden Carrot Bake Baked Ziti

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



BOY, I FEEL SHARP! I KNOW THIS MATH STUFF COLD! I'M READY FOR ANYTHING!
I HOPE THE TEACHER CALLS ON ME! I HOPE I GET TO DEMONSTRATE A PROBLEM AT THE BOARD! I'LL IMPRESS EVERYONE!
HERE, SUSIE TAKE ONE SHEET AND PASS THE REST ACROSS.
WHAT'S THIS?
A MATH QUIZ
HOT DOG!

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

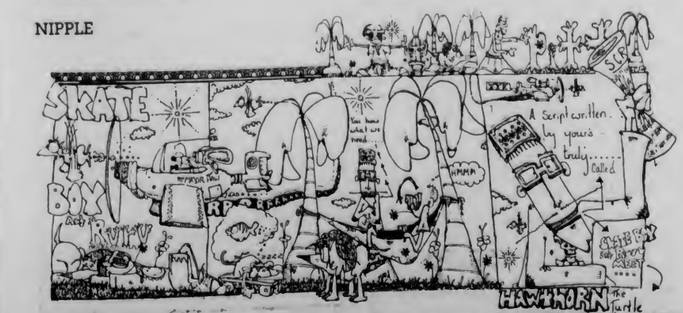


And Now It's Time for GABE'S ETHICAL CORNER
where NO dilemma is too small
Hi, I'm Gabe. For those of you not following along, I recently came across a lot of illegal cash from an automatic teller. Now, as a college-age type role model for you folks, my correct action would be to give it back.
I mean, the last thing the Authorities would like to see is a public figure approving, well...crime.
They'd want me to hand back the money and go right to Church.
So, if you spot any authority figures nearby, cover their eyes while I suck down this Pina Colada.

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

GRENDLE, A LITTLE POLISH AND THIS OL' LAMP WILL LOOK GOOD AS NEW!
POOF
WHO DISTURBS THE GENI OF THE LAMP
NOW YOU'VE DONE IT!!
OH MAN!
©1990 PRICE VAN RAY 9/20/90

NIPPLE



YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take care of routine work first. A highly desirable position may be vacated. Go after it for yourself! Some hopes are fulfilled more easily than others. Let a relationship mature.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Impulse rather than reason drives you today. Know your limitations and you will do fine. Personal financial woes are relieved by a promissory note or gift. Romance is happier than in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Use subtlety and strategy to get the job done. Resist an urge to spend money foolishly on entertainment. A good day to contact prominent people about a job or financial backing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You find the time to raise funds for a community cause. A creative effort leads to unexpected success! Keep the lines of communication open with a child who has moved away.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The spotlight is on your job and your health. It is time to contemplate the future. Show appreciation for the special joy a loved one gives you. Get oral agreements in writing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Pace yourself if the tempo at work picks up. Find a quiet place for lunch so you can recharge your batteries. A change of lifestyle will add to your creature comforts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Wait a while before trying to revive an old idea. Stay in close touch with former employers. A yen for travel can be realized. Try to wrangle an invitation to a business seminar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Someone's stubbornness works to your advantage at place of employment. Change is good for you. Travel to distant lands could be in your immediate future. Welcome new experiences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Refuse to mediate a quarrel between two close friends lest both turn against you. Bask in the limelight while it lasts. Listen to loved ones when deciding about a special gift for a child.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Romance is enhanced by something that takes place at work. A banker is in a liberal mood. Make a pitch for a loan. Missing papers could turn up in another person's desk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A last-minute schedule change allows you to keep a date with an old friend. A sudden wind fall eases a cash crunch. Career takes a temporary back seat to family responsibilities. Romance is fun-filled.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Being in a relaxed mood helps you make the right decisions. Check the details of a project to avoid embarrassment later on. The emphasis now is on trust and financial security. Pursue romance.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Will Georgiades
Copy Editor.....Mike Webber
Layout Technician.....Terry Starmer
Photo Technician.....Richard DuCree
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Typesetter.....Danielle Dowling
Production.....Jenna Dye, Seth Kaye, Danielle Dowling, Mike Carvalho, Nicole Dumas

WORLD

■ Iraq

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

stop supply flights to Iraq. Six weeks into the Persian Gulf crisis Saddam appears determined as ever to hold on to Kuwait, having boosted occupation forces to an estimated 360,000.

Nine West European countries on Tuesday endorsed the proposed U.N. air blockade, and Argentina said it was joining the multinational flotilla enforcing the naval blockade of Iraq.

U.N. chief Javier Perez de Cuellar sounded a pessimistic note, saying he feared the gulf military standoff brought on by Iraq's Aug. 8 seizure of Kuwait could turn into World War III.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi government said today that it has frozen all cash deposits and property of conpanies and banks, private and government — owned, from countries that are honoring the U.N.-ordered embargo.

The state-run Iraqi News Agency said the ruling Revolutionary Command Council ordered the freeze under a new seven-article law dealing with the protection of "Iraqi interests, money and rights in Iran and abroad."

The United States and other countries already have frozen Iraq's foreign holding. Kuwait's foreign assets, estimated at about $100 billion have been turned over to the country's exiled leaders.

In New York, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Yuli Vorontsov said he expected the U.N. Security Council to approve the embargo before the week is out.

The United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — the council's permanent members — are refining the language of the air embargo resolution so it conforms to international air traffic laws, said Vorontsov.

Since the Iraqi invasion Washington has sent about 165,000 troops to the Persian Gulf region, most of them dug into the Saudi desert, to head a growing multinational force. More American GI's and heavy tanks are on the way.

The Pentagon says the buildup is also continuing on the other side of the Saudi-Kuwait border. Over the last two weeks Iraqi troop strength in and near Kuwait has risen to 360,000, it said Tuesday. The Pentagon's last estimate two weeks ago was 265,000.

Perez de Cuellar said in New York on Tuesday that Iraq's invasion of Kuwait could lead to the next world war unless a diplomatic settlement is found. "I am old, but I have witnessed wars, global war. Global, global, global war," the 70-year-old U.N. chief told a luncheon of the U.N. Correspondents Association.

Concern was also expressed Tuesday that if war were to break out it would extend far out of the Middle East, with terrorist attacks by Arabs loyal to Saddam.

The director of the CIA, William H. Webster, said his agency is concerned about Saddam's links to Palestinian terrorists who have attacked Western targets.

Parliament demands cabinet resign

Soviet prime minister blames council for economic crisis

the Associated Press

Moscow— The parliament of the Russian republic today demanded the resignation of the national Cabinet, or Council of Ministers, led by the Prime Minister Nikolai T. Ryzhkov, blaming them for the country's economic crisis.

Russia is only one of 15 Soviet republics, but the formal expression of no confidence was a major blow to Ryzhkov, whose resignation has ben demanded by demonstrators for months.

Members of the Supreme Soviet of Russia, led by Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin, blamed Ryzhkov for the nation's economic troubles and said they did not believe he would carry out a proposed plan to create a market-based economy in 500 days.

The Russian parliament voted overwhelmingly last week to adopt the 500-plan, and the national Supreme Soviet legislature is now considering whether to approve it or one of two other major proposals.

Ryzhkov presented his proposal, the most conservative, to the national body last week.

As prime minister and head of the Council of Ministers, Ryzhkov oversees the government bureaucracy and could play a key role in putting any reform plan into effect, or obstructing it.

He said last week that if his proposal is defeated, he will "take responsibility for it before the people and the Supreme Soviet." But he has avoided making a clear promise to step aside if radical reforms are enacted.

Several leading reformers have demanded Ryzhkov's resignation since he presented his plan, which envisions continued centralization of the economy while gradual moves are made toward a market-based system.

Winnie Mandela briefly detained

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)— Police briefly detained Winnie Mandela yesterday after finding spent bullet cartidges in her car, witnesses said.

An angry Mrs. Mandela claimed the incident was part of an ongoing plan to harass her and her husband, African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

The incident came a day after the government announced that it will prosecute Mandela on charges of kidnapping and assault for the 1988 abduction and beating of four youths.

The charges could harm negotiations between the ANC and the government of President F.W. de Klerk.

Mandela was traveling today in her white Mercedes-Benz through the Tokoza township southeast of Johannesburg when she was stopped at a police roadblock.

"Mrs. Mandela apparently picked up the shells while visiting," said a police spokeswoman, Capt. Ida van Zweel. "She handed them to a policeman. There is no crime involved."

The ANC claimed Mandela had been arrested. The group said she had been invited to the township by residents who wanted to hand over the spent cartidges from the recent black factional fighting.

The organization said it "condemns the harassment meted out to Mrs. Winnie Mandela" by police "intent on curbing the normal activity of the ANC."

★ CARRY OUT COUPON ★
Buy ONE, Get ONE
for 99¢
Buy Any Large Pizza Or 12" Pan Style Pizza and Get One of equal or lesser toppings for 99¢!
Good on Carry Out only. Not Good With any other offer. Expires 11-30-90

Open for Lunch and Open to 3AM
DOMINO'S PIZZA
Amherst 256-8911

★ DELIVERY COUPON ★
Buy ONE, Large
or 12" Pan Style Pizza, and get ONE of equal or lesser toppings for $1.99 delivered
in 30 min. or less
Not good with any other offer Expires 11-30-90

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM Tel: 549-2692
Super Location, Super Prices Scott's Liquors!
Budweiser Suitcases 24-12 oz. cans $11.49+ Dep
$11.49
$6.39
Michelob Reg-Light-Dry 12-12 oz. cans $6.39+ Dep
Knickerbocker Beer 24-12 oz. cans $6.99+ Dep
$6.99
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 750 ml $6.99
Kahlua Liquer 750 ml $10.99
$13.49
Smirnoff Vodka 80 proof 1.75 L $13. 49
$6.99
$10.99
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE
6 University Drive, Newmarket Center, Amherst
Diagonally Across from the UMass Stadium
Plenty of FREE Parking
Telecheck for Your Personal Check
MPGABUCKS We Have It
We now have all Mass Lottery games!

Poster Sale Thru Sept 23
ROBERT DOISNEAU
R. MICHELSON GALLERIES
253 Pleasant St., Amherst-Mass 413-253-2500
132 Main St. Northampton-Mass. 413-586-1964

Apply Now To Compete In The
MISS MASSACHUSETTS USA™ PAGEANT
Official Preliminary — Miss USA™ Pageant
NO TALENT REQUIRED. Must be age 18-26 by Feb. 1, 1991 never been married and at least 6 month Mass. Resident $200,000 TO U.S. WINNER ON TV!
For FREE entry information, send name, address, date of birth and phone number with a recent snapshot and brief biography to:
MISS MASSACHUSETTS USA HEADQUARTERS
222 Newbury St., 2nd Fl., Boston, MA 02116, ATTN. Dept. DC
Phone (617) 266-3280
FINAL DEADLINE IS SEPT. 28, 1990

Football Notebook

Reid borrows Temple's hoop tactics

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

This past winter, as University of Massachusetts football coach Jim Reid watched the UMass-Temple basketball game, he was struck by the shifting, "matchup" zone defense used by the Owls.

Inspired, Reid walked down to his office in Boyden at halftime and began moving X's and O's around his chalkboard.

The result, eight months later: UMass is unbeaten in two games, having tied Holy Cross 10-10 and beaten Maine, 21-10. Both teams have run up double-digit wins over the Minutemen in recent years.

Reid adjusted to changes in college, and professional, football. Running the ball, a la Maine and tailback Carl Smith, is out. Run-and-shoot teams, such as Holy Cross, are no longer the exception, but the rule.

In the off-season, Reid abandoned his usual 3-4 defense in favor of a four-man rush. Reid has also used redshirt freshman Matt Rajotte as a starter at cornerback, and shuffled in converted tailback Allen Williams. Both have been brilliant.

With Rajotte, Allen and Vaughn Williams, Pat Doran and Don Caparotti, UMass is legitimately five-deep in the backfield, which is, in Reid's words, "fun."

Mario Perry, Matt Tulley and Bobby Burke have been solid at linebacker, while Steve Brothers, Rich Kane and John Creamer have anchored the defensive line.

And credit Temple coach John Cheney with the assist.

UMass has this weekend off, and will face Boston University Sept. 29th at McGuirk. The Minutemen suffered no major injuries on Saturday, and an extra week's rest should further heal any bumps and bruises there are.

Rest, however, is a relative term. Reid has scheduled a practice for Saturday, at 8 a.m. "This is football season," he explained. "We have to keep the guys focused on playing football . . ."

Around the Yankee Conference: New Hampshire (2-0) emerged as the surprise team in the Conference with a 34-7 win over Delaware (1-1). UNH is ranked fourth in the most recent 1-AA poll . . . Preseason favorite Connecticut, meanwhile, is plummeting. The Huskies were thrashed by Division I North Carolina 48-21, dropping to 1-2. Quarterback Matt DeGennaro missed the second half with a sore arm . . . BU (1-2) beat Westchester 38-7 . . . Rhode Island (2-0) trashed Richmond (0-2), 37-0. Rhode Island is ranked 12th in Division I-AA . . . UMass is 18th.

Strong safety Vaughn Williams was named Yankee Conference Co-Defensive Player-of-the-Week for his performance on Saturday. Williams had eight tackles, recovered one fumble, intercepted one pass and deflected two more, and had a sack.

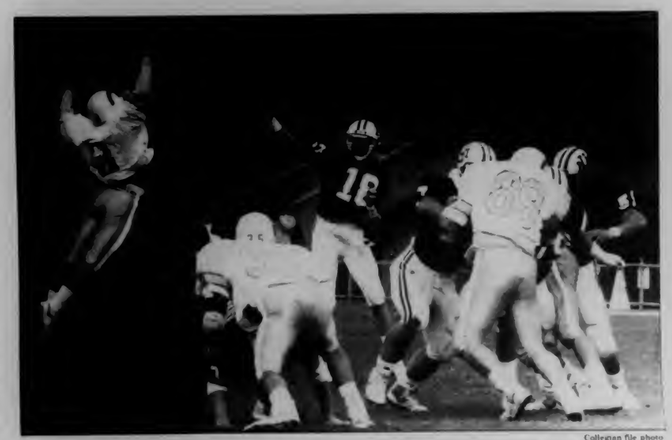
"I accept the award on behalf of the entire defense," said Williams.

Tailback John Johnson was Yankee Conference and ECAC Rookie-of-the-Week, and quarterback Gary Wilkos was named to the ECAC Honor Roll.

McGuirk's new two-way microphone provided the quote of the day. In the second quarter, Maine quarterback Jeff Delrosso was clocked as he was about to pass, and the ball squirted loose. Because Delrosso's arm was in motion, explained referee Joe Arnone over the PA, the play was a "mere incompletion."

Sports Notice

Intramurals: Entries for badminton, racquetball and track will be accepted Sept. 24 through 27, to be turned into Boyden room 215. There will be a players meeting Sept. 24 in Boyden room 249 for badminton and room 251 for racquetball. Entries for ice hockey (men's and women's) and cross country (men's and women's) are due Sept. 26 in Boyden room 215. Co-ed softball and lacrosse seasons have begun. For more information, please call 545-0022 or stop by the intramural office.



Collegian file photo

Despite space in the schedule, there's no time out for the Minutemen. Coach Reid will have the football team up-and-at-'em for an 8 a.m. practice session on Sunday to prepare them for next weekend's home game against Boston University

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE—ROOM 113 MUNIS—THERE'S NO JOB LIKE A JOB AT YOUR PAPER • DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE. 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

KUNG-FU / KARATE CLASSES! beginners meet Mon-Fri for info call 774-4179 ask for Stuart

RUSH ALPHA PHI OMEGA! A National Coed Service Fraternity! CC415A 7:30PM Sept 19, 20, 24 & 25. All welcome!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5961

CLASS OF '94 'Seize the day' T-shirts Pick up yours Rm 304 University Admissions Center

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM $1000 in just one week Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 50

VISA OR MASTERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. m-1207

AUDIO

TWO 200 WATT top of the line Boston Acoustic Speakers Very cheap Call 253-2728

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 T-BIRD AC/FM PS/PB 90,000mi runs great $500 or best offer Call Tammy 549-2786 must sell

1978 GMC SIERRA 15 8' fleetside 3speed V8 power steering/brakes Viton $1,200 584-9818 call after 2:30PM

1979 SAAB 900GLE 4-speed sunroof must sell $2000 bo (413)665-8119

1978 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is 549-6333 6-8PM

1980 BUICK CENTURY LIMITED $750, 665-7492

1982 DODGE 400 CONVERTIBLE, white with red interior, 84,000 miles Very clean $2,800 546-3142

1982 TOYOTA STARLET $2000 or B/O 535-2322

V8 TRANS AM 83 71500 miles cruise control AC power window, seat steering 546-3082

1984 4WD SUBARU STATION WAGON 95500mi good mechanical cond., some rust all weather tires, 1989 muffler $2700/BO Jenny 259-1318, 5-7PM Mon-Thurs

MAZDA GLC DELUXE 86 62K A/C stereo exc condition 3400 or bo 253-2294

1988 FORD RANGER excellent condition 5 speed 40,000 miles $4,800 253-0770

CONDO FOR SALE

UNBELIEVEABLE! Townehouse 2 bedroom-1½ bath Reduced to $62,000! Joan Rosner DH Jones 549-3700

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

FRIDGE RENTALS call R&P 253-9742

HUGE ROOM in beautiful house for 1-2 people Full bath and walk-in closet 1½ miles from campus Non-smoker $155 for 2 $280 for 1 + utilities 549-4211

ONE BEDROOM APARTMENT at 177 N Pleasant St Quiet $435 per month includes heat 256-3457

SINGLE ROOM house in N. Amherst $87.50 549-6650

TOWNHOUSE APARTMENT, 2 bedroom, 1½ baths on bus route Call 1-567-1302 and leave message

FOR SALE

CHECK OUT ACI'S great deals on Computer Systems, Cables, Hardware, and Accessories. If you're in the market for a 100% IBM Compatible computer, we manufacture a complete line of systems. If low price, high quality, and personalized on-site service are all concerns, no one compares with ACI. Conveniently located in downtown Amherst next to Baybank.

CUBE FRIDGE great for dorms call Julie at 546-3987

LARGE REFRIDGERATOR (twice the size of most dorm fridges) freezer section, exc cond, will deliver, $90/bo 256-3192

OFFICE DESK! nice good cond. $100 or bo Julie 256-0303

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD homes Available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent for eclosures Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. m-2009 for repo list your area

ROLLERBLADES size 8.5 hardly used must see $70 or best offer 549-8293

SAX FOR SALE Bundy II Alto student model Great shape $500 or best offer 586-3100 ext 4384

SLEEP WITH THE BEST say goodnight to the rest full size futon and frame $150 we'll beat other bozos by 5% Metawampe Furniture 1-800-3-FUTON-1

1989 SMITH CORONA PWP 3000, features word processor and typewriter options comes with disks and paper printer included $700 value asking $500 bo call 542-3032

FOUND

ATTENTION NEW STUDENTS- personal items left at the New Students Program this summer may be picked up at the New Students Office 304 University Admiss Center

CALCULATOR found Monday in Cape Cod Lounge Call 256-1479 to describe and claim

CAMERA outside SUB 9/18 253-3886 Pete

WATCH found in front of Bartlett Call Christine at 546-4975

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist. Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

CHRISTMAS, SPRING BREAK, SUMMER travel free Air couriers needed, and cruiseship jobs Call 1-805-682-7555 ext F-142

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard Send for free information American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C Boston, MA 02215

EARN UP TO $20,000 A MONTH! If you are a motivated person, and wish to be an entrepreneur, don't let this opportunity slip past you. A multi-level marketing company is looking for executive distributors. Be your own boss, make your own hours! for more info call 549-4349

FULL TIME POSITION available Excellent base salary plus bonuses. Fluency in any African, Indian, Korean, or Middle Eastern dialects a plus Contact Lanny Perron, Metropolitan Life (413)567-1248

INNOVATIVE MARKETING PROGRAM needs sales rep for UMass Market Excellent $$ opportunity. Local advertising experience necessary Call Gary at 1-800-874-5005

NEED A BABYSITTER! responsible educ major able to sit on nights and weekends Please call 549-9311-Gretchen

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms No car required Mornings 7-8AM Good pay 7days/week 253-7009 Evenings

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! 40-60/day! Call Sam 256-6434

PART TIME SALES PERSON wanted for the marketplace Will train Call 323-9692

SKI POSITIONS: ski lodge in Alta, Utah Seasonal only November 1, 1990 to April 25, 1991 Salary, room and board, and ski pass. For application please call (801) 742-3000 between 8:30 to 4:30 mountain time, any day, or write to Alta Peruvian Lodge, Alta, Utah 84092

SPRING BREAK/CHRISTMAS BREAK TOURS Individuals or student organization needed to promote our ski/sun tours Earn money and free trips to Cancun, Daytona, Vermont, Montreal Call Hi-LIFE 1-800-263-5604

LOST

BROWN-RIMMED EYEGLASSES at upper Boyden tennis courts if found please call 6-5188

EYEGLASSES in gray case reward Charlie 256-1170

GOLD RING cash reward sentimental value-leave message for Lynda 538-2931 after 4:00PM

KEY with UMass bottle opener at intramural fields Call 6-7304 or 6-2997 if found

PANASONIC WALKMAN reward call 549-5997

MANICURES

SPECIALLY PRICED $5 by experienced UMass student 549-2682

MOTORCYCLES

1983 YAMAHA SECA 400 runs good new tires, battery $450/bo 548-0833

1984 HONDA SABRE 700CC great cond $1000 or bo 253-7119 leave message

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
FALL SPECIAL
small cheese $3.50
large cheese $5.99
2 toppings only $1 more
must mention this ad
549-6073 549-6098

PROFESSIONAL DJ'S

LAZER TECH AUDIO available for your dance, dorm party, or house party. Great rates, great DJ's. Call 323-7801 soon.

ROOMMATE WANTED

$158.- PER MONTH own room, quiet nonsmoker call Mark or Shane 253-3498

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt. Call 549-1224

FOR TWO BEDROOM in Salem Place Call 256-8777 $200

SOUTH DEERFIELD 2 bdrm Apt on bus line $300 665-8230 545-1028

SERVICES

DO YOU NEED SPANISH HELP? Tutoring available for intermediate to advanced call Giov 549-0071

HAVE YOU SEEN THE MARKETPLACE? Classified advertising run by students for students. Pay only 5% commission when you sell. Call 323-9692

STUDY ABROAD IN AUSTRALIA information on semester, summer, and internship programs. All run under $6000. Call Curtin University 1-800-878-3696

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St Northhampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

EARN CREDIT SCUBA DIVING! Basic course starts 9/10 $195 Adv course starts 9/17 $170 Sport course (Key Largo) 12/28 - $380 For further information call 549-8401

ONE WAY American Airlines ticket Hartford-Seattle December 21 1990 excellent price 1-413-562-2982 (after 3)

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S Deerfield 10 mins from Amherst Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $1/DS/ typing $2/pg 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery Laser printing and copying available *Communications 256-6373

WORDPROCESSING-Fast Professional Reasonable rates Free pick up and delivery Call Nancy 367-9437

WANTED

HCAC AMHERST DAY CARE has subsidized slots available for children, age 2yrs 9months-5yrs. Parents must be AFDC and Voucher eligible. Call Nancy at 549-5713 or Barbara at 584-4434

SOCCER CLEATS, 8½ mens Kevin 5-1315 or 259-1561

WANTED TO RENT

TWO FEMALES desperately seeking to lease or sublet a 1 bedroom or 2 person apartment starting in January. Please call Beth at 546-5459

PERSONALS

XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX
ANDREA N. AND JULIE P. -
Thanks for a great RUSH! Your hard work paid off! Love everyone
XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY PAM!!!
I Love You
looking forward to many more
Lots of Love Scott

SPORTS

UM field hockey pummels Providence in 1-0 shutout

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

"I can't believe I forgot to call," she said panting. "This has to go in tomorrow."

Head coach Pam Hixon may be intermittently forgetful, but she will not forget the type of play her team exhibited against Providence College last night.

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team returned to Amherst victorious after a 1-0 match.

"It was a classic UMass game," Hixon said. "They played great."

Mara Fratassio scored the only goal of the game unassisted 22 minutes into the first half.

"She beat everyone at the goal and got by the defense to score," Hixon said of the goal.

"We dominated the entire game," she said. "The win is definitely a morale booster."

UMass went into the game ranked 16th, facing a fourth-ranked Providence. For some strange reason, those numbers may change.

Goalkeeper Philippa Scott was not very busy as PC challenged her with only six shots on goal by the half, a total of 10 for the game. She finished with three saves.

"We put so much pressure on them, they couldn't get a shot off," said Hixon. "The numbers show what solid defense we played."

Sweeper Kerri Fagan, named 2nd team All-American last year, had an outstanding game, according to Hixon.

PC's Karen Krawchuk, their highest scorer, was shut down by centerback Lisa Bernardinelli.

"She took on her toughest defensive assignment yet," said Hixon of her centerback. "Krawchuk got off no shots on goal. [Bernardinelli] shut her out."

UMass, however, was not shut down, finishing with 19 shots on goal and challenging PC's goalie 12 times.

Providence finished with five penalty corners, as Umass had 11.

Needless to say, Hixon and these Minutewomen are happy campers, "This was our best played outing to date."

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

The Minutewomen out-hustled Providence College last night, ousting the fourth-ranked team to a 1-0 shutout.

Minutemen tennis delivers Connecticut Huskies a loss

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Correspondent

On Tuesday, the University of Massachusetts men's tennis squad continued their assault on New England teams. The surging Minutemen traveled to the University of Connecticut where they posted their third straight victory, edging out a talented, young Connecticut team, 5-4.

Number one singles player, junior Barry Wadsworth, led the attack with a solid 6-2, 6-1 victory over Connecticut's Jeff Kuehen.

Jeffrey Hechemy, UMass' number two singles player, overcame a one-set deficit to knock off UConn's Mike Greenberg 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

"Hechemy played a really tough match. [He played] an amazing third set," said coach Manny Roberts.

In addition, freshman Minuteman Tim Lipsky chalked up his second singles victory in as many attempts as he triumphed over Connecticut's Greg Bartek 6-3, 6-3.

However, UMass' Chuck Rubin, Matt Murphy and Rich Stone were unsuccessful in their singles matches.

With the singles contests deadlocked at three apiece, it was up to the doubles players to decide the outcome of the match.

"If we can win three of the singles, which we did, we have a good chance [of winning the match]," said Roberts, who has confidence in his doubles teams winning at least two out of three matches.

In doubles action, Massachusetts' Wadsworth and Lipsky teamed up to defeat Connecticut's Greenberg and Matt Pressman 7-6 (7-2), 6-3. However, UMass' number three doubles team of Chuck Rubin and Matt Murphy were defeated 6-3, 6-2.

The contest was tied at four games apiece with the match between UMass' Hechemy and Stone against UConn's Kuehen and Batek still in progress.

In that final contest, Connecticut took the first set 6-4. Things looked dismal in the second set for the Minutemen as Connecticut served for the match. Nonetheless, with their backs against the wall, Hechemy and Stone battled back to break serve, tied it at five games and won the second set 7-5.

Stone and Hechemy took their momentum into the third set.

"After they came back from two break points and two match points [in the second set], I think that kind of took the UConn players by surprise. They kind of roamed in the third set and it was pretty much all over," Roberts said.

And it was all over, as Hechemy and Stone finished off their opponents 6-3 in the final set.

"It was a pressure situation for Hechemy and Stone. They handled it quite well," he said.

The Minutemen will try to remain undefeated as they travel to Central Connecticut next Tuesday.

Atlanta: peachy keen on 1996 Olympics

By SONJA ROSS
Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — The Olympics are coming to Atlanta. Let the construction begin.

Olympic planners began putting away the celebratory confetti Tuesday to dig through a large pile of work that must be done before the 1996 Games. Buildings must be built, money must be raised and athletes from all over the world have to be taught to deal with Georgia heat that is still six summers away.

"We're sort of at the bottom of the mountain, looking up at the climbing we've got to do," said John Bevilaqua, an Atlanta-based consultant who worked with the 1984 Games in Los Angeles. Bevilaqua is aiding planning for the 1992 Games in Barcelona, Spain, and helped piece together Atlanta's winning bid among U.S. cities.

The Olympics will mean new jobs as Atlanta organizers put together a staff to handle the Games.

"We're not a very large city compared to other (Olympic) cities," Bevilaqua said. "That's good news in terms of creation of jobs for those who are here. That may indicate certain jobs would have to be filled with people from outside Atlanta.'

The Atlanta Organizing Committee's preliminary estimates are that construction, renovation and other preparatory work would create some 44,800 jobs, including 21,500 in construction.

Almost as soon as it was announced in Tokyo that the 1996 Olympics would be held in Atlanta, callers began asking the AOC about tickets that won't be on sale for at least five years.

"That is most definitely the most popular question of the day," said AOC spokesperson Laurie Olsen.

But higher on the agenda are Olympic construction projects.

An Olympic Village will be built at Georgia Tech. A track and field stadium, to seat 85,000, has to be built, along with a velodrome and a natatorium.

These things are expected to cost between $300 million and $500 million, according to the AOC. A $210 million domed stadium, which will house basketball and gymnastics in the Olympics, is already under construction to house pro-football's Atlanta Falcons.

The AOC plans to spend $1 billion for the Games. It expects to take in — from licensing and television sources — $1.16 billion, leaving a surplus of about $160 million, Olsen said.

State planner John Sibley said bringing the Olympics to Georgia puts the state on the international map as never before, while requiring little — if any — outlay of tax dollars.

"The financial planning that has been done in this effort seems to have been done quite conservatively," Sibley said. "The private sources of revenue ought to cover the Games and there ought to be a surplus in the end. And that's what we're going on."

Some existing venues chosen for Olympic events would have to be renovated, said W. Clyde Partin, director of the Olympic Academy, a 13-year-old seminar on the Games.

Among those are facilities slated to house tennis, fencing, water polo, field hockey, wrestling and baseball, Partin said.

"It's not an impossible thing to do, not at all," he said. "There's no question all these venues can be built."

AP photo

The celebration began as several thousand people at Underground Atlanta, an entertainment complex, heard the results of the site election for the 1996 Summer Olympics.

Volleyball digs down to CCSU

By JENNIFER ABATI
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team is off to play Central Conneticut today for a difficult match. Coach Carol Ford's biggest concern is that the 2 win-9 loss team will have to make up for having a rookie setter. Central will be a tough match but, "We're good enough to make the difference," she said.

In the past the Minutewomen have done well against Central. But, due to a young team last year with too much to learn, they fell short to Central in their second match against them.

"Central has improved since then, and UMass is still rebuilding," Ford said. Central has lost all nine of their matches, eight of which were shutouts.

"We have an excellent back row," Ford said. "Patty Diorio needs to stay confident and continue serving well." She said the back row has been making reliable passes and playing solid defense. The two outside hitters for the game tonight will be Nancy Sullivan and Daniel Michael.

"Sharon Panoff will be needed to put the ball away in the middle and score," Ford said of her middle hitter. "The team needs them to take charge and be aggressive." The other middle hitter for tonight is still undecided.

Despite the rough and tough match, Ford said with the right attitude, they should come out on top.

THIS WEEKEND

Rich vocals to electrify Smith

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

Voice. More expressive than any word it says, its intonations reveal a range of thought and emotion. When in harmony it conveys these a thousand times over; some are masters of this and reveal awesome sentiment through song.

Sweet Honey in the Rock sing fiercely of being fighters, of being in love and knowingly of being women. In their second generation of life-weaving, they take audiences through a journey of celebration and struggle rooted in the African-American legacy with a love and respect for life wherever it surfaces in the universe.

The strength behind Sweet Honey in the Rock lies in their sound and repertoire, whose source is in traditions of the African-American congregation style and branches. The moan of blues, power of early twentieth century gospel, jazz choral vocalizations tinged with blues and church harmonies, are the core of their music. Harmonies form their backbone as they dance and jump between altering rhythms.

The group began performing together in November of 1973 as a part of the Washington D.C. Black Repertory Theatre Company. They have always been pillars of social commentary and shared a Grammy in 1989 for the compilation album Folkways: A Vision Shared, a tribute to Woody Guthrie and Hudie Ledbetter (Leadbelly). The women have a strong commitment to people, their music and a strong sense of themselves as a group.

Bernice Johnson Reagon directs the successful group, although she declines to be singled out. High achievement is something Reagon is accustomed to with a PhD in History as well as being curator of the National Museum of American History.

Sweet Honey in the Rock's most recent release, Live at Carnegie Hall (on Flying Fish Records), includes "Emergency," which won them a 1988 Grammy nomination. Also on Flying Fish are The Other Side, Feel Something Drawing Me On, We All . . . Everyone Of Us and Good News, which is a live recording of their seventh anniversary concert, and Sweet Honey In The Rock, their first recording, released in 1976. Their second album was named Best Women's Album of 1979 by the National Association of Independent Record Distributors (NAIRD).

Their newest release, All For Freedom, is a project developed for younger audiences.

In their log of vibrant tributes and poems realized as music, there is one to Winnie Mandela and Joanne Little who, in 1975, killed a White policeman who was trying to rape her. Shirley Childree Johnson, a language interpreter for the hearing-impaired, is a swirl of motions during this torrid piece.

Sweet Honey In The Rock will perform at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College on Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $15 in advance and $17 at the door.

RESEARCH INFORMATION
Largest Library of information in U.S. - all subjects
Order Catalog Today with Visa/MC or COD
TOLL FREE HOTLINE 800-351-0222
in Calif. (213) 477-8226
Or, rush $2.00 to: Research Information
11322 Idaho Ave. #206-A, Los Angeles, CA 90025

But Where Is
MARCIE'S PLACE?
Hearty Homestyle Cooking
Downtown Amherst 256-0038
Tues-Sat Lunch & Dinner
SUNDAY BRUNCH Oct 7th

NEW charlie's NEW
1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight
Game Room with 2 pool tables
Tonight 10c Beer Steamed Baby Franks
9:00p.m. — 12:00 a.m.
Drink of the Week
Pineapple Bomb
$1.95
Beer of the Month
Foster's Lager $1.75
Food Giveaways
Mon. 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks
Tues. 10 cent Buffalo Wings
Wed 25cent Pizza Slices and 99 cent nachos
Thurs 10 cent Beer Steamed Baby Franks
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins
WE ACCEPT MC-VISA-AMEX

THE CLAM says Come Write For Arts

HADLEY
Steak & Seafood HOUSE
ALL YOU CAN EAT
BREAKFAST BUFFET
$4.99
SATURDAY and SUNDAY
8:00am–1:00pm
Tues.–Fri.
11:00 am open 586-7731
muffins, fresh eggs, sausage, bacon, homefries, fruit, danish, jello, pancakes, hot apple and strawberry toppings.
401 Russell St., Rte. 9, Hadley 586-7731
Tues. Thurs. 11-9–Fri., 11-11–Sat.,11:30-11–Sun. 8am-8pm

Are you worried about phenomenal costs of computer systems?

ACI offers discounts to 5-College students and faculty with on-site installation!
ACI CARRIES A FULL SUPPLY OF COMPUTER ACCESSORIES TO MEET YOUR NEEDS.
WE HAVE FLOPPY DISKS, SURGE PROTECTORS, TAU CABLES AND MORE.
259 Triangle Street, Amherst, MA 01002 549-0701
ACI AMERICAN COMPUTER INNOVATORS

AKIRA
27 Pleasant St/Northampton
586-0935
The Greatest Animation Event of the Decade!
music SHOJI YAMASHIRO producer RYOHEI SUZUKI design • script • direction
KATSUHIRO OTOMO
©1988 AKIRA COMMITTEE released by STREAMLINE PICTURES

Begins Wednesday, Sept. 19
Weekdays at 6:45 and 9:10/Friday at 4:50, 7:15 and 9:40/Sat. and Sun. at 2:30, 4:50, 7:15 and 9:40 p.m.
First Show Fri., Sat., and Sun. is $3.50 admission
AKIRA is not suitable for children under the age of 12 years

Pearl Street
BATTLE OF THE BANDS - FINALS
DEFTON/ WHO'S KIDDIN WHO DREAD ZEPPELIN
NEW POTATO CAPPOOSE
LAWRENCE WHEELED & THE SAVAGES
IN THE FLESH
THE VESTRYMEN
THE BEAT FARMERS
FIREHOSE
THE LEMONHEADS
413 584-7771
10 PEARL ST. NORTHAMPTON, MA

Busch 24 12oz bots $8.99 cs
Carling Black Label $6.99 cs.
Specials
Becks 12 pack $8.99
Rolling Rock 24 12oz bots $10.99
Sam Adams Oktoberfest is here
Miscellaneous Specials
Sun Country Coolers 2Lt. $2.99
Bacardi Breezers 4pack $3.99
Absolut Citron 750ml $10.99
Four Seasons Vodka and Gin 1.75L $8.99
FOUR SEASONS
Wines/Liquors
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 584-8174
Between Burger King and Dunkin' Donuts

Alternatives to Academics

THURSDAY

Latoya Jackson will perform at the Big E in W. Springfield. The performance will take place at the Miller Genuine Bandshell at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. It will be free with admission to the fair.

Stunde Null, which means Zero Hour, is a 1976 German film directed by Egar Reiz. It is part of a film series entitled A Country Divided. It will be shown at Amherst College in Merrill II at 4:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Love and Death, directed by Woody Allen in 1975, is a foreign film spoof that chronicles the misadventures of an absolute coward in the Napoleonic wars. It will be shown at Hampshire College in the Adele Simmons Lecture Hall at 7 p.m. Admission is free.

Ray and Cilla Fisher/The New St. George will play the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. Ray and Cilla Fisher have been influential in Scottish folk. Doors open at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance.

War: The Comedy, presented by the Sleveless Theatre, is a musical review of all the glories of war. It will be performed at the Northampton Center for the Arts, which is on 17 New South St. in Northampton. Show starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5-10.

Soc Hop Paris will play Horizons on the Trail in Greenfield. Doors open at 8 p.m.

Pajama Slave Dancers/Minibus Sandwich will burn rubber at Pearl Street in Northampton. Doors open at 8:30 p.m.

Janine Ditullio are at Peking Garden Restaurant in Hadley. This is the first installation of the restaurant's For Women Only: Comedy and Conversation which will take place every Thursday night starting tonight. Three other comediennes will also perform. Show starts at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

Teddy Bergeron, who has performed his comedic schtick on The Johnny Carson Show and The David Letterman Show, will merrily jest the crowd at Knightly's in Easthampton. Show starts at 9:30 p.m. Admission is $5.

Luis Melendez's Latin Dance Night can be found at The North Star in Northampton. It will offer Afro-Carribean rhythms for the dancing fool in you. DJ Luis will spin some tunes starting at 9:30 p.m with live music at 11 p.m.

Who's Kiddin' Who will have pelvises gyrating at Twister's Tavern in Amherst.

Montenia will play Dave's in Chicopee.

Tribal Etiket will have the crowd at Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton butt funkin'.

FRIDAY

The Great Escape, directed in 1963 by John Sturges, is a well-paced story of allied POWs plotting escape from a German POW camp starring Steve McQueen, Richard Attenborough and James Coburn. It will be shown as part of a Steve McQueen Weekend brought to you by Second Sight Films at Hampshire College in the Franklin Patterson Main Lecture Hall at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Admission is $1.

Schooner Fare, a trio from Maine, will make their big voices known at the iron Horse. Doors open at 7 p.m. Tickets are $12.50 in advance.

Chocolat, a 1988 French/German/Cameroon film, depicts a young woman's memories of her childhood in French West Africa. It will be shown at Amherst College in the CC Theatre at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Admission is free.

The Designed Environment: Prospects for the Nineties is an international interdisciplinary conference on architecture, landscape architecture and design focusing on ethics and aesthetics of design at the end of the twentieth century. The conference, which will be held at the UMass Campus Center is broken up into different lectures: Design for the Nineties: A Global View of Problems and Possibilities with Ezio Manzini, Director of Design at Domus Academy in Milan, Italy and Jory Johnson of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte at CC 163C from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.; Creating Culture by Design with Dan Friedman, an artist and designer from New York City and Massmio Riva of Brown University at CC 163C from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.; Plastics: A 'Malign Force' for the Nineties? with Frank Karasz of Polymer Science and Engineering and Dennis Porter of UMass at CC 163C from 3:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Form:Between Function and Fiction with H. Lindinger, director of the Institute for Industrial Design at the University of Hanover in West Germany and William Johnston of UMass at CC 163C from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Admission is free to all Five College faculty and students. For outside students, admission is $25 before Sept. 21 and $30 afterward. For the general public, admission is $50 before Sept. 21 and $60 afterward.

Peter Garland will play popular piano songs in the Hatch, which is located on the ground floor of the Student Union Building at UMass from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The Spinners will soulfully croon at the Big E in W. Springfield. The performance will take place at the Miller Genuine Draft Band Sheli at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. It will be free with admission to the fair.

Anna Deveare Smith will perform her one woman show that focuses on issues of diversity and racism in the Five College Theatre Departments based on interviews with Five College theatre students, faculty and staff at Smith College Theatre 14 at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Imrat Khan, master sitar and surbahar player, will perform Indian classical music accompanied by sons at Amherst College in the Buckley Recital Hall. This performance is a part of the Music for the Whole Earth series. Show starts at 8:15 p.m. Admission is free.

Mike Bent is sure to have the patrons of Peking Garden Restaurant in Hadley bursting at the seams with convulsive fits of laughter. His special guests are Thom Brown and Ken Dubner. Show starts at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

Sax Maniacs will play Dave's in Chicopee.

Thunderfish will play their bluegrass sounds for the patrons of Knightly's in Easthampton.

Ray Mason Ban will perform at Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton.

Free Flight will soar at Horizons on the Trail in Greenfield.

Larry Burger/Neil Backman will play at Twister's Tavern in Amherst as a part of Acoustic Folk Night. Enjoy dinner and the show from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Admission is $1.

SATURDAY

Phish/The Weekly News will play at UMass in the Student Union Ballroom. Doors open at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10.

Chinese Classical Dance, sponsored by the Asian Students Association, will be held at Amherst College in the Buckley Recital Hall at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Fred Small, an infectious and emotional folk songwriter, will perform at the Stained Glass Coffee House in Chicopee at 8 p.m.

Battle of the Bands Finals will take place at Pearl Street in Northampton. Doors open at 8:30 p.m.

Mike Bent will amuse those at Peking Garden Restaurant once more. Show starts at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

Benefit Comedy Show for the Eldery Day Care Services can be found at Knightly's in Easthampton. Show starts at 9:30 p.m. Admission is a $5 donation.

Frankie Avalon, past and future heartthrob, will perform at Hu Ke Lau in Chicopee.

James Montgomery will sing the blues at Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton.

New Breed will bring their Motown sound to Twister's Tavern in Amherst.

Free Flight will soar again at Horizons on the Trail in Greenfield.

Marion Groves will play at Dave's in Chicopee.

Hot Food! Hot Jazz! Festival 1990, presented by the Advocate and The Black Sheep, will take place at the Amherst Town Common from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Cesar Chavez, United Farm Workers President, will be a guest speaker. The dixieland jazz of the South End Jazz Band and family folk of Lorre Wyatt will provide entertainment.

The Designed Environment: Prospects for the Nineties, an international conference adressing aesthetical and ethical concerns about architecture in the '90s, will continue with conferences as follows: For the Money of the Many: Design Ethics in the Age of Greed with Victor Papanek from the School of Architecture at the University of Kansas and Arnold Friedman of UMass at CC 163C from 9:30 p.m. to 10:30 a.m.; Taste — The Last Taboo with Stephen Bayley, designer and former director of the Design Museum in London at CC 163C from 10:45 a.m. to 11:45 a.m.; Art vs. Nature: The Redefinition of the Artificial to the Natural and its Consequences for Design with Diana Balmori of Balmori Associates in New Haven and Dean Cardasis of UMass at CC 163C from 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.; Strategies for Changing Places with Donyl Lyndon from the department of Architecture in the College of Environmental Design at the University of California at Berkley and Norton Juster of Hampshire College at CC 163C from 2:15 p.m. to 3:15 p.m.; Landscape as Art with Peter Walker of Peter Walker and Partners in San Francisco and Joseph Volpe of UMass at CC 163C from 3:45 p.m. to 4:45 p.m. Admission is free for Five College students and faculty. For outside students, it will cost $25 before Sept. 21 and $30 afterward. For the general public, it will cost $50 before Sept. 21 and $60 afterward.

Cheryl Wheeler/Barb Schloff will play the Iron Horse. Wheeler, a folksy songwriter, penned the No. 1 country hit "Addicted" and Schloff is known for her intellecto pop. Doors open at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance.

Chocolat, a foreign film depicting a young woman's childhood in Africa, will be shown again at Amherst College in the Campus Center Theatre at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Admission is free.

SUNDAY

Smiles of a Summer Night, a Swedish film directed in 1955 by Ingmar Bergman, is a romantic comedy on manners, mores and sexual pursuit played out at a country estate in the late 1800s. It will be shown at Hampshire College in the Adele Simmons Lecture Hall at 2 p.m. Admission is free.

Sweet Honey in the Rock will perform at Smith College in the John M. Greene Hall at 2 p.m. Tickets are $15 in advance and $17 at the door.

Leedy Memorial Series Recital, performed by pianist Robert Weirich, will showcase such classical pieces as Partita No. 4 by Bach, Sonata by Copeland and Etudes by Chopin. It will take place at Mount Holyoke College in the Pratt Auditorium from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Phil Woods Quintet, masters of acoustic chamber jazz, will play at the iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. Doors open at 7 p.m. Tickets are $12.50 in advance.

Chocolat, about a young woman's childhood in Africa, will be shown once more at Amherst College in the Campus Center Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Papillon, starring Steve McQueen, is a graphically realistic film about escape from Devil's Island. This a part of the Steve McQueen Weekend, brought to you by Second Sight Films. It will be shown at Hampshire College in the Franklin Patterson Main Lecture Hall at 8 p.m. Admission is $1.

James Keelaghan, a Canadian folk singer, will perform at Amherst College in the Campus Center Frontroom at 8 p.m. Admission is $1 with Amherst College I.D. and $6.

World Without End will be performed by Holly Hughes, controversial performance artist whose grant proposals have been rejected by NEA chairman John Frohmayer. The performance will take place at The Northampton Center for the Arts at 8 p.m. Admission is $10.

Slapshot/Maelstrom/Backbone will create a slamming frenzy at Katinas.

Get in the swim with Phish ... nationwide

By SAM SILVERSTEIN
Collegian Staff

See Phish now, because in a few years or maybe months, you'll be telling people you did, regardless. The band's time has come.

This week, Phish, a longtime favorite in the area, released Lawn Boy, it's first real album. Real, as in a real label (Absolute A Go Go), on real CD, album and cassette formats.

Absolute A Go Go is based in Oakland, N.J. and also backs Amherst's Vestrymen.

Lawn Boy features new material along with one or two songs that appear on the band's homemade demo tape Junta. The popular "Fee," from Junta, will appear on the Lawn Boy CD, only.

"The new songs stay true to the band's style," Phish's drummer Jonathan Fishman explained, which means trademark jams bristling within carefully scripted structures. Fishman also promised "a couple of things that don't fit any categories that'll probably surprise people."

The album is entirely self-produced, mixed and recorded, "A very homegrown thing," Fishman said.

Phish took time out this summer from its enormous touring schedule of the last few years. Since May, the band has played a half-dozen shows only, and has spent the rest of its time practicing and working on the new material.

Band members have also been listening to a wider range of music and incorporating their broadening tastes into the new material (Branford Marsalis' latest "killed" Fishman for a time this summer, he said). This is a staggering proposition, when you consider Phish shows have always included jazz, rock, calypso, salsa and other musical styles.

A bluegrass fiddler sat in during a recent show.

Fading fast are the Grateful Dead comparisons that have tagged the band since it's inception. True, the jams are long, the set list is loose and the dress code is straight from Jerrysville, but that label is more limiting than flattering.

"Nobody likes being compared to anything," he said. "Six years ago we played one or two Dead songs and ever since then we've been pigeonholed. We don't really try and sound like anybody."

Fishman claims the band's stage sound is getting tighter, with "more arrangement to the spontaneousness."

"We're listening to each other and following each other more closely. We practice jamming a lot. We're trying to get the band to go in different directions together, more."

Phish will play several shows in the New England area through early October, then tour south through Texas and west to Colorado by late-October. How high is this band looking to shoot? A national bandwagon? Radio?

"Our goal is to be able to continue our cycle of good gigs, where we get to see all different parts of the country, then take time off to practice and make new stuff," answered Fishman.

"When that happens, the material things fall into place."

When they get to MTV, Fishman insists, they won't forget to write . . . "This area, Amherst especially, seems to be the first place where we had a big crowd."

"It makes us more psyched to play in places like UMass. When you get back to here, it's like home."

Phish will be appearing Saturday, Sept. 22 in the Student Union Ballroom. Doors open at 8 p.m. and tickets are $10. The show is co-sponsored by The Weekly News and the UMass Radical Student Union.

THE BACK ROOM
Cafe & Lounge
50c Drafts (GD)
Sept 22-29
Sat. Sept 22, Miller Giveaways
& D.J. all night
Mondays 25c hot dogs during the game
Cable TV - Major Sports Channels
★ Entertainment Saturday Nights
Thursday and Friday Night Free Hors D'oeuvres
COCKTAILS★FULL BAR★MUNCHIES
★POOL TABLE ★
LUNCH (soup, salad, sandwiches)
limited dinner menu
37 State Street, Belchertown 323-5818
Rte. 202
(Behind C & C Health and Fitness)

PARAMOUNT
SPRINGFIELD
Midnight Oil
Special guests
THE ORIGIN

September 25, 7:30 pm
MICHAEL FRANKS
ANGELA BOFILL
Oct. 7, 7:30 pm
LITTLE FEAT
Representing The Mambo
Oct. 10, 7:30 pm
An Evening With
ROB BARTLETT
of WFAN's "Imus In The Morning" show
Oct. 13, 10:00 pm
KIX
KATHY MATTEA
Oct. 28, 7:30 pm
ROBERT CRAY BAND with The Memphis Horns
LOS LOBOS and DIRTY DOZEN BRASS BAND
Nov. 1, 7:30 pm
BOBBY McFERRIN
Nov. 14, 7:30 pm
1700 Main St., Springfield, MA
Paramount Box Office (413) 734-5874, M-F 10-5, Sat. 12-5
TICKETRON and TICKETRON PHONE CHARGE (800) 382-8080
For Paramount Group Sales Information call (413) 567-1505

NOW AT 2 LOCATIONS
SON OF Main St RECORDS
Main St RECORDS
21 STATE ST. 586-1707 • 213 MAIN ST. 586-5726 NORTHAMPTON

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1990 1st PLACE
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarin or Cantonese style—especially for you!
• Ample Free Parking
• Major Credit Cards Accepted
• Full Liquor License
• Open 7 Days A Week
• Take-Out Service Available
• No MSG
585-0202 261 King St., Northampton, MA

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 13

WEATHER

It's going to be bright, dry and beautiful today. Get some exercise! Highs 71-73.

ARTS

The 1990 autumn schedule for the Fine Arts Center is here. Page 6.

SPORTS

Women's soccer takes on Wisconsin Saturday and George Mason Sunday. Page 12.

Anti-CLT headquarters opens

Democratic committee, students prepare for battle for votes

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Armed with Windex and sponges, some 16 students and three Amherst Town Democratic Committee members prepared the new Anti-Citizens for Limited Taxation petition/Democratic headquarters last night to prepare for the battle for votes in the November 6 election.

"If CLT passes, the state will fall apart. Since I'm a Massachusetts resident and I like the state the way it is, I'm here cleaning windows so that we can start the fight as soon as possible," said Christina Boutilier, a UMass junior.

The CLT petition, question number three on the November 6 ballot, calls for a tax rate rollback to 1988 levels in the middle of the 1990 state budget. A rollback, if passed, would cut $1.4 billion from state discretionary funding which translates into a $25-35 million cut of University state funding allocations.

"CLT is such a clear-cut issue," said Greg Flemming, an aide to Rep. Stan Rosenburg (D-Amherst). "If CLT passes, tuition is going to go up like it never has before. Knowing that, students are really going to fight it."

Rosenberg has estimated that the impact of the CLT petition on the University budget would force administrators to either raise tuition by $2,000 per student next semester, or lay off 75-1250 UMass employees.

The Town Democratic Committee voted last Thursday to rent a headquarters for five weeks as soon as it opens early next week. Silvia Cuomo, the chair of the committee, said the headquarters will be used by people who are actively working for Democratic candidates or working to fight the CLT petition. The committee will vote on October 11 on whether they will endorse an anti-CLT stance.

The headquarters is located at 51 North Pleasant Street next to the stripmall containing The Spoke and The Sub. The building was originally an Amherst Chrysler-Plymouth dealership. The committee members have funded the headquarters through donations.

"Students can get involved by volunteering time, letting (the student trustee and Student Government Association president of UMass) know when they have time on weekends to leaflet, and most importantly by registering to vote," said Jon Hite, a committee member.

Cuomo said she hoped furniture would be brought to the headquarters and phones would be installed today. Both Rosenberg and Sen. John Olver (D-Amherst) have donated money to have phones installed.

Student Trustee Angus McQuilken was "psyched" that everyone, plus some, who had signed up at the Tuesday UMass meeting on CLT came to clean the headquarters. He called those who came "a highly-motivated group of people."

"I came to clean because I know I'll be working here. So I want [the headquarters] to be comfortable so that people can stop by and get involved," said Jason Erdos, a UMass senior who is also the anti-CLT coordinator for Central Residential Area.

Residential area coordinators were determined at the Tuesday night meeting. The designated coordinators are as follows: Katrin Verdas for commuters, Kimberly Howe for Southwest, Rich Rigney for Northeast/Sylvan and Marjorie Decker and Hollis Crowley for Orchard Hill.

"We're scheduling a meeting on Orchard Hill to figure out a game plan," said Crowley. "I think CLT is ridiculous! People should take responsibility for public education."

UM to admit new students spring semester

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will reinstitute spring semester enrollment for new students in an effort to raise revenues lost through continuing budget cuts.

Timm Rinehart, director of undergraduate admissions said this year's freshman class is down by 1,000 students, which fiscally results in a loss of thousands of dollars for the University.

Rinehart said the University will be aggressively recruiting new students to come up with "an optimal number." He said the University plans to admit 500 transfer and 100 new students in January.

"We need all the students we can get," he said.

UMass officials have placed an urgency on spring semester admissions because of further expected cuts in state funding.

Rinehart said the University has been losing money through tuition and empty residence hall due to the decrease in size of this year's freshman class. He said the decrease represents a national demographic trend of a shrinking pool of 18-year-olds graduating from high school.

He added people are also worried about further cuts to the Massachusetts economy which may ultimately affect the University.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

AP file photo

CARDINAL CANINE — Minister Fluffy, newly-ordained through the American Fellowship Church, blesses its owner, Bruce Walsteo, who paid three dollars for the mail-order certificate. The dog Fluffy is legally allowed to bless the neighborhood fire hydrants.

Iraqi conflict deepens

(AP) — Iraq yesterday asked U.S. networks to broadcast a videotaped message by Saddam Hussein to the American people, and international efforts to further isolate Iraq moved ahead at the United Nations and the Asian Games.

Organizers of the Asian Games yesterday banned Iraq from the competition, which begins Saturday in Beijing.

The push for an air embargo against Iraq has gathered momentum with an agreement by the five key U.N. Security Council members to limit cargo flights into Baghdad to those carrying medicine and humanitarian food aid.

The United Nations has already imposed a naval embargo, and there has been broad support for the U.S.-led multinational force assembled in Saudi Arabia. Hundreds of French soldiers gathered in southern France yesterday to begin a four day sealift to join the force.

In Saudi Arabia, an American soldier was killed and two others injured yesterday in a jeep accident in the Saudi Arabian desert, U.S. military officials said.

Their identities were withheld pending notifications of relatives.

The death brought to 17 the number of fatalities among American personnel since Operation Desert Shield began in early August. All were accidental.

Iraq's information minister was quoted as saying yesterday that Iraq will knock out Persian Gulf oil fields if attacked by multinational forces assembled in Saudi Arabia.

The official, Latif Nassayef Jassim, also said, "Iraq will use all weapons at its

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

'Old Glory' hits market

By TRYSTAN SKEIGH
Collegian Correspondent

Eight feet of red, white and blue stars and stripes has hung proudly in several exhibitions across the country this fall — a crowning achievement in impermeable latex.

The eight foot condom, the centerpiece of a traveling art exhibit that recently visited Hartford and Washington D.C., was dubbed "Old Glory" by its creator, 43-year-old Provincetown artist Jay Critchley.

"Old Glory" is also the logo of Critchley's latest business venture — Old Glory Condom Corp.

The company was formed by Critchley

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

OLD GLORY CONDOM CORPORATION

Condoms with a Conscience

CORRECTION

In yesterday's paper, the Inside box for the Women's Issues page stated, "Voice provided for all women regardless of race to sing their stories of hope and joy." The Collegian recognizes the condescending nature of this statement and deems it unacceptable.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long Anna Regina Santiago, Chris Muther
News Editor — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Sports Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Arts Editors — Richard DuCree
Photography Editor — Dawn Pierce
Black Affairs Editor — Amy Henry
Women's Issues Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Third World Affairs Editor — Ali Woolwich
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Susan George
Business Manager — David Melnick
Advertising Manager — Beth Patterson
Finance Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Circulation Manager — Susan Kent
Subscription Manager — Marc Pruskin
Promotions Manager — Terry Starmer
Production Manager — Chrissy Girone
Day Graphics Ad Manager

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts

'Old Glory' condoms

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

and two friends — Michael LaBelle and Ray Gouin, last winter. They began production and distribution of latex condoms in June.

So far they have developed 20 retail outlets in Boston and 30-40 around Provincetown and Wellesley, according to LaBelle, the company's vice-president.

The company has also launched a "Latex is 4 Lovers" education campaign aimed at increasing public awareness about the use of latex condoms as part of safe sex practices. Latex condoms are preferred over "natural skin" condoms because latex is impermeable to the AIDS virus, LaBelle said.

Natural skin (lambskin) condoms do not prevent the transmission of the virus, according to the company's press release.

As part of the company's educational campaign, a study was commissioned by the Simmons Graduate School in Boston to find out about safe sex practices on college campuses. The study found:

- 70 percent of college students are sexually active.
- 83 percent are "personally concerned with the spread of AIDS."
- 98 percent believe condoms, when properly used , will protect them from AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.
- Only 23 percent consistently use condoms, 25 percent never use them.
- Most students do not know that natural skin condoms do not prevent transmission of the HIV virus or hepatitis B virus; 31 percent prefer lambskin, 27 percent have no preference.

Critchley said the idea of superimposing the American flag on a condom was an attempt to use patriotism to over come embarrassment or ignorance surrounding condom use.

"The two just seem to make sense together. The flag is a powerful symbol — this is a positive way to bring attention to safe sex and AIDS," he said. "Besides, it fits very nicely on an unfurled condom."

Another reason why the flag was used, Critchley said, was "to make a point about the government dragging its feet about AIDS . . . our effort is part of a demand that the government take more direct responsibility for finding a solution to this problem."

Critchley said that currently the company is looking for outlets on college campuses, and that a job description has been sent to UMass in search of a sales represenative.

Critchley stressed that Old Glory condoms are unique because a percentage of the profits is donated to AIDS research, thus making his product "a condom with a conscience."

DELTA UPSILON
invites all university men to
OPEN RUSH

We offer:
• 24 hour kitchen
• Catered food
• Superior social life
• Cable TV
• Lifelong friends
• University and Greek area overall athletic champions
• Voted Best Philanthropy and Most Improved House

Rush Dates:
Sept. 17 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 18 Just DU it. 8:00pm
Sept. 20 - Special Events - 7:00 pm
Sept. 21 Barbecue 3:00 pm
Sept 24 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 25 Informal —all day
Sept. 26 Just DU it. 7-8:00pm

MAP
Northeast Area | Greek Street | Yeoman Gym

Vote NO on Question 3; your education may be depending on it.
Vote NO on Question 3; your education may be depending on it.
Vote NO on Question 3; your education may be depending on it.
Vote NO on Question 3; your education may be depending on it.

amc THEATRES
$3.50 TWILITE SHOW
MT. FARMS 6 — 584-9153
HARRISON FORD
PRESUMED INNOCENT
Fri at (4:15#)$3.50\7:00, 9:45
Sat at 1:15 (4:15#)$3.50\7:00, 9:45
Sun at 1:15 (5:45 at)$3.50\8:15
Mon-Thurs at (5:45#)$3.50\8:15
POSTCARDS FROM THE EDGE
Fri at (4:30#)$3.50\7:15, 9:45
Sat at 1:45 (4:30 at)$3.50\7:15, 9:45
Sun at 1:45 (4:30 at)$3.50\8:15
Mon-Thurs at (6:00 at)$3.50\8:30
special engagements-no passes or coupons
Narrow Margin
Fri at (4:45 at $3.50\7:30, 10:00
Sat at 1:45 (4:45 at $3.50\7:30, 10:00
Sun at 1:45 (8:15 at $3.50\8:30
Mon-Thurs at (8:15 at $3.50\8:30
special engagements-no passes or coupons
FUNNY ABOUT LOVE
Fri at (4:30 at $3.50\7:15, 10:00
Sat at (4:30 at $3.50\7:15, 10:00
Sun at 1:30 (6:00 at $3.50\8:30
Mon-Thurs at (8:00 at $3.50\8:30
special engagements-no passes or coupons
HAMPSHIRE 6 — 584-7550
VAN DAM VAN DAMME!
DEATH WARRANT
Fri at (4:40 at $3.50\7:20, 10:10
Sat at (4:40 at $3.50\7:20, 10:10
Sun at 1:50 (6:00 at $3.50\8:40
Mon-Thurs at (6:00 at $3.50\8:40
GHOST
Fri at (4:20 at $3.50\7:00, 9:50
Sat at 1:30 (4:20 at $3.50\7:00, 9:50
Sun at 1:30 (5:40 at $3.50\8:20
Mon-Thurs (5:40 at $3.50\8:20
FLATLINERS
Fri at 7:10, 10:00
Sat at (4:30 at $3.50\7:10, 10:00
Sun at (5:50 at $3.50\8:30
Mon-Thurs at (8:30 at $3.50)
PUMP UP THE VOLUME
Fri at (4:30 at $3.50\7:10, 10:00
Sat at 1:40 (4:30 at $3.50\7:10, 10:00
Sun at 1:40 (5:50 at $3.50\8:30
Mon-Thurs at (5:50 at $3.50\8:30
Good Fellas
Fri at (4:10 at $3.50)
7:00, 9:50
Sat at 1:20
(4:10 at $3.50)
7:00, 9:50
Sun at 1:20
(5:30 at $3.50\8:20
Mon-Thurs (5:30 at $3.50\8:20
Dick Tracy The Movie
Fri at (4:40 at $3.50)
Sat at 1:50
Sun at 1:50
Mon-Thurs at (6:00 at $3.50)
special engagements-no passes or coupons
Hardware
Fri at (4:30 at $3.50\7:20, 10:10
Sat at 1:40 (4:40 at $3.50\7:20, 10:10
Sun at 1:40 (6:00 at $3.50\8:40
Mon-Thurs at (5:50 at $3.50\8:40

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
Cinema Paradisio
Mon-Thur one show 7:30
Fri-Sun two shows 7:00 and 9:15
Student discount with valid ID $2.50

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

Amherst Chiropractic Family Health Center
Dr. Virginia D. Harper D.C.
"Dedicated to treating the cause not the symptom"
6 university Drive at Newmarket Center
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002
413/549-0335

YOU COULD BUY A HIGH PRICED SYSTEM FROM ANOTHER COMPUTER BUSINESS...

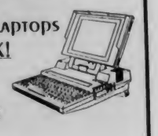
OR YOU COULD BUY A SYSTEM FROM ACI AND TAKE A VACATION!

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO CHECK OUT ACI'S BIG SAVINGS, QUALITY SERVICE AND MERCHANDISE BEFORE YOU BUY.

ACI AMERICAN COMPUTER INNOVATORS
259 Triangle Street, Amherst, MA 01002 549-0701

TOSHIBA

All Battery Powered Laptops
NOW IN STOCK!



T1000 SE
T1000 XE
T1200 XE
T1600
T3100 SX

LOWEST PRICES EVER WITH EDUCATIONAL DISCOUNTS!

Call about your EDUCATIONAL DISCOUNT today!
DSR, Inc
1-800-326-0037

RUSH
ZETA PSI
ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

Tuesday Sept. 25
Pizza Party
Wednesday Sept. 26
Dr. Able & Condom Night
Thursday Sept. 27
Chip & Dip Night
All Events 8-10 PM

ZΨ
ZETA PSI
23 PHILLIPS ST.
256-6845

LOCAL

Collegian photo by Dondi Abearn

GRAY, GRAY DAY — the Collegian's feature photographer captures what would otherwise be another scene outside the Physical Plant.

CYBER debated

Regulations to be drafted for computer use

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts administrators are still in the process of drafting regulations aimed at combatting forums devoted to the exchange of sex stories on one of the University's most powerful mainframe computers.

The Collegian disclosed last March the existence of at least four forums, also known as "bulletin board" public message files, on the CYBER system. The CYBER system is to be used only for "instructional and research activities."

The forums contained files of graphic sexual exploits, which some called similar to stories seen in the Penthouse Forum.

The day after the disclosure associate vice chancellor for computing information, Douglas E. Abbott, ordered the forums taken off the system. A Faculty Senate subcommittee the following Monday restored the four forums while the committee determined if the forums constituted "improper use" of the CYBER mainframe.

G. Ernest Anderson, a member and former chairman of the University Computing Committee of the Senate, said yesterday that the committee has mulled over a series of potential regulations to control the content of the forums but have been distracted by budget-cutting threats.

"I like to use the analogy of your house burning down. You don't need someone selling you stuff to fill the cracks in the floor at that moment," he said. "We have other things to worry about — especially the funding of University Computing Services [the department coordinating all computing operations on campus.]"

Anderson said the committee will probably recommend a policy guide based on computer access rules at Brown University. If the committee approves the policy it then needs to be approved by the Civility Commission before final approval may be sought at the Faculty Senate.

Anderson said the Brown policy expects students of the computer community, "to uphold certain standards of behavior ... not offensive forms." He said further definitions are described in Brown's guide.

He warned that even if the University approves the policy, 'We do not control or can monitor material on the system. There might be some offensive material. We will have to ask student to maintain good taste and control."

Anderson said a policy will most likely be approved by the Faculty Senate before the end of the semester but "if the University can't meet its payroll, I can tell you what we will be more concerned with."

Anderson, an education professor, said the forums still exist on the system although "their maintainers are rather carefully monitoring their submissions."

The sex story forums, which occupy approximately less than one percent of total system usage, are "owned" or operated by

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Regents release CLT report

BOSTON (AP) — The Board of Regents of Higher Education released a senate report on CLT, saying it would result in $126 million in additional cuts to state universites, colleges and community colleges.

Backers of CLT, including Republican gubernatorial nominee William Weld, have argued that without the clout of the tax rollback, the legislature won't approve budget cuts.

The Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, a non-partisan business-backed government watchdog group, disputed the contention of the pro-CLT High Technology Council that $1.6 billion could be cut from the state budget quickly.

Democratic candidate for governor John Silber warned that passage of a tax rollback petition in November could result in massive cuts in state aid to cities and towns.

Silber, interviewed on a WHDH radio talk show, said he was in agreement with the aims of the Citizens for Limited Taxation initiative in cutting the size of state government, but the petition's impact would be too severe.

But he said the difficulty is that it would require cuts of $3 billion or more in the next year.

The budget for Medicaid, could be trimmed by $400 million without cutting benefits, he said.

Staff offered options to prevent layoffs

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

Non-teaching professionals at the University of Massachusetts have proposed a series of early-retirement and work-reduction alternatives to prevent involuntary layoffs, which are looming ahead as an inevitable outcome of recent budget cuts.

According to Ferd Wulkan, a Service Employees International Union official, eight volunteer options have been compiled to offset the possibility of layoffs among union members.

The options include early retirement incentives, voluntary layoffs, unpaid leave of absences, reduced work weeks, and job sharing for the 900 administrators, engineers, scientists, nurses, and other professional staff at the University.

All eight proposals were designed to provide an incentive for professional employees to work less. Candidates for early retirements would receive bonuses, while employees with reduced hours or intermittent status would maintain their health benefits.

"By no means are we encouraging employees to quit," said Wulkan. "The volunteer options would benefit both the individual employee and save the University a substantial amount of money." If the proposals are approved Wulkan estimates a $200,000 annual savings for UMass.

Although Wulkan is not sure exactly how many employees would partake of the options, at least twelve employees have shown interest in early retirement possibilities.

"In about a week I'll really know the totals, but it seems like there's a lot of interest," he said. Wulkan claimed the large attendance at a recent membership meeting indicated the abundance of interest in the union.

"At this point nothing has been announced. We're waiting for a target number from the University as to what the total amount they want us to save," Wilkun said.

Despite his support of the proposed alternatives to pay cuts and layoffs, Wulkin concedes that the passage of Proposition 3 would be "a whole new ball game."

"There would be no way to avoid massive layoffs if the CLT initiative passes," said Wulkin. "This University would be virtually unrecognizable. We don't even want to look at that possibility."

SGA to receive undergrad addresses

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The Committee on Directory Policy voted unanimously on Wednesday to provide the Student Government Association with a directory list of all current undergraduates.

The committee was created on the request of the SGA to create a campus policy for the release of student address listings by the undergraduate and graduate registrars.

The committee, which is composed of the undergraduate and graduate registrars, representatives from Student Affairs and University Relations and Development, undergraduate and graduate representatives and the Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, had the directory policy approved by the vice chancellors on September 13.

The SGA requested a concrete policy last May after having difficulties in obtaining directory listings of their campus constituents.

"(Getting access to the student directory) is a major vic-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Ulster conflict is struggle for independence

By LARS KROIJER
Collegian Correspondent

The present conflict in Northern Ireland is a continuance of the 900 year-long struggle for independence, and not a religious war, according to a Sinn Fein member and human activist.

Speaking in the Campus Center Tuesday night, Mary Nelis said the presence of British military will not bring the violence to an end.

Sinn Fein is a Northern Irish political party who are considered to be the legal faction of the Irish Republican Army.

Mary Nelis said she has witnessed unjust treatment of the Irish people from her home in Derry, Northern Ireland. In the part of the city where she lives, she said there has been a suppression of the non-violent local population as a result of the British policy.

"They would break down our doors and search our houses regularly even if they didn't find anything," she said. "Young men were often arrested in the streets and last year a women was shot in the breast when she tried to prevent a British army patrol from beating up her 16-year-old son."

She said it was in this part of Derry that the famous "Battle of Bogside" took place where a whole community stood together and won after a three-day fight with the local authorities.

After this episode she said the British government decided to send in the military to take care of the "riots."

According to Nelis, the last 20 years have intensified

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

■ student directory

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

tory," said Ken Parker, the undergraduate representative on the committee.

Student Trustee Angus McQuilken requested the listings in writing on September 17 in accordance with the new directory policy.

His letter stated that the SGA needed directory list???s to city halls and also deliver the completed ballots; and to car pool students who do not request absentee ballots in time to their hometowns to vote."

"The policy is a reasonable one and will work," said Norman Aiken, associate vice chancellor for student affairs. "We do have to keep in mind state and federal laws when using these lists."

Aiken referred to federal Privacy of Information legislation and state campaign laws which forbid state agencies, such as the SGA, from using state funds and facilities for political purposes.

Aiken said the SGA motives for wanting a directory listing were "very noble and patriotic" by encouraging students to vote.

The approved request from the SGA was for a listing of students' campus addresses by home zip code and also an alphabetical listing.

■ spring admissions

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Rinehart said admissions has already lowered academic standards to allow more students in, but said he hopes standards will not have to be dropped any further.

■ Irish speaker

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

the struggle that in 1972 led to the killing of 13 peacefully demonstrators by the British paratroopers. That incident was later to be known as "Bloody Sunday."

Today, 18 years later, she said the 'war' is at its peak. There are frequently killings on both sides and the tension is frightening. According to Nelis, the IRA is a peace-minded organization with the general thought that "the British will not leave until it will become impossible for them to stay."

Nelis said her two sons who are active members of the IRA and were send to jail in the mid-70s. She said the conditions for the prisoners were terrible. They were only allowed to leave their cells half an hour each month and had to use the floor as toilet.

This eventually led to a hunger strike in which ten convicted IRA members died, she said.

Nelis said it is a paradox that Europe is breaking down militarily while ever rising funds are securing that the military control at the Irish-English are intensified. She said it would be fair if the U.N. invited the Sinn Fien leader Jerry Adams to speak like Nelson Mendela did on South Africa.

This Monday Roy Foster will speak on the roots of the Irish problem at Memorial Hall at 4:30 pm on Monday.

■ computer policies

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

the creator of the forum. Any University-affiliated person that pays the $10 fee and has access to a computer may connect with the CYBER system.

The forums, titled "CyberLust," "SEX," "Sex-stories," and "Lusty One," resided on the CYBER's heavily-used electronic mail system.

University administrators also confirmed the existence of forums devoted to discussions of Christianity, science fiction, poetry and even one that outlines the underground tunnel system of the University.

■ Middle East crisis

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

disposal to respond to any aggression," intended to force its troops out of Kuwait. His comments were reported by the English-language daily Jordan Times and were made to Jordanian journalists in Baghdad this week.

Jassim was quoted by the Iraqi News Agency as requesting the U.S. television time. He did not disclose what Saddam's message says, but it is likely a rebuttal to President Bush's speech to the Iraqi people televised Sunday.

If the United States blocks the attempt, Jassim said, "The concerned Iraqi authorities will find alternative ways to transmit the message to the American people through international television stations."

Saddam's statements have repeatedly been carried to American people over the Cable News Network since Iraq invaded Kuwait wait on August 2.

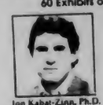
Three British parliamentarians traveling to Iraq said yesterday that time was running out for a peaceful end to the gulf crisis and that they hoped their mission to Baghdad could lead to negotiations. They said in Amman that they also aim to win the release of some British hostages.

CARRY OUT COUPON
Buy ONE, Get ONE for 99¢
DOMINO'S PIZZA
Buy Any Large Pizza Or 12" Pan Style Pizza and Get One of equal or lesser toppings for 99¢!
Good on Carry Out only. Not Good With any other offer. Expires 11-30-90

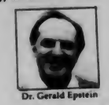
Open for Lunch and Open to 3AM
DOMINO'S PIZZA
Amherst 256-8911

DELIVERY COUPON
Buy ONE, Large
12" Pan Style Pizza, and get ONE of equal or lesser toppings for $1.99 delivered
in 30 min. or less
Not good with any other offer. Expires 11-30-90

You are invited to the 6th Annual Northampton
WHOLE HEALTH EXPO
September 22-23, 1990 - Northampton Hilton Inn
Over 50 One-Hour Seminars Free With Admission • 17 Two-Hour Intensive Workshops As Listed Below
60 Exhibits on Wholistic Health, Psychology & Nutrition • Delicious Natural Foods



Jon Kabat-Zinn, Ph.D.

Elizabeth Stratton


Dr. Gerald Epstein

Ven. Shyalpa Tenzin Rinpoche

Saturday, Sept. 22
#1 10:30 The Healing Power of Mindfulness with Jon Kabat-Zinn, Ph.D. Explore mindfulness meditation to eliminate stress, pain and chronic illness.
#2 10:30 Second Childhood: Reclaiming Past Lives with Janet Masucci Hypnosis and play help you "reclaim" the gifts of childhood through remembering early and past life memory
#3 1:00 Awakening the Healer Within You with Elizabeth Stratton. Techniques for healing yourself and others including the "laying on of hands."
#4 1:00 Awakening Kundalini Through Yoga with Chris Kilham. Powerful Kundalini-activating methods from Yogic systems of India and Tibet help unlock energy and vitality.
#5 3:30 Sounding for Power, Singing for Joy with Molly Scott. No musical training is necessary for this workshop in sound therapy. Explore the connection between sound and health!
#6 3:30 Expanding the Comic Vision with Izzy Gesell. Practical ways of tapping into our sense of humor for physical, emotional and spiritual health and well-being.
#7 6:00 Let's Face It with Dr. Gerald Epstein. A look at the medical art of face reading, or morphology, which can help guide you in choosing a diet, relationship or exercise program that is right for you
#8 6:00 Shamanic Spiritual Healing with Sky Wild. Experience a transformational shamanic journey using ritual, prayer/meditation and visualization.

Sunday, Sept. 23
#9 10:00 Healing Your Life Through Developing Intuition with Laura Sieser. Learn how to distinguish valid intuition from wishful thinking. Explore self-hypnosis to access spiritual guidance
#10 10:00 Oxygen Therapies with Ed McCabe. A discussion of the many methods and products now available that put oxygen into the body to help combat disease
#11 10:00 Indian Vegetarian Cooking for Nutrition and Balance with Joseph Selvester. How herbs and spices can promote digestion and enhance assimilation - how foods affect physical/emotional balance
#12 12:30 Healing Visualizations with Gerald Epstein, M.D. How to obtain fast, positive results using visual imagery to heal emotional and physical problems.
#13 12:30 From the Goddess to the Rule of the Fathers with Apara Borrowes-Toabe A slide show journey through time from the "Goddess People" to patriarchal rule of the sky gods
#14 12:30 Achieve Financial Success & Spiritual Balance in the 90's with G. Michael Scallion How to achieve abundance and spiritual growth at the same time, using highly effective new business methods.
#15 3:00 Wisdom: The Compassionate State of Mind with Ven. Shyalpa Tenzin Rinpoche. Experience the "Great Perfection Path" of Tibetan Tantric Buddhism with an accomplished master.
#16 3:00 Grandmother's Herbal Medicine Chest with Gail Ulrich. Learn to create vibrant health using nourishing and tonic herbs as daily supplements. A hands-on experiential workshop.
#17 3:00 Are You Finding as Well as Seeking? with Carl Silver, Ph.D. Learn to give attention to awareness, accept experience and open to finding peace rather than always seeking it

Special Events!
Saturday Evening Concert with Molly Scott, Acoustic Inspirations & Circle Dancing! Networking Party Outside Pavilion
8:30 p.m. - Only $3 with General Admission

See many of the speakers featured above on the Full Circle Show & The Michael Brady Show, Spfld. Chan. 12A Mon-Fri 9:30 a.m. & 1:30 p.m. Northampton, Chan. 2, Tues. 8:30 p.m.

$2 OFF GENERAL ADMISSION WITH THIS COUPON!
6th Annual Northampton Whole Health Expo
Saturday & Sunday, September 22-23, 1990
Northampton Hilton Inn (Exit 18 Off I-91)
General Admission $7, Intensive Workshops listed above are $10 in advance, $13 at the door. Sat. Evening Concert $3 Hours: 9:30 a.m. - 8 p.m. Saturday, 9:00 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday Concert/Networking Party 8:30 p.m. Saturday
To Order Advance Tickets With Visa/MC or AMEX, call: (413) 586-1188. Exhibitor Information call (413) 586-4269

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
ZANNA

ROSENBERG FUND FOR CHILDREN
BENEFIT CONCERT
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1990
8:00 P.M.
JOHN M. GREENE HALL SMITH COLLEGE NORTHAMPTON, MA.
PETE SEEGER
RICHIE HAVENS
COUNTRY JOE MCDONALD
JANE SAPP

TICKETS
General Admission $20.00 in Advance $22.50 at the Door $10.00 Students and Seniors
For all ticket information call 1-781-1406, M-F 8-4 P.M. or to charge tickets (Ticketmaster) 1-800 382-8080

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Who do I vote for now?

Who do I vote for now? This is a question that many residents in the Amherst area are probably asking themselves right now.

With the unexpected victory of both "underdog" candidates in the gubernatorial primaries, and the imminence of the November ballot, there are certain key issues which must be made clear to anyone who has an interest in the survival of public higher education.

William Weld is the Republican candidate for governor. His main flaw is that he wholeheartedly supports the Citizens for Limited Taxation and ballot question number 3.

As members of the University community, we all should be very worried about this ballot question and any candidate who supports it.

Let me simply say that CLT can and will hurt every individual who is connected with this University, whether rich or poor, student or employee.

A vote for William Weld, in short, will reinforce the CLT platform.

John Silber, the Democratic candidate for governor, claims that he opposes CLT. At the same time, however, he has already stated that he would like to triple tuition at state colleges and universities if he becomes governor.

Most of us at the University are here because we want to get the best education for our dollar. The raising of school tuition to "combat the lack of budget dollars" will only lower the quality of our education while making it more expensive.

We the students will be receiving less education but paying more for it.

Over the past three years, public higher education in Massachusetts has already been cut by $92 million. Tripling our tuition is not going to make up these cuts.

Also, this year alone, we have lost $29 million. And if CLT passes, at least $30-35 million more will be cut from UMass.

Question 3 goes too far because the University cannot survive intact with almost half of its fiscal year budget gone!

This now leaves a very big question mark in many people's minds. Which candidate will be able to take the reins of the state as well as keep the interests of the students and employees at the University (and other state schools) close to his heart?

There is no clear-cut answer, but one suggestion is that the students and staff push both of these candidates to step up to the mike on this all-important issue of higher education.

Right now, neither of them seems to care very much about the issue.

I also suggest that we do all we can to fight back against CLT and the fee/tuition increases and personnel cuts, which its passage will impose on the University.

My final suggestion is that the first and foremost issue on campus should be voter registration.

As usual, the voter turnout in Tuesday's primary was poor. This is a trend which has plagued the University and the Valley area for years.

The only way to tell the legislature how we at UMass feel about CLT and our education is to go out and vote on Nov. 8.

If you are 18 and eligible to vote, it is imperative that you register on Oct. 2 or 3 (during MassPIRG's registration drive on campus).

And then go to the polls on election day.

Jason F. Erdos is a UMass student

Jason F. Erdos

An unlikely superhero

I saw Spiderman yesterday. Actually, I know it wasn't Spiderman, nonetheless this person was still a unique hero.

As I was sitting outside the Franklin Dining Commons, waiting for my friend to keep our dinner engagement, I saw a man, presumably a student, scaling the walls of the Dining Commons. Ordinary looking from the ground, this man took the shape of, ah, Spiderman, once up on the walls. Except this man was more graceful.

On the wall, he would take a step and shift his balance in order to make sure he was secure. Then he would move his hand gently along the wall, searching for a solid niche. After ending his search, he would solidly grip his fingers on the protruding brick. Now he was ready to take another step.

Occasionally, before taking a step, he would reach an arm around his back to enable himself to dip his hand in a red and blue pouch which seemed to contain magical white powder. This chalk dust gave our young superhero the ability to have a superhuman grip.

One of the most remarkable achievements I witnessed occurred when Spidy Jr. turned a corner along the wall. He had to reach around the corner and blindly search for the appropriate spot to secure his hand. After finding one, he locked his fingers and slowly, but faithfully, brought one of his legs around the corner. Soon the other hand and the other leg followed. His Mission Impossible was now complete.

Our superhero wore black shorts and a white shirt, which didn't strike me as superhero apparel at first. On his feet, he wore purple climbing shoes with black soles. The lack of outlandishness contributed to his uniqueness.

I don't know this student's name. I was too afraid to interrupt his concentration to ask, and I also just wanted to sit back and watch. In an odd sort of way, it was fun to watch and sit, screaming silent encouragements to my superhero.

This experience somehow touched me. I found myself appreciating this outgoing student instead of considering him a total moronic idiot, which I might have done last year when I was a scared freshman — scared of anyone different from me, even in the most subtle way.

However, now a sophomore, I enjoy the diversity UMass has to offer. I have learned that the differences in other people is what makes me an individual. So, if you are a freshman, and you find that the adjustment to all the diversity is difficult, relax because it gets easier.

It might seem like you'll never get used to the differences, especially if you are from a small town like me. But trust me, you'll learn to appreciate these differences.

Joe DiGiovannt is a UMass student

Joe DiGiovanni

Gov't spending mess

Government spending has been utilized poorly both in the past and the present. For example, our great country could, if we wanted to, blow up the world six or seven times over.

Although there is absolutely no reason for that, we still waste billions of dollars on more bombs, planes and tanks that we do not have to build. For example, we recently built the Stealth B-2 bomber, costing taxpayers about $500 million, only to just let it sit on the ground.

With so many needy and hungry people in the world, it is a shame that money is misused, and it is all a political game.

If our government is in such a financial mess, how can we lend money to countries that are in the same financial bind? Granted, they are allies of the United States, but when we cannot handle our own financial problems it is not right that we spend money that again we do not have for ourselves.

Our country is run like a political game by politicians who do what they feel is right. We the people do not receive fair representation. Any idiotic human can run this country.

Recently, when I was in Washington, D.C., I observed many homeless people. What bothered me the most was seeing women and children living in cardboard boxes directly in front of the White House.

When ambassadors, emperors, kings and other important world figures visit the United States, what thoughts are going through their minds when they see homeless women and children living in cardboard boxes?

The United States' priorities must be mixed up because its excess money could be used to improve the problems of our country.

I find it despicable how the government treats American veterans who fought for our country. For example, I was walking in Boston, and I observed veterans in their uniforms begging for money and food.

I believe that anyone who fought for our country deserves not only food on their table but also a roof over their head, compliments of the government.

The most important issue which I cannot understand is the issue of education. Education is supposedly the backbone of our great country. That is a big lie.

I was brought up to believe that education is the most important part of life if you want to lead a prosperous one.

Education should not cost what it costs now. As a matter of fact, it should not cost at all.

What are children and teenagers supposed to believe if budgets keep getting cut? Teachers and professors are being fired? Books we learn from are either being cut from the curriculum or cost too much money? Our school libraries, in which a good deal of information is housed, are being shredded by budget cuts.

Education is not the backbone of our country if the government can make these cuts just to build or buy unneeded goods instead of providing the funds to educate the future leaders of our country.

If this trend keeps going at the rate it is today, then many lower and middle-class families are not going to be able to afford higher education for their sons or daughters.

Unless people pull together as one and show their concern for governmental spending, then the problems of our country will never be resolved for our children and their children. In turn, if we cannot handle these problems, then who is to say the next generation can?

Daniel Gittelsohn is a UMass student

Daniel Gittelsohn

Greeks deserve respect

Since the University has been enforcing the anti-keg policy on the Greek area, we have been wondering why the Greek area is even considered University-approved housing. And if the Greek area falls under Housing Services policies, how can they communicate their needs and ideas to each other?

The University does not give any benefits to the Greek area.

It has not given any of the chapter houses the new phone systems that the dorms have. The Greek houses have a hard time getting furniture from the University and receive no maintenance service from the Physical Plant. Worst of all, the UMass police department does not patrol the area so the security is not even close to that of the dorms. So, why should the Greek area follow the policies of the University if it does not benefit from Housing Services?

Maybe the Greek area does not benefit the University, and that's why it does not get benefits from the University.

Let's imagine there is no Greek area and find out what the University would lose. The University would have to find housing for 500 students through the already overburdened Housing Services. The University would lose the largest collective RSO on campus and lose a viable social resource.

Academically, the University's standards would be lowered because Greeks traditionally have higher cumulative averages than the University-wide men's and women's averages.

Alumni contributions to the University would also drop because Greek alumni put back the most money back into the school. Participation in the Student Government Association would be lost as well. The president of the SGA is a Greek, and so are many senators.

Also, the community at large would suffer without the Greek area. Charities, both local and national, would lose vital support from a large community service department.

So, what is the problem?

Why can't the University see the Greek area as an asset?

Why not give Greeks the benefits they deserve or at least drop the restrictions on them?

We have written articles about the Greek area for almost a year now, trying to show the administration and the campus the good Greeks do. And still there is no change in attitudes. Why?

The problem is that the method of communication is lousy. The administration only hears about the problems in the Greek area and not its benefits. Now Greek Affairs is going to be cut on Oct. 12.

With communication as bad as it is now, how will the administration make it any better?

Something should be done.

Keith Nicholson and John Silveria are UMass students

Nicholson/Silveria

ARTS & LIVING

Feelies funked out yet in a mellow groove

By TODD SEIDEL
Collegian Correspondent

The Feelies
Iron Horse
Wednesday, Sept. 19

REVIEW

Some might wonder how a rock band can pass through an awaiting crowd unnoticed. Well, this is rather easy for the down to earth Feelies, as they resemble librarians rather than rock stars.

The show, slow at first, kicked into gear as Glenn Mercer, lead vocalist and guitarist, and Bill Million, guitarist, stroked the first notes of "The High Road." "The High Road," taken from their second album, The Good Earth, drew cheers of recognition.

Throughout the show, the unenthusiastic Feelies met the cheers of the crowd with only a "thank you" from the bassist and only female member in the group, Brenda Sauter.

The textured guitar soon lead to the tapping of hands and feet and dancing in the upper section. The excitement was acknowledged by Sauter, as she pointed out the "dance party upstairs," which to previously unaware fans, seemed to be an invitation to join in, as six or seven more patrons ran upstairs.

Midway through the set, they played a cover of the famous Rolling Stones classic "Paint it Black," where halfway through, Glenn Mercer was forced to make a quick guitar change after breaking a string.

This classic was performed after "The Final Word," off the Only Life LP, which was greeted with claps and cheers from the laid back, older crowd.

Other songs played from Only Life were "Away," "Too Far Gone" and "What Goes On."

"Crazy Rhythms," taken from the band's album of the same name, was the last song played before the encores.

Crazy Rhythms, the Feelies first album, was released in 1980, followed by The Good Earth, which came out six years later, and the most recent Only Life, released in 1988.

During the six-year interim between their first and second albums, the band recorded and performed under various other names, such as Yung Wu the Willies and the Trypes.

The Willies performed in the movie Something Wild, where they played Crazy Rhythms, among other songs.

Dave Weikerman, one of two Feelies drummers (the other being Stanley Demeski), sung for Yung Wu as they performed various covers and original tracks on their first and only album, Shore Leave.

The Feelies strongest influence, the Velvet Underground, was evident as they played "White Light/White Heat," and a medley of "Run, Run, Run" and "What Goes On" — both Velvet Underground tunes — for the delightful encores.

Autumn FAC schedule

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

The Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst announces its 1990-91 roster specially designed to stimulate the senses and make the spirits roar.

Internationally-acclaimed artists will appear in performances representing the finest in theatre, orchestras and chamber orchestra, Broadway shows, chamber music, jazz, dance, ethnic programming and variety entertainment. All performances are slated for the FAC Concert Hall and Bowker Auditorium.

Season opener is a weekend run of the Broadway comedy Lend Me A Tenor on September 29 and 30 this is followed by a unique evening with Peter Schickele as he reintroduces Western Massachusetts audiences to the Intimate P.D.Q. Bach on October 4.

Midori, the young violinist will perform in recital on October 10. Still in her teens, she has already been acclaimed by critics worldwide as one of this century's most gifted musicians. Her program is to include works by Mozart, Strauss, Beethoven, Ernst, Chopin and Ravel.

The Shanghai Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Shen Xie-Yang appears on October 17. A large organization of great influence in China, its history dates back to the 1870s. It now comprises nearly 100 well-experienced players and four resident conductors.

The beautiful and thought-provoking Sankai Juku will perform October 19 and 20. Sankai Juku is part of the second generation of Butoh dancers in Japan. Butoh is a Japanese art form that evolved during the 1960s as an expression of humanitarian awareness by that country's post-war generation.

Sending out the month is the famed Count Basie Orchestra directed by Frank Foster appearing on the 31.

November brings something totally new to the FAC — a two-day series featuring the panoramic four-play cycle called We. Written by Charles Fuller, author of the Pulitzer prize-winner A Soldier's Play the We Plays deal with American history from a Black perspective and cover the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Members of the cast of Sarafina

Photo courtesy Fine Arts Center

GOLD RING SALE
SAVE UP TO $100!
$100 off 18K $50 off 14K $25 off 10K
Order your college ring NOW.
JOSTENS
AMERICA'S COLLEGE RING™
Date: Sept. 24-28 10am-4pm, Deposit required: $25.00
at the University Store, Mon-Fri
Meet with your Jostens representative for full details.
See our complete ring selection on display in your college bookstore.

LEADING EDGE
MODEL "D"
SPECIALS
$489 (Single Floppy)
Includes:
10 MHZ, 84 Keyboard, DOS 3.3
AMBER MONITOR, CLK CAL.
SERIAL & PARALLEL PORTS
SYSTEM PREPARATION

	512K	640K
Single Floppy	$489	$499
Dual Floppy	$569	$579
20 MG Hard Drive	$859	$869
30 MG Hard Drive	$959	$969

Hurry – Special Ends Sept. 30th
VALIDATA:
Mountain Farms Mall • Hadley, MA
586-7405
Free Mouse with Purchase

loveBuzz shows promise

By SAAD HOPKINS
Collegian Staff

loveBuzz
The Hummingbirds
RooArt Records

So many have jumped quick to label these guys as a Darling Buds/Primitives rip-off band. I can see where this comparison is fair, however, the Hummingbirds, as contrived as their music can be, show promise of taking their influences a step further to create a sound that is truly their own. Their debut album loveBUZZ on the Australian label founded by INXS manager Chris Murphy, is, as far as sweet, colorful pop goes, pretty good.

loveBUZZ should appeal to two crowds. First, it's fine guitar craftsmanship. Mitch Easter's (of Let's Active fame, who has produced various bands, from the DB'S to Game Theory) production provides a nice balance, insuring that it will receive the standard daytime college radio airplay that it needs to boost its success as an independent group.

On the other hand, scattered about this platter are songs so silly and mindless that any gum-chewing innocent upper-end of the dial listener would probably fall in love with it. Of course meaning that commercial airplay is more than likely right around the corner.

And I do hope that it happens. Mitch Easter could use more publicity with the major masses, as could the Hummingbirds. Unlike on his previous production efforts, Easter has concentrated on more advanced vocal mixing. Simon Holmes', Alannah Russack's, and Robyn St. Clare's singing are so magnificently toned, you can tell they've put time and effort into it. It's apparent on such songs as "Alimony," and "Hollow Inside." Not the choice songs to my ears maybe, I much preferred the near Spacemen 3 guitar sound on "House Taken Over" or the hard drive of "Get On Down."

As nice as it is, the Holmes/Russack guitar combo should concentrate on more adventurous writing. Easter has invaded on them just a bit too much — it sounds like another Mitch Easter album. Not a bad thing, just annoying at times. Additionally, one can only endure the basic chord structure for so long, certainly not for 17 songs.

Though don't ignore it. Seventeen songs means that it's got something for almost everyone.

WE WANT YOU !!!
to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER
If you're a ...
1. Full - Time Undergraduate
2. Not currently on a judicial sanction
3. Above a 2.0 cum
4. Interested in Judicial Affairs
Important Dates:
October 2nd and 3rd
7 - 9:30 pm
Location: To Be Announced
Attendance is required at both these sessions.
Application Deadline: September 26
APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE at
* Your cluster office
* Dean of Students Office - 227 Whitmore
Questions - Call The Dean of Students Office
545 - 2684

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring Busch Beer at $8.99 a suitcase
Vodka 80 proof $8.99 1.75 L
Maccabee $11.99 case
Captain Morgan $13.99 1.75 L
Cribari Wine $4.99 3 L
Sun Country Classic Cooler
$6.00 per case of 2 L bots.
Jose Cuervo 'Gold' $8.99 750 ml
Off Campus Delivery 253-5441
Labatt's Beer or Ale $6.49 12pk bots.
all beers plus deposit

COUNT ON FUJI
Stop in, count and win!
At the Camera Shop, 98 Pleasant St. Amherst.
Fuji DL-400
1st Place - The person who guesses the closest number of film canisters will win a Fuji DL-400.
2nd Place - 6 rolls of Fuji CA-135-24 exposure color negative.
3rd Place - 1 Fuji Quick Snap plus 1 Fuji Quick Snap with flash onetime use cameras.
• Winner will selected Monday, October 22nd
• In the event of a tie, a drawing will be held
• No purchase necessary
Specials good only with coupon
Coupon expires 10/31/90
YOUR COLOR DEVELOP AND PRINT PRICES*
12 EXPOSURES 1.99 per roll
DISC 15 EXPOSURES 2.99 per roll
COUPON
24 EXPOSURES 3.99 per roll
36 EXPOSURES 5.99 per roll
*STANDARD PRINTS
*1 EACH GLOSSY FINISH
Offer good on Ektaprint™ size 110—3½ × 4, 126—3½ × 3½, 135—3½ × 5 & Disc 3½ × 4½ Kodacolor, Fun and other C-41 process films.
the CameraShops
AMHERST 98 Pleasant St

CONCERNED ABOUT AN EATING PROBLEM
Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia, Compulsive Eating
Help Yourself or Someone You Care About
Presenting: How to Recognize an Eating Disorder In Yourself or Someone Else and How to Help.
When: Wednesday, September 26, 1990
Where: UMASS, Campus Center, Room 917
Time: 3:30-5:00 p.m.
OPEN TO THE FIVE COLLEGE COMMUNITY
No Registration Necessary
For more info: 549-2671 ext. 181
Sponsored by:
UMASS EATING DISORDER NETWORK

■ fine arts center

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6

Reconstruction period beginning with the emancipation of the slaves in 1863 and ending around 1900. Plays I and II, titled "Sally" and "Prince" respectively, will be performed on Thursday, November 1; and plays III and IV, titled "Jonquil" and "Burner's Frolic," will continue on Saturday, November 3.

On November 6, The San Francisco Mime Troupe will perform Seeing Double, a musical farce centering around the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

The West German Sinfonia under the direction of Dirk Joeres, will perform on November 8 with American flutist, Gary Schocker, as their guest soloist.

Piano virtuoso Leon Bates will present a solo recital on November 14 followed on November 16 by solo dancer Margie Gillis.

Get set for The Chieftans on November 29 followed by two evening performances of the compelling Broadway musical Sarafina on December 1 and 2. Africa Oye!, a magnificent evening of authentic African dance, music and song, is scheduled for December 4, and the first half of the season will end with Max Roach and Friends on december 8. Formerly called the Jazz All Stars, Max Roach and Friends will feature the legendary percussionist in performance with vocalist Sheila Jordan, the Uptown String Quartet and other guests.

UMass students receive a 50 percent discount on all tickets to Fine Arts events. Season subscribers have until September 28 to select their choices from among the 32 programs which begin late this month and extend through May 4, 1991.

Valley clubs offer vast array of fun

By HEIDI BABINSKY
Collegian Correspondent

If you find yourself searching for a live entertainment hot spot, this area has it — from reggae to folk.

The Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton, at the kernel of the club scene is confident with what owner Jordi Herold calls a "strong fall calendar." Past shows include John Hiatt, Pentagle, Chick Corea even Suzanne Vega in her early days. Although the club has been in business longer than most in the area, it was plagued this past summer with a string of cancellations.

Herold said the club went with the "experimental route" last spring, hoping to book acts from "exotic places like Poland, Nigeria, Guinea, Algeria, Zimbabwe and France." The sequence was called World Beat, a unique shift though it was beset with its set of difficulties. Whether the cancellations arose from Visa problems or possibly "simple culture conflicts," Herold said he is now planning on "staying closer to home," in the sense that the club has decided to book the type of shows that are staples of the Horse.

"We've decided to stick to the core kinds of music we've had all along: New Wave rock, jazz folk, contemporary American and what we're working with is doing well," Herold said.

When a music hall such as the Horse is depending on a booking and it falls through, the club is left with the charges. The empty seats which would have supported patrons, the advertisers, rental equipment etc. all amounts to cash flow difficulties.

Herold has come up with a profitable sales pitch which helps out the Iron Horse as well as the customer. And Herold said the response has been fabulous.

Twenty dollars up front buys $25 Horse Bux. In other words, between now and September 24, if you send $20 cash, check or charge to the Iron Horse, they send you $25 in Iron Horse Bux — redeemable for cocktails or a meal between now and February 23, 1991. You could think of it as couple of free beers or an appetizer in order to support the Iron Horse and uphold its great shows.

As for the rest of the area, the club scene is continuing to do well, despite the economy. Amherst sports a live music club, Twister's Tavern. This restaurant/bar reserves Wednesday nights for reggeae/soca and New Horizons is often discovered in their basement. Tuesday nights are open to local musicians for acoustic performances and the rest of the week hosts local bands. Chris Allen, representing Twister's, said, "Business is increasing and running smoothly."

Pearl Street in Northampton hoardes a showcase crowd with dancing Wednesday through Saturday evenings. The live shows usually consist of rock, blues or punk bands. Sheehan's of Northampton vies for the Horse as the oldest in the area, but was at first a bar only. They also book local bands regularly. Katina's on Route 9, Hadley has relied on its computer game "Selectrocution" lately. The game draws a singles crowd that "matches up" men and women at the computer's command. Peking Garden on Route 9 offers comedy night and The Pub in town offers an easy-going atmosphere, dance floor and a DJ to spin some tunes.

Whether the Massachusetts economy is flailing, you are allowed to support the clubs, restaurants and bars — so go out and spend some "bux."

University Players Presents

TALK RADIO

Audition Dates: Sept. 22 and 23
12 - 6 in the Commonwealth Room, S.U.B.

Show dates: November 4-7

For more info contact Kristie—585-0390

TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE

A great place to relax, meet friends and enjoy the view!

MUNCHIES
Served Tuesday-Friday: 4:00-9:00 pm
Saturday: 5:00-9:00 pm

T.O.C. Onion Soup Crock	$2.25
Fried Mozzarella Sticks	$3.95
Buffalo Wings	$4.25
Macho Nacho's	$3.95
The Alma Tater Potato Skins	$3.95
Popcorn Shrimp	$3.95
French Onion Rings	$1.75
Lincoln Logs Steak Fries	$2.75
Veggie's N' Dip	$2.25
Cheese & Crackers

CHIPS - PRETZELS & NACHOS
Available Anytime

SUNDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

DETROIT LIONS VS. TAMPA BAY BUCS

Monday-Friday: 11:30 am-12:30 am
Saturday-Sunday: 5:00 pm-12:30 am

11th Floor • Campus Center • (413) 549-6000 ext. 7634
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

PARAMOUNT
SPRINGFIELD

Midnight Oil
Special guests
THE ORIGIN

September 25, 7:30 pm

MICHAEL FRANKS
ANGELA BOFILL
Oct. 7, 7:30 pm

LITTLE FEAT
Representing The Mambo
Oct. 10, 7:30 pm

An Evening With
ROB BARTLETT
of WFAN's "Imus In The Morning" show
Oct. 13, 10:00 pm

KIX 93.7
KATHY MATTEA
Oct. 28, 7:30 pm

ROBERT CRAY BAND with The Memphis Horns
LOS LOBOS and DIRTY DOZEN BRASS BAND
Nov. 1, 7:30 pm

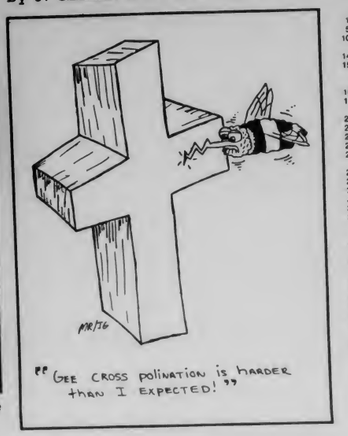
BOBBY McFERRIN
Nov. 14, 7:30 pm

1700 Main St., Springfield, MA
Paramount Box Office (413) 734-5874, M-F 10-5, Sat. 12-5
TICKETRON and TICKETRON PHONE CHARGE (800) 382-8080
For Paramount Group Sales Information call (413) 567-1505

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"Well, they finally came . . . But before I go, let's see you roll over a couple of times."

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

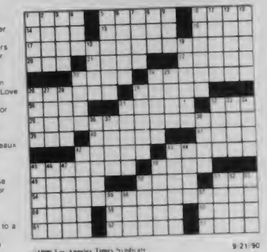
ACROSS
1 Trade
5 Swift
10 Iranian ruler, once
14 Kind of bean
15 "Christ Stopped at —": Levi novel
16 Brave bull
17 Hemingway novel
20 Favorite
21 Hill's partner
22 Wine grape
23 Kingly address
24 Residents of 32 Across
26 Chewed the fat
29 Luminaries
30 — Ben Adhem
31 Beauty's swain
32 Oklahoma city
35 Song from Ain't Misbehavin'"
39 Jordan's neighbor: Abbr.
40 Islam's Supreme Being
41 Existed
42 Tin Lizzie
43 Lethe
45 Vote count
48 Copies
49 Rice-Webber musical
50 Miss Criders
51 Brooklyn or Manhattan follower
54 Words from Kashmiri Love Song
58 Acronym for Greek resistance WWII
59 Red Bordeaux
60 Pealed
61 In case
62 Military storehouse
63 Williams or Rooney

DOWN
1 Invitation to a duel
2 Helpmate
3 Third of a Latin trio
4 Golf course norm
5 Post office posting
6 White poplar
7 Walesa is one
8 Ailing
9 Morse code sound
10 Blemishes
11 Lena or Marilyn
12 Mail
13 Armies
18 Entertainer Adams
19 City on the Douro
23 Urge on
24 Squirrel away
25 Drying oven
26 Sun's output
27 "It's —!"
28 Decant
29 Bristles
31 Stacks supporters
32 "Green Mansions" hero
33 Earth
34 "The Morning Watch" author 1951
36 Actress Fawcett
37 Joie de vivre
38 Is in debt
42 Most cunning
43 Unite
44 Meat for scallopine
45 Turn back
46 Dodge
47 Counter covers
48 "My Friend Flicka" author Mary O'Hara —
50 Grand role
51 Terrible tsar
52 Lean toward
53 Nervous
55 French soul
56 Tennis necessity
57 Mouths

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

			C	O	S	T		A	D	M	I	R	E
		S	M	A	L	T	O		T	R	I	D	E	N	T
	L	E	N	D	E	R		T	E	L	E	G	R	A	M
	E	A	T	E	N		C	E	D	E	S		A	L	A
	A	G	A	R		B	A	N	G	S		A	G	E	S
	V	I	E	T		H	O	R	D	E		S	P	E	N	T
	E	R	A	S	U	R	E	S		C	O	A	S	T	S
			T	R	O	T		R	O	A	R
	B	I	C	O	R	N		T	E	M	P	T	I	N	G
	E	M	E	R	Y		M	A	N	E	S		T	E	A
	F	A	R	M		M	I	N	T	S		S	A	S	S
	I	R	A		S	U	R	G	E		H	A	L	T	S
	T	E	M	P	O	R	A	L		S	E	D	I	L	E
		T	I	L	L	A	G	E		T	R	A	C	E	S
		C	O	O	L	E	D			A	R	T	S

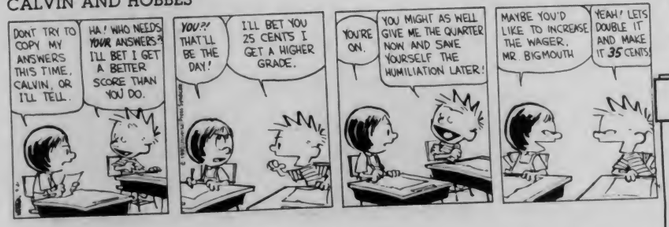
9/21/90



©1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

9/21/90

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



DON'T TRY TO COPY MY ANSWERS THIS TIME, CALVIN, OR I'LL TELL.
HA! WHO NEEDS YOUR ANSWERS? I'LL BET I GET A BETTER SCORE THAN YOU DO.
YOU'RE THAT'LL BE THE DAY!
I'LL BET YOU 25 CENTS I GET A HIGHER GRADE.
YOU'RE ON.
YOU MIGHT AS WELL GIVE ME THE QUARTER NOW AND SAVE YOURSELF THE HUMILIATION LATER!
MAYBE YOU'D LIKE TO INCREASE THE WAGER, MR BIGMOUTH
YEAH! LETS DOUBLE IT AND MAKE IT 35 CENTS

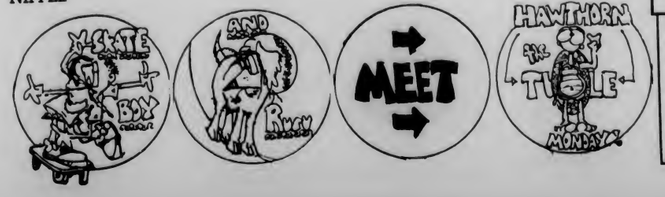
TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Here's your stolen money, all eighty dollars of it! I hope you're happy.
There, the nightmare is over! Now we both can sleep tonight!
Allright, you win! I've seen the light -- Gabriel Mark will not live the life of a felon!
But you took out seven thousand!
PLEASE, NOT A WORD! DON'T ADD TO MY PAIN! MARCUS, START THE CAR!

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

HEY GRENDLE, THIS MAGIC LAMP I FOUND SAID I MAY BE GRANTED 3 WISHES
OK PRICE, SO WHATS YOUR FIRST WISH
I WISH I WERE RICH!!!
HEY GRENDLE WHAT HAPPENED?
I DUNNO RICH WHAT DID HAPPEN?

NIPPLE
By PITT



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Pizza Clam roll	Roast top round of beef Sweet/sour chicken fingers
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Pizza Humus sandwich	Cheese nut loaf Sweet/sour chicken fingers

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Innovative proposals win widespread approval now. Top management may bypass the middlemen to get your idea moving. Protect your flank. A blind date could give your ego a boost.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Working with children proves particularly rewarding today. Be choosy when selecting people to help you on a special project. A jealous member of the opposite sex could deliberately misinterpret something you said.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A refirement plan needs study and revision. Consult with someone who has more experience. A jealous member of the opposite sex could deliberately misinterpret something you said.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is a direct connection between travel and the success of a new business venture. A creative project helps open important doors. Show that you know how to delegat authority.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Resentment can get in the way of progess. Forget past grievances. Social success requires more give on your part. Your intellectual curiosity makes you very attractive to a newcomer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22) The way you present a new idea will determine its chances for success. Build a better work wardrobe. Teens deserve the special guidance that will help prepare them for adult life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Postpone an important meeting until you can prepare a stronger case. The principals will understand. Examine your career choices carefully. Review a co-worker's recent actions for insights.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Do what you can today and plan to start afresh on Monday. If considering a career change, focus on the fringe benefits connected with a new job. They may be worth a lot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Do not allow jealousy to eat away at you. Be honest with your mate and let the chips fall where they may. You will lose a battle or two but win the war.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An unreasonable relative may be doing you a big favor. Take a spur-of-the-moment trip. Parents find their children are sympathetic to their financial problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you feel unfulfilled by your present work, launch an active job search. You thrive on competition. Romance moves in mysterious ways. Pampering your mate will bring big dividends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Review your bills and budget before purchasing that luxury item. Even the sale price could be too high. Listen to what someone is trying to tell You! You could find new romance.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Gayle Long
Copy Editor.....Jody Gabin
Layout Technician.....Terry Starmer
Photo Technician.....Dondi Ahearn
Production Supervisor.....dUgLes GhonStuN
Typesetter.....Kim Frisino
Production.....Jason Torla, Lynn Kilroy, Paul Specht

Keep That Great Summer Look

$10.00 OFF

$10.00 OFF

TANNING SPECIAL, 10 Visits for $45 with coupon
Our WOLFF bed really works

Styles By Deborah
"The Spa" for hair & skin care
549-5610

Rugby stays home

Match with Amherst here Saturday

By DAVE SZPILA
Collegian Correspondent

A change in the schedule will leave the UMass rugby club at home this weekend to face the rugby club from Amherst College, Saturday at 12:30 p.m. The match will be played on the fields behind Southwest.

UMass was supposed to go to Williamstown to face the newly rebuilt Williams College team this weekend.

The last meeting between Amherst and UMass was won by the UMass squad. The match was played last last year during the spring semester.

Francis Buttle, the UMass assistant coach, had this to say about this weekend's game: "Last spring we beat Amherst 28-8 because of determined forward movement. The key to a victory on Saturday will be for our forwards to be mobile and as determined as they were in our last match."

Watching the team practice yesterday, it was evident that it is starting to come together as a solid unit. The passing is more precise, and it looks as though Stan Gajda, out last week with a hip injury, might be back in the lineup on Saturday.

With strong rucking and mauling, UMass could pull off another large victory.

The game this weekend carries a higher price than just beating a crosstown rival. Amherst College, as of this year, is in the same league as UMass. A win on Saturday is a league win, and those count the most.

A final note to those who are willing to give the sport a try. Practices are held Tuesdays through Thursdays from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the rugby field.

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

Hiring Now For The School Year

Interesting, part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm, and Saturday, 11am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $5.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to maximum $6.00/hr.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday, 586-8635.

Abt Associates Inc.

Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035
An Equal Opportunity Employer

charlie's

1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open 'til midnight
Game Room with 2 pool tables

Sunday 10c Potato Skins
9:00p.m. — 12:00 a.m.

Drink of the Week
Pineapple Bomb
$1.95

Beer of the Month
Foster's Lager $1.75

Food Giveaways 9pm-12am
Mon. 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks
Tues. 10 cent Buffalo Wings
Wed. 25cent Pizza Slices and 99 cent nachos
Thurs. 10 cent Beer Steamed Baby Franks 8pm-10pm
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins
WE ACCEPT MC-VISA-AMEX

ΣAM

PRESENTS...

LIVE! AT

UMASS

FOR MORE INFO, CALL JEFF AT 253-5165

Monday, September 17th: "Pizza Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:00 pm.

Tuesday, September 18th: "Jai-Alai Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30 pm.

Monday, September 24th: "Billiards" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Tuesday, September 25th: "Movie & Sundae Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.

Wednesday, September 26th: "Kentucky Fried Chicken Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30pm.

1990

ATTENTION UNIVERSITY MEN

RUSH PHI SIGMA KAPPA

1873

1st Fraternity at UMass

1st to Abolish Pledging

CHECK US OUT!

510 N. Pleasant St. in Amherst
FAC PIK
O MAHAR

RUSH DATES
Thurs. Sept. 20
Special Event

Mon. Sept. 24th
Mon. Nite Football
with Bu-phi-lo wings

Wed. Sept. 26
Comedy Night

Both cross country teams back in action this weekend

• Women without Liljebald

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts women's cross country coach Julie LaFreniere is looking for her team's first win this weekend, as it faces Springfield College on Saturday.

"I am unsure about how good Springfield is this year," said LaFreniere. "They can be really tough to beat. They will not allow anyone to walk over them."

Making this weekend's meet even more difficult is the loss of Kelly Liljebald to an ankle injury. Liljebald was UMass' second-best finisher last week in the opening meet against Boston College and the University of Lowell.

"We were favored to win before we lost Kelly," said LaFreniere. "She is a real competitor that we will sorely miss against Springfield."

Highly touted Dana Goldfarb will return action this weekend, but most likely will not be 100 percent, due to an ankle injury. Goldfarb has been going through rehabilitation wearing an ankle boot, which provided her with better support while she ran, but also changed her running stride. She has been out of the boot for eight days but has been unable to regain her normal stride.

"She shuffles her feet now," said LaFreniere. "Hopefully she will be able to bring back her long strides soon, but it is good to see her competing again."

LaFreniere is looking for the rest of the team to step up and perform this weekend. Becky Johnson, who was the top runner last week, will have to run well again. UMass will also need big performances from Kathy Holt, Michelle St. Laurent, and Kathy Crocker. LaFreniere is also counting on Tara Hughes and Mo Meldrina to be factors this weekend.

"Mo was injured last spring," said LaFreniere. "She also suffered from hypoglycemia which put her about a month behind in her training. She was our top returning runner and it is disappointing to her that she is not up to par. However it is only a matter of time before she becomes a factor again."

The course at Springfield is a tenth of a mile longer than UMass' but it is mostly flat and therefore faster. This is a plus for UMass' ailing bodies.

• Men host Springfield, Iona

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team will compete against teams from Northeastern University and Iona College on Saturday. Coach Ken O'Brien expects tough races from both teams.

Northeastern has had a close rivalry with UMass for many years. Northeastern won last year's meet against the Minutemen, but two of the top three runners from that Northeastern team have since graduated.

Perhaps the best method to gauge how UMass will compete against Northeastern this weekend is to look at how both teams have competed this season against a common rival. Both teams have faced, and been defeated by, Boston College.

Northeastern ran against BC two weeks ago and lost the meet by a score of 27-31. UMass faced BC this past Saturday in a tri-meet, and finished second.

If a dual meet score were calculated between BC and UMass, the score of the meet would have been 25-33 in favor of BC. These very similar scores give a clearer picture of just how evenly matched these two teams are.

O'Brien said he expects the meet to come down to whichever team has the most number of runners who have a good day on Saturday. He also said the fact that the race will be run on the UMass course might work in UMass's favor as they have already run on the course and know how to race on it. This home course advantage may be just the edge that the Minutemen will need to be able to defeat Northeastern.

Iona College is more of a mystery to O'Brien. He admits that he knows much less about the team from this small college in New Rochelle, N.Y. than he does about Northeastern.

UMass did face Iona last year and was victorious against them. Despite this past success, O'Brien warns that "You're never gonna catch a weak Iona team."

Of his own team, O'Brien describes a "well-balanced team" with a number of "very hungry kids who want their share of success."

Hopefully this hunger will manifest itself into a pair of victories on Saturday.

Best in West to battle Water Polo at Brown tourney

By JOE DEGLORIA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts water polo team goes up against the top two teams in the country this weekend at the Brown National Invitational.

This event is not a tournament, but is an opportunity for the top teams in the West to meet the best from the East. The Smith swim center will host such powerful teams as UC Berkeley (number one), UCLA (two), UC Irvine (five), Brown (12), Iona (20) and UMass, now ranked 17th.

Coach Russ Yarworth and his 6-1 team will face the Bruins from UCLA Friday night. Yarworth sees this game as an excellent chance to get some experience with a big-time water polo team.

"You have to go into such a game with the right attitude. UCLA is a much more experienced team, but you have to keep confident," said Yarworth.

UMass will also play a much less powerful, but still tough, Princeton team. UMass beat Princeton last weekend 9-5, but Yarworth does not want his team to look past them. "We have got to do our job, we must beat Princeton," he said.

After Princeton, UMass will face the number one ranked UC Berkeley team. The Golden bears have won their first three games this year including, a 12-11 victory over number three ranked Stanford.

The offensively strong California team has scored 49 goals in its first three games. Chris Humbert leads the team with 13 goals.

Coach Steve Heaston said he is excited about the event. "It will our first chance to play in a couple weeks. Basically, this will be a good chance for East Coast teams to play West coast teams and it is good for the sport," he said.

The California team was unable to play at the UC Irvine Tournament last week, due a tragic fire at a fraternity house in which several players lived, three students died but none were on the water polo team.

The UMass team is looking to regain some of the ground it lost last week when it lost to Slippery Rock. UMass lost two positions in the NCAA rankings this week, falling from 15th to 17th.

"We still need to cut down on the mental errors and maintain intensity, especially against these guys" Yarworth said. "You can't learn any better than learning from the best."

Starters G.T. Ladd and Scott Reed are not in the best of health. Both have come down with a slight flu, but Yarworth is confident that they will be fine for this weekend's festivities.

CLASSIFIEDS

ACTIVITIES

AMHERST COLLEGE guest speaker on Asian Amer studies Shirley Hune at red room, Converse Hall 9-21-90 7:30PM

ANIMAL RIGHTS COALITION meeting on Sunday September 23 at 7PM in the office 306 Student Union

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO JUGGLE? Well neither do I!! Let's go to Juggling Club, 3-6 today, and learn how

GENERAL MEETING for those interested in radio! WOCH is back! 7:00 Webster Lounge Monday the 24th! Be there!

INTERESTED IN KNOWING GOD personally or just good Christian fellowship Campus Crusade for Christ 7:00PM Campus Center

KUNG-FU / KARATE CLASSES! beginners meet Mon-Fri for info call 774-4179 ask for Stuart

PAGAN STUDENTS meeting Sunday night 9/23, 7:00PM CC Rm 805-09 New members welcome!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

AMERICAN INDIAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION meeting Monday September 24, 1990 1:30-2:30PM Josephine White/Eagle Cultural Center in Chadbourne basement freshmen welcome.

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5961

FAST FUNDRAISING PROGRAM $1000 in just one week Earn up to $1000 for your campus organization. Plus a chance at $5000 more! This program works! No investment needed. Call 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 50

OPEN RUSH Iota Gamma Upsilon: A unique sorority. Check us out at open rush on 9/24-5PM 9/25-8PM, 9/26-5:30PM

WANT TO BE A SENATOR? Nomination papers are available through September 26, at the Senate Office, Room 420 Student Union

AUDIO

TWO 200 WATT top of the line Boston Acoustic Speakers. Very cheap. Call 253-2726

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is. 549-6333 6-8PM

1980 BUICK CENTURY LIMITED $750. 665-7492

1981 TOYOTA COROLLA runs well $400 1-734-2987

1982 TOYOTA STARLET $2000 or B/O 535-2302

V8 TRANS AM 83 71500 miles cruise control AC power window seat steering 546-3082

MAZDA GLC DELUXE 86 62K A/C stereo exc condition 3400 or bo 253-2294

1988 FORD RANGER excellent condition 5 speed 40,000 miles $4,800 253-0770

SEIZED cars, trucks, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. c-1675

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

TOWNHOUSE APARTMENT: 2 bedroom, 1½ baths on bus route. Call 1-567-1352 and leave message.

FOR SALE

CHECK OUT ACI'S great deals on Computer Systems, Cables, Hardware, and Accessories. If you're in the market for a 100% IBM Compatible computer, we manufacture a complete line of systems. If low price, high quality, and personalized on-site service are all concerns, no one compares with ACI. Conveniently located in downtown Amherst next to Baybank.

CUBE FRIDGE great for dorms call Julie at 546-3987

KEYBOARD AND MIDI STEPS-fully prog dig. korg DW8000 and seperate keyboard for your feet (right tones midi capab) PWR adapters and Crd include. All for $500 Call Chris snyhn 548-6202

LARGE REFRIDGERATOR (twice the size of most dorm fridges) freezer section, exc cond, will deliver, $90/bo 256-3192

OFFICE DESK nice good cond. $100 or bo Julie 256-0303

ROLLERBLADES size 8.5 hardly used must see $70 or best offer 549-8293

SAX FOR SALE Bundy II Alto student model. Great shape. $500 or best offer 586-3100 ext 4364

SLEEP WITH THE BEST say goodnight to the rest full size futon and frame $150 we'll beat other bozos by 5% Metawampe Furniture 1-WWS-FUTON-1

FOUND

CAMERA outside SUB 9/18 253-3666 Pete

NYLON POUCH in Geossman 64. It is at the C.O. info desk.

FOUR MILLION

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!!!!! —Helen— See you soon!!!! Eddy

HELP WANTED

AIR NATIONAL GUARD part-time membership offers fantastic benefits! Part-time jobs available in a wide variety of career fields. Earn $300 or more your first year! Join your local Air Force in Westfield. Other benefits include 100% free college tuition, G.I. Bill, retirement, free plane travel and more. Men and women without prior service are eligible to join through age 34. Veterans of all services usually eligible into their 40's. Call your recruiter to see if you qualify. No obligation, no pressure. Jobs guaranteed before you enlist! Call anytime 413-568-9215 or toll free 1-800-AIR-9151

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard. Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215

EARN UP TO $20,000 A MONTH! If you are a motivated person, and wish to be an entrepreneur, don't let this opportunity slip past you. A multi-level marketing company is looking for executive distributors. Be your own boss, make your own hours! for more info call 549-4349

FULL TIME POSITION available. Excellent base salary plus bonuses. Fluency in any African, Indian, Korean, or Middle Eastern aspects a plus. Contact Lanny Perron, Metropolitan Life (413)567-1248

NEWSPAPER DELIVERERS needed for UMass dorms. No car required. Mornings 7-8AM. Good pay. 7days/week 253-7009 Evenings

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! 40-80/day! Call Sam 256-6434

PART TIME SALES PERSON wanted for the marketplace. Will train. Call 323-9692

SKI POSITIONS: ski lodge in Alta, Utah Seasonal only, November 1, 1990 to April 25, 1991. Salary, room and board, and ski pass. For application please call (801) 742-3000 between 8:30 to 4:30 mountain time, any day, or write to Alta Peruvian Lodge, Alta, Utah 84092

SPRING BREAK/CHRISTMAS BREAK TOURS Individuals or student organization needed to promote our ski/sun tours. Earn money and free trips to Cancun, Daytona, Vermont, Montreal Call HI-LIFE 1-800-263-5604

LOST

BROWN-RIMMED EYEGLASSES at upper Boyden tennis courts if found please call 6-5186

EYEGLASSES in gray case reward Charrie 256-1170

KEY with UMass bottle opener at intramural fields. Call 8-7304 or 8-2997 if found

MANICURES

SPECIALLY PRICED $5 by experienced UMass student 549-2682

MOTORCYCLES

1984 HONDA SABRE 700CC great cond $1000 or bo 253-7119 leave message

MUSICIANS

ECHO don't say I never call you babycakes! Happy Birthday Love Skatechick

HELP! Established gigging band seeks experienced drummer to join 2 part percussion section for classic to new rock and roll covers and originals. Call Tyler at 253-2949

PROFESSIONAL DJ'S

LAZER TECH AUDIO available for your dance, dorm party, or house party. Great rates, great DJ's. Call 323-7801 soon

$ REWARD $

FOR THE RETURN of 14k gold necklace w/Italian horn charm lost Monday 9-17. Has great sentimental value. If found please call Karen 548-3993

ROOMMATE WANTED

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1224

FOR TWO BEDROOM in Salem Place Call 256-6777 $200

SOUTH DEERFIELD 2 bdrm Apt on bus line $300 665-8230 545-1028

SERVICES

DO YOU NEED SPANISH HELP? Tutoring available for intermediate to advanced call Glovi 549-0071

HAVE YOU BEEN RIPPED-OFF by a retailer? Contact the Legal Services Center regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center 545-1995

HAVE YOU SEEN THE MARKETPLACE? Classified advertising run by students for students. Pay only 5% commission when you sell. Call 323-9692

STUDY ABROAD IN AUSTRALIA information on semester, summer and internship programs. All run under $6000! Call Curtin University 1-800-878-3696

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St. Northhampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

HOW LATE IS TOO LATE to reserve for the holidays- is it worth the risk? 545-0500 Campus Travel- on campus

ONE-WAY American Airlines ticket Hartford-Seattle December 21, 1990 ex. cellent price 1-413-562-2582 (after 3)

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S. Deerfield 10 mins from Amherst. Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr, typing $2/pg 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KComunications, 256-6373

WORDPROCESSING--Fast, Professional Reasonable rates. Free pick-up and delivery. Call Nancy 367-9437

WANTED

HCAC AMHERST DAY CARE has subsidized slots available for children, age 2yrs 9months-5yrs. Parents must be AFDC and Voucher eligible. Call Nancy at 549-5713 or Barbara at 584-4434

SOCCER CLEATS, 8½ mens Kevin 5-1315 or 259-1561

PERSONALS

ANTEATER Happy 2 years! Who would've known that one kiss could lead to all this. I love you and will forever. Frog

CONGRATULATIONS to the new pledges of Delta Zeta Marcy Lauren L. Pam Andrea Susan Lauren G. Nicole Suzanne Tanya Melanie Jennifer Elena and Stacie. Get psyched for an amazing futura with DZ!

DAMAGE INC. I have had one of the most fun, most romantic, most enjoyable years of my life thanks to you. Happy Anniversary of my triathlete metalhead. I love you. Turk

DEAR NUTMEG, I will always remember the days of ping pong tournaments & the nights of watching various sizes of insects meeting their ultimate demise by the neon blue glow of the bug zapper. This basicly means I love you -your sweet Baboo

DEB Have a "mega" Happy Birthday! Break the ten o'clock rule! -Liz

HAPPY BIRTHDAY DANA! You're finally 21!! Have an awesome weekend! Love, Chris, Maria and all of your "buddies" in Webster!!!

HEIDI FROM BAKER! Remember Saturday night at Brandywine? I danced with "only you" Drop by sometime! Ron

JENNIFER LYNN CLARK Happy Anniversary Sorry if I have been a pain, and I'm glad you have been there for me as a friend I do love you!

KIM TOBIN HAPPY 21ST you know what! Be prepared for many hoolihans!! Love Linda, Caroline, Alissa, Jacqui, Joanna, Tiffany, Sue, Katie, and Stacy

SHANNON I met you in the Text B. Annex We walked to the Campus Garage pink shirt/ Valley Books/ no ID- Please leave a - where I can reach you Leave it with Valley Books Thanks Doug

SIGMA KAPPA SISTERS: You guys did me proud! Thanks for all of your help. I couldn't have done it without you. I love you guys! Chisch

THANKS to Rush Chair Tiffany and assistants Amy and Kellie Love the sisters of SDT

THE SISTERS OF SIGMA DELTA TAU are pleased to announce our new ribbonettes Lisa, Christina, Jennifer, Lisa, Rachel, Rosemarie, Amy, Erica, Laura, Dina, Laura, Michelle, Leigh, Lauren, Lisa, Erika, Lisa and Christine

TURK After our first "Tango" a year ago I never would have imagined that we would do so much, go to so many places, or fall so deeply in love. I love you desperately. I long for you always. Happy Anniversary sweetheart

Champagne and roses. Damage Inc

WELCOME AND CONGRATULATIONS to the new Sigma Kappa Ribbonettes: Leslie, Trish, Carolyn, Jennifer, Kate, Kara, Denise, Kristina, Jennifer, Alison, Jennifer, Kristin, Kelly, Kristin

SPORTS

Dartmouth downs UMass; Catamounts tomorrow

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Corresponsdent

How many reruns of this horror movie will the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team have to watch?

By now, the plot has become too familiar to UMass.

Last weekend, the Minutemen stood toe-to-toe with Temple for 70 minutes. But just when you thought it was safe to say 'It's all over,' the Owls struck for two goals and stole the match away from UMass.

On Wednesday afternoon, "UMass Loses Heartbreaker II" appeared in Hanover, N.H., as UMass held a 1-0 lead for 80 minutes, only to lose to Dartmouth in overtime, 2-1.

The Minutemen can't dwell on the loss, however. Tomorrow they take to the road again, travelling to Burlington, VT for a match with Vermont. The Catamounts are 3-2-1, and are ranked third in New England.

"I couldn't have asked for more from my players," said coach Jeff Gettler of the Dartmouth loss. "The game was a level above the Temple game in terms of both our game plan execution and improving on our weaknesses."

The Minutemen had led the match 1-0 since the 25th minute, when Ray Cuhna took a pass from Aaron Zandy, broke in on the net, and slipped the ball past the goalkeeper.

But in the 80th minute, a controversial call in the UMass penalty box gave the Big Green a penalty shot. Danny Sankar connected, tying the game. From that point on, until most of overtime was finished, UMass lost composure while Dartmouth turned up its game several notches, said Gettler.

"No way was that a foul," said Gettler yesterday afternoon. "If they hadn't been given a goal, we would've won 1-0. Period. But after the call, our players just lost it — they were arguing with the referees, they just lost their heads, and Dartmouth just controlled us for about 25 minutes."

The Big Green struck at 116:00 on a chip shot that beat UMass keeper Jon Gruber (13 saves), who Gettler described as "excellent" in goal.

Gettler also singled out Peter McEvoy, Darren Stone, Brett Anthony and Zandy for their efforts against Dartmouth. Gettler called McEvoy's play "brilliant."

Gettler said that the Minutemen regained their composure in the second overtime. However, they were unable to beat Dartmouth's defense in the final minutes.

UVM now looms on the horizon. The Catamounts' season has paralleled UMass' in some ways. "Like the Minutemen, we're a young team who have lost some tough games," said UVM coach Ron McEachen. "We only return three starters, and we're not particularly deep off the bench."

Senior Mark Zola currently leads the Catamounts in scoring, with four goals. Junior forwards Jim Warwuck and David Johnson have three and two, respectively.

Both teams are also suffering injury problems. Johnson and Beall are probable starters for the Catamounts, while UMass' Steve Armenti (possible stress fracture) and Tom Novajasky are questionable for today's game.

"They're a hard, physical team," said Gettler of Vermont. They play a lot of long balls, and they counterattack a lot."

As for today's game plan, Gettler had this to say after two straight losses that could've been wins: "We have to win a game, no excuses."

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Justin Edelman and the UMass Minutemen were beaten in overtime by Dartmouth on Wednesday, 2-1. The Minutemen travel to the University of Vermont tomorrow.

Reds to play top-ranked Wisconsin, George Mason

By CHRIS MIRACLE
Collegian Staff

Collegian file photo

Holly Hellmuth and the UMass Reds are in for a high-flying affair when the nationally-ranked Wisconsin Badgers visit Upper Boyden Field on Saturday. Kickoff is at noon.

For soccer addicts and fans alike, we have just what the doctor ordered as the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team provides a double dosage of action this weekend. The Minutewomen take on the University of Wisconsin Saturday at noon, and George Mason University Sunday at 1 p.m.

Both games will be on Upper Boyden Field.

Striker April Kater enters the weekend within five points of becoming the all-time leading scorer for UMass. Elaine Contant holds the record, with 42 points; Kater now has 38.

Saturday, the Reds face a tough opponent in Wisconsin, ranked in the top ten nationally. The Badgers (4-1) come to UMass after upsetting Colorado College 2-1. Their only loss came at the hands of the University of Portland, who upset he Badgers 2-1 earlier in the season.

"They are an excellent side to go against," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "They're a Midwest team which epitomizes blue collar hard work."

Included in the Badgers' arsenal will be the school's sixth all-time leading scorer, forward Kari Miajala. Another player the Reds must keep an eye is senior midfielder Shelly Gehrke, a good passer who's dangerous when coming forward. Adding to the Badgers forward one-two punch is freshman Erica Handleman out of Evanston, Ill.

"They [Miajala and Handleman] are two of the more mobile pairs of forwards we'll see this year." Rudy said.

On the defensive side, Wisconsin will display three very tall defenders, Susie Holt, freshman Melissa Stobermann and Michelle Coole. In goal will be Heather Taggert, who gave UMass a troublesome time in the playoffs last year.

"As we say, they will be big in the air," Rudy said.

With both teams having experienced players as well as new freshman, the Badgers and the Reds match equally in almost every department. Last year UMass defeated Wisconsin 2-1, which avenged their loss to the Badgers two years ago, a loss that kept the Reds from reaching the national semifinals.

"Wisconsin plays very physical," UMass captain Kim Montgomery said. "We have to fight for everything so nothing is free."

The Reds won't have much time to rest before taking to the field against George Mason on Sunday. The Patriots, ranked among the top-twenty nationally, suffered an early loss to currently undefeated Virginia, but have come on strong recently.

In GMU's lineup, the Reds will face midfielder/forward Debi Fine, a player that UMass also had an interest in. Adding to the quickness of the Patriots are forward Carol Lind from Dixhills, N.Y. and Erin Wingerter.

"They have a very quick frontline," Rudy said. "They attack from forward and behind."

For all teams involved, this weekend shapes up to be very important. On Saturday, George Mason plays another top-twenty team, the University of Hartford. With another back-to-back game schedule like last weekend, the Reds hope to get rid of some of their wrinkles early in the season.

Field Hockey rolls to N.J.

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

During this time of change in Massachusetts — talking about the seasons, the leaves and the government — the University of Massachusetts field hockey team has remained consistent. Philippa Scott continues to shutout opponents, Mara Frattasio continues to bail the Minutewomen out with game winning goals, and the team keeps winning.

The Minutewomen are 4-1, currently riding a three-game winning streak. Wednesday they earned their fourth win of the season with a convincing but nerve-racking 1-0 decision.

The win against Providence was a big one. Up until Wednesday, UMass was a 3-1 field hockey team, but it had not beaten any top-ranked teams. Now, after Wednesday's performance against the number four-ranked team in the nation, the Minutewomen have earned the right to be called a strong 4-1 team.

Saturday, in Piscataway, N.J. the Minutewomen play another top-20 team, Rutgers University.

"Rutgers is our first A-10 opponent of the year," said UMass coach Pam Hixon. "They are another top-20 team, we'll look to at least neutralize their strengths."

The Minutewomen continue to win close games, though they've been unable to blowout any of their combatants thus far. "We've never been a high scoring team," Hixon said. "We may be explosive one day, other days, we'll get only one."

UMass has faced some tough goalies. The most notable being Providence goaltender Debbie Hagie.

"She was outstanding. Against any other goalie, we probably would have had five or six goals," Hixon said.

The Minutewomen continue to corner opponents in their own end, they are averaging nearly 15 shots per game.

"All you have to do is get one more goal than they do to win," Hixon said.

For now, less is more for the Minutewomen. Fewer goals equals more wins.

Sports Notice

Intramurals: Entries for badminton (singles, men and women), Racquetball (men and women), and track and field (men and women), are being accepted through Sept. 24.

Entries for Ice Hockey (men and women) and cross country (men and women), are being accepted through Sept. 26.

Bring all entries to Boyden room 215. For more information, contact Intramural Sports at 545-2693 or 545-0022.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 14

WEATHER

Batten the hatches! Today will be windy, cloudy and chilly with temps in the upper-50s.

NEWS

Cesar Chavez urges student participation in the third table grape boycott. Page 3.

ARTS

The 69th annual Eastern States Exposition wraps up an exciting year. Page 7.

Gov: No more budget cuts

Duke pledges an end to across-the-board higher ed budget cuts

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

After statewide public higher education funding suffered two consecutive 4 percent cuts, Gov. Dukakis promised student leaders Friday that there would not be any further across-the-board budget cuts.

"I care very deeply about these schools and your futures," Dukakis said. "If we have to make another round of cuts, we're going to have to look at other areas in the budget so that there will be no more across-the-board cuts to your schools."

Dukakis addressed the Student Advisory Council to the Board of Regents of Higher Education on the status of the state budget and solicited council members' opinions on expenditures within their school budgets that could sustain cuts.

The council is composed of student trustees and Student Government Association presidents who advise on regents' standing committees.

Although he promised no more across-the-board cuts, he said there will be cuts to individual campuses that may be "very painful." He encouraged the members of the Student Advisory Council to discuss funding problems with their campus administrators and with the Regents.

Dukakis attributed part of the state deficit to a lack of federal monetary support for funding areas such as education.

"Given the softness of the national economy, it is possible that [state] revenues will decrease even further," he said. "We will have to look at Medicaid and welfare funding to see if we can avoid taking funds from public higher education."

The combination of the state paying "massive amounts of aid" while taking severe federal cuts has made the deficit situation more difficult, he said.

"This is the tightest, leanest state budget I've ever been a part of," Dukakis said. "Don't let anyone tell you this [state] is 'fat city.'"

The only two means of funding higher education in Massachusetts is through tuition and taxes, he said. "We've got to raise the cost of education to avoid these devastating cuts," he said.

The state is planning a comprehensive tuition waiver policy which will give each campuses' board of trustees the right to waive tuition increases based on an individual needs basis. The policy will prevent low-income students from being denied access to public higher education.

"Unfortunately, the policy means that [middle class students] will have to pay more," he said.

Dukakis added that if the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition passes in the November election, the state higher educational system will be destroyed through a lack of discretionary funds which are used for education, roads and bridges and human services. CLT supporters are hoping the petition will reduce legislative spending.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Collegian photo by Kendra Pratt

Governor Michael Dukakis

With fee waiver in hand, GEO set for election

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization may well be on the way to attaining the power of a labor union — the power that it has been seeking for nearly a year.

The GEO, an affiliate of the Distrct 65 United Auto Workers, last spring asked the administration to recognize GEO as a union and authorize it to draw up an election agreement which would give it the collective bargaining power of a union.

The administration said it would consider an election agreement only if graduate student employees agree not to go on strike.

The GEO responded with the statement that it will not agree to the "no-strike" clause unless the curriculum fee imposed on graduate student employees — $175 a semester — is waived.

Last week GEO won a major victory when the administration issued a proposal agreeing to provide authorization for GEO Coordinating Committee to draw up an election agreement and to enact a fee waiver for all graduate student employees regardless of their financial need. In return, GEO members had to agree to a "no-strike" clause until April 15.

The proposal also called for the inclusion of a neutral party in an election process which would assure that both sides, the GEO and the administration, will proceed with the election process without "intimidation, coersion, or harassment."

Graduate student employees voted last week overwhelmingly to accept the administration's proposal. The election is scheduled for October 26 and its outcome will determine whether or not the GEO will continue to represent graduate student employees in contract negotiations vis-a-vis the administration.

If graduate employees will vote "yes" on the ballot, the GEO will negotiate with the administration over issues concerning employee policy and practice, and the agreements would be legally binding. If students vote "no" on the ballot, the "graduate student employees would go unrepresented as they have before," according to coordinating committee member Emily Isaacs.

The GEO expects to win the election establishing the group as the representative in negotiations with the administration, Isaacs said. If the GEO gets the nod, negotiations will begin immediately, she said.

In the contract negotiations, several items would be on the priority list, she said. The first will be the issue of curriculum fee waiver for the spring semester, hiring firing practices, grievance procedures, fair wages and reasonable fees and health benefits.

The administration's decision to accept the original GEO proposal was an "enormous victory for GEO," Isaacs said. "It proves that GEO has power in negotiation for their members."

Hussein calls for US to pull out of Gulf

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A flight described as the last U.S.-chartered airlift out of Iraq left Baghdad yesterday, and King Hussein of Jordan called for an early withdrawal of U.S. forces from the Persian Gulf region to prevent "disastrous repercussions."

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq expressed new determination to hang onto Kuwait, which his forces seized on Aug. 2.

Three high-ranking Jordanian officials including a Cabinet minister, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Saudi Arabia had ordered the expulsion of nearly all of Jordan's envoys. Also, diplomatic sources in Saudi Arabia said most Yemeni diplomats were being sent home from Saudi Arabia.

However, King Hussein and the Jordanian foreign minister, Marwan Kassem, denied Saudi Arabia had ordered the expulsions of Jordanian diplomats.

"I have been in touch with our embassy in Jidda as a result of the continuous bombardment on the part of newsmen trying to spread such news item, but there is no such thing. This is not correct," Kassem said.

"I think what really is going on now, and what will go on for some time, is a war of nerves," said Gary Sick, a Middle East specialist and former National Security Council official.

Both sides have toughened their rhetoric in recent days. President Bush has said that Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait "cannot stand" and has declined even to consider diplomatic initiatives until the Iraqi army withdraws. To do otherwise, his aides say, would be to reward Iraq for its invasion.

In Baghdad, Saddam has warned his people of imminent war with the West and has proclaimed that he will fight to the finish rather than give up Kuwait.

State colleges face 3% cut; scholarship accounts affected

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts Higher Education Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery announced last week that state universities and colleges will need to reduce campus budgets by 3 percent instead of 4 percent as originally ordered.

Terry Zoulas, spokesperson for the Board of Regents for Higher Education, said the 27-campus system will face less of the $25.5 million cut because $9 million will be taken out of scholarship accounts.

"Scholarship accounts are our single biggest out-of-campus account," he said. "And this affects both public and private school students."

Commonwealth of Massachusetts state scholarships are available to students attending both private and public colleges. Most are based on financial need.

"Finally the [the student attending the private school] is going to start feeling some of the pain public school students have been burdened with over the years," he said.

Zoulas said the University of Massachusetts at Amherst will share with its sibling universites in Boston and Worchester a proposed reduction of $6,794,515.

When a second 4 percent across-the-board cut was announced Sept. 4 by Gov. Dukakis, the Amherst campus was projected to lose $6 million.

Provost O'Brien said last week that this campus, the largest university in the system, will likely loss $4 million.

O'Brien also said while a spring semester tuition hike is unlikely, administrators are considering imposing a mandatory curriculum support fee of $50 to $500 for next semester.

Campus administrators have the flexibility to cut and slash as necessary to meet budget reductions but Bromery asked in a memorandum that administrators exempt funding for library materials from cutting procedures.

Bromery, a veteran of the state college system, also warned of the unforeseen funding problems the system might have to face.

"As you plan these reductions, please also bear in mind there may also be a need for further reversions [state ordered recall of appropriated funds] later in fiscal 1991," he said in the memo.

Zoulas said as the system has taken financial attacks of nearly $150 million over the past three years a sense of urgency has permeated the higher education system. He said faculty, staff and students have started an slow exodus from the system.

"To quote Bob Dyian, 'there's no need to have a weather vane to tell which way the wind is blowing,'" he said. "We have seen [the trend] here at the Regents office with the departure of [ex-chancellor] Franklyn Jenifer who left for the presidency of Howard University earlier this year."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Mulher
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editors — Amy Henry, Minu Sebastian
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Marc Pruskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Gitone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts

SEE THE WORLD

Student & Faculty Fares
Round trips from New York starting at

London	$370
Paris	410
San Jose C.R.	378
Bangkok	929
Hongkong	849
Tokyo	759

Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change. One ways available. Work/Study abroad programs. International Student/Teacher ID.
EURAIL PASSES ISSUED ON THE SPOT!
FREE Student Travel Catalogue

Council Travel

MUNCHY SALE

SALE

LENDERS BAGELS
Asst. Varieties
89¢
10 oz. Reg $1.12

'PHILLY' BRAND
CREAM CHEESE
49¢
3 oz. Reg 59¢

SNAPPLE
All Flavors
69¢
16 oz. bottle Reg 89¢

Nabisco
TEDDY GRAHAMS
honey, chocolate, cinnamon
$1.69
Reg $1.98

HERSHEY CANDY BARS
Milk Chocolate & Almond, Kit Kat, Peanut Butter Cups
3/99c
Reg 40c ea.

VERY FINE
Juice and Drinks
2/99¢
10 oz. bottles Reg 60¢

DIAL or CAMAY SOAP
2/99¢
3 oz. bar Reg 55c or 65¢

Available at all stores:
Ameri Print film developing

	SINGLE	DOUBLE	4 x 6 DELUXE
12exp	3.19	4.49	4.49
24exp	5.99	8.39	8.39
36exp	8.99	12.59	12.59

"One Day service available"
Kodak color watch system

Prices Valid Through Saturday, September 29th
see store for details

Keep That Great Summer Look

$10.00 OFF

$10.00 OFF

TANNING SPECIAL, 10 Visits for $45 with coupon
Our WOLFF bed really works
Styles By Deborah
The Spa for hair & skin care
549-5610

Amherst's Best Kept Secret

Winners' Athletic Club
- 3 Indoor Tennis Courts
- 4 Outdoor Clay Tennis Courts (2 Convertible to Indoor Clay Courts Starting Sept. 1st)
- 4 Racquetball Courts
- Nautilus & Cardiovascular Fitness Center
- Aerobics

CALL 549-4545 for a free tour
Winners' Athletic Club
Rte 116 Sunderland
(Opposite Bub's BBQ, on Bus Route)
Open 7 Days • 7:00am-11:00pm
Cut and present coupon and pay only
$99 for UNLIMITED RAQUETBALL September—December 8a.m. - 5p.m. daily

$99 Student Raquetball Special
Unlimited Raquetball
8am - 5pm Daily
CLUB WINNERS' ATHLETIC
Rte. 116 Sunderland MA 01059
413-549-4545
C

Would you like to be a part of the group that was responsible for bringing Hunter S.Thompson, Faye Wattelton, Allen Ginsburg, Ntozake Shange, and William F. Buckley, Jr to this campus? Then come to the Distinguished Visitors Program new members meeting on Tuesday, September 25, at 7:00 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803 Come and see who we are bringing this semester, and how you can become involved.

DVP distinguished visitors program

LOCAL

Chavez advocates third table grape boycott

By KATHERINE T. LAMOTHE
Collegian Staff

Consumers must become more involved with the nationwide effort to stop the use of pesticides on grapes, a national union leader said Saturday at the third annual Black Sheep Hot Food, Hot Jazz Festival.

Cesar Chavez, the president of the United Farm Workers union, told the group of over 100 people at the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center that the dangers of pesticide use by food growers in California have increased since the UFW's first grape boycott in 1965, a protest of the use of DDT on grapes. The first boycott ended in 1970.

Since then, Chavez said, there has been a new threat in the form of organophospates, a dangerous group of pesticides which are contaminating the water supply in the San Joaquin Valley where the chemicals are used on the grapes. The union began its current boycott, the third in 25 years, in 1984.

In addition to the contamination of the water, Chavez said, there has been a "cancer cluster" in the San Joaquin Valley towns of Earlimart and McFarland. According to Chavez, the cancer rate among children between the ages of 4 and 12 in McFarland is 800 percent higher than the national average, and the cancer rate in Earlimart is 400 percent higher than the national average. In Earlimart, a lawsuit was recently filed against the state of California by a farm worker, claiming the chemicals aldicarb and atrazine, which are banned in California, caused his daughter's illness.

Chavez said that the boycott is necessary because "we cannot get the state or the growers to stop using the organophospates." He added that attempts to convince the state government to ban the pesticides are useless due to powerful chemical company lobbying groups.

Chavez also said the chemical companies and the growers have strong influences on the media organizations which cause difficulties for the UFW in getting its message out to the public. "We have to warn people, and we cannot do it through the media," he said.

UFW Vice President Roberto De La Cruz, who also spoke at the festival, said that more people, particularly students, are encouraged to help organize the boycott and protests at stores such as Stop and Shop and Bread and Circus, which do not support the boycott.

De La Cruz said students from various schools, such as UMass, Harvard University and Boston College helped the UFW's boycott over the summer.

Erin Miller, a sophomore at Harvard who has worked as a volunteer for the UFW since May, said she became involved with the union because of the strong affect health and labor issues have on the public.

"Everyone has their responsibility to do something about it," Miller said.

She also said that the festival has helped the union gain more momentum and funds. "We're always hoping that supporters will come out," Miller said.

Lisa Nelson, a UMass senior who began working for the UFW last spring, said Chavez's return appearance has sparked students' interest in volunteering, perhaps due to Chavez' charismatic style. "Anyone who hears Cesar speak is hooked," she said.

Chavez also said that participation in the boycott is the most important aspect of the effort, and emphasized that more people are needed to be successful. He added that there is no urgency in getting involved. "Time is our best friend," Chavez said.

According to the festival's organizer, Black Sheep founder Nick Seamon, the festival raised about $3,000 for the union. Seamon said that he puts on annual shows because "Black Sheep is all about having fun with food and we also have an interest in the community," she said.

Collegian file photo
Cesar Chavez

Photo by Janine Mancinelli
RIGHT ON THE NOSE — Members of the UMass Juggling Club practice by the pond.

CLT threatens staff, faculty

MSP president says faculty layoffs possible

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

The stakes are higher, but the tone remains the same: the University of Massachusetts has not heard the last of the budget cuts.

In spite the loss of 285 staff members and 65 faculty members resulting from non-renewal of contracts and hiring freezes over the past two years, administrators and faculty will be forced to cut more faculty members.

According to John Cole, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, there is no where else to cut but within the faculty portion of the budget.

"Eighty percent of the University's budget is in salaries and benefits. Everything else is strictly for energy costs and operating expenses, which have already been reduced to a bare minimum," he said. "The magnitude of the cuts will fall on the employees."

In light of the focus on cutting faculty, the MSP has formulated some alternatives to layoffs to combat budget troubles. "There's a variety of things we've been thinking about," said Cole. "There's been the prospect of faculty contract termination but we just can't tell at this point. Most of the proposals will be presented at the Faculty Senate meeting on Thursday."

Foremost of Cole's concerns is the Citizens for Limited Taxation referendum question 3, which would roll back taxes to 1988 levels and reducing the University's budget by an estimated additional $25 million if approved on November 13.

"There are so many variables to consider," said Cole, of the effects of the CLT petition. "Under the presumption that the CLT passes, the discretionary accounts, which include employee salaries and benefits, would be cut 35 percent."

The equivalent salary amount of 55 faculty members, $5.9 million, has been cut for the fall 1991 semester to offset the first of two 4 percent across-the-boards cuts. If the CLT initiative passes, Cole estimates that 40 percent of the work force would be fired.

"I've pressed the administration for plans, but quite frankly, they don't have any," Cole said. "At this point, the polls show about one-third of the voters in support of question three, one-third opposed, and another third undecided. It's definitely a prospect we'll have to confront as soon as possible," he said.

"The biggest problem with question 3 is no one is willing to deal with it. The general attitude is 'we don't have a plan — if it passes it's the end,'" Cole stated.

Although Cole concedes that the CLT initiative has gained tremendous momentum, he said he has not given up hope yet.

Recyclers hope to expand program

By MARK ELLIOTT
Collegian Correspondent

Coordinators for the University of Massachusetts Residential Recycling program said last week they plan to potentially expand the program to off-campus apartment complexes as well as commence recycling bottles.

"If we get everything out of the residence halls then we'll eventually be doing apartment complexes. When [we start the program in the complexes], I don't know," said Sherill Baldwin, program coordinator.

Meanwhile, program participants will collect bottles and cans in addition to the newspapers already collected.

On October 1, there will be a meeting for volunteers to join the program, Baldwin said, adding that many volunteers have already set up their own collection projects for bottles and cans in their dormitories.

"We're hoping to set up a collection system so we can pick up all the bottles and cans," she said. "We're hoping to get together with people who haven't set up anything and want to set something up as well as people who have already set something up."

Baldwin said although the program was effective last year, she said it still missed a lot of recyclables.

"Last year we got over 64 tons of newspaper. Sixty-four tons is a small fraction of the University's waste at large. The University produces over 5,000 tons of garbage or trash a year and we only took out 64.4 tons of it," she said. "But we're not the University, we're Housing Services so we can see that we took a huge chunk out of Housing Services' waste."

Baldwin said about 16 percent of Housing Services' waste is newspaper, about half of which is collected through recycling programs.

She said some of the residence halls "easily" collected half of the paper they generated. Balwin said the best recovery rates were from Orchard Hill and Northeast, adding that those figures may not be completely accurate.

"You have to look at what buildings are generating newspapers so they can recycle it," Baldwin said. "We've never done a study to see how many buildings are getting the Boston Globe, or the New York Times, or whatever, so we don't know what's there."

Anyone interested in volunteering for the recycling program can call the program at 545-1153 or attend an informational meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in Earthfoods.

Brighton man arrested for stolen van, other offenses

Compiled by PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

Police arrested a Brighton man during an early Friday morning traffic stop for larceny of a van from Nashua, N.H. and six other offenses.

James T. Case, 20, was arrested on Fearing Street for larceny of a motor vehicle, two counts of destruction and vandalism of property, operating after revocation of his license, being a minor carrying alcohol, operating a vehicle without headlights and possession of burglarious tools.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

police log

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Police said Case was charged with a second count of destruction and vandalism of property when he kicked off the inside door assembly of the police cruiser transporting him. Case was attempting to flee the vehicle, police said.

Case was arraigned Friday in Northampton District Court and bail was set at $2,500.

Police said they are cooperating with Nashua Police in their investigation.

In other police reports from Friday's log:

ARREST

● UMass student Bryan K. Culverhouse, 20, of Groton, was arrested Thursday night on Washington Drive for being a minor carrying alcohol.

LEADING EDGE
MODEL "D"
SPECIALS

Includes:
10 MHZ, 84 Keyboard, DOS 3.3
AMBER MONITOR, CLK CAL.
SERIAL & PARALLEL PORTS
SYSTEM PREPARATION

	512K	640K
Single Floppy	$489	$499
Dual Floppy	$569	$579
20 MG Hard Drive	$859	$869
30 MG Hard Drive	$959	$969

Hurry – Special Ends Sept. 30th

VALIDATA:
Mountain Farms Mall • Hadley, MA
586-7405
Free Mouse with Purchase

ΣAM
PRESENTS...

LIVE AT UMASS
FOR MORE INFO. CALL JEFF AT 253-8165

Monday, September 17th: "Pizza Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:00 pm.
Tuesday, September 18th: "Jai-Alai Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30 pm.
Monday, September 24th: "Billiards" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.
Tuesday, September 25th: "Movie & Sundae Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 7:30 pm.
Wednesday, September 26th: "Kentucky Fried Chicken Night" Southwest Horseshoe, 6:30pm.

1990

The Business Card BONANZA

FEMINO LANDSCAPING
Landscape Design & Layout
Retaining Walls
Free Estimates
(413) 549-3664
Peter Femino
(508) 481-7489
5 Ahern Road
Marlboro, MA 01752

JOIN
MARKETING CLUB
University of Massachusetts
This is to certify that YOU are a member in good standing
Contact Ronald Gendron, President
546-4998

LOTS for LITTLES
TOYS · RECORDS · TAPES
Plus new and recycled
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Consignments
256-6825
Mon.-Sat. 9:30-5:30
Sun. 12:00-5:00
201 N. Pleasant
Amherst, Mass. 01002

adirondack music
"THE STEREO PROFESSIONALS" CAR AUDIO
HOME AUDIO
PORTABLES
WALKMANS
ACCESSORIES
SALES & SERVICE
15 East Pleasant Street, Amherst
253-3100

30 percent off with this card
Ray-Ban
AMHERST OPTICAL SHOPPE
(413) 256-6403
195 NORTH PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST, MASS. 01004

HEELS & SOLES
M-F 8:30 TO 5:00
SAT TILL 12:00
PAUL'S SHOE REPAIR
103 NO. PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST, MA 01002
SINCE 1955
KEVIN & PAM GRIMARD

AMHERST HAIR COMPANY
SPECIAL:
20 percent off all services with Veronica
(413) 549-6676
233 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst Carriage Shops
Amherst, MA 01002

Do you own a Business Card?
That's all you need to reach 21,000 readers daily.
Contact the Collegian 545-3500

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Hints from a college veteran

Now that everyone has settled in, here are a few points that you probably have yet to learn in Astronomy 100. Or for that matter, in the Code of Student Conduct, the administration's "this-is-everything-you-have-to-know-about-what-you-CAN'T-do-at-the-University." Here is my list of things to do, don't do and try to do

Preston P. Forman

● Go to class It's a simple thought but something most freshman (I'm sorry I can't use euphemisms such as "new student" it makes me want to read 1984 over and over) forget sometime between the first drunken night of their college career and the first month of school. Any veteran of the college process can vouch for the direct correlation between attendance in class and the final grade in that class.

● Don't be afraid to express yourself, but be afraid to express ignorance. It never ceases to amaze me how one can hide behind the First Amendment to express a thought which is at best racist.

For those coming here from a village of 25 people with no TV or a newspaper, bashing a specific group for whatever reason is no longer fashionable.

Honestly look at everyone as a human being deserving of the same rights as every other human being regardless of their color, religion, sex, ethnic or sexual preference.

And there are no exceptions. At the dining commons one night someone once said to me, "I had this boss, he was a Jew but he was a real Jew, if you know what I mean." He never gave a definition of what a "real Jew" was, but he did not have to explain his thoughts for the intent to be realized.

"Well, Blacks don't bother me," he once said to me, holding his head up with his hand. "It's the niggers I don't like."

Intolerance is ignorance and ignorance intolerance.

● Buy stamps and at least three rolls of quarters. Economics 101: The farther away from the post office the more valuable a stamp is worth. Sometimes an odd stamp or two can even be bartered for goods and services (donuts and computer time).

There is a similar supply and demand curve for quarters–the currency of choice for laundry machines. (It doesn't deserve its own bullet but boys, learn to wash clothes before going to school. It's really tacky and offensive to go "shopping for a girlfriend" to do your laundry).

● If you "don't know how to write real good," learn how and quick. Even students who go into majors "where you don't gotta know how to write," need to know at least the basics. College is supposed to prepare a student for life. Unfortunately, life is working in order to eat and sleep in a warm bed. And there are few high-skilled jobs that don't require some writing.

● Don't drink like a musk ox. As my senior high school English teacher said to me between nightmarish stories of her own children in college, it is a time of great experimentation, diversion and fun. Alcohol is and will always hold a huge fascination for college students. But it is a drug.

And alcohol introduces a deadly element to campuses. This University was stunned last spring by the death of a young man who plunged down an elevator shaft. No one was surprised that he was drunk, in fact, nearly twice the legal limit. As I enter my junior year, I am on my second hand counting friends and acquaintances who have either dropped out or flunked out with serious problems with alcohol.

● It's okay to say "no." Nancy R's whine has been blissfully discredited as an effective means to deal with the drug problem, but it remains a particularly useful catch-phrase for college life.

It's okay to say "no" to any situation you feel uncomfortable let it be drugs, alcohol or even a date. If you don't feel comfortable about a situation, lie, make up a problem, whatever, but trust your inner thoughts and refrain. This is not high school, if you decide that you do not want to go no one will hold it against you.

College is a warm, special way to spend four (or five or six) years. Enjoy it and try to take some of it as your own.

Preston P. Forman is a Collegian staff member

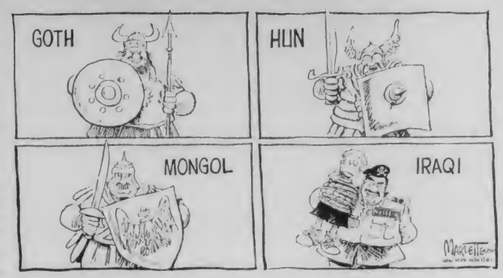
PRIMITIVE SHIELDS



British stereotypes misrepresent

I sympathize with Pamela McCarthy's experience in Sheffield ("We're really not like that," Sept. 19). As an exchange student from England I have the same problem trying to correct American network TV's image of Britain, which seems as narrow-minded as the Miami Vice/Dallas view of the U.S. that we get at home.

Glancing through the TV Guide, for example, I see All Creatures Great and Small, in which there are two types of English people: the upper-class, stiff upper-lipped, jolly old chap veterinarian, or the simple-minded Yorkshire country folk whose lives are fun-filled as long as their pigs get to market before they milk the cows (by hand, of course).

British stereotype number two: Brideshead Revisited, a great favorite among Americans, so I'm told. Jeremy Irons (in soft focus), and assorted private schoolboys float around Cambridge on punts, play cricket, go to cocktail parties and live in stately homes. Laurence Olivier and John Geilgud appear in this, I believe, and you can't get more British than that, can you?

British stereotype number three: I saw a drama called Precious Bane on the weekend, a story of a 19th century peasant girl. When I saw this at home, all the characters had "normal" British accents and here, strangely, it has been dubbed into a particular English dialect which I never heard before, presumably for greater authenticity.

I have also seen various advertisements in the New York Times, for a clothing company called London Fog, featuring "typical" English family walking across London Bridge wearing Burberry raincoats, bowler hats, and, inevitably carrying umbrellas. I have been to London many times and have never seen a bowler hat except perhaps on a tourist mistakenly trying to "blend in" with the crowd.

Of course, the most obvious model of Britishness you get here is our beloved Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. For her I can offer no explanations, just apologies.

Jaqueline Ellis
Southwest
On exchange from Hull University, England

Madson's attack on Everywoman's Center a slap in the face

Ever since the late 60s, and continuing through the Reagan years, we have heard familiar cries from the UMass administration.

"Civility and diversity," "Stop racism, sexism, and homophobia" and "Equal rights for all." These ideals, worn thin and ragged, have slowly begun to rip at the seams. Just ask Vice Chancellor Dennis Madson.

In 1972, the Everywoman's Center was established here, breaking ground in the emerging struggle for women's liberation.

Over the years, it slowly grew to provide programming for women of color, working women, and non-traditional students – as well as many facilities to combat the physical, mental and psychological effects of rape, abortion, incest, domestic violence, homophobia, and much more.

What took over a decade to develop has been pushed to the brink of extinction in recent years. Our vice chancellor may destroy it with one stroke of a pen.

A few quick facts: Madson has proposed to cut the counseling program, reducing Everywoman's to little more than a rape crisis center. His budget (which includes the Center) must absorb a 4.7 percent cut and he has decided to cut Everywoman's by 25 percent.

Rua Kelly

Madson made this decision alone, despite student outcry. What does he care? After all, he will end up with four new staff members after these "cuts".

What does all this mean? Well, for the students already being counseled it means an abrupt end to their emotional healing process.

And for those women counseled for eating disorders, or coping with "coming out" it means more pain and loneliness.

In delivering this blow, Madson also insinuated in a memo that the cut would not affect students health, safety and welfare.

Basically, Dennis Madson denies the most basic element in the struggle of all women that in order to eradicate sexism in our society, women need unique care treatment and protection in the law and the community. (Is this the same man who condemned oppression at last spring's anti-homophobia rally?)

Do not be silenced by the administration call the SGA, call GSS, call the Everywoman's Center, or call Dennis Madson (545-2300). He doesn't think that we care–prove him wrong.

Rua Kelly
Amherst

The most important moment in history is the present

Like justice in our country, democracy has become "How much can you buy?" The Savings and Loans scandal has made it easy to make the connection between campaign contributions and Congressional votes.

On the world level, for Uncle Sam, democracy has become "How much can you bully?" How many guns can you give to Central American governments and "freedom fighters;" how many fighter jets can you give to Middle East monarchies and, how many countries can you invade to impose your will?

At a time when people all over the world are gaining democratic governments, President Bush is rendering the United Nations a second-class citizen through his unilateral actions in the Gulf Crises.

At a time of virulent (not violent, virulent) change, the world needs to act together to overcome turmoil. President Bush should be acting as a member of the U.N., and thereby strengthening it, for now and for the future.

By acting unilaterally, President Bush is weakening the U.N., and deflating FDR's dream of world security through world democracy.

Although this is reason enough for a UN derived settlement of the Iraqi invasion, I can see two others.

One, we cannot afford to act unilaterally. With the S&L bailout, we now have a $2 trillion national debt.

Dennis Kelly

Two, who are we to assume the moral high-ground after recently invading Panama and Grenada and bombing Libya?

Bush's response is not about the sovereignty of nations, it is about oil. The U.S. response is the next logical response in a string of events.

It started with the invention of the automobile, the near extinction of the railroads and then the dashing of 50 miles per gallons. Truly, the crises in the Gulf is not just about oil, it's about money. The people who have a whole lot of it want more.

As the "winds of democracy" blow about the world, we are letting control of our government slip, or be sold, away.

The average illiterate, uneducated and hungry citizen of any Third World country knows more about how we spend our $30 billion annual covert-operations budget better than we do.

With the recent changes in the Soviet Union, the Soviet people have more say in their government than we do in ours.

At the most important time in the history of the world (it's always been the present), we need democracy, both internationally and nationally. We need a world where nations act in coordination and with cooperation, not in subordination and with covert operations.

At home, we need a government where elections are not for sale to the highest bidder, and where federal policies represent the will of the people, not the interests of industry.

And, according to the definition of democracy, we need you.

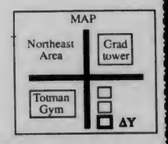
Dennis Kelly is a UMass student

DELTA UPSILON

invites all university men to

OPEN RUSH

MAP



We offer:
- 24 hour kitchen
- Catered food
- Superior social life
- Cable TV
- Lifelong friends
- University and Greek area overall atheletic champions
- Voted Best Philanthropy and Most Improved House

Rush Dates
Sept. 17 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 18 Just DU it. 8:00pm
Sept. 20 • Special Events • 7:00 pm
Sept. 21 Barbecue 5:00 pm
Sept 24 Monday Night Football 8:00pm
Sept. 25 Informal —all day
Sept. 26 Just DU it. 7–9:00pm

MAKE UP YOUR OWN MIND. AMIGA.

MEET THE FUTURE OF CREATIVE THINKING.

Amiga doesn't just improve your work. It improves your thinking. Just working hard isn't enough anymore. Creative thinking is what sets winners apart.

The Amiga computer was designed precisely with that thought in mind. It handles routine tasks, then lets you go all the way to innovation and invention.

Whatever you can imagine, Amiga has the power to produce. Easily.

Its built-in technology is a major advancement in a computer of this size and price range.

With a mouse and simple icons, Amiga combines a full color display, full stereo sound, graphics, 3-D animation, video capability and text as no other computer can.

It has the power to run software sophisticated enough to manipulate vast amounts of data, as well as the creative genius to create the complete score for an orchestral composition.

We deliver today, what others promise tomorrow.

Amiga was designed to keep up with you. In m achnology & demands through career needs.

You'll find standard what other people make optional. As well as sophisticated technology that doesn't exist on comparably powered and priced computers.

Creative educational discounts make Amiga an easy decision.

The Amiga Education Purchase Program for college and university students, faculty and administrators, offers a wide range of fully loaded, specially bundled hardware systems, with a complete system starting under $700.* All include a one year limited warranty and AmigaVision.™

The best way to make up your own mind is to try Amiga.

Stop by your Campus Authorized Amiga Dealer and get your hands on the future of computing.

Sure, some people buy what's standard. But we think you can make up your own mind, and choose your own best course for the future. After all, isn't that what college is all about?

AMIGA
THE COMPUTER FOR THE CREATIVE MIND.
©Commodore

Validata
Mountain Farms Mall
Store 36
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 459-1017

■ Dukakis

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

The petition, which will appear as ballot question number three, would rollback state tax rates to 1988 levels cutting $1.4 billion from the state budget. Since the higher education budget is considered discretionary, colleges and universities stand to take a $126.5 million cut in state-allocated funds.

"I don't buy that the way to save the system is to blow it up," he said. "After two years of steady cutting, if CLT passes, there will be brutal reductions and campus closings."

Although Dukakis said he would not be able to repeal CLT if it passes, because ballot questions are voter-created legislation which legislators would be reluctant to change, he said he would make the budget cutting decisions and propose the CLT reduction plan to the legislature. "I am bound and determined to do everything I can in my last three or three and a half months of my office to turn over a state government which is in a reasonable state before I leave," he said.

Dukakis said he would try to take a strong official stance against CLT, but added, "I'm not kidding myself about my political luck nowadays." Although he would not officially endorse Democratic gubernatorial candidate John Silber at the meeting, Dukakis said Silber should be supported for his strong stance against the CLT petition.

Dukakis said he was surprised at how Republican gubernatorial candidate William Weld has "made CLT the centerpiece of his campaign since he was supposed to have a reasonable intellect."

"One of these two candidates is opposed to CLT and is important for its eventual defeat," he said. "I've known John Silber for a long time and have had my share of difference with him, but Silber has it just right on CLT."

Despite the anger the Massachusetts public has towards the state government presently, Dukakis encouraged student leaders to "forcibly argue" what the consequences of CLT will be for the Commonwealth.

"The future of this state is very bright with the European market," he said. "But we can't do much with CLT around our necks."

The students at the meeting represented the following schools: the Universities of Massachusetts at Amherst, Boston and Worcester; the University of Lowell; Westfield, Framingham, Worcester and Fitchburg State Colleges; Roxbury, Mount Wachusett, Cape Cod, Bristol, Westfield and Holyoke Community Colleges; and the Mass. College of Art.

Living With Herpes

- Do you have herpes?
- Would you benefit from talking with other people who also have herpes?

If you answered yes to these questions block off your calendars and attend this informal discussion

Date	Thursday, October 11
Place	University Health Center. Room 304
Time	6-8 p.m.

For more information call the Health Education Office at 549-2671 ext. 181

MICHAEL'S
Billiard Room & Sports Bar

Featuring Monday Night Football—TONIGHT

- Five 9 ft. Championship Tables
- Your favorite sporting events on large screen TVs
- $1.00 Drafts in ice cold mugs
- 25 cent hot dogs
- Appetizer menu
- This Week: $1 Rolling Rock Bottles
- Thursday is Ladies' Night—Ladies play pool for half price on Thurs. Night

Amherst's Newest & Most Exciting Billiard Room & Sports Bar

Formerly Changes Nightclub
256-8284

11 am to 1 am Daily

21 and older

MICHAEL'S
Rt. 9, Amherst
(Next to Hunan Garden Rest.)

Proper ID required

ARTS & LIVING

69th annual Big E a delight to young and old

By MEREDITH O'BRIEN
Collegian Staff
and SCOTT WEISS
Collegian Correspondent

WEST SPRINGFIELD — Green and yellow lights from the ferris wheel were a constant backdrop in the night sky as the 69th annual Eastern States Exposition wound down to an end yesterday.

While scents of fried food and farm animals hung in the air, cheering crowds and organ grinder music ushered out the last sunny day of the fair, following a rather soggy day which did not dampen the fair's record attendance this year.

But Saturday's drizzly, cold weather, the only rainy day throughout the 12-day fair, did not stop 78,573 people from attending. As of Saturday, fair organizers boasted a total attendance of 857,941. And with yesterday's beautiful fall weather, the Exposition is expected to come close to breaking its 1985 record of 1,109,220.

The Big E — a traditionally agricultural fair which now ranks as the 10th largest fair in the country — draws people for more than simply farm animals and Four-H displays, with a circus, parades, concerts, mid-way rides and pricey (and nearly impossible) carnival games. There was a lot to suit almost anyone's discerning taste.

The six New England state buildings lining one end of the fair grounds always serve as a big attraction to fair-goers. This year proved to be no exception. The buildings are replicas of each state's state house.

The most appealing buildings were the Rhode Island and Vermont buildings which offered not only tasty food, but interesting exhibitions. Heavy scents of clam fritters and other fried shell fish greeted fair-goers upon entering the Rhode Island building, where a 112-year-old lobster was kept near free samples of "Tang-bang," a new, versatile spicy salsa-type dip created by Rhode Islanders.

The Vermont building showed off the state's expertise in its most popular field with a wide array of maple products. The building was filled with tempting smells of maple syrup, cotton candy and hot apple pie, while L.L. Bean pedaled its cold-weather clothes and winter catalogue.

A nearly five-foot high Lego replica of Connecticut's state building with other Lego creations alongside, was housed in the Connecticut building. Connecticut's Department of Environmental Protection displayed a stuffed porcupine (or beaver, we couldn't tell) right across from a Native American "Pow-wow" display of animal skins and pelts.

Maine sported its piping-hot baked potatoes with the works, at more than your average potato price. New Hampshire residents pushed free honeycomb samples and lukewarm apple cider.

The "Massachusetts Miracle" was, once again, no where to be found. While all of the other states had an abundance of free state maps and brochures to bolster tourism, Massachusetts had but one measly camping guide and no maps.

For the die-hard agricultural fans, there was the Farmarama building which housed local produce displays and a 411-pound pumpkin. Another huge attraction in the Farmarama was the "Chick (that's short for chicken) Hatchery" which was said to show 2,160 little chicks hatching during the 12-day fair.

Amidst the bustle of the food venders and craft peddlers was a small replica of an 18th century "colonial village" complete with a little red school house, a blacksmith and old white church.

At the opposite end of the grounds were the carnival rides and games, which were the big attraction to the younger folk (that means teenagers). Unlike the good old carousel and giant green slide, these rides tempted teens and others to queasy stomachs with sexist, cheesy-looking decor to look at. The fair's modern, "high-tech" and not necessarily impressive side, proved to be the only real disappointment.

things are really perkin' at the arts

desk

545-1749

ATTENTION UNIVERSITY MEN

RUSH PHI SIGMA KAPPA

1st Fraternity at UMass

1st to Abolish Pledging

CHECK US OUT!

510 N. Pleasant St. Amherst

FAC PIK

MAHAR

RUSH DATES
Thurs. Sept. 20
Special Event

Mon. Sept. 24th
Mon. Nite Football
with Bu-phi-lo wings

Wed. Sept. 26
Comedy Night

RAZCAL™

NOBODY FAMOUS DRINKS IT.

PRESENT THIS AD AT PARTICIPATING BOOKSTORES & RETAILERS AND GET A CAN OF RAZCAL FOR ONLY 25¢

OFFER GOOD UNTIL 11/15/90
LIMIT ONE CAN PER CUSTOMER

DIET WITH 100% NUTRASWEET

WITH ROOTS HERE AT UMASS, STUDENTS CAN BRANCH OUT TO ONE OF OVER 90 COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES ACROSS THE UNITED STATES THROUGH THE NATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM

INTERESTED?! PLEASE ATTEND ONE OF THIS MONTH'S INFORMATION SESSIONS, FROM 4-5 PM:

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, CC 804
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, CC 804

To be eligible, students must have a minimum g.p.a. of 2.5. (Some schools will require a higher g.p.a.) Students spend either a semester or a year on exchange, paying in-state tuition, fees, room, and board directly to the host school or paying tuition and fees to UMass with room and board to the host institution. For applications, brochures, and catalogs, contact: The National Student Exchange Program, E-26 Machmer Hall, or Phone 545-5351

Saint Louis University's Academic Year in Madrid

COMPLETE CURRICULUM: English, Spanish, Liberal Arts, Business & Administration, TESOL, Sciences, Hispanic Studies

SLU in Madrid is a member of AAEOE

Graduate Courses offered during Summer Session

Apply NOW for Spring, Summer and Fall
More than 1,000 students in the Program.

Saint Louis University in Madrid
Bravo Murillo, 38
Edificio Gonzaga, Planta Baja
Madrid 28015 Spain
Tel: 593-3783

Contact:
Saint Louis University
Study Abroad Coordinator
Admissions Office
221 North Grand Blvd
St. Louis, MO 63103
Toll-free tel: 1-800-325-6666

CONCERNED ABOUT AN EATING PROBLEM

Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia, Compulsive Eating

Help Yourself or Someone You Care About

Presenting: How to Recognize an Eating Disorder In Yourself or Someone Else and How to Help.

When: Wednesday, September 26, 1990

Where: UMASS, Campus Center, Room 917

Time: 3:30-5:00 p.m.

OPEN TO THE FIVE COLLEGE COMMUNITY
No Registration Necessary

For more info: 549-2671 ext. 181

Sponsored by
UMASS EATING DISORDER NETWORK

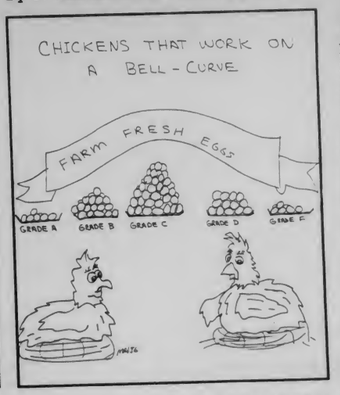
CARRY OUT COUPON
Buy ONE, Get ONE for 99¢
Buy Any Large Pizza Or 12" Pan Style Pizza and Get One of equal or lesser toppings for 99¢!
Good on Carry Out only. Not Good With any other offer. Expires 11-30-90

Open for Lunch and Open to 3AM
DOMINO'S PIZZA
Amherst
256-8911

DELIVERY COUPON
Buy ONE, Large
12" Pan Style Pizza, and get ONE of equal or lesser toppings for $1.99 delivered
In 30 min. or less
Not good with any other offer
Expires 11-30-90

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

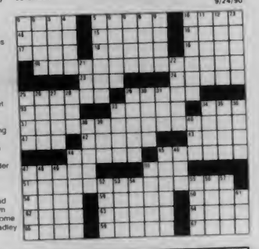
ACROSS
1 Apollo's mother
5 "— Holiday" Hepburn movie
10 Gossip
14 Eden dweller
15 Fill with joy
16 Frau's mate
17 Uncas' beloved
18 Circus star
19 Fox, of a sort
20 Famed African-American diva
23 Farm youngster
24 Deputy
25 New Jersey port
29 Entertain
32 Wings
33 Meadow
34 Busy as a —
37 She wrote "Little Women"
41 Brooks or Ott
42 Sons and daughters
43 Choir voice
44 Savor
45 French city on the Meuse
47 Turkish money of old
50 Norse underworld goddess
51 Famous tennis player
58 Aloud
59 Ask
60 Shut tight
62 Sandy fill, in Devon
63 Mad as a wet hen
64 Words of understanding
65 Fuda feeder
66 Sometime in the future
67 Fender bender

DOWN
1 Resin
2 Ancient Dead Sea kingdom
3 Scarlett's home
4 General Bradley
5 Hold onto
6 Swedish island in the Baltic
7 Family member
8 Solar disk
9 Chump's cousin
10 Buy now, pay later
11 W. German state
12 Malicious burning
13 Ontario river
21 Presidential nickname
22 Stand for a Degas
25 Composed
26 Cosmetic ingredient
27 Type of hammer
28 Agnus —
29 Mindful of
30 Baseball great Willie
31 Diminutive ending
33 Struck
34 Daring
35 — Brute' (author Bierce)
36 Collar or jacket
38 A Belafonte
39 Opponent of 21 Down
40 Vehicle
44 Bank employee
45 Superficial charm
46 Lodge member
47 Dwelling
48 Fathered
49 Carpenter's tool
50 American author Bret
52 — Ludwig (German biographer)
53 Alpine range
54 Part of GED
55 Footnote notation
56 Proboscis
57 Dingle
61 Asian holiday

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

M	O	S	T		A	M	E	S		S	C	O	T	T
A	L	T	I		P	E	L			E	R	R	O	R
M	E	A	N		I	D	L	E		P	E	A	L	E
B	I	G	C	H	E	E	S	E		T	A	L
A	C	E	T	I	C			P	U	M
			E	V	E	S	T		I	M	P	A	L	A
S	H	A	M	E		H	A	Z	E		U	L	A	N
P	E	R	I		C	O	W	E	D		F	I	N	O
A	R	A	L		E	N	I		O	F	F	E	E	N
R	A	N	K	L	E		T	A	R	N
			T	O	T	U		A	C	C	O	S	T
T	A	B	O	O		P	U	T	T	E	E	R	L	Y
A	S	I	A	N		O	M	I	T		A	F	A	R
C	E	A	S	E		A	B	E	L		Z	E	N	O
T	A	S	T	Y		T	O	R	E		E	R	O	S

9/24/90



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
BBQ Beef on a Bun Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Fried Chicken Pineapple Ham Steak
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Falafel Pocket Sandwich Grilled Cheese	Potato Mushroom Delight Fried Chicken

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

WELL I HAVE TWO WISHES LEFT. THE LAST ONE WAS A DUD
I'M SO HUNGRY I OH I WISH I WERE AN OSCAR MAYER WEENER
I'VE NEVER SEEN RICH SO UPSET.

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

A SMALL RED SPACECRAFT BREAKS THROUGH THE CLOUD COVER OF MYSTERIO SYSTEM PLANET 6!
AT THE CONTROLS, IT'S NONE OTHER THAN OUR FEARLESS HERO, SPACEMAN SPIFF!
PILOTING OVER THE LIFELESS WORLD HE REFLECTS ON HIS UNUSUAL MISSION...
QUIZ
1. 6+5=__
...TO SOMEHOW CRASH PLANETS 6 AND 5 TOGETHER!

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

—my weekend? Why, it was Great! INCREDIBLE! God, I didn't stop partying! and the women! I couldn't keep track! Jeez, my weekend was probably illegal!!
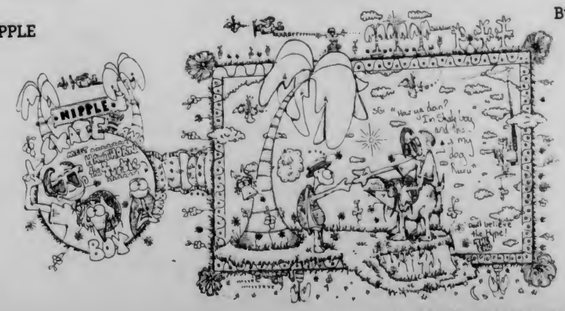
—yeah, well, so what if I'm lying. All you guys do the same thing.

NIPPLE
By PITT



YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The creative urge is very strong. Take the initiative at work. Your mental powers will compensate for any physical disadvantage. Money and friendship do not mix now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Devote more time to routine tasks. Catch up on paperwork and answer a backlog of mail. Pay bills when due to maintain your credit rating. Self-improvement projects are favored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new beginning can involve others. A partnership or support group can be especially rewarding in terms of sharing ideas. Give yourself a gold star for wrapping up old business fast.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Gems must be mined, cut and polished before they are shown to potential buyers. The same goes for certain creative ideas. Your speech and actions are unusually abrupt now. Be more diplomatic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Career and financial success beckon. Keep your eyes open for new investment opportunities. Be careful if making a bid for more power. Meet a challenge creatively instead of rushing off in a huff.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pay more attention to details. Solicit the advice of respected professionals and read all pertinent literature. Family activities could be interrupted by visitors. Be patient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your social plans require some letter-writing or long-distance phoning. Good news arrives in the mail. If snapdash or easily irked this afternoon, find a spot to be by yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Playing host to a group gives you an opportunity to display our skills. You may have to buy new clothes for a special occasion. Become a comparison shopper. Purchase sale items whenever possible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Challenging conditions call for inventiveness, not anger. Friends can help smooth the way in settling a family matter. Forget past grievances and focus on the future. The tide suddenly turns.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Much can be accomplished if you take the initiative in business. Ideas exchanged over lunch or dinner can be highly profitable. Balance the checkbook and leave heroics to others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): By sharing your plans with others you will gain valuable support. Do not expect potential allies to instantly agree with you. Minds could be changed later. A close friend lifts your spirits.

PICES (Feb. 19-March 20): Whether you suddenly feel stingy or generous, think long and hard before you act. This goes for your affections as well as your cash. When an idea hits, try your hand at writing.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Meredith O'Brien
Copy Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Layout Technician.....Rick Seto
Photo Technician.....K.A. Burke
Production Supervisor.....The Rickster
Typesetter.....Quimby Quimby
Production.....Jody Gabin, Jennifer Arnold, Tania Ivany, Terry Starmer

TWISTERS TAVERN
The Uptown Alternative!

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL BUFFET

10' BIG SCREEN TV!

Rolling Rock$1.50 Beck's $1 .75
Cuervo Margarita $2.25

30 Boltwood Walk•Amherst•253-2663

The UMASS Theatre Guild announces

AUDITIONS for

Sweet Charity

September 28, 5 p.m. - 11 p.m.
September 29, 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.
September 29, 5 p.m.- 11 p.m.
163 C Campus Center

Callbacks September 30th
General Meeting September 26 at 7 p.m. 906 CC
All questions will be answered

GMAT
LSAT
GRE
The Test Is When?
Classes Forming Now.

STANLEY H. KAPLAN
Take Kaplan or Take Your Chances

GMAT classes begin 10/24
LSAT classes begin
10/7 at Smith College
10/9 in Amherst
GRE classes begin
10/7 at Smith College
10/18 in Amherst
549-5780

Dr. Jo-Anne Thomas Vanin
Dean of Students/Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs
and
The Staff of the Dean of Students Office
Cordially invite you to

THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
OPEN HOUSE

Wednesday, September 26, 1990
10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.
Room 227 Whitmore Building
Refreshments will be served

THE LAUNDRY CLUB
The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!
8 am-11 pm • 7 days

★ Self-Service Wash & Dry
★ State-of-the-Art Machines
★ Drop-off Serivce
★ Appetizers & Munchies
★ Big Screen TV
★ Pool Table
★ Senior Citizen Discount

wash 1.50
dry .25¢ (8 Minutes)

With this ad
$1.00 OFF ANY SIZE WASHER
Limit One Per Customer
Expires Oct 7, 1990

Dry Cleaning

6 University Drive/Next to Louis Foods/Amherst (413) 549-2640

Glen's HAIR'UM SALON

A Creative Hair Salon Specializing In:
Wave Nouveau • Leisure Curl • Care Free Curl • Weaves
Extensions • Braids • Colors • Permanent Waves
• Dreds • Design Cuts • Men's Toupees

If Your Hair Is Not Becoming To You Then You Should Be Coming To Us!

139 Dwight Street
Springfield, MA 01103
(413) 734-4234

228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 549-3999

■ women's soccer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Yellow cards and fouls punctuated the game as it continued into overtime. Those carded included Lind, Kiely, sophomore Kelley Harlow and head coach Jac Cicala, all of George Mason.

"Today we played much better to the ball [than Saturday's match]," Rudy said. "We're still struggling with our finishing . . . but we've got to be patient."

■ field hockey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

"I'd hope we get into the top 10," Hixon said. "The way we've been playing, I think we have a good chance to move up."

UMass tries to keep the trend going on Wednesday when they host Yale at Totman Field. Looking past Yale, the Minutewomen battle rival Old Dominion Saturday at Northeastern.

charlie's
1 Pray St., Amherst—549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open til midnight
Game Room with 2 pool tables

Tonight 10c Mozzarella Sticks
9:00p.m. — 12:00a.m.

Drink of the Week
Rum and Coke $1.75
Beer of the Month
Foster's Lager $1.75

Food Giveaways
Mon. 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9pm-12am
Tues. 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9pm-12am
Wed. 25cent Pizza Slices and 99 cent Nachos 9pm-12am
Thurs 10 cent Beer Steamed Baby Franks 8pm-10pm
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9pm-12am
WE ACCEPT MC-VISA-AMEX

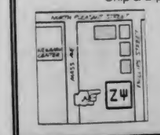
RUSH
ZETA PSI
ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

Tuesday Sept. 25
Pizza Party

Wednesday Sept. 26
Dr. Able & Condom Night

Thursday Sept. 27
Chip & Dip Night

All Events 8-10 PM



ZETA PSI
23 PHILLIPS ST.
256-6845

PAT METHENY
ROY HAYES•DAVE HOLLAND
ACADEMY OF MUSIC, NORTHAMPTON
Thu. Oct. 4, 6:30 and 9:30, $25, 22, 18.50 Adv.

RICHARD THOMPSON SOLO
Iron Horse Music Hall
Wed. and Thu. Oct. 3 and 4 7 and 10 pm $20, 16 adv.

Michael Hedges
Academy of Music
Sun. Nov. 4 7 p.m.
$18.50 adv.

Presented by: 93 WRSI IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 CENTER ST. NORTHAMPTON MA 01060
All Tix at 586-8686 2nd Floor Thornes Northampton

CLASSIFIEDS

DROP OFF THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER BY 2:30 PM FOR NEXT DAY PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE • 20¢ WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

GENERAL MEETING for those interested in radio! WOCH is back! 7:00 Webster Lounge Monday the 24th! Be there!

TRAIN WITH US!! Learn self-defense & teamwork Tae Kwon Do meets Mon. Wed 6:30-8:30PM Call Marty 8-7003 Marie 6-1622

TRI-SIGMA SORORITY welcomes university women to rush! 9/24 5:15-6:00PM for dinner! Call 549-3811 or Come check us out!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

$29 TO BOSTON
is too much.
People from the UMass community are needed to testify at a public hearing in Boston on Tues Sept 25 in support of cheaper, more direct transportation to Boston to compete with Peter Pan mega transportation and witness fee provided Call 582-1320

AMERICAN INDIAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION meeting Monday September 24, 1990 1:30-2:30PM Josephine Whiteeagle Cultural Center in Chadbourne basement freshmen welcome

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5961

DON'T EAT BAD FOOD! Eat fresh Bruegger's bagels, subs, ice-cream, frozen yogurt, and munchies at Greenough Snack Bar

OPEN RUSH
Iota Gamma Upsilon A unique sorority Check us out at open rush on 9/24-5PM 9/25-6PM, 9/26-5:30PM

RECYCLE THOSE BOTTLES AND CANS!!! Get involved in the Residential Recycling Program's Pilot Project- collecting bottles and cans in the residence halls first meeting Monday 9/24 7:00Pm Commonwealth Rm. Earthfoods for more info call 545-1153

AUTO FOR SALE

1978 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is 549-6333 6-8PM

1980 BUICK CENTURY LIMITED $750. 665-7492

1981 TOYOTA COROLLA runs well $400 1-734-2967

SEIZED cars, trucks, boats, 4-wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA Available your area now Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext C-1675

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

ONE BEDROOM APARTMENT 177 N Pleasant St. Quiet $445 per month includes heat 256-3457

TOWNHOUSE APARTMENT: 2 bedroom, 1½ baths on bus route Call 1-567-1352 and leave message

FOR SALE

ATTN: SPORTS TEAMS: Sports equip, uniforms, apparel available at low prices I'll beat any local sports store Call Brian, 546-8102

CHEAP STUFF /Desk & chair $25, computer hutch $25, mattress & boxspring-free 8' x 9' beige rug $5 253-7536

DO IT ALL NIGHT!
on a full size futon with frame
$150
Metawampum Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON-1

KEYBOARD AND MIDI STEPS-fully prog. dig. korg DW6000 and seperate keyboard for your feet (eight tones midi capab) PWR adapters and Crd include. All for $500 Call Chris anytim 549-8202

ROLLERBLADES size 8-5 hardly used must see $70 or best offer 549-8293

SELLING T-SHIRTS? Buy your plain shirts cheap. Call Brian, 546-8102

FOUND

LEATHER JACKET in Manor Auditorium Wed Sept 19th. To claim call 546-5158 and give description. Ask for Keith

HELP WANTED

EARN $300 to $500 per week reading books at home. Call 615-473-7440 Ext B-281

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK
helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard Send for free information. American Financial Services 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C Boston, MA 02215

EARN UP TO $20,000 A MONTH!
If you are a motivated person, and wish to be an entrepreneur, don't let this opportunity slip past you. A multi-level marketing company is looking for executive distributors. Be your own boss, make your own hours! for more info call 549-4349

FULL TIME POSITION available Excellent base salary plus bonuses. Fluency in any African, Indian, Korean, or Middle Eastern dialects a plus. Contact Lenny Perron, Metropolitan Life (413)567-1248

ONE MOTIVATED STUDENT wanted to market national financial aid service on campuses. Honest effort will yield high returns. Leave message today 201-245-3521

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! 40-60/day! Call Sam 256-6434

PART TIME SALES PERSON wanted for the marketplace. Will train. Call 323-9692

SPRING BREAK REPS!!! Earn $3000 in your spare time. Become part of a team and sell the best spring break trips on campus. Earn free trips and unlimited cash$$. Call TAKE A BREAK now and earn a $100 signing bonus!! (800)328-SAVE or (617)527-5909

LOST

EYEGLASSES in gray case reward Charlie 256-1170

MOTORCYCLES

1984 HONDA SABRE 700CC great cond $1000 or bo 253-7119 leave message

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
"subs" salads "spaghetti"
tall special
large cheese $5.99
small cheese $3.50
up to 2 toppings only
$1.00 more
must mention this ad
549-8098 549-6073

PROFESSIONAL DJ'S

LAZER TECH AUDIO available for your dance, dorm party, or house party. Great rates, great DJ's Call 323-7801 soon

$ REWARD $

FOR THE RETURN of 14k gold necklace w/Italian horn charm lost Monday 9-17. Has great sentimental value. If found please call Karen 548-3993

RIDE WANTED

RIDE WANTED to Long Island for Friday Sept 28th- will share costs. please call 546-5192

ROOMMATE WANTED

$200 GORGEOUS VICTORIAN STYLE apt in a house. A place to call home. Vegetarian and females preferred, but not necessary. Call Marie 253-3189 ASAP

FEMALE NONSMOKER to share room in Puffton $142/mo 549-0038

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt Call 549-1724

SOUTH DEERFIELD 2-bdrm Apt on bus line $300 665-8230 545-1028

SERIOUS STUFF

CHARVEL 475 special 2 Jackson 2100 bi level single coil & Jackson 250 BC Humbucker Rosewood fretboard & pre cbs fender twin and new mesa boogie power tubes & echoplex hardly used with sound on sound & chandler tube driver pedal & dod hardrock distortion dod noisegate mxr micro amp & Dan Armstrong electric bass Call 584-7679 Asa for Tim give best offers Bye

SERVICES

HAVE YOU SEEN THE MARKETPLACE? Classified advertising run by students for students. Pay only 5% commission when you sell. Call 323-9690

PREGNANT?

Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St Northampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

HOW LATE IS TOO LATE to reserve for the holidays- is it worth the risk? 545-0500 Campus Travel- on campus

ONE-WAY American Airlines ticket Hartford-Seattle, December 21, 1990, excellent price 1-413-562-2582. (after 3)

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S. Deerfield 10 mins. from Amherst Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr. typing $2/pg. 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg. Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications 256-8373

WORDPERFECT- spellcheck fast accurate and reliable Call Tim 548-5472

WORDPROCESSING--Fast Professional Reasonable rates Free pick-up and delivery. Call Nancy 367-9437

WANTED

NCAC AMHERST DAY CARE has subsidized slots available for children age 2yrs 9months-5yrs. Parents must be AFDC and Voucher eligible. Call Nancy at 549-5713 or Barbara at 584-4434

PERSONALS

DENNY,
Thanks for the salad!
Wall Flower

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIP? 545-0500 Campus Travel- on campus

HEY JIM L., Yeah you!
Here's the personal you've always wanted. I guess I'll be seeing one with my name on it anyday now, right? I love you very much!
Love Kathy HPPL!

HOPE
Welcome to UMass
Happy Birthday
Love Ed

OKIE
This personal is for you. It may mean whatever you wish.
Carrotface

SHANNON
I met you in the Text B. Annex
We walked to the Campus Garage pink shirt/ Valley Books/ no ID.
Please leave a - where I can reach you
Leave it with Valley Books
Thanks
Doug

THE SISTERS OF CHI OMEGA love their new pledges! Michelle, Laura D., Donna, Jen, Renee, Lauren, Laura R. and Carolyn. Congratulations! We love you

THETA CHI CONGRATULATIONS on regaining your charter. We are glad to have you back. Love the sisters and pledges of Chi Omega

WATCH OUT EVERYONE
Helene Fox is 21 today!
Happy B Day foxy lady!
Luv Jen

SPORTS

Women's soccer stalls record at 3-2-1

By ADRIENNE MATT
Collegian Staff

To say they had a disappointing weekend may be an understatement, but the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team (3-2-1) is not mentally defeated yet.

The Reds opened the weekend matches against Wisconsin, dropping a 1-0 loss, and finished the series tieing George Mason at 1-1.

Collegian photo by Toni Sandys

The Reds lost to Wisconsin (1-0), yet tied George Mason (1-1) in this weekend's series.

Wisconsin decided the rainy game 18 minutes into the first half when junior Kari Maijala intercepted a pass in the UMass backfield. Maijala took a shot on the goal, hitting the post. Freshman Erica Handleman tapped the deflected shot in for the first and only goal.

"We knew they were going to look for that tying goal," said Wisconsin coach Greg Ryan. "The play was very physical and intense."

"We didn't play a first half," said UMass coach Jim Rudy. "We waited until halftime to play, then we slide tackled and took challenges to the ball."

Junior Heather Taggart started in goal for the Badgers, completing the game with six goals, 21 for the season. This was her fifth shutout.

"We tried to hang with them," said Ryan. "I felt like we stayed organized and held them."

"They fight and scrap," said Rudy. "They were good at holding the lead."

Handleman was later issued a yellow card for a late hit on the goalkeeper, Skye Eddy. Eddy finished the game with five saves. Wisconsin had 11 fouls to Umass' 10; they had eight cornerkicks to the Reds' three.

The clouds literally cleared for UMass on Sunday as they faced George Mason in a physically aggressive bout.

George Mason, on a three-game losing streak, had just been shutout by Hartford (5-0) on Saturday.

On a throw-in at the right corner, senior Sue Gaudette sent the ball infield to Kathy Woodside who returned it to her. Gaudette tapped the ball to sophomore Kim Eynard who finished the goal three minutes into the game.

The Reds were caught with a scramble in their box 10 minutes after the first goal. Sophomore Carol Lind was assisted by freshman Amy Kiely to complete the scoring of the game at 1-1.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Men's soccer falls to Vermont, 1-0

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team is getting hurt.

The Minutemen have lost more than just three straight games. They have lost two of their better players as well, adding to an already lengthy injury list.

And after falling 1-0 to Vermont in Burlington, Vermont, the slumping Minutemen now visit Northeastern (4-1) at 7 p.m. tonight at Parsons Field. The Huskies are ranked 10th in New England.

Junior midfielder Dan Lawrence will be unavailable to the Minutemen until he fully recovers from a viral infection. He fainted after UMass' overtime loss at Dartmouth, and was diagnosed as being ill on Thursday. In addition, junior defender Darren Stone suffered a broken nose during the second half of the Vermont game. Playing at midfield in place of Lawrence, he caught an elbow in the nose and was forced to leave the game.

If Stone's nose is broken badly enough to be set, he will have to sit out up to six weeks. He will definitely miss tonight's game, as will midfielder Tom Novajasky and keeper Steve Armenti.

The Minutemen did not play well in the first half of the Vermont match, said coach Jeff Gettler.

"We did nothing in the first half," he said. "We weren't aggressive, we weren't cohesive — it was like our first preseason match of the year. We din't have much of a team concept."

The Catamounts struck for the game's only goal at 33:04. Jon Warwick sent a long throw-in in front of the goal, where Stefan DelValle flicked it into the net.

"It was a nice goal," said Gettler. "There wasn't much that [UMass keeper] Jon Gruber could do."

The second half was a different story. UMass flat-out dominated the Catamounts, spending most of the second half on Vermont's side of the field.

"We won every loose ball, and Gruber made some big saves to keep us in the game," said Gettler of UMass' second half play. "But our offense couldn't finish. We had our chances, but we couldn't connect."

Gettler was not happy with his team's first-half malaise.

"We wasted 45 minutes. I don't know why - 20 minutes into the game, I asked myself 'Why is this happening?'" he said. "It's not that Vermont threw anything at us we didn't expect. I've got no answers, only questions."

Northeastern presents a challenge for the Minutemen.

"This is easily the best they've been since we've played them," Gettler said.

Field hockey jousts Rutgers

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

Another game and another win. Just another day at the office for the University of Massachusetts field hockey team.

In what is becoming a repetitive tune, and one that UMass coach Pam Hixon and players hope to continue, UMass extended it's winning streak to four games with their latest win over Rutgers 4-0.

The only thing different about this win for UMass was that they put it away early. Beth Thornton scored twice in the first half, and Mara Frattasio added one to give the Minutewomen a commanding 3-0 lead at halftime.

Thornton's first goal was unassisted, while her second came on a penalty corner in which Frattasio and Berardinelli each assisted. "We played a real solid first half," Hixon said. "We started a little slow, but we put pressure on Rutgers. I was a little worried that they may have a let down after the Providence game, but they didn't."

Hixon said in the second half UMass may have let down, after they established a big lead, but were able to chalk up one more goal.

Kerri Fagan blasted a shot off of a penalty corner which found it's way to the back of the net. Holly Hockenbrock and Berardinelli each assisted on Fagan's first of the year. The goal put the Minutewomen up by a substantial 4-0 margin.

"Rutgers was a top 20 team which we had to beat," Hixon said. For UMass it was another chance to prove themselves against a top 20 team. Once again, as has been the case throughout the first six games of the season, the UMass defense held the opponent in check, and the offense scored enough goals to win.

In fact, the offense was superb on Saturday, according to Hixon. They finally broke out of what may be considered an offensive slump with four goals, the most that they have scored in one game all season.

"We're doing what we need to do to win," Hixon said "We are trying to play the best field hockey we can. We're trying to establish consistency."

Consistency has been hard to come by in the world of field hockey.

"It's been a funny week, and a strange start to the season. Northeastern lost to Harvard and then beat Temple. Providence beat North Carolina, and then North Carolina turned around and beat Old Dominion," Hixon said. Others may be having trouble playing consistent field hockey, but not UMass. The Minutewomen have put it in cruise control. They are playing with a world of confidence, and making timely plays.

The defense has been near perfect thus far. Only Iowa was able to sneak one by Philippa Scott. The offense has been very aggressive, attacking the ball, with avengence.

When the rankings come out this week, UMass stands a good chance of moving up into the top 10, since they beat Providence and Rutgers.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Success at home may decide AL East title for Red Sox

AP photo

New York Yankee Oscar Azocar (left) received the "Latin American Sport" award for young ball players before the game between the Yankees and the Boston Red Sox. Boston's Tony Pena posed with Azocar at Yankee Stadium yesterday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Bolton, starting instead of Roger Clemmens, lasted only 1⅓ innings Sunday as New York beat Boston 5-4 to send the Red Sox to their eighth loss in 10 games.

The Red Sox began the day tied for first place in the American League East with Toronto, which faced Cleveland. Boston plays eight of its last nine at home, including three against the blue Jays next weekend, while Toronto plays its final nine on the road.

Clemmens, sidelined since Sept. 4 with severe tendinitis in his right shoulder, was scratched Saturday night because of continued tenderness. The Red Sox led Toronto by 6½ games when Clemens last pitched, but are 6-12 since.

Bolton (9-5) gave up three runs and five hits in losing his third straight start.

The Red Sox blew a chance to tie the score in the eighth. Reliever Eric Plunk walked Ellis Burks leading off and Mike Greenwell followed with a triple that made it 5-4. But Plunk struck out Dwight Evans and Mike Marshall and got Tona Pena on a groundout. Greenwell had two doubles and a triple.

Mike Witt (5-8) yielded three runs, two earned, and eight hits in seven innings for the victory. Dave Righetti got the last three outs for his 34th save in 37 opportunities.

Wade Boggs went 0-for-5, each time making an out to end an inning. He grounded out with a runner on first base to end the game.

The Red Sox scored in the second inning when Burks singled, moved to third on Greenwell's double and Evan hit a sacrifice fly.

Bolton walked Jesse Barfield leading off the second, Hensley Meulens singled and Rick Cerone tied the score with a single. Randy Velarde's hunt single loaded the bases and Alvaro Espinoza's groundout put the Yankees ahead.

Roberto Kelly chased Bolton with a single to make it 3-1. The Yankees added a run in the fifth off Dennis Lamn on Steve Balhoni's RBI double. The Red Sox took advantage of some poor fielding to score tow runs in the seventh. Marshall's routine grounder to third was hobbled by Velarde for an error and Pena followed with a double.

Pinch-hitter Phil Planteir's high drive to left field was lost by Mulens in the sun for a two-run double. With pinch-runner Jeff Stone on third, Witt got out of the jam by getting Carlos Quintana and Boggs to ground out.

The Yankees made it 5-3 when Steve Sax hit his fourth homer with one out in the seventh off Wes Gardner.

The Red Sox won the season series 9-4 from New York, winning all seven games at Boston.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 15

WEATHER

Today, clouds will turn to sunshine. Temperatures will be 65 to 73 degrees.

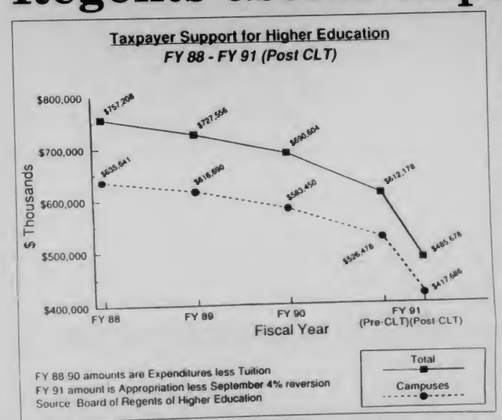
MULTICULTURE

Racist slurs against African Americans continue from Japanese official. Page 7.

ARTS

Anna Regina Santiago amplifies Filipino voice in review of A Rustling of Leaves. Page 8.

Regents assess impact of CLT petition



By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

The Board of Regents of Higher Education last week estimated the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition could cut state-allocated funds to public higher education by $126.5 million.

The CLT petition will appear as question number three on the November 6 election ballot. The referendum question would, if passed, rollback income tax revenues and state fees to 1988 levels and rollback other taxes to the August 1989 levels. Proponents of question three, such as the Citizens for Limited Taxation and the Massachusetts High Technology Council, view the petition as a way to curb legislative spending.

The petition will not rollback any tuition or fee increases which have been levied in the last three years. However, the regents' report stated public colleges and universities would face a 20.7 percent cut in their total fiscal year 1991 budget.

The figures used by the regents reflect a conservative estimate of how CLT could impact public higher education. Their estimates do not take into account the double effect that CLT could have on the budget because the rollback would happen mid-year.

A mid-year budget cut could reduce funds that have already been allocated, thus making reductions more severe.

The regents did make a general assumption that 45 percent of the higher education budget could be exhausted before the CLT petition would be put into effect on December 6, 1990. The petition would therefore cut 38 percent of the higher education budget before the start of spring semester.

"We feel that even in using the most conservative figures, the impact will be horrendous to public higher education," said Terry Zoulas, spokesperson for the regents.

The regents are limited by state campaign laws which forbid state agencies from using state funds or facilities to promote a political objective, he said.

"We wanted to put forward the most dispassionate analysis possible so we don't cry wolf," he said.

The regents do not wish to have their figures questioned as being exaggerated since credibility is an important factor in an election in which the voters distrust the government, he said.

The report stated the figures released are for analytical purposes only and do not necessarily reflect how the regents would decide budget cuts if CLT passes. The following figures represent a hypothetical

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

UMass basketball star remains in critical condition after being struck by car

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts' all-time basketball scoring leader was in critical condition Monday after he was struck early Sunday morning by a car while walking on North Pleasant Street near Furcolo Hall, which houses the School of Education.

Lorenzo Sutton, 25, of Amherst, was in the intensive care unit at Bay State Medical Center in Springfield with head injuries, a nursing supervisor said.

Sutton was transferred there from Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton were he was originally taken after the 2:20 a.m. accident.

Police said a 21-year-old Framingham woman was cited in the hit-and-run accident for leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and driving to endanger. Police refused to release the name of the woman pending further investigation.

After responding to a report of a car accident, police found Sutton lying in the travel lane of North Pleasant Street.

Sutton was living in Amherst while training for the upcoming season of the Continental Basketball League's Albany, N.Y. Patroons, said Sam Berg, a friend of Sutton who worked with him at the Hampshire Mall.

He said Sutton was the last player cut from Detroit Pistons during the 1989-90 camp. In the 1989-90 CBA season Sutton played with the Charlestown Gunners, before he was traded to Quad City, Iowa and then to Albany.

Berg said Sutton, who lives at Puffton Village Apartments, was planning to live in Amherst where he had many friends and commute to Albany during the basketball season.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

De Klerk's progress noted

By TERENCE HUNT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Monday praised South African President F.W. de Klerk for making "dramatic progress" toward abolishing White supremacist rule and vowed the United States won't impose new conditions for lifting economic sanctions.

"These conditions are clear-cut and are not open to re-interpretation. And I do not believe in moving the goalposts," Bush said about sanctions imposed in 1986 over President Reagan's veto.

Bush also said all political groups in South Africa "have a special responsibility to support the process of peaceful transition."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

AP file photo

Bush shakes hands with F.W. de Klerk

Boston Church of Christ expands its ministry to UMass

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles regarding the Boston Church of Christ

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

College and university administrators nationwide are grappling with what have been called "cult-like influences" bombarding students on their campuses. The University of Massachusetts is no different.

It may happen as you are rushing to catch a bus, it may happen as you are feeding ducks at sundown by the Campus Pond or it may happen as you find yourself at the lowest point you've experienced in recent memory, but there is a dual guarantee involved: it will happen again and you are not alone.

The stages are similar and predictable: an approach by another student asking whether you would like to join a Bible study group. Not an unusual nor very threatening proposition in a University that calls itself home to a vast array of ideas and ideals. However, as one cannot judge a book by its cover, there are certain concerns that have arisen surrounding what the Boston Church of Christ is about.

History

The Churches of Christ are an American denomination that can trace roots to the early 18th century and a preacher — Alexander Campbell. Campbell had a dream, The Restoration Movement. In his dream-turned-reality, church members would pattern their lives and worship after the church of the New Testament. After 150 years, membership in the Churches of Christ grew to 2,500,000.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

For your information is a calendar listing of local announcements and upcoming events published daily by the Collegian as a public service.

All submissions must be typed and submitted to the News desk at least one full day before publication. We reserve the right to edit for space.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25

Certification— Graduate students interested in seeking certifiication for Supervisior/Director, Principal/Assistant Principal, or Superintendent/Assistant Superintendent can enroll in the Administrative Certification Program from Monday - Thursday, 12:30 - 4:00, or by appointment through John Gooden at 545-3563.

Meeting— The Finance Investment Club will hold its first general meeting of the year on Tuesday, September 25, 1990 at 7 pm. Meet in the SBA Lobby. Find out abut our plans for the semester, and sign up for the Collegiate Investment Challenge. New members welcome. All majors encouraged to attend.

Meeting— MassPIRG will hold its General Interest Meeting on Tuesday, September 25 at 7 pm in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union. Work to pass the state-wide Recycling Bill, educate elementary school children about environmental issues, fight hunger and homelessness, and register 5,000 new voters as well as GOTV for the elections. At 8:00 p.m. attendees will "canvass the campus with the goal of getting 1,000 students to "pledge-to-register" in one hour on October 2, or 3, at the voter registration drive to be held in the Cape cod Lounge from 10:00-3:00.

For more information, contact Aaron B. Rome, Kira Sanbanmatsu, or Marlo Doherty at 545-0199, or Aaron B. Rome at 323 4862.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26

Open House Meeting— P.O.W.E.R., (The Progressive Organization for Women's Equal Rights) will be holding an open house meeting on wednesday, September 26 from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. at their new office, SU 306. The major foucus this semester will be working to save the Everywoman's Center, as well as continuing to work on other women's issues and rights, such as campus safety and the right to abortion. Snacks and drinks will be served, and announcements will be at 8:00 p.m.

Panel Discussion— "The Persian Gulf Crisis Analyzed by Five College Faculty". Sponsored by Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAUWSS). 8:00 p.m., Smith College, McConnel Hall 103 (Clark Science Center, College Lane).

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27

Workshop— There will be a study skills workshop for older undergraduates held at Thursday, September 27, at 4:30 p.m. in Campus Center 811. All students are invited to attend.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst MA, 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demaster
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editors — Amy Henry, Minu Sebastian
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Marc Pruskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Girone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation, 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

Correction

The Collegian incorrectly reported yesterday on the University of Massachusetts Residential Recycling program It will only recycle on campus. The Collegian regrets the error.

GMAT
LSAT
GRE
The Test Is When?
Classes Forming Now.
STANLEY H. KAPLAN
Take Kaplan or Take Your Chances

GMAT classes begin 10/24
LSAT classes begin
10/7 at Smith College
10/9 in Amherst
GRE classes begin
10/7 at Smith College
10/18 in Amherst
549-5780

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St.
Northampton, MA
Tel. 584-2812
COMPLETE LINE OF IMPORTED AND
CLOVE CIGARETTES

READ UP TO 25,000 WORDS
A MINUTE!
PhotoReading
• Reduce reading time
• Improve comprehension and retention
• Cover more material in less time
• Extract key concepts from books in 2-3 minutes
• Enhance your memory
Begins October 12
Student discount/payment plans available
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!
call 413/259-1248 for information
New England Institute for Neuro-Linguistic Programming
RFD #3, Pratt Corner Road, Amherst, MA 01002-9805

Student Trip To ISRAEL
December 26 - January 9
Hosted by Hillel's Program Director, Yehudit Heller.
Cost: $1349 (Includes El Al Flight, all other travel, overnight accommodations, sightseeing tours, two meals/day, and more...)
Important 1st meeting:
Wednesday, September 26, 7:30pm/Hillel House (388 N. Pleasant St.)
If you are interested but unable to come to this first meeting, please call 549-1710.

charlie's
1 Pray St., Amherst 549-5403 • Open 11am
7 days a Week
Kitchen open til midnight
Game Room with 2 pool tables
Tonight 10c Buffalo Wings
9:00p.m. - 12:00a.m.
Drink of the Week — Rum and Coke $1.75
Beer of the Month — Foster's Lager $1.75
Food Giveaways
Mon. 10 cent Mozzarella Sticks 9pm-12am
Tues. 10 cent Buffalo Wings 9pm-12am
Wed. 25cent Pizza Slices and 99 cent Nachos 9pm-12am
Thurs 10 cent Beer Steamed Baby Franks 8pm-10pm
Sunday 10 cent Potato Skins 9pm-12am
WE ACCEPT MC-VISA-AMEX

MASSPIRG
General Interest Meeting at Earthfoods,
Sept 25th 7 p.m.
Hunger and Homelessness, Recycling,
Voter Registration, Elementary Education
Come to the campaign to register
'1,000 in One Night'

LOCAL

Arab-Israeli strife lingers

Workshop exposes conflict's human aspect

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff

There is an inherent tendency in diplomatic circles to assume that once a peace process gets underway, substance will follow, according to Jay Rothman, Director of the Program in Pre-Negotiation at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

When it comes to the resolution of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict this approach cannot work; once the substantive issues creep in, they put an end to the peace process, he said.

Rothman, who spoke yesterday to several faculty members from the Departments of Judaic and Near Eastern and Legal Studies at Hillel House, said that the Israelis and Palestinian Arabs will come to a negotiation only after each side articulates and reframes its grievances.

In an effort to help bring the two sides to a negotiating table, Rothman has set up a Conflict Resolution Workshop at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. The workshop brings together centrist Arabs and Israelis who articulate the respective side's "hidden" motivations for being in a conflict.

A human dimension is a hidden dimension behind conflicts and it is often overlooked by politicians, said Rothman.

"Conflict is about scarcity of territory, competition and aggression," he said. "But it is also about the threatened human values and concerns, such as fear and control over destiny."

Rothman said that in his workshops, accusations of both sides come out. Palestinian Arabs say they feel like "their dignity has been crushed" and they want to be assured that "their grandchildren will not be crushed or imprisoned."

Israelis, on the other hand, say that they are people with a harsh past and that they want peace and security and a guarantee that they "will not have to fight another war after war," Rothman said.

The six to 18 people who participate in the workshops are community and business leaders representing the Palestinian Arabs and Israelis, respectively.

Rothman hopes that the participants, after understanding the depth of the motivating factors behind the conflict, will go back to their political leaders and influence policy making.

"Once the content and the process is decided upon, a path to a negotiating table is paved," Rothman said. He added that although he is not overly optimistic, he believes a solution will be arrived at.

Collegian photo by Richard Ducree

IT'S FOR SALE — The Brooklyn Bridge

Administration could close 10 academic departments

By JULIA SEREBRINSKY
Collegian Staff
and The Associated Press

Two top officials at the University of Massachusetts have proposed reducing and even closing down about 10 academic departments to save money.

Tenured faculty would be protected but some faculty contracts would not be renewed under the cost cutting plan, according to a letter sent Monday by Provost Richard O'Brien to Faculty Senate members.

O'Brien and President-Chancellor Joseph Duffey will offer the proposal to the Faculty Senate on Thursday.

The administrators said that they will not implement the economy measures without consulting professors, even though they do not need the Senate's approval.

"We prefer to pursue approaches which have broad support of the faculty," O Brien said.

The cuts might have to be made without faculty approval if the Citizens for Limited Taxation petition passes in a November Ballot, according to O'Brien.

If the petition passes, the UMass-Amherst budget will be cut by 40 percent.

At a Faculty Senate meeting two weeks ago, O'Brien said that the administration would prefer to reduce rather than terminate an unspecified number of academic programs.

He added, however, that if CLT passes, the administration will reconsider an option for termination of several departments and academic programs.

If adopted, the cost-cutting plan would call for UMass administration to come up by October 11 with a list of about 10 departments that would reduce their operation over the next three years. Some of those programs would also close by 1993.

The basis for selecting the programs would include the number of undergraduates taught and the standard of teaching. That basis will be determined by the Reallocation Committee which is made up of deans, faculty and campus administrators.

Reductions would be made by not renewing the expired contracts of non-tenured faculty members and by not refilling vacancies created when professors retire or leave for other reasons.

According to the letter sent to the Faculty Senate members,the current level of cuts permit the administration to respect the principle of tenure. This principle, if violated, would harm the University and hamper its ability to recruit in the years ahead.

The letter also said the reduction plan is needed "in order to avoid continued starvation of academic units" across the board.

By 1991, the UMass faculty will be more than 10 percent less than its 1988 levels, it said.

Board plans to tag beer sales

Selectmen want to ban sale of Amherst kegs

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

Amherst town officials considered a proposal at last night's Select Board meeting that will require package stores to place a tag with a serial number on all kegs they sell and to record the purchaser's name, address, and age in an attempt to identify keg buyers.

The regulation is designed to curb underaged drinking by helping police trace adults who provide alcohol to people under the drinking age of 21. However the policy will not be implemented unless other towns in the county adopt the measure, said Amherst Police Chief Donald N. Maia.

Stores will collect a $50 deposit in addition to deposit requirements already intact for each keg purchased. The $50 deposit will be routed to the town's Drug Abuse Resistance Education program if the keg is returned without a tag.

Confiscated kegs will be matched with serial numbers to determine responsibility for alcohol violations. "It would be open to law enforcement officials to identify who bought a keg through the band numbers," Maia said.

According to Maia, keg venders do not object to the provision if it is county wide, since otherwise the fee would drive business out of Amherst. "Local package stores don't object at all. They don't have a keg business so they'd much rather sell cases," he said.

Maia also suggested a by-law banning kegs in Amherst, though he admitted the futility of the measure if the surrounding areas in the county do not comply with the proposal.

"We're looking into the possibility of banning kegs altogether in Amherst by either this spring or next fall at the latest," said Maia. Kegs could not be possessed in Amherst without a license if the keg banning measure succeeds.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Free Woman's School created in Northhampton

By JULIET JORDAN
Collegian Correspondent

The "Free Women's School," a feminist project created by a group of 10 women from Northampton and the surrounding communities, will be offer free classes in October in Northampton.

Suzanne Lagrande, a spokesperson for the school, said, "The school is a good alternative to education in a traditional setting.

"There is a lot of information women can't get access to because of the cost. The school is a chance for women to share skills with other women who normally couldn't get it."

The school was modeled after a free women's school in Cambridge, Massachusetts. It aims to replace concepts such as "expert," "uneducated," "success," and "failure," Lagrande said.

"Women of all races, classes, sexual and cultural identities have skills, knowledge, and insights to share," Lagrande said. "Through sharing their resources and learning to teach theselves, they become more self-reliant and confident."

"The school is a place where information is freely shared," Lagrande and the group said. "All of the women's knowledge is valued. We hope through the school to foster connections among women that benefit us all as individuals and as a community committed to positive change."

The first session of classes will range from basic auto repair, feminist theory, and printmaking to Black women's literature, getting through the welfare system, and self-defense.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Program pairs students with veterans for academic credit

By MARK HENSLEY
Collegian Correspondent

In a program organized by a University of Massachusetts student, willing student volunteers can receive academic credit as well as an opportunity to help the community.

The program, coordinated by Alton Nichols and run in cooperation with the University Honors Department allows students to earn one credit by working two hours a week with veterans at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Northampton.

Students involved in the program work with veterans who lack social and occupational skills due to psychological conditions resulting from their wartime experiences, he said.

The students help the veterans work in greenhouses or with other light vocational tasks, but the emphasis, Nichols said, is on "interpersonal interaction rather than labor." Begun last year by UMass alumnus Christian Carino, the program worked so well that Nichols, who participated last year, decided to keep it running.

"It was probably the best spent two hours a week of my college career," said Nichols. "It gave me a chance to observe a real life therapy program and compare it to what I had learned in class."

While working with the veterans, students talk to them about their war experiences, their interaction with the Veterans Administration, and about their problems with fitting into society. The veterans, Nichols said, also show a genuine interest in the students' lives and often ask questions.

"Not only did I make some excellent friends with veterans," Nichols said, "but it benefited the veterans too. College sutdents bring an energy and vitality to the veterans which they would not normally receive."

Nichols said that the Veterans Administration staff, including Doctor Paul Lapuc, the counseling psychologist,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Fire alarm incites brawl

By PRESTON P. FORMAN
Collegian Staff

University Police arrested a 17-year-old University of Massachusetts student for disorderly conduct after a disturbance broke out in front of a Southwest Residence Hall during an early Saturday morning fire alarm.

A fight started outside the John Adams Residence Hall apparently between students bothered by the disruption, police said. The fight briefly subsided then erupted again in the lobby where Walter J. Burke, of Concord, was arrested for disorderly conduct.

Police and the Amherst Fire Department responded to a small trash room fire early Friday afternoon on the 18th floor of the Kennedy Residence Hall.

Don Robinson, director of Environmental Health and Safety, said a maintainance worker apparently emptied a trash can containing smoking materials into a trash tote.

He said EH&S has classified the fire as a careless disposal of smoking material.

Police also placed a 19-year-old UMass student in protective custody early Saturday night after investigating a report of two persons by a backhoe near University Health Service.

When police arrived at the scene, they discovered one of the students on the backhoe with the engine running and the wheels of the machine spinning. The student was placed in custody.

The names of persons placed in protective custody are not released in the police log.

In other police business from the weekend log:

ARRESTS

- Michael R. Byrt, 24, of 273 Montague Road, Amherst, was arrested Friday evening on Eastman Lane for operating a vehicle after the right was suspended.
- James E. Benedict, 18, of Plymouth, was arrested Friday evening in Lot 50 for being a minor carrying alcohol.
- Jonathan M. Henriques, 18, of Pittsfield, was arrested Friday evening for various alcohol violations.
- Donald E. Huber Jr., 19, of Worcester, was arrested early Saturday morning on North Pleasant Street during a traffic stop for operating under the influence of alcohol and operating a vehicle with defective equipment.
- A Public Safety officer on patrol Saturday evening stopped a vehicle that crossed over the lawn of the Lederle Graduate Research Tower. Douglas James Ellison Jr., 18, of Ashfield, was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol. He was also charged with disorderly conduct after he became combative when taken into custody.
- Aaron M. Francis, 19, of Boston, was arrested Saturday evening in John Adams for various alcohol violations.
- Police arrested Duane E. Clark, 22, of Feedinghills, at the Saturday night Phish concert in the Student Union Ballroom for trespassing. Clark, a non-student, had been previously barred from University property, police said.
- Walter Lang, 28, of Livingstone, N.J., was arrested Saturday night at the bus stop outside of Hasbrouck for trespassing and being a disorderly person.

■ accident

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

A 1988 graduate of the University with a degree in interior design, Sutton is UMass basketball's all-time leading scorer with 1,718 points. During his senior year, he served as co-captain and led the team in scoring with 19.4 points per game.

■ kegs

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Select Board Chairman Elisa Campbell recommended several measures including raising the deposit to discourage keg parties. "The biggest hole in the policy is that it only covers kegs. I would like to do something similar with cases," said Campbell.

The Board's decision on the band proposal awaits a report from Chief Maia due out in December. If the proposal is approved, the use of the serially numbered bands will be mandated in January of 1991. Use of bands will be on a voluntary basis during the interim period until the law goes into effect in January.

The measure has already gone into effect in Granby and both South Hadley and East Hampton are currently considering the regulation.

■ sanctions

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

That statement appeared aimed at African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, who refused during a meeting with Bush in June to forswear violence.

De Klerk, the first South African leader to visit the United States since 1945, assured Bush that the process of reform is irreversible.

"We will not turn back," de Klerk said.

The leaders met at the White House for two hours, first in the Oval Office and again over lunch. The meeting was a showcase of U.S. political support for de Klerk's efforts to guide South Africa toward a post-apartheid democratic system.

"Clearly, the time has come to encourage and assist the emerging new South Africa," Bush said at a farewell ceremony, standing alongside de Klerk in front of the sun-drenched South Lawn. Behind them, a Black Marine held the flag of South Africa; a White Marine held the American flag.

But Bush said that despite "the dramatic progress that we salute here today," South Africa hasn't moved far enough to meet the conditions for removing economic sanctions.

South Africa has not released all political prisoners and has not lifted the state of emergency in the Natal province. Further, it has not repealed a population registration act that is a key element in the system of racial apartheid.

On the other hand, Bush said, "The move away from apartheid toward a new political reality is indeed irreversible and much has already happened."

AIM HIGH

LAND WITH AIR FORCE ROTC AND WATCH YOUR CAREER FLY.

As an Air Force ROTC cadet, you can land yourself in a career with an element as a pilot, navigator, missile officer – as an Air Force officer. You will gain an education in leadership as you work toward your degree. You'll learn to command with confidence. You may also qualify for scholarship programs that help pay for college. When you graduate, you can exchange your tassle and gown for an Air Force uniform – and watch your career take off.

Call

CAPT RODLY J. MILLET
413-545-2451

AIR FORCE ROTC

Leadership Excellence Starts Here

CARRY OUT COUPON
Buy ONE, Get ONE for 99¢
Buy Any Large Pizza Or 12" Pan Style Pizza and Get One of equal or lesser toppings for 99¢!
Good on Carry Out only. Not Good With any other offer. Expires 11-30-90

Open for Lunch and Open to 3AM
SORRENTO PIZZA
Amherst
256-8911

DELIVERY COUPON
Buy ONE, Large
12" Pan Style Pizza, and get ONE of equal or lesser toppings for $1.99 delivered in 30 min. or less
Not good with any other offer. Expires 11-30-90

CONCERNED ABOUT AN EATING PROBLEM
Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia, Compulsive Eating
Help Yourself or Someone You Care About

Presenting: How to Recognize an Eating Disorder In Yourself or Someone Else and How to Help.
When: Wednesday, September 26, 1990
Where: UMASS, Campus Center, Room 917
Time: 3:30-5:00 p.m.

OPEN TO THE FIVE COLLEGE COMMUNITY
No Registration Necessary
For more info: 549-2671 ext. 181
Sponsored by:
UMASS EATING DISORDER NETWORK

WE WANT YOU !!!
to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER

If you're a ...
1. Full - Time Undergraduate
2. Not currently on a judicial sanction
3. Above a 2.0 cum
4. Interested in Judicial Affairs

Important Dates:
October 2nd and 3rd
7-9:30 p.m.
Tue: Room 19-Boyden Gym
Wed: Room 253-Boyden Gym

Attendance is required at both these sessions.
Application Deadline: September 26

APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE at
* Your cluster office
* Dean of Students Office - 227 Whitmore

Questions - Call The Dean of Students Office
545 - 2684

EDITORIAL/OPINION

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

I'll tell you who I am

"You've totally blended yourself into the whole American culture. You dress LIKE THEM, you speak LIKE THEM, and, therefore, you think just LIKE THEM." — as if ALL Americans (and ALL White people, while you're at it) have some sort of leprous disease. How many more times am I going to hear that?

Anna Regina Santiago

What defines an expert? Does being female mean she knows everything there is to know about the feminist movement? Or that she even sympathizes with any of its ideals? Should one assume that all women can never be sexist? Should one think that ALL men are chauvinist because SOME of them are?

Are ALL Americans to be judged by the actions and rhetoric of SOME of them who are obviously narrow-minded and bigoted? Are ALL "people of color" necessarily free of racism themselves? If you answer yes to any of these, you're not even close to being in any realm of reality.

I have had just about enough of proving to White people that I can speak just as well as I can write in English. No, it is not my mother tongue. But, yes, I can do both just as well as the next English-speaking person, if not better.

And I'm even more sick and tired of hearing it from "people of color." Am I less of a Filipina because I am not dating a Filipino? Am I less patriotic because I don't write about the Philippines every chance I get? Why don't I march around with a placard around campus, lambasting those who colonized the Philippines for almost 50 years and who continue to act like the world's police to this day? I grew up.

Amherst, Mass. has become the battleground for people who supposedly spurn racism — or, for that matter, an -ism of any kind — but turn around in the same breath to call ALL Americans imperialistic bastards and turn on a fellow "person of color" when her behavior is less than overtly anti-American or her words are not colored to seek retribution for the wrongs done to her country.

I am a "person of color" from the "Third World" — as if my name and country of citizenship haven't already given it away. What qualifies one to presume that I know nothing (thereby making me completely incapable of any rational and logical thought) about the "Third World" simply because I don't hang out, drink coffee and lament the world's problems with the "politically correct" in the Blue Wall everyday? Because I don't write column after column oozing with self-righteousness and political ego-stroking?

University life has been made less pleasurable by this swarm of Know-It-Alls who interpret everything as an issue of skin color. Guess what? It's not. I could go on and on about the many things in life that are just inescapably determined by the pigment of our skin. But there are many other things that aren't. Eating, for instance. Or talking for the sake of getting along, and not for any other reason.

Should Americans then walk around with their heads bowed in shame, as if their skin were the proverbial scarlet letter? Are we all going to do to others whatever bad has been done to us?

If you're working for justice, or even just hoping for it, don't turn around and call EVERY American an imperialistic pig or go around pointing accusing fingers at every other "person of color" who doesn't live her life filled with bitterness and hatred for "those White people."

Most of all, don't even begin to tell me I don't know anything about the "Third World" because my closest friends and allies are White. I live my life the same way you'd like to think you live yours: by making it a little bit better, a little less burdened by discrimination or, at least, trying AND giving others the chance to try with me.

Don't tell me anything about myself. I'LL tell YOU who I am.

In the meantime, lighten up.

Read Anna Regina Santiago every other Tuesday

Silber's win a 'shocker'

Massachusetts has become a basketcase.
— George Will

Well, George, you got that right.

After last week's primary, in which democratic voters chose on-leave Boston University President John Silber as their best candidate for governor, this state has solidified its place in the gutter of the nation.

Meredith O'Brien

How voters could have fallen for this "new thinking" and outsider image that Silber projected is really a mystery to me.

After his insensitive thrashings of so many different communities in this state, coupled with his severe private education bias (proposing to triple UMass tuition while funneling public money into private schools such as BU, the school most threatened by the larger and more vocal UMass-Amherst), Silber's primary success only proves to the country what a bunch of self-centered and narrow-minded people Massachusetts residents really are.

Silber appeared on This Week with David Brinkley Sunday blaming the media, particularly the Boston Globe for attempting to slant or control the election against him. Throughout the summer Silber whined that he was continually being quoted out of context and was not being given enough space to clarify his message.

So what did the scholarly Silber do? He stomped his feet, refused to attend any more Globe forums and declared he would only engage in a debate with his democratic foes if there was live television coverage. That way, he asserted, he could not damage his campaign by uttering any spontaneous "Silber shockers" without time to actually clarify what he meant.

Then comes a debate with defeated Democratic candidate Frank Bellotti. Live television. And what did Silber do? He told a reporter he did not deem it appropriate to give a speech in Roxbury (a predominantly Black community on the South Shore) about his crime proposals because it would not be worth giving a speech to "a bunch of drug addicts."

And he did not clarify a thing.

During his brief stint on Brinkley, Silber spent a vast majority of the time blaming the press for his mistakes, for his own words.

To think that Silber is the best the Democratic party could come up with. To think that there are enough people out there who think Silber is an innovative thinker who could revive this state and get it on track. To think that this very same man who called this state a welfare magnet to Cambodians, who proposed to give medical care to children instead of the elderly who are already "ripe," who dubs himself "the CLT petition with brains," who called the BU English department a "damned matriarchy" could conceivably become governor?

Yes, Silber is indeed an innovative thinker. Yes, Silber is free from a fear of speaking his mind and telling people what he really thinks. Yes, he is an outsider to the political establishment.

So what? Just because one airs one's bigotries and biases in public does not warrant one qualified to be governor. Just because one can convince enough people to overlook a mouth that flaps too much and too quickly and utters statements no legitimate politician would ever think of uttering does not mean one is capable of competent and fair leadership.

John Silber may be a brilliant man, but brilliance does not mark one's leadership abilities. If John Silber is elected governor in November, Massachusetts voters will not only be casting their votes for an innovative thinker but a narrow-minded and bigoted one as well.

Maybe that's the type of people this state is composed of. Maybe Silber really is a reflection of the electorate. If so, George Will is the master of understatements.

Read Meredith O'Brien every Tuesday.

Film review tainted by bigotry

I am writing in response to the review of the movie May Fools by Will Georgiades (Sept. 14). I was prompted to write not by the fact that I heartily disagree with him regarding its merits and appeal, but because I found his review to be littered with slanderous and bigoted remarks.

First, he attempts to belittle and smear the French with such statements as: "That the French have twiddled their thumbs, eaten to obesity and come up with a number of interesting variations of coitus over several hundreds of years does not a great nation make" and ". . .it's not hard to see the same leering old man behind the camera here, being quietly amusing to justify the greatest love of the French: little children."

These statements are not only juvenile and culturally biased (the inference being that Mr. Georgiades can pass judgment because his nation is great and the ultra-slim people of his nationality would never stoop to leering at children), but have absolutely nothing to do with May Fools.

I am also angered and terrified by his categorization of people as "useless" based on age and testosterone level. I am angry that such oppression persists, and I am terrified by the implication that other groups could be singled out and consigned to the margins in a similarly random and unchallenged fashion.

Viciousness and nausea are words that I would apply directly to Mr. Georgiades' views and his means of expressing them.

Peg Giffels
Amherst

'English-only' laws present unjust barrier to society

The fact that some Americans believe that an official language is needed to conduct its educational, governmental and financial affairs is a prime example of the ethnocentrism that runs rampant in the United States.

In the Bill of Rights, all citizens of the United States are granted freedom of speech. Nowhere does it say anything about what language should be spoken by those people. Of course, English has prevailed because of the fact that this country was once an English colony, and because European-Americans make up the majority of the population.

The future, however, presents a different outlook. The number of Latinos entering the United States grows every year, and, by the beginning of the 21st century, their numbers will have increased so much that Whites will no longer make up the majority of the population.

This is a fact that scares many people in authority positions across the country. Seventeen states currently have laws stating that English is to be the states' official language of public affairs. Is it just a coincidence that four of these states — Arizona, California, Colorado and Florida — have some of the largest Latino populations in the country? It is also true that these laws do nothing to improve the political or cultural stability of those states?

Instead, they promote segregation between those who are native speakers of English and those who are not. In Los Angeles, some hospital workers are warned that if they are caught speaking a language other than English, they will be terminated immediately. In another instance, a librarian was fired for stocking foreign language newspapers.

Kristin M. Bruno

Now, it doesn't seem to me that these states are trying to become linguistically integrated, but are making it difficult for non-native speakers of English to function in society. How are the racial tensions supposed to be alleviated when one historically dominant group is allowed to speak their native language and others are not? Whites already dominate political, economic and social areas. Must they dominate linguistic areas, too?

My point is certainly not that newcomers to the United States should not try to learn English, but adapting to a new environment is difficult. Why make it harder by outlawing that person's native tongue?

The ultimate end to this initiative is an immigrant population that is crippled in all aspects of society by a language barrier set up by law. By allowing immigrants to function in their native language, we give them the opportunity to make the transition of living in the United States easier for them.

As a foreign language major, I understand how difficult it is to function in a language that is not one's native tongue. When I was studying abroad, I spoke French all day. At the end of the day, I was mentally exhausted from the strain.

There were also times when I was so emotionally worked up that it was impossible for me to express my thoughts in a different language. The most frustrating aspect about studying a foreign language is that, no matter how long you study it, there is always something you won't understand.

No matter what kind of education or training someone receives in English, a non-native speaker will still always have problems with the language. Making English the official language of the United States will not change that.

Kristin M. Bruno is a UMass student

There's a good reason your Collegiate Reps know how students think.

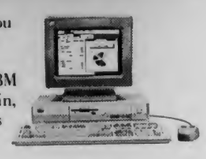
They're students.

When it comes to knowing what it takes to get your work done, Collegiate Reps know where you're coming from.

They can demonstrate how easily you can use an IBM Personal System/2® to write papers and create graphics and spreadsheets for your classes. They can answer your questions and help recommend the right match for you from the affordable line of IBM PS/2s.

To find out what an IBM PS/2 can do for you, come in, or call someone who thinks just like you do.



Come meet your UMass IBM Collegiate Representatives, Andy, Bruce, and Russell at the IBM PS/2 Fair today and tomorrow in the Campus Center from 10:00 to 3:00.

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

Open: M-F 9-5
Sat. 10-3

IBM

This offer is available only to qualified students, faculty, staff and institutions that purchase IBM Selected Academic Solutions through participating campus locations. Orders are subject to availability. Prices are subject to change and IBM may withdraw the offer at any time without written notice. ®IBM, Personal System/2 and PS/2 are registered trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation.
©IBM Corporation 1990

MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS

Another racist slur by Japanese official

By ALEXANDER NGUYEN
Collegian Staff

Seiroku Kajiyama, Justice Minister of Japan, at a news conference on Friday, Sept. 21, compared "prostitutes in Japan to Black Americans who move into White neighborhoods and 'ruin the atmosphere'...It's like in America when neighborhoods become mixed because Blacks move in, and Whites are forced out...prostitutes ruin the atmosphere in the same way." N.Y. Times, September 23, 1990.

This is the latest in a series of racial slurs made against African-Americans by Japanese officials in recent years.

In 1988, Michio Watanabe, policy chief of the Liberal Democratic Party, stated American Blacks had few qualms about going bankrupt and implied that they walked away from their debts.

In 1986, Yasuhiro Nakasone, Prime Minister, said on the average, the United States is ranked lower because of a considerable number of Blacks, Puerto Ricans and Mexicans.

"These Japanese officials are probably speaking out of complete ignorance," said Marjorie Richardson, Dean of Minority Affairs, Smith College. "I do not believe these people have spent enough time in the U.S. to get a comprehensive view of African-Americans," she said.

She suspects that high American officials have given these Japanese officials this information, thus they continue to make these statements in confidence. Richardson said that Japanese officials are not aware that Blacks are in the highest levels of education in the U.S. "They'll never learn," she said, referring to the history of such statements and attitudes.

"There is a significant amount of discrimination in Japan because they tend to be more homogenous than most nations and they have less sensitivities towards different cultures. I'm no longer surprised by it," said Professor Michael Thelwell, Afro-American Studies, at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

"It's also particularly dumb," he said. Thelwell suggested there ought to be some organized economic boycott, a line they understand, he said, that would put a dent in their market.

"This attitude probably comes from American media and American businesspeople who have no contact with the African-American community," said M. Ricardo Townes, Associate Dean of Academic Support Services, at UMass.

"I don't think it's useful to argue with people who don't have a lot of information about African Americans," he said.

"One would hope that the justice minister's comments are not reflective of a larger Japanese foreign policy," said Sherwood Thompson, Director of the Office of Third World Affairs, at UMass.

"Because if it did," he said, "it obviously indicates a lack of respect for national minorities in America and especially the African-American community who are large consumers of Japanese products and appreciators of Japanese culture."

Thompson said he encourages people to write to or call the Japanese embassy and consulate to object to these statements.

An official from the Japanese embassy in Washington D.C. said that Kajiyama had no intention of discussing racial issues, that he wanted to look more into matters of the environment of big cities such as Tokyo.

The official said that Kajiyama is somewhat ready to withdraw his statement. He pointed out that on both previous occasions mentioned above, both officials withdrew their statements and apologized.

"I'm distressed to read about this latest racial slur, but frankly, not surprised," said Roberta Uno, Artistic Director of New World Theater, at UMass. "We have a tendency here in the U.S. to view these remarks in isolation and see them only in terms of Japanese government attitudes toward African Americans. Of course the unfortunate reality that the level of ethnocentricity and racism is much greater," she said.

Uno pointed out the discriminatory treatment of other Asians in Japan, particularly the Koreans and Philipinos, or the treatment of Japanese Burakumin in their own country. "It's disgraceful," she said.

Uno said she believes that just as conscious Japanese people within Japan are demanding their government change its discriminatory laws and attitudes, so must the world community refuse to tolerate racism.

Sept. 23: El Grito de Lares

The struggle for freedom shall probably be more complicated than ever before. The Anglo-Saxon people shall struggle for human freedom, but, having achieved it for themselves, they shall ignore it for others. During the struggle, it shall be questioned whether the mere creation of civil government means true freedom, if that government is exclusively created by Anglo-Saxons for Anglo-Saxons, and not by men for all men. Millions of colored people, armed, shall demand their rights to the fruits of civil government, which for them shall begin with the freedom to be colored.

—Translated from Prophecy for the Century, by Eugenio Maria De Hostos.

Elliot Monteverde

As a result of the events taking place currently in the region of the Middle-East, other people's and nation's struggles, misfortunes and affairs have been obliterated. In the United States, however, such behavior on the part of the racist and Eurocentric press seems normal.

A press which seeks to justify and propagate the point of view particular to a group with little regard to alternate views and opinions of national and international leaders as well as of citizens who oppose the United States when in its usual pattern of behavior oppress and exploit Third World nations.

It is therefore, no coincidence that from Iraq to Nicaragua, South Africa to Grenada, Vietnam to Bangladesh and every conerstone of the world which the White man has tried to conquer, rebelling forces continue to emerge. These forces which seek to break loose from the physical and economic oppression imposed upon them, have endured through time. Consequently, their rising to power is but eminent. This is despite threats of many sorts.

Rebelling forces like that of the Rebel Army in Cuba have, in accordance to the prophecy of Eugenio Maria De Hostos, burst forth triumphantly. Such struggles by the people to reclaim what are but basic rights of a nation — territorial and national sovereignty — had emerged in Puerto Rico. Sunday, Sept. 23 marked the 122nd anniversary of the insurrection at Lares, which is commemorated in Puerto Rico as El Grito de Lares.

While it is not unusual to observe that this historic date goes unnoticed by both the student and administrative body, it is perplexing and moving to observe my compatriots pay no dues to our Grito de Lares. El Grito de Lares was later violently suppressed a long time ago and along with it the history and issues of a nation of today.

University-level courses whose main agenda is the Caribbean or Latin America push Puerto Rico aside for its "special" colonial status that the United States has imposed since 1898. On the other hand, courses in American politics stick to a very similar doctrine for fear of exposing to the American student the embarrassing realities that confront this democratic nation about to enter the 21st century.

Nevertheless, the 23rd of September has remained a date of immeasurable importance to many Puerto Ricans and oppressed people of the world. El Grito de Lares remains as Puerto Rico's sole reminder of sovereignty since 1493. Almost 500 years under the yoke of two foreign oppressive and imperialistic nations — Spain and the United States.

El Grito de Lares joins ranks with many other struggles carried out by the oppressed people of the world who, despite the many obstacles, continue the long but steady struggle for national independence. This is the struggle to halt the continuous ideological manipulation, cultural aggression and atrocious intervention to the development of our countries' national conscience.

Eugenio Maria De Hostos could not have better expressed what I have intended to convey here. From a chronological standpoint El Grito de Lares does not belong to the 20st century. Its repercussions do, however. The struggle in Puerto Rico has prevailed through time and is very much latent today.

In time, when the United States has been unveiled and stripped of its mask of oppression, Puerto Rico will have much to celebrate. For now, may the struggle for freedom in Puerto Rico and oppressed nations of the world not accept compromise or defeat but...VICTORY!

Elliot Monteverde Torres is a UMass student

University Career Center enhances planning for students of color

Students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst will have an extra edge when entering the job market, thanks to an $82,000 federal grant.

The grant was recently awarded by the U.S. Department of Education to the Mather Career Center, which offers comprehensive career planning and job placement to University students.

The center, one of the largest in New England, will use the funding to develop two separate programs: one improving the participation of students of color, the other expanding the number of students working in the international marketplace. The grant will enable the University to hire two people to spearhead the programs, said Joan Stoia, the Center's director. Those staff members are expected to be on board by mid-November.

Students of color from low-income backgrounds are one of the groups that can gain the most from the Career Center. They are at greater risk at predominantly White universities. They drop out or get left behind at very high rates. Higher education is the key to success for all students, particularly students of color, from low-income families.

Programs like cooperative education can provide added inspiration and support for those students, because when they join an organization like Aetna, or Pratt & Whitney, or one of the major banks, the business community is committed to providing a lot of support for talented students of color. There is a strong sense of commitment to each individual, and in addition to moral support, the business community can provide financial support which students can use to decrease their dependency on loans.

Field experience can be the first step toward creating a network of business contacts, helping a student to climb the career ladder.

Jobs mean experience, jobs mean money, and jobs mean contacts.

The other new program will address students' strong demand for experience in the international job market.

Every day, we have at least one student come in and say, 'Gee, I really would like to work in Spain,' or 'Are there any jobs that you know about in Japan?' Stoia said. The International Co-op Program will provide information on working overseas.

The University's internship, career placement, and cooperative education offices were merged last spring in an effort to provide students with more comprehensive services.

Students can come to the same place, and they can look at all the jobs. They don't have to run from one office to another. The University realized that the offices' sum could be greater than their parts.

Through cooperative education, students are placed in pre-professional jobs in business, industry and government to earn money toward their education and gain valuable work experience before they graduate. Interns typically negotiate academic credit for their placement in government agencies, nonprofit organizations and high prestige posts at newspapers, public relations firms, television studios and publishing houses.

In order to make its offerings more widely available to students, the Career Center has opened a satellite office near the heart of campus. The main office of the Mather Career Center is located at the eastern edge of campus, away from the main flow of student traffic, and it was difficult for students to just drop in between classes.

Students can now stop by the satellite office on a walk-in basis to obtain information and referrals. Career planning workshops will also be offered at the satellite office, located in the Curry Hicks Building.

Joan Stoia, Associate Staff
UMass Career Center

ARTS & LIVING

A Rustling of Leaves shades in the truth

By ANNA REGINA SANTIAGO
Collegian Staff

A Rustling of Leaves: Inside the Philippine Revolution
Directed by Nettie Wild
Pleasant Street Theater

Nettie Wild's A Rustling of Leaves: Inside the Philippine Revolution is admirable in its courage and compelling in its resolve in bringing the Filipino voice closer to those who want to hear it.

Set against the backdrop of President Corazon C. Aquino's "People Power" of 1986, this documentary film is meant not only to quell the world's sudden thirst to know more about the inner workings and unique complexities of Philippine politics, but more importantly, to explore the still-thriving Communist insurgency that is at the heart of Aquino's problems today, as well as to show the human faces behind the underground guerrilla, the New People's Army (NPA), that are hardly ever seen by foreign audiences.

The audience is invited to take a long, thoughtful peek at the internal struggles that are a significant part of their existence. This is not a film about the leftist fight alone; more than that, it epitomizes the often overlooked circumstances and situations that run the whole left-wing machinery.

Wild, who wrote, directed and produced A Rustling of Leaves in conjunction with the Empowerment Project of California, affords the non-Filipino an opportunity to once again take a different look at this Philippine "political kaleidoscope," without the didactic hand of a teacher or any rose-colored glasses in hand to keep scenes of brutality and violence comfortably away.

Wild, a Canadian, examines the struggle of players in Philippine politics, apart from Aquino herself or her cohorts. With coup attempts from the right and a revolution from the left, the film portrays the Aquino administration as something more than just a stream of peaceful yellow with its promise of renewed economic vitality.

Jun Pala, perhaps the most memorable character if only because of his arrogance, is a self-proclaimed, anti-communist disc jockey who angrily crusades on the airwaves for the surrender of anti-government rebels and blasts away at NPA sympathizers with his unorthodox scare tactics.

In between strains of Top-40 music, he quotes Hitler and Goebbels to prove the righteousness of his backing of a right-wing vigilante group called the Alsa Masa ("The Rising of the Masses"), who roams the streets of Davao City (in Mindanao Island) terrorizing, and often killing suspected communists or military informers. He is quick to point out that "whereas the Nazis told lies, he only tells the truth." He is an overwhelming figure who bravely crosses the fine line between freedom of speech and malice, between credibility and complete nonsense.

Bernabe Dante Buscayno, the ex-NPA chief, after his release from prison starts to openly question the tactics of bringing the revolutionary conflicts to the cities. He explores Aquino's new democracy by participating in traditional politics as a senatorial candidate, and expounds on the virtues of government as led by the "little people," but fails to mesmerize more than just those little people. One is led to believe that maybe there really is no justice in this world for those who want to do the most good.

Father Ed de la Torre, twice arrested by Marcos and later released by Aquino, is the artist and revolutionary who holds the film together with his sense of humor and logic. He provides a strong, colorful voice for the Filipino Left, and becomes a welcome respite from the gruesome scenes of rampant killing, poverty, pain and suffering shown throughout the film.

The film might leave a foreign audience captivated by scenes of a peaceloving people so torn by poverty and injustices that they are left no choice but to fight among themselves.

Any Filipino in America will feel slightly reminiscent of home but will realize soon enough that romanticizing it is no solution.

Photo courtesy Larsen Associates

Guerrilla soldiers from the NPA in a scene from the documentary A Rustling of Leaves: Inside the Philippine Revolution.

Artist Hughes speaks powerfully on sexism and racism

By ALI WOOLWICH
Collegian Staff

Holly Hughes
Northampton Center for the Performing Arts
Sunday, Sept. 23

"Believe me, I know the difference between art and politics," says Holly Hughes, interrupting a lascivious monologue concerning her mother's knowledge of French and how it made their tomatoes grow, in order to speak about sexism and racism. She points out that at this point a reviewer of the show might say she was digressing from her medium — if only she would stick to poetry about tomatoes and sex!

Hughes, a nationally renowned performance artist, and subject of the most recent controversy over National Endowment for the Arts censorship, performed her piece, World Without End, at the Northampton Center for the Arts this past Sunday.

She is one of four performance artists (Karen Finley, Tim Miller and John Fleck) whose grant proposals were accepted by an NEA panel of peers, but then rejected by the NEA Chairman, John Frohnmayer, in response to severe pressure from right wing groups. Hughes, who draws some material from her experience as a lesbian, states that "[her] rejection is a direct result of her sexual orientation."

Hughes' style as a performance artist is direct, sarcastic, and urgent. "We are all so scared, but we are not scared enough." She speaks of seeing a woman beaten to the ground by her husband, lying in a pool of her own blood and tears; the woman's words are "I'm sorry, I'm sorry," but her tears speak in a different, horrific tongue, that speaks of sorrow and death. "Am I the only one who is lucky enough to be able to read a woman's tears?"

She is blunt and graphic. She talks about her mother chopping up a porcupine with an axe and then offering it to her and her sister. Arms outspread she describes her mother telling her the facts of life — "Holly, this is your clitoris and let me tell you what she does for a living!"

She ponders motherhood, and the role of women. Through tales of her childhood she injects, "Where was my father during this?" "Men kill me . . . they really do," she laughs.

But then, is it so funny? "How can men in an audience watch the rape scene in the movie The Accused and cheer, and still be able to say that they love women?" She shares her outrage at a New York newspaper article that purports that Heta Nussbaum's offense — watching Joel Steinberg beat his adopted daughter to death — was actually worse than his act of murder. Quips Hughes, "Boys will be boys, but you better be a good mother!"

And through her time on stage, she is serious, but she isn't wrapped up in taking herself too seriously. After a vignette about her childhood sexual experiences, she flops down into an easy chair and tells her audience that they can relax now, that's about as explicit as she gets, and now the worst is over.

In a world where blood, gore, rape and disrespect are the norm for movie plots and the nightly news is even worse, Hughes' presentation is tame. Hughes touches controversial topics — sex, abuse, rape, homosexuality, racism, feminism, conservativism – and that is where her perceived danger lies.

Republican Senator Jesse Helms, one of Hughes' worst critics, and NEA Chairman Frohnmayer have never seen Hughes perform. Perhaps they are afraid of viewing an artist who knows how to get her potent point across.

RUSH PIKE

THE FRATERNITY WITH A COMMITMENT TO EXCELLENCE

FALL 1990 OPEN RUSH

September 17, 18, 19, 25, 26 8-10 P.M.
418 North Pleasant Street 549-6251

ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

- LIFE LONG FRIENSHIPS
- STRONG ATHLETICS - OLYMPIC WEIGHT ROOM
- CONVENIENT LOCATION
- UNPARALELLED SOCIAL LIFE
- STRESSED ACADEMICS - Two Computers - Course Files
- EXCELLENT MEAL PLAN

ΠΚΑ
ΠΙ ΚΑΡΡΑ ΑΛΡΗΑ

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Games you can play with your cat.

BONES IN THE BARREL
By J. GELLER & M. ROSENZWEIG

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

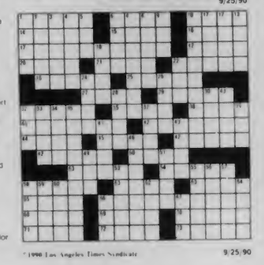
ACROSS
1 Banquet
6 Historic periods
10 Bachelor party
14 Author Loos
15 Musical passage
16 A Turner
17 Fort Knox, for one
19 City in the Truckee
20 Long march
21 Come in last
22 Cover girl
23 Plant disease
25 Wedding gown feature
27 Advantage
29 "— Love Song"
32 In front
36 Eros anagram
38 Landed
40 Naval ship
42 Porch
44 Cut short
45 Equipment
47 German seaport on the Ems
48 Memorable hostess Perle
50 Allows
52 — wave
54 Boot nation
58 Ascertain
61 Easy stride
63 Another 36 Across
65 Powder and shot, for short
66 Gin gellet
68 Sh-n in the wind
69 Once again
70 Ruhr city
71 Told all
72 Gets married
73 Smallest

DOWN
1 Speedy
2 — nous
3 Broadcast
4 Feed a fire
5 Summer color
6 Repeat
7 Barnyard strutter
8 Felix or Larry
9 Morose
10 Use force
11 Equal
12 British princess
13 Wilde's was Reading
18 Elated
22 Farrow of films
24 Middle: Comb form
26 Church area
28 Skirt inset
30 When I was —
31 Riviera resort
32 Perform
33 Damage
34 Part of HOMES
35 Man on the moon
37 To be, in Paris
39 Hail a score
41 Mild oath
43 Take ten
46 Permitted
49 — Pan Alley
51 Stadium section
53 Unaccompanied
55 Came up
56 Jerk
57 Affirmative words
58 Vientiane's country
59 Madame Bovary
60 So be it!
62 Sunday seats
64 Forwarded
66 Fido's foot
67 Chop

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	E	T	D	R	O	M	A	N	C	H	A	I	R
A	D	A	M	E	L	A	T	E	M	E	R	R
C	O	R	A	T	A	M	E	R	A	S	S	E
	M	A	R	I	A	N	A	N	D	E	R	S	O	N
			K	I	D			A	G	E	N	T
C	A	M	D	E	N		A	M	U	S	E
A	L	A	E		S	W	A	L	E		D	E	E
L	O	U	I	S	A	M	A	Y	A	L	O	T	T
M	E	L		H	E	I	R	S		A	L	T	O
		T	A	S	T	E		V	E	R	D	U	N
A	S	P	E	R			H	E	L	L
B	I	L	L	E	J	E	A	N	K	I	N	G
D	R	A	L		M	U	R	R	E		B	O	L	T
D	E	N	E		T	R	A	I	T	E		I	S	E	E
E	D	E	R		L	A	T	E	R		D	E	N	T

9/25/90



"1990 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 9/25/90

PRICE
By PRICE VAN RAY

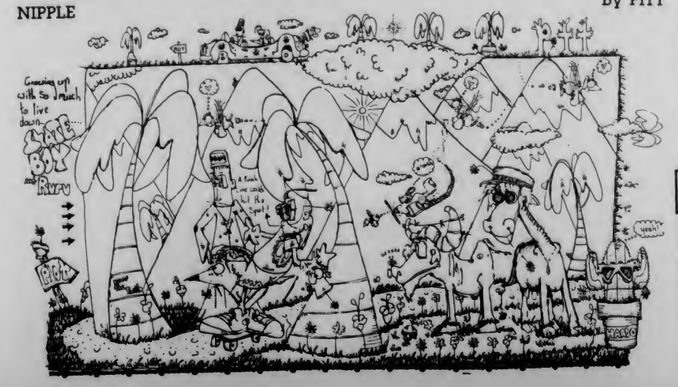
DAD HELP ME. A GENI TURNED ME INTO A WEENIE !!!
SON YOU'VE ALWAYS BEEN A WEENIE
DAD I'M SERIOUS. LOOK AT ME, WHAT WILL I DO?!!
I SUGGEST YOU HOLD THE MUSTARD.
PRICE

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

IN A SCIENTIFIC MISSION TO DISCOVER WHAT HAPPENS WHEN TWO PLANETS COLLIDE, SPACEMAN SPIFF DROPS ANCHOR!
THE ANCHOR CATCHES ON A HILLSIDE! SPIFF DOWNSHIFTS AND GUNS THE MOTOR!
IMPERCEPTIBLY AT FIRST, THE PLANET SLOWLY MOVES, TOWED ALONG BY OUR HERO UNTIL...
BREAKING ORBIT, PLANET 6 PICKS UP SPEED, HURLING TOWARD PLANET 5!

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

NIPPLE
By PITT



MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Broccoli and Cheese Boboli	Ravioli Alfredo
Meatball Grinder	Breaded Scallops
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Broccoli and Cheese Boboli	Ravioli Alfredo
Oatburgers	Breaded Scallops

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be more discreet about business matters. A budget revision will help restore domestic harmony. Stick to tried-and-true methods at work. A lucky financial streak boosts your spirits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be skeptical of gushing admirers, wild promises and pie-in-the-sky money schemes. A friend's financial maneuvers could irritate you. Do not be hasty. Having a short fuse could hinder progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Discussions about your career and dealings with officials or legal experts require all your attention. Do not allow minor irritations to get to you. Devote the evening to romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If coworkers act picky, be tolerant. A positive attitude is often contagious! Be alert to unexpected bargains. Do not let your outspoken ways land you in hot water.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Yesterday's message holds true today. Before spending money on an extravagant dinner or betting, consider your budget. An affectionate interlude puts doubts to rest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seize an opportunity to improve your position at work by making a special presentation to bigwigs. Your recent efforts could be royally rewarded. Unique buys and intriguing business offers come your way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow an impulse and do something original today. Those working on academic projects may spend time refining their efforts. An interest in metaphysics could speed developments along.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Buying and selling stocks or real estate is favored. Romance, whether secret or open, is on the agenda. Trips and distant contacts may prove an inspiration to you. Dreams seem to offer guidance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Luck is with you. You do well in business discussions and when seeing professional people. A pragmatic determination to maintain the pace works wonders. Complete projects already under way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Begin digging beneath the surface. Become more resourceful and selective in your activities. Make the most of your current conditions. Someone invites you to lend your various talents to a special event.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may need time by yourself or with a loved one to go over your ideas and upcoming schedule. A psychic experience proves enlightening. Your energies can best be applied to practical tasks.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid legal and financial controversies. Your gifts could lead to new applause and public acclaim. You overcome someone's objections to a special plan. Romance beckons with new insistence.

TODAY'S STAFF

Night Editor.....Sarah DeMaster
Copy Editor.....Kendra Pratt
Layout Technician.....Nicki Dumas
Photo Technician.....Richard DuCree
Production Supervisor.....Nicki
Typesetter.....Sue Kent
Production.....Maggie Trudell, Bill Connor, Jodi Trotman

■ Boston Church of Christ

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

who had been dismissed from a local church near Eastern Illinois State College, traveled to Massachusetts, taking over the Lexington Church of Christ. The Lexington parish was then a small unit of the Churches of Christ.

According to collected histories on the BCC, they are conservative in their theology and maintain little or no cooperation with other religious organizations. The Churches of Christ have been cited for using high pressure techniques to draw in prospective members. It is referred to as a "multiplying ministry" meaning the church relies heavily upon recruitment and new church "plantings," or the installation of new parishes. The Springfield Church of Christ, formerly the Valley Church of Christ meets in Northampton and as a present female church member explains, the church is so named because the church's ultimate goal is to draw members from Hartford, Conn. as well as from Springfield. And as the December 1988 Bulletin of the BCC states, "The University of Massachusetts at Amherst with 25,000 students has already proven to be a field ripe for harvest; a number have been converted from the campus . . ."

The BCC incorporates many thoughts both by those advocating their movement and by those distraught by the "loss" of friends and family members to what they see as destructive manipulation.

■ veterans

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

are extremely receptive to the program and are encouraging its continuance.

Nichols said that although most volunteer students are psychology and education majors, the program welcomes all majors.

Students who would like to participate can receive honors credit for their work, and should contact Denise Pols at the Honors Department. For students who are interested in the program, there will be a meeting today at 4 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center.

Students can also contact the Honors Department or Alton Nichols at 684-1154.

■ class

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

The classes, Lagrande said, were determined by what women in the community wanted to learn and wanted to teach. The teachers, Lagrande said, are volunteers from the community who are interested in sharing their knowledge with other women.

"We encourage ideas from women in this area's diverse communities about what kinds of classes to offer and other ways in which the school could work better for them," Lagrande said.

"We hope to do it again in the spring," Lagrande said. "We would like the school to be ongoing." The school provides childcare, transportation, wheelchair-accessibility and American Sign Language interpreting.

For more information, call (413) 584-5164 or (413) 586-8571.

■ petition

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

across-the-board cut to higher education if CLT passes:

- All universities, state and community colleges will lose $108,789,000 in state-allocated funds.
- State universities could face a $59,471,000 reduction.
- UMass-Amherst would face a $28,427,000 budget reduction.
- Scholarship reserve funds will be reduced by $13,059,000

Get Involved!

with campus health issues

SHAB*

- Sponsor health projects
- Represent student health care concerns
- Review UHS budget
- Serve on UHS Search Committees
- Meet other students interested in health care

COME SEE

WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT

Meetings: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26
Where: UHS - Room 302
Time: 5:30-6:30 pm

OPEN TO ALL STUDENTS

*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971)
University Health Services

Would you like to be a part of the group that was responsible for bringing Hunter S.Thompson, Faye Wattelton, Allen Ginsburg,Ntozake Shange, and William F. Buckley, Jr to this campus?Then come to the Distinguished Visitors Program new members meeting on Tuesday, September 25, at 7:00 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803 Come and see who we are bringing this semester, and how you can become involved.

DVP distinguished visitors program

"DO I HAVE A CASE?"

The attorneys at your Legal Services Center (L.S.C.) can answer fee-paying UMass students' questions on a variety of legal problems, including:

housing, criminal, University-related problems, civil rights, consumer, labor relations, personal injury, and family law.

The L.S.C. is funded by student fees, and has been offering free legal services to fee-paying UMass students for over a decade.

"DO I NEED A LAWYER?"

The Legal Services Center is your first source of law-related assistance. Whether you need information, advice or referral, call 545-1995 for an appointment.

Located in Room 922 of the Campus Center, the Legal Services Center is handicapped-accessible, and is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

LEADING EDGE
MODEL "D"
SPECIALS

Includes:
10 MHZ, 84 Keyboard, DOS 3.3
AMBER MONITOR, CLK CAL.
SERIAL & PARALLEL PORTS
SYSTEM PREPARATION

	512K	640K
Single Floppy	$489	$499
Dual Floppy	$569	$579
20 MG Hard Drive	$859	$869
30 MG Hard Drive	$959	$969

Hurry – Special Ends Sept. 30th

VALIDATA:
Mountain Farms Mall • Hadley, MA
586-7405

Free Mouse with Purchase

Cal. teams throw water polo for two

By JOE DEGLORIA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts water polo team came back from Brown University's National Invitational with a great deal of confidence and pride in it's effort. UMass played the number one and two ranked teams in the country, Cal. Berkeley and UCLA.

UMass met up with second-ranked UCLA Friday night. The Bruins won the game rather handidly by a 18-2 score. The much more experienced UCLA team gave the UMass team a real good chance to see what Olympic level water polo is like.

"We played well, we finished feeling positive about our effort," said coach Russ Yarworth about the UCLA game. "We don't usually see that level of play. They were so fast on the counterattack — one missed pass and they were gone."

After playing the powerful Bruins the UMass team played Princeton Saturday afternoon, a team they beat 9-5 the previous weekend at the Eastern Varsity Tournament.

UMass led 3-1 at the half but then blew away Princeton the rest of the contest. UMass came away with an impressive 11-2 victory.

Jon Miller threw in four goals and freshman Tangin Engin scored twice. Freshman Steve Brotschul scored his first goal in college play as well.

"Princeton was really tough last weekend, we had to come back in the second half to beat them. This time we really dominated their offense, we had a great press effort and G.T. (Ladd) played really well on the hole man," Yarworth said.

Cal. Berkeley and UMass faced up Saturday night. The Golden Bears are the top-ranked team in the country.

UMass lost the game 13-4 but Yarworth said he was pleased with his team's performance.

"It was a tremendous improvement," he said. "We played them really well. We held them off a bit and we got a chance to set up our offense."

Unfortunately, the game also claimed the health of high-scoring sophomore Dan McOsker who broke his thumb and will be out four to six weeks.

"Loosing Dan is going to hurt us," Yarworth said of the injury. "He provides us with a lot of offense."

On a lighter note, Yarworth said he was very pleased with the play of junior Alex Yelensky.

"He has really improved his swimming ability, and quickness on defense," he said.

■ volleyball

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

"We're going to concentrate more on our game and how we're doing and less on our opponents," she said. "The second half of the season we'll be ready to make adjustments and then we'll beat the other side."

Ford said she is looking forward to the challenge Brown will provide the team.

"Brown is a big, strong team. We'll have to have tough serving and blocking, which will give us our share of errors," she said. "Their players are from all over the country — Chicago, California. They have incredible skills."

The Minutewomen's first encounter with Brown this season was at Brown's tournament, where they also faced Harvard, Yale and Hartford. UMass was taken by Brown 15-11, 15-12 and 15-10.

"[Brown was] tough and we were scrambling," Ford said of their first encounter with Brown, who now holds a record of 8-3. "We can't allow Brown to get a string of points. That was our weakness. We must get the ball back into our rotation."

Rugby exhausts Amherst squad, 10-0

UM dominates halves

By DAVE SZPILA
Collegian Correspondent

On a day that your mother told you to save your pennies for, the UMass rugby club captured a 10-0 win over the squad from Amherst College.

In a match plagued with penalties, the UMass team used its quickness and offensive ability to dominate both halves of play.

The first half started slow until Bob Carney, the fleet footed fly half of the UMass squad, scored a try. His score was set up by a solid run by Jerry Hunt, who brought the ball within a yard of the try line. The conversion failed, leaving the score 4-0 in favor of UMass at the end of the half.

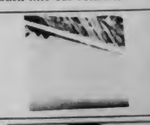
The second half was all UMass as it kept up the offensive pressure. Bob Carney scored again after a dropped ball by the Amherst fly half. Carney, playing in perfect position, picked up the ball and raced 25 yards for his second try of the game. Scot Lowry's conversion attempt was good, giving UMass a 10-0 lead.

UMass dominated almost every scrum, making Amherst go backwards for most of the contest, and showed that even under poor playing conditions, it could pull out a "V."

Standouts for the match were Paul McClelland, who had many clutch tackles, and the whole forward unit of the team.

The UMass B side dominated its match as well. With a 34-0 halftime lead, the B's stepped of the field and let the UMass C side take a shot at Amherst. They took the Amherst squad 8-0 in the second half.

The next match for UMass will be this weekend in Northfield, Vermont against Norwich University.



DON'T STAY HOME

Round Trips from New York, starting at

London	$370
Paris	438
San Jose C.R.	370
Bangkok	929
Hongkong	849
Tokyo	759

Student and Faculty Fare
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change. One ways available. Work/Study abroad programs. International student and teacher ID. EURAIL PASSES ISSUED ON THE SPOT. FREE Student Travel Catalog.

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
413-256-1261

POSTER OFFER!

Get your own 18" x 24" color poster of the coolest girl on campus. Laura Palmer

Send a $3 check or M.O. and your address to TWIN PEAKS POSTER OFFER P.O. Box 4640 Westbury, NY 11592

TWIN PEAKS
(P.S. She's still dead...)

CLASSIFIEDS

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE • CALL (MON.-FRI.) 9:30-5:30 PM • 545-3500 • DEADLINE 2 DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • CASH IN ADVANCE • 20¢ WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS

ACTIVITIES

ATTENTION all University students! Alpha Phi Omega (the coed service fraternity) is holding 'rush' Sept. 25 S.U. 415A 7:30PM

ATTENTION: Pre-meds, nursing, and all students interested in student health issues. Student health advisory board (SHAB) welcomes new members to it's first meeting. Wednesday-Sept 26th, 5:30-6:30 Rm 302 University Health Center

BOLTWOOD PROJECT
Fun, friends, credit. Work with physically and developmentally delayed people. Last meeting tonight 7PM 917CC

CLUB COMMUNICATION is back! Our first meeting is tonight at 7:00 in E-37 Machmer

KOREAN STUDENTS ASSOCIATION general meeting
today in the Campus Center
Room 902 at 7:30PM
Come!!!

MASSPIRG general interest meeting. Come and get involved in voter reg, recycling, hunger, and environmental education 9/15 Tuesday 7PM Earthboots

NEW MEMBERS MEETING TONIGHT
Distinguished Visitors Program, the UMass lecture organization, needs you! Campus Center room 803 at 7PM

TRI-SIGMA welcomes all university women to open rush. Call 549-3811 or just stop by for ice-cream night at 5:15 9/25. Try something new! Try Sigma!

UMASS CHESS CLUB
Meeting in the Bluewall Cafe
7:11PM all are welcome.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

1991-UMASS program in Siena Italy. Thursday, Sept. 27 7:30PM Herter 301 information meeting

AUDITIONS for the UMass Music Theatre Guild's production of 'Sweet Charity' 9/26 5PM-11PM; 9/29 11AM-3PM, 5PM-11PM 163C Campus Center Callbacks 9/30 TBA Call 545-0415 for information

BED AND BREAKFAST Downtown Amherst ideal for visiting parents and friends 549-5961

PHI ALPHA THETA history honor society now accepting applications for membership 6th floor Herter, Rm 608. Due by 9/26

VISA OR MASTERCARD! Establish credit guaranteed or double your money back Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. m-1207.

WANT TO BE A SENATOR? Nomination papers are available through September 26 at the senate office, Room 420 Student Union

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 VOLVO Georgia car almost no rust less than 100 thou miles new tires, shocks, and brakes. Vince 549-1330

1978 BUICK SKYHAWK hatchback $400 as is 549-6333 6-8PM

1980 BUICK CENTURY LIMITED $750. 665-7492

1984 JEEP CHEROKEE 69,000 miles, 4x4, air cond., red w/black, $4700 549-1016

SEIZED cars, trucks, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. c-1675

FINANCE INVESTMENT CLUB

FIRST GENERAL MEETING Tuesday, September 25 at 7PM in School of Management Lobby-New members welcome-All majors welcome

FOR A GOOD TIME CALL...

RACK-A-DISC the best entertainment DJ's, video, bands, dorm/house specials call 586-9900 anytime

FOR RENT

DUPLEX apt 3bedr 1½bt laundry hookup 4P 15 mins UMass Call Chuck Walker 323-4407

FRIDGE RENTALS Call R&P 253-9742

ONE BEDROOM APARTMENT 177 N. Pleasant St. Quiet $445 per month includes heat 256-3457

PRESIDENTIAL APTS. 1bdrm sublet/lease DeCuian 549-1921

TOWNHOUSE APARTMENT: 2 bedroom, 1½ baths on bus route. Call 1-567-1352 and leave message.

FOR SALE

3 RED SOX TICKETS 10/1 Mon. night against Chi Sox. Best offer call Frank 256-1640

ATTN. SPORTS TEAMS: Sports equip., uniforms, apparel available at low prices. I'll beat any local sports store. Call Brian, 546-6102.

DO IT ALL NIGHT!
on a full size futon with frame
$150
Metawampe Furniture
1-800-3-FUTON-1

GREAT SAVINGS!!!! Ski card international offers discounts on lift tickets, lodging, dining, and much more. Only $25 for 90-91 Season. Call 549-4445 evenings

KEYBOARD AND MIDI STEPS-fully prog. dig. korg DW8000 and seperate keyboard for your feet (eight tones midi capab) PWR adapters and Cnd. include. All for $500 Call Chris anytim 549-8202

SELLING T-SHIRTS? Buy your plain shirts cheap. Call Brian, 546-6102.

REPOSSESSED VA & HUD homes. Available from government from $1 without credit check. You repair. Also tax delinquent foreclosures. Call 1-805-682-7555 Ext. H-2009 for repo list your area.

FOUND

CLADDAUGH RING found by Dickinson dorm on 9/16. Call 546-1132 and describe to claim

LEATHER JACKET in Mahar Auditorium Wed Sept 19th. To claim call 546-5158 and give description. Ask for Kenth.

WATCH found Wed 9/19 at Hadigs Mall. Call Dave 584-0224

HELP WANTED

CHRISTMAS, SPRING BREAK, SUMMER travel free. Air couriers needed and cruiseship jobs. Call 1-805-682-7555 ext. F-1426

EARN $300 TO $500 PER WEEK reading books at home. Call 615-473-7440 Ext. B-281

EARN UP TO $500/WEEK
helping students obtain Visa, Mastercard. Send for free information. American Financial Services, 117 Park Drive Suite 40-C, Boston, MA 02215.

OEPENDABLE, RESPONSIBLE person to deliver Sunday newspaper on campus. Good pay, part time. 548-9686

EARN UP TO $20,000 A MONTH!
If you are a motivated person, and wish to be an entrepreneur, don't let this opportunity slip past you. A multi-level marketing company is looking for executive distributors. Be your own boss, make your own hours! for more info call 549-4349

FULL TIME POSITION available. Excellent base salary plus bonuses. Fluency in any African, Indian, Korean, or Middle Eastern dialects a plus. Contact Lanny Perron, Metropolitan Life (413)567-1248

NEED EXTRA $$? Local news distributor needs experienced telemarketers. Our phones, great pay. 548-9686

PART/FULL TIME JOBS for the environment! 40-60/day! Call Sam 256-6434

PART TIME SALES PERSON wanted for the marketplace. Will train. Call 323-9692

SALES ASSISTANT part time. Data entry and status tracking; correspondence; telephone customer interface. Excellent oral and written communications skills required. Walk from UMass. Call Mary-Benton 549-4455.

INSTRUCTION

DO YOU NEED Spanish help? Tutoring available for intermediate to advanced. Call Gino 549-0071

LOST

EYEGLASSES in gray case reward. Charlie 256-1170

MOTORCYCLES

1984 HONDA SABRE 700CC great cond. $1000 or bo 253-7119 leave message

PERSONALS

CONGRATULATIONS to Alpha Chi Omega's newest ribbons Nna, Tracie, Rana, Rachael, Michelle, Michelle, Kimberly, Stefanie, Julie, Jennifer, Charity, and Tricia! Love, the sisters of AXO

DEEN, one more week, seven more days. Are you psyched? Have a fabulous time in Hull, and remember, I'll be waiting. True love always. Josh

DIANE- Happy Birthday you sexy Salem Place woman! Let's go biking again soon. This time I'll try to keep up with you. Have a sick time tonight! Love, Dena

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIP?
545-0500 Campus travel-on campus

HAPPY 21ST BIRTHDAY!!
Where do you want to start?
Love your roomies Jean, Debbie, Jill

HAPPY BIRTHDAY MARIANNE
Love Abalaba

KRIS Have a smashing 21st birthday from everyone at 73 East Hadley Road!

LORI S. You're always my -1 Scotty

ROSIE-
Hey, baby doll! One whole year. Ooooh, you did!
Happy Anniversary
Sweets

STACEY, here's your personal ad I promised you. See you at Mikes. Bye. Webee-G

PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
"subs "salads "spaghetti"
fall special
large cheese $5.99
small cheese $3.50
up to 2 toppings only $1.00 more
must mention this ad"
549-8098 549-6073

PROFESSIONAL DJ'S

LAZER TECH AUDIO available for your dance, dorm party or house party. Great rates, great DJ's. Call 323-7801 soon

$ REWARD $

FOR THE RETURN of 14k gold necklace w/Italian horn charm lost Monday 9-17. Has great sentimental value. If found please call Karen 546-3993.

RIDE WANTED

RIDE WANTED to Long Island for Friday Sept. 28th. will share costs- please call 546-5192

ROOMMATE WANTED

$200 GORGEOUS VICTORIAN STYLE apt in a house. A place to call home. Vegetarian and females preferred, but not necessary. Call Marie 253-3189 ASAP.

FEMALE NONSMOKER to share room in Puffton $142/mo 549-0038

FOR DOUBLE ROOM in Presidential Apt. Call 549-1224.

FOR SINGLE BEDROOM at the Brook in South Amherst on bus line. Call 256-3097

SOUTH DEERFIELD 2 bdrm Apt. on bus line. $300 665-8230 545-1028

SERIOUS STUFF

CHARVEL 475 special 2 Jackson J100 Bolevel single coil & Jackson J50 IBC Humbucker Rosewood fretboard & pre cbs fender twin and new mesa boogie power tubes & echoplex- hardly used with sound on sound & chandler tube driver pedal & dod hardrock distortion dod noisegate mxr micro amp & Dan Armstrong electro bass. Call 584-7829 Ask for Tim give best offer/s Bye

SERVICES

HAVE YOU SEEN THE MARKETPLACE? Classified advertising run by students for students. Pay only 5% commission when you sell. Call 323-9692

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services ALTERNATIVES 33 Main St Northampton 586-3000

TRAVEL

HOW LATE IS TOO LATE to reserve for the holidays. Isn't worth the risk! 545-0500 Campus Travel- on campus

ONE WAY American Airlines ticket Hartford-Seattle, December 21. 1990 excellent price 1-413-562-2582 (after 3)

TYPING

QUICK, ACCURATE, EFFICIENT S. Deerfield 10 mins. from Amherst. Worth reasonable prices! 665-4501

TRANSCRIPTION, $10/hr. typing $2/pg. 545-1188

TYPING, WORD PROCESSING, $1.50/pg. Free pickup and delivery. Laser printing and copying available. KCommunications 256-6373

WORDPERFECT- spellcheck, fast, accurate and reliable. Call Tim 546-5472

WANTED

HCAC AMHERST DAY CARE has subsidized slots available for children, age 2yrs. 9months-5yrs. Parents must be AFDC and Voucher eligible. Call Nancy at 549-5713 or Barbara at 584-4434.

SPORTS

Men's soccer drops fourth straight

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Correspondent

When you're in a slump, even if everything goes right, nothing goes right.

Last night at Parsons Field in Boston, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team dominated Northeastern. They controlled possession, outshot the Huskies 15-12 and played solid defense, according to UMass head coach Jeff Gettler.

So the Minutemen won, right? The answer is "no." Although UMass played much better then in their previous effort, and did so without three starters, the Northeastern Huskies prevailed 1-0. The Huskies broke a scoreless deadlock at 73:45, when Tom Olsen connected from 20 yards out. He chest-trapped a cross from a teammate, then sent the ball low into the corner of the net for the only goal of the game. Northeastern keeper Kevin Sampson stopped nine shots for the Huskies, among them an almost-certain goal from close range. In the first half, UMass forward Randy Jacobs had a clean shot from six yards out. Sampson made a great save, preserving the victory.

Jon Gruber took another hard-luck loss for the Minutemen, saving five shots. Gruber has only recieved two goals worth of scoring support in his five appearances, while allowing five.

Although UMass lost, they played well considering the circumstances, said Gettler. Last night's game was their first night game of the year, their first game of the year on an artificial surface, and the first varsity starts for Jacobs and for Andrew Bird.

The Minutemen were also without Dan Lawrence (out with a virus), Darren Stone (broken nose), Tom Novajasky (pulled tendon) and Steve Armenti. All four are unavailable to UMass indefinitely. The Huskies, now 5-1, had never beaten UMass. Gettler was wary of this fact before gametime. He noted that his team's current slump, combined with Northeastern's new-found improvement, would have the Huskies fired up to get their first-ever win against their state rivals.

The Minutemen, now 2-5 and losers of four straight, have no games until the weekend, when they host the Massachusetts Challenge Cup. UMass will play two matches in two days, facing Drexel on Saturday at 3 p.m., then returning to play Rider on Sunday at 1 p.m. Maine faces Rider in the opener Saturday at noon, then opens play Sunday against Drexel at 11 a.m. All matches will be held at Upper Boyden field.

UMass then starts another four-game road trip. They travel to Brown for their second night game Oct. 2, then resume Atlantic-10 Conference competition at Rhode Island, West Virginia and George Washington. The Minutemen are 1-2 in A-10 play.

Collegian file photo

Northeastern shutout the men's soccer team (1-0) last night in Boston. They are currently 2-5.

Sports Notice

JV Lacrosse: The UMass Lacrosse Club will meet at 6:30 p.m., Thurs. Sept. 27 in Boyden room 253 to discuss the fall and spring seasons. For more information, please call J. Dietel at 545-6353 after 7 p.m.

Congradulations! to Sheila Dusza, winner of the women's swim team raffle. She won a 1991 Diamond Back Outland mountain bike as a result of a Sept. 15 drawing. The team would like to thank all those who participated.

Women's tennis falls

Hartford serves UMass squad a 6-3 deficit

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team wasn't able to carry over its momentum from Sunday's inspiring defeat of the University of New Hampshire to Monday as they lost to the University of Hartford 6-3 at the Upper Boyden courts.

Hartford, who has only one loss this season, proved to be too much for the Minutewomen as they took four singles matches.

Nonetheless, on a more positive note, UMass' Vanessa Xenapoulou was able to defeat Hartford's Tracy Sheer in straight sets 6-1, 6-4. In addition, sophmore Minutewoman Amy Ryan dominated her Hartford opponent Donna Geneen 6-2, 6-1. Number four singles player Kerry Eddy was edged out in a heartbreaker against Lara Korrell 5-7, 7-6, 6-3.

Umass was also victorious at second doubles as Xenapoulou teamed up with Shizuko Yamasaki, to avoid a doubles sweep, 6-3, 6-4.

'Hartford is a very competitive team,' said Umass coach Edwin Gentzler.

Umass, now with two wins against three losses, hopes to bounce back to the .500 mark as they travel to Central Connecticut State University on Thursday.

Collegian file photo

Hartford won 6-3

UM harriers fail, succeed

● Iona Col. upstages UMass

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Correspondent

Sometimes what you don't know can hurt you.

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team learned this lesson the hard way on Saturday when Iona College, a relatively unknown college in upstate New York, travelled to Amherst this weekend and outran the Minutemen on their own course.

Prior to the meet, UMass coach Ken O'Brien admitted that he knew very little about Iona's team. He did expect that they would field a strong team.

Iona proved to be quite strong as they scored 31 points to the Minutemen's 41 points. Northeastern University finished third in the tri-meet with 48 points.

Iona's Mel Hilliard and Pat Mulvaney finished first and second, respectively, over the five-mile course. They both finished with an identical time of 25:50.

Jon Corso was the top finisher for UMass for the second week in a row. He finished third overall in a time of 25:52.

Northeastern's first runner was Dino Dibiaso, finishing fourth in 26 minutes even.

Tom Degnan (26:05) was the second UMass finisher with a fifth place overall. Rounding out the top five for UMass was Gerry Squires (26:54) in eighth place, John Raach (27:13) in 12th place, and Tom Walsh (27:15) in 13th place.

"They surprised us both [UMass and Northeastern]," O'Brien said of Iona's first place finish. "I didn't know as much about them as I did about Northeastern."

The winning time on Saturday was 30 seconds faster than the winning time of the previous week. Many of the UMass runners, including Corso and Degnan, improved their times significantly over the previous week's performances.

Perhaps the most encouraging news of the day was the strong finishes of several UMass freshmen. Not only are Raach and Walsh helping the team in their first season, but Craig Cormier (27:24) and Kevin Greenhalgh (27:39) are also running well and contributing, according to O'Brien.

The next meet for the Minutemen will be Friday, Oct. 5 against Connecticut and Providence.

● Women beat Springfield

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Correspondent

On Saturday afternoon the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team improved its record to 2-1 when it defeated Springfield College 22-36.

"We really dominated the race," said head coach Julie LaFreniere. "It was a great meet for us, Springfield was never really in it."

UMass was again lead by Becky Johnson who won the 3.1 mile race with a time of 18:55. Johnson held off a late surge by Springfield's top runner to win by two seconds.

"[The Springfield runner] made up a lot of ground at the end," said LaFreniere, "But Becky turned it on and and won fairly easily. Becky came through again for us, I am very pleased with her performance."

Also coming in with big performances for UMass were Cathy Crocker and Michelle St.Laurent, who finished third and fourth, respectively. Crocker finished in 19:13 while St.Laurent came in a second later.

"It was good to see St. Laurent and Crocker perform to their potential," said LaFreniere. "They really cranked it up to finish strong."

Rounding out the UMass top five were Mo Meldrim, who finished sixth overall, and Kathy Holt, who ended up eighth overall. Kelly Liljebald, who was not expected to run due to an ankle injury, finished in 9th place. Dana Goldfarb also ran with an ankle injury and finished 11th.

"Dana and Kelly were cleared to run on Friday," said LaFreniere. "They competed with ankle boots on and both put in great effort."

Goldfarb's ankle swelled up after the race; she will benefit from a break in the schedule. The team's next race is not until Oct. 5 when it meets the Connecticut and Providence College. LaFreniere is looking forward to two hard weeks of training which should lower the team's times.

"Right now the team looks great," said LaFreniere. "We are very happy with the season so far. I just hope we can get healthy and stay there."

Volleyball looks ahead

By JENNIFER ABATI
and FELICE COHEN
Collegian Correspondents

The University of Massachusett's volleyball team returned from Central Connecticut Thursday night greatly disappointed. The match included four games with the Minutewomen winning only the second.

UMass had a new line up for the first game. The team started off slow and played very tentative.

"We were sluggish," said Coach Carol Ford. The game was lost 1-15. The competition for the UMass women on Thursday was strong and aggressive.

"Central's serving was tough, so it was a tough game," added Ford. The Minutewoman were victorious in the second game with a score of 15-5.

"We forced errors and played outstanding defense," she said. UMass was leading for most of the third game but fell short in the end. Central Conneticut took the lead and won 15-8.

"They served tough," Ford stated. "Our passes were not effective and once again we played tentative offense." The Minutewoman lost the match with a score of 6 15 in the fourth game.

"We didn't put the ball away. We need to put much work into serving, but that's not unusual for a young team," said Ford. The new setter for the team, Kathy Smith was outstanding, according to Ford. "She did a great job.

"Although we lost, good things did happen in this match. It was very exciting," said Ford. The aim for the team is to have everything working together by mid-season.

"That's a reasonable goal for us," Ford said. "We're just going to keep slugging."

The Minutewomen face Brown at 7 p.m. tonight as they continue to maintain their court composure.

"Our main goal now is to work on cleaning up our transitional skills." said Ford. "We have to work on moving from offense to defense and defense to offense."

Ford is still very optimistic about her 2-10 team. She said it's still early in the season.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

WEATHER	ARTS	SPORTS
It will be partly sunny in the afternoon with temperatures between 72-75 degrees.	Read what George Lentz has to say about Martin Scorsese's GoodFellas. Page 5.	The Minutemen basketball team lands another top high school recruit. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1990

COLLEGIAN

VOLUME C LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND ISSUE 16

CLT opponents launch campaign at UMass

By KENDRA PRATT
Collegian Staff

Student opponents of the Citizen for Limited Taxation ballot question launched a high visibility campaign last night to promote voter registration at the University of Massachusetts of Amherst and surrounding communities.

"Most people don't know what the real agenda of CLT is," said State Rep. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst). "It's not to limit what the state spends and the budget but to privatize what the state government does, turning UMass into a private university."

The CLT petition, which will appear on the Nov. 6 election ballot as question number three, is a referendum question which would rollback state tax rates and fee increases to 1988 levels. The rollback would not include any public higher education tuition hikes or fee increases in the last three years.

Barbara Anderson, the executive director of CLT, has said in a previous Collegian interview that ballot question number three would limit state expenditures thus giving the newly-elected governor a tool for governmental restructuring if the question passes.

Rosenberg said it is crucial for state voters to stop Anderson's growing political power in the upcoming election. He criticized CLT's Libertarian Party restructuring ideas which he said would turn all state services and programs, except the police, the courts and the militia, into the private sector.

"You wouldn't recognize Massachusetts if [CLT] passes," he said. "Your future at this University depends on the outcome of [the CLT petition]."

Student Trustee Angus McQuilken and Natasha Diephius, Student Government Association president, have arranged several picketing and leafleting events, both local and statewide, to inform Massachusetts voters of what a drastic impact question three could have on public higher education.

The Board of Regents of Higher Education have estimated that UMass-Amherst would lose $28,427,000 in state-allocated funds if CLT passes which is approximately 20 percent of the University's budget. The regents' estimate does not take into account the double impact CLT could have since the University would have already spent almost half of its budget before the rollback would take effect on December 6, 1990.

Rosenberg said University administrators would be forced to either raise tuition by $2,000 per student next semester or lay off 750-1250 UMass employees to compensate for the budget losses caused by the CLT petition passing. McQuilken said students will begin holding anti-CLT signs on the Calvin Coolidge bridge on Route 9 this Friday and every other Friday before election day.

Anti-CLT pickets have been scheduled for the UMass-Boston University football game this Saturday and for the Homecoming game on October 13. There will also be a statewide student picket of CLT headquarters on Boston Common on October 12.

Rosenberg encouraged students to come to the new Amherst Town Democratic Committee-Vote No on Three headquarters on October 1 between 6-9:30 p.m. to sign up for volunteer work.

Student opponents to the CLT petition joined Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group effort to get 1,000 students to pledge to register to vote last night by circulating through the Southwest Residential Area with registration information.

MassPIRG goes door to door in dorms

Looks for 1000 students to register for November 6 election

By MAURA CANAVAN
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts chapter of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group canvassed door to door in the dormitories last night with the goal of getting 1000 students to "pledge-to-register" themselves on October 2 and 3 for the November 6th election.

Collegian photo by K.A. Burke

Deidre Cummings

Some 200 students attended MassPIRG's first general meeting where members presented other goals for this year, one of which is a major voter registration drive on October 2 and 3.

"We are trying to break our record and get 5000 new voters," said Preston Holmes, Project Coordinator for Voter Registration.

"The more people we have, the more social change is possible," said Kira Sanbonmatsu, a MassPIRG member.

They also proposed an on-campus recycling program which will begin with a petition for students to promise to recycle. Scott Powers, the on-campus recycling coordinator, said the program will probably involve a white paper drive and refundable vending machine for aluminum cans.

MassPIRG will also work to pass the statewide recycling bill this year. They will sponsor a statewide Lobby Day in November, sending 10 students from the University campus, "to talk one on one with legislators," said coordinator Aaron Pearlman. "We are also going to look for endorsements from professors, businesses, community organizations and possibly some administration en-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Lorenzo Sutton remains in ICU after accident

By KELLY CONGDON
Collegian Correspondent

Lorenzo Sutton, University of Massachusetts all-time basketball scoring leader, was still in critical condition yesterday at Bay State Medical Center in Springfield after he was struck this weekend by a car on North Pleasant Street.

Hospital officials said Sutton remains in the intensive care unit for head injuries he sustained during the accident.

A 21-year old Framingham woman was cited for leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and operating to endanger, according to police spokesmen.

Police refused to release the driver's name pending the completion of an investigation. Investigators planned to question passengers in the woman's vehicle and the people walking with Sutton.

Sutton had returned to the University last semester to complete his bachelor's degree by December.

Duke cuts another $310m

By JONATHAN YENKIN
The Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — Governor Dukakis said yesterday that gloomy economic forecasts have forced him to slash another $310 million from the state budget, which will bring cuts to welfare and health care programs.

The latest action comes on top of approximately $400 million in cuts that were already ordered earlier this year by the Legislature and Dukakis, hoping to fix a fiscal 1991 budget that has refused to stay in balance.

"We are bound and determined to be ahead of the curve and not behind it," Dukakis said.

The $310 million in cuts will include $164 million from selected administrative accounts, and new across-the-board cuts of at least four percent on hundreds of line items in the Executive Branch.

Dukakis did not touch local aid to cities and towns because he did not have the authority. But he said he will ask lawmakers to make more cuts as necessary, adding "everything has got to be on the table."

Among the cuts will be the elimination of a state fuel assistance subsidy for low-income residents. Also, in the area of public assistance, the cuts will eliminate a general relief category for people over age 45 who lack significant work history.

The plans will close soldiers' homes in Chelsea and Holyoke and place residents in alternative long-term care facilities.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Times in the BCC discussed

Methods of group are called into question

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles addressing the Boston Church of Christ.

By JULIE LIVINGSTONE
Collegian Staff

The Boston Church of Christ, unaffiliated with the United Churches of Christ, was started by evangelist Kip McKeen in 1979. Dismissed from a local church near Eastern Illinois State College, McKeen traveled to Massachusetts, taking over the Lexington Church of Christ. With "plantings" across the globe, including South Africa, Rome, New York and now Massachusetts, former members of the church in this area say high pressure tactics and guilt-inducement drove them from the group.

Mark Berard, a Ph.D. student in the Polymer Science Department at the University of Massachusetts said he was testing the waters of his faith when he was asked by a fellow student in the spring of 1987 to attend a bible study. "My daughter was born in January and I think that might have made me more open to going to this type of thing," Berard said.

One tactic that the church has been accused of utilizing is proselytizing — or converting — and high pressure recruitment — discipling — to maintain a high number of members. The initial approaches from members tend to center around secular activities. Later, individuals may be asked to attend bible studies.

Connie Escobar, a second-year student at Amherst College, lived in Amherst over the summer so that she could conduct biological research and was approached

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

■ Dukakis

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"There's no way we're going to make [the cuts] without affecting services to people," Dukakis said. "I'm sorry that's the case."

The steps will mean further cuts in state jobs, which have been reduced by almost 9,000 full-and-part-time positions, Dukakis said. That figure should exceed 10,000 by the time the cutting is done, he added.

The $154 million in cuts ordered by Dukakis earlier affected dozens of accounts. Those include cuts in state-assisted day care, scholarships for higher education plus tighter restrictions for Medicaid recipients.

Another item hanging over the state's revenue picture is the Citizens for Limited Taxation ballot petition that would sharply cut state taxes and fees.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA. 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief — Meredith O'Brien
Managing Editor — Sarah Demasier
Editorial Editors — Gayle Long, Anna Regina Santiago
News Editor — Chris Muther
Sports Editors — Adrienne Matt, Sam Silverstein
Arts Editors — Jody Gabin, Julie Livingstone
Photography Editor — Richard DuCree
Black Affairs Editor — Dawn Pierce
Women's Issues Editors — Amy Henry, Minu Sebastian
Multicultural Affairs Editor — Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor — Pratip Dastidar
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor — Ali Woolwich
Business Manager — Susan George
Advertising Manager — David Melnick
Finance Manager — Beth Patterson
Circulation Manager — Jim Winterbottom
Subscription Manager — Susan Kent
Promotions Manager — Marc Pruskin
Production Manager — Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Ad Manager — Chrissy Gusone

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business — Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics — Rory Evans

New England's largest college daily newspaper. Circulation 21,000. Published every weekday during the calendar semester. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts.

SEE THE WORLD

Student & Faculty Fares

Round trips from New York starting at

London	$370
Paris	410
San Jose C.R.	378
Bangkok	929
Hongkong	849
Tokyo	759

Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change. One ways available. Work/Study abroad programs. International Student/Teacher ID.
EURAIL PASSES ISSUED ON THE SPOT!
FREE Student Travel Catalogue
Council Travel
79 S. Pleasant St. Amherst 413-256-1261
205 E. 42nd St. New York 212-661-1450

RESEARCH INFORMATION
Largest Library of information in U.S. - all subjects
Order Catalog Today with Visa/MC or COD
800-351-0222
in CA! (213) 477-8226
Or, rush $2.00 to: Research Information 11322 Idaho Ave. #206-A, Los Angeles, CA 90025

CONCERNED ABOUT AN EATING PROBLEM

Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia, Compulsive Eating

Help Yourself or Someone You Care About

Presenting: How to Recognize an Eating Disorder In Yourself or Someone Else and How to Help.

When: Wednesday, September 26, 1990

Where: UMASS, Campus Center, Room 917

Time: 3:30-5:00 p.m.

OPEN TO THE FIVE COLLEGE COMMUNITY
No Registration Necessary

For more info: 549-2671 ext. 181

Sponsored by:
UMASS EATING DISORDER NETWORK

A+
. . . for the teacher.

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD

THE COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES invites students and faculty to submit nominations for the 1990-91 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE AVAILABLE IN ROOM 111 STOCKBRIDGE HALL OR IN DEPARTMENTAL OFFICES

Faculty in the following departments are eligible for nomination:

Entomology	Forestry and Wildlife Management
Food Science	Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Adminis.
Home Economics	Landscape Architecture and Regional Plan.
Nutrition	Plant and Soil Sciences
Plant Pathology	Veterinary and Animal Sciences
Resource Economics

READ UP TO 25,000 WORDS A MINUTE!

PhotoReading

- Reduce reading time
- Improve comprehension and retention
- Cover more material in less time
- Extract key concepts from books in 2-3 minutes
- Enhance your memory

Begins October 12
Student discount/payment plans available

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!
call 413/259-1248 for information

New England Institute for Neuro-Linguistic Programming
RFD #3, Pratt Corner Road, Amherst, MA 01002-9405

SNACKSENSE® SAYS:

KEEP AN ON SUGAR!!

DID YOU KNOW:

•The average American consumes about 115 pounds the sugar each year

•Most of the sugar we eat comes from processed foods—about 70%!!

Stop by the table on the CC Concourse today, play the sugar game and win!!!

Division of Health Education and University Vending Services

LOCAL

Amherst cuts water rates, saves UM money

By CHRIS MUTHER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will save $270,000 this year because of a decision made last week by the town of Amherst to cut water rates, according to a town spokesperson.

The reduction, according to town officials, was intended to help the University save money to enable it to start a campus-wide recycling program by April 1, 1991, but it is unclear what effect this savings will have on the delayed program.

In a statement issued yesterday, Vice Chancellor of Administration and Finance Paul Page said although the University was "pleased" at the reduction in the bill, he is unsure what effect, if any, it will have on the recycling program.

"Our request for a deferment from participating in that [recycling] program was based on financial restrictions imposed by by an initial $6 million dollar state budget reduction," he said. "Since our original request for a deferment, we have been informed by the Massachusetts Board of Regents that we must take an additional $4.2 million reduction."

At an Amherst Board of Health meeting two weeks ago, the University was denied an 18-month extension to implement a campus-wide recycling program to July 1, 1992 and is now required to submit a recycling plan by December 1 and implement the plan by April 1, 1991. Other businesses and institutions in Amherst face the same deadline.

Last summer, the University was set to launch a $400,000 recycling plan before the first of two four percent, across-the- board cuts eliminated the program.

Page added the anticipated savings from the water rates will be factored into all aspects of the latest four percent cut, not just recycling.

"While we recognize recycling as an important and worthy undertaking, we shall continue to explore all other aspects of our trash removal program, along with the campus' other critical needs and commitments," he said.

Peter Wozniak, director of the Physical Plant, refused to comment on the program.

UMass produces an estimated 5000 tons of trash a year, two percent is currently recycled. Under the plan imposed by the Board of Health, UMass would be required to recycle 20-25 percent of the recyclable waste materials produced. If the University fails to meet the deadline or the goal, a penalty will be imposed that has not yet been determined by the Board of Health.

Collegian photo by Toni Sandys

PLAYING WITH THE DUCKS — Junior Fisheries/Biology major Marc Colletti spends his free time yesterday afternoon at the Campus Pond feeding ducks.

Vigil to be held to protest EWC cuts

By AMY HENRY
Collegian Staff

A candlelight vigil will be held tonight to raise an awareness about the three positions being cut from the Everywoman's Center, a spokeswoman from the Graduate Student Senate said.

"A vigil is a symbolic gesture of the experiences of women on campus and women who were not able to come back because of budget cuts," Sara Lyon, Executive Officer of GSS, said. "It is important to demonstrate the need for women's space on campus."

Positions cut were the Coordinator of the Counseling Program, the Public Relations and Outreach Program, and the Bridge Program. This brings a total of six out of nine programs that have been cut in the past four years.

The Counseling Program provided free counseling for all women. An EWC fact sheet stated last year more than 1,400 women requested services.

The Public Relations and Outreach Program provided a liaison with the campus and the community. An EWC fact sheet stated it publicized EWC events and created visibility and accessibility.

The Bridge Program provided services for multiply oppressed women such as women of color, lesbian, and disabled women.

Lyon said that the cuts to the EWC are not just a "women's issue" and that everyone can get involved to show their support of the EWC.

"Anyone who is concerned about what is happening to the EWC, status of women and minorities on campus, or general lack of student input into the Division of Student Affairs should come to this vigil," she said.

Holding the vigil and getting involved with other acts of support of the EWC are important in several ways, she said.

"A sense of empowerment can be gained among concerned parties," she said.

The vigil will be held at 7 p.m. on the campus pond.

The Student Government Association and the GSS are the coordinators of the vigil. For further information call the SGA 545-0841 or GSS at 545-2896.

Shelter Sunday sets goal

Raising $30,000 is the goal of Shelter Sunday, organized by the Amherst Friends of the Homeless according to a volunteer coordinator.

According to Hill Boss, the second annual fund-raising event hopes to have 300 volunteers October 14 to collect donations for Rosemary's Place, an emergency shelter for women in Amherst.

Last year's Shelter Sunday involved 200 volunteers and raised nearly $20,000 which helped the 'Friends' fund the opening of Rosemary's Place.

The Amherst Friends of the Homeless is 90 percent privately funded, Boss said, and therefore it is not dependent on state funding as are many local shelters. The publicly funded shelters are facing difficulty due to state financial troubles and this makes privately funded shelters very important according to Boss.

Volunteers will be sent out in groups to canvas local neighborhoods on Sunday October 14 from 1 to 5 p.m.

Volunteers should contact Hill Boss at 253-5296 or sign up at the table in the Campus Center Concourse on September 26 & 27. Volunteers may also sign up at the VIBES office, room 100 SBA in the Thatcher Cluster Office.

—Marc Ritchie

■ BCC

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

during the Wednesday evening movie on the Amherst Common while waiting for a friend.

Initially the questions asked were ordinary but Escobar said she still found the approach odd. She eventually consented to attend services in Northampton and the bible studies.

While on vacation in her home in Chicago, she was contacted by a member from the Chicago area Church of Christ and asked to attend meetings. She did.

Escobar said a member called her this semester as she was writing a paper for a class one evening and said, "Connie, I challenge you to attend a bible study." When she asked whether they meant Now, they said yes, and if she answered no they told her she was actually saying no to God.

Methods of the church also include one-on-one discipling. For instance, a man might approach a man while a woman will be approached by another woman. During bible study sessions, it is common for a pair of members to discuss the bible with a non-member, continually mentioning their "selfishness" and "pridefulness."

Jo-Anne Vanin, dean of students at UMass said, "The information I have about the recruitment methods are of concern to me. I want to ensure our students that they are free to say 'No' if they are continually pressured to join groups."

Vanin explained that her office's concerns lie not with doctrine, but rather with methods of recruitment. "Any student who feels they've been harassed, should come in and talk to the dean of students office."

Peace program receives grant

By MARK HENSLEY
Collegian Correspondent

The Five College Peace and World Security Studies Program recently received a five-year, $350,000 grant from the McArthur Foundation of Chicago which will be used to supplement its Five College Consortium funding.

The program, directed by Professor Michael Klare, was founded in 1983 at "the height of the nuclear freeze movement" by a group of Five College professors who, according to Klare, perceived a need to "increase student and faculty awareness of and concern for the international issues of war and peace."

Klare said the program has an annual budget of $250,000 which is used to sponsor such University of Massachusetts courses as 'Citizenship in the Nuclear Age' and 'Representations of War and Peace.'

In addition to the program's curricular activities, part of its budget is also dedicated to providing stipends for students who do internships with agencies or congressmen in the area of peace and security.

Originally, the program focused on nuclear issues, but in response to the termination of the arms race and the need to expand the program's scope, the focus of the program has been rethought.

The program, Klare said, will now spend more time studying North-South conflict, regional conflicts such as in Middle East, nuclear and chemical weapons proliferation, nationalism and ethnicity, and "other causes of conflict such as hunger and environmental decay."

The program is sponsoring two upcoming events which are open to the public. The first consists of a faculty panel which will discuss the Middle East crisis, and is taking place tonight at 8 p.m. in 103 McConnell at Smith College.

The second is a lecture by Janne Nolan of the Brookings Institute of Washington D.C. entitled 'The Peril of Third World Ballistic Missles.' It will be held on October 3rd in Thompson 102 at the University of Massachusetts.

Woman followed by man in car

A women motorist reported to police Sunday that she was followed from the center of Amherst to campus by a man, who had offered her a ride and made sexual remarks to her.

Police searched the area for the vehicle but were unsuccessful.

LARCENY

● A man reported to police Sunday that someone entered his unlocked room and stole $30 from his wallet.

● Police said a Thatcher resident reported the theft of a compact disc player and a compact disc. It was not known if the room was locked. The estimated value is $413.

— By PRESTON P. FORMAN

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St.
Northampton, MA
Tel. 584-2812
COMPLETE LINE OF IMPORTED AND CLOVE CIGARETTES

COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN

COMPUTER SUPPLIES
Diskettes•Paper•Labels
Related Products
WHALEN STATIONERS
Main St/Amherst/Northampton
256-3120 584-3794

Kennedy
screen graphics
QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR AT REASONABLE PRICES
T-SHIRTS SWEATSHIRTS CAPS JACKETS
APRONS GOLF SHIRTS TEAM SHIRTS
COMPUTER GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413) 584-2124 1-800-287-2124

Did you know you can get
CONTACT LENS CARE
at the University Health Services?
- We offer a broad array of contact lenses with a large in-house inventory.
- Soft, soft toric, gas permeable, flexible wear, and tinted disposable, lenses are available.
- All fittings are done by eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.
- Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.
- We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Monday 8:30 am - 7 pm
Tuesday - Friday 8:30 am - 5 pm
Convenient On Campus Location
For Appointments or Questions
Call: 549-2600

THE BACK ROOM
Cafe & Lounge
50c Drafts (GD)
Sept 22-29
Sat. Sept 22, Miller Giveaways & D.J. all night
Mondays 25c hot dogs during the game
Cable TV - Major Sports Channels
★ Entertainment Saturday Nights
Thursday and Friday Night Free Hors D'oeuvres
COCKTAILS★FULL BAR★MUNCHIES
★POOL TABLE ★
LUNCH (soup, salad, sandwiches)
limited dinner menu
37 State Street, Belchertown 323-5818
Rte. 202
(Behind C & C Health and Fitness)

WORK FOR THE COLLEGIAN

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

DELANO'S
57 North Pleasant Street
253-5141
Come Celebrate Samuel Adams Night-Tonight!
8-12
Free Prizes-Hats, Shirts, Keychains
Beer of the Month
Rolling Rock ~~$1.75~~ $1.25
Drink of the Week
Captain Morgan and Coke ~~$2.75~~ $1.75
Check out our new expanded menu

The Five College Program in Peace and World Security
Presents:
THE MIDDLE EAST CRISES
A Faculty Panel
Wednesday, September 26th
Vincent Ferraro, Mount Holyoke College
Karen Pfeiffer, Smith College
Hormoz Shahdadi, Mount Holyoke College
McConnell 103, 8:00 p.m.
Smith College
PAWSS
This event is free and open to the public. For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519

ARTS & LIVING

Scorsese scores a hit with brutal GoodFellas

By GEORGE LENTZ
Collegian Staff

Martin Scorsese's GoodFellas not only stakes the claim as the greatest of all gangster pictures but also achieves the status of an American masterpiece. Nobody exposes the destructive side of the American Dream better than Scorsese, and with GoodFellas he completes the trilogy he began with Mean Streets and Raging Bull.

Based upon the real-life experiences of mafia informant Nicholas Pileggi, GoodFellas jolts you with its hyperactive pace and cinema verite tactics: Scorsese is always roaming with hand held, tracking, craning and zooming shots that shove you right into the vortex of this brutal, self-destructive lifestyle.

And be warned—GoodFellas is not for the squeamish: its many brutal murders are handled with the utmost realism as Scorsese makes it painfully clear that if you get involved with these guys you can get killed anywhere and at any time.

Ray Liotta is Pileggi's alter ego, a half-Irish, half-Sicilian kid from a bad family who's looking for some excitement in his dead-end life. Against his mother's wishes, the kid ditches school to work for mob boss Paul Sorvino and in no time works his way up from parking cars to selling contraband. But the kid is still an errand boy until he proves his loyalty by taking a "pinch" from the cops and dummying up. As he leaves the courtroom with mob buddy Robert De Niro, the whole organization waits outside to embrace the kid, congratulating him for "breaking his cherry."

THE SCREENING ROOM

What's most surprising and ultimately horrifying about this scene is that we actually envy the kid. This is Scorsese's genius at work, exposing us to our true feelings: he knows we're repulsed by these people and yet turned on by what they're doing. It's a release to watch these characters revel in a manner that defies the laws and social mores that often oppress our own innate desires. The overall experience is as frightening as it is exhilarating.

Credit much of GoodFellas energy to Liotta, De Niro and the brilliant Joe Pesci for forging three of the greatest mob characterizations the screen has ever seen. Pesci is especially chilling as the volatile hitman who shoots bartenders for not serving cocktails fast enough. But when Pesci blows up in a heated exchange and kills a rival mob boss, their roller coaster ride begins to plunge viciously downhill amid a cloud of drugs and women as their trust disintegrates into paranoid suspicion.

If GoodFellas is a superior film to The Godfather (widely considered the best of the genre), it's only because Coppola's film imploded, dealing more with the alienating effects of unlimited power rather than its explosive side. Al Pacino's Michael Corleone preferred to sip from the fountain of power, ingesting its strength as he withdrew into his frozen conscience. Liotta's Henry Hill is quite the opposite, looking for the quick buzz and wallowing in immediate gratification before suffering the consequences of overindulgence.

Scorsese follows the gangster genre arch from success to failure with dynamic precision. It's a far more compelling and probing look at mob psychology than any film before it and stands as an even greater revelation of the darker side of human nature.

Skilled guitarist Kaukonen belts out the basic blues

By JOHN PURIN
and ALYSSA MARCHESE
Collegian Correspondents

Jorma Kaukonen
Iron Horse
Monday, Sept. 25

Although somewhat overshadowed by the more famous and perhaps more photogenic Grace Slick, Former Jefferson Airplane guitarist Jorma Kaukonen was at the core of their particular brand of acid rock. But if you listen closely to those old slabs of vinyl, past all the wah-wah pedals and oh-so-trippy sounds, Kaukonen was still one hell of a guitar player. At the root of his style was a love for folk music and delta blues. That was the direction Kaukonen took when he formed Hot Tuna with bassist Jack Casady, and that's essentially what he played Monday night at the Iron Horse.

REVIEW

